8 When David heard of this, he sent Joab and his whole army of warriors against them. 9 The Ammonites marched out and lined up for a battle at the gate of the city, while the kings who had come to their help remained apart in the open field. 10* When Joab saw that there was a battle line both in front of and behind him, he chose some of the best fighters among the Israelites and set them in array against the Arameans; 11* the rest of the army, which he placed under the command of his brother Abishai, then lined up to oppose the Ammonites. 12 And he said: "If the Arameans prove too strong for me, you must come to my help; and if the Ammonites prove too strong for you, I will save you. 13 Hold steadfast and let us show ourselves courageous for the sake of our people and the cities of our God; then may the LORD do what seems best to him." 14 Joab therefore advanced with his men to engage the Arameans in battle; but they fled before him. 15 And when the Ammonites saw that the Arameans had fled, they also took to flight before his brother Abishai, and reentered the city. Joab then returned to Jerusalem.

16 Seeing themselves vanquished by Israel, the Arameans sent messengers to bring out the Arameans from the other side of the River, with Shophach, the general of Hadadezer's army, at their head. 17 When this was reported to David, he gathered all Israel together, crossed the Jordan, and met them. With the army of David drawn up to fight the Arameans, they gave battle. 18 But the Arameans fled before Israel, and David slew seven thousand of their chariot fighters and forty thousand of their foot soldiers; he also killed Shophach, the general of the army. 19 When the vassals of Hadadezer saw themselves vanquished by Israel, they made peace with David and became his subjects. After this, the Arameans refused to come to the aid of the Ammonites.

1 At the beginning of the following year, the time when kings go to war, Joab led the army out in force, laid waste the land of the Ammonites, and went on to besiege Rabbah, while David himself remained in Jerusalem. When Joab had attacked Rabbah and destroyed it, 2* David took the crown of Milcom from the idol's head. It was found to weigh a talent of gold; and it contained precious stones, which David wore on his own head. He also brought out a great amount of booty from the city. 3 He deported the people of the city and set them to work with saws, iron picks, and axes. Thus David dealt with all the cities of the Ammonites. Then he and his whole army returned to Jerusalem.

Victories over the Philistines. 4* Afterward there was another battle with the Philistines, at Gezer. At that time, Sibbecai the Hushathite slew Sippai, one of the descendants of the Raphaim, and the Philistines were subdued. 5*† Once again there was war with the Philistines, and Elhanan, the son of Jair, slew Lahmi, the brother of Goliath of Gath, whose spear shaft was like a weaver's heddle-bar.

6 In still another battle, at Gath, they encountered a giant, also a descendant of the Raphaim, who had six fingers to each hand and six toes to each foot; twenty-four in all. 7 He defied Israel, and Jonathan, the son of Shimea, David's brother, slew him. 8 These were the descendants of the Raphaim of Gath who died at the hands of David and his servants.

David's Census; the Plague. 1*† A satan rose up against Israel, and he enticed David into taking a census of Israel. 2 David therefore said to Joab and to the other generals of the army, "Go, find out the number of the Israelites from Beer-sheba to Dan, and report back to me that I may know their number." 3 But Joab replied: "May the LORD increase his people a hundredfold! My lord king, are not all of them my lord's subjects? Why does my lord seek to do this thing? Why will he bring guilt upon Israel?" 4 However, the king's command prevailed over Joab, who departed and traversed all of Israel, and then returned to Jerusalem. 5 Joab reported the result of the census to David: of men capable of wielding a sword, there were in all Israel one million one hundred thousand, and in Judah four hundred and seventy thousand. 6* Levi and Benjamin, however, he did not include in the census, for the king's command was repugnant to Joab. 7 This command displeased God, who began to punish Israel. 8 Then David said to God, "I have sinned greatly in doing this thing. Take away your servant's guilt, for I have acted very foolishly."

9* Then the LORD spoke to Gad, David's seer, in these words: 10 "Go, tell David: Thus says the LORD: I offer you three alternatives; choose one of them, and I will inflict it on you." 11 Accordingly, Gad went to David and said to him; "Thus says the LORD: Decide now— 12 will it be three years of famine; or three months of fleeing your enemies, with the sword of your foes ever at your back; or three days of the LORD's own sword, a pestilence in the land, with the LORD's destroying angel in every part of Israel? Therefore choose: What answer am I to give him who sent me?" 13 Then David said to Gad: "I am in dire straits. But I prefer to fall into the hand of the LORD, whose mercy is very great, than into the hands of men."

14 Therefore the LORD sent pestilence upon Israel, and seventy thousand men of Israel died. 15* God also sent an angel to destroy Jerusalem; but as he was on the point of destroying it, the LORD saw and decided against the calamity, and said to the destroying angel, "Enough now! Stay your hand!"

Ornan's Threshing Floor. The angel of the LORD was then standing by the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite. 16 When David raised his eyes, he saw the angel of the LORD standing between earth and heaven, with a naked sword in his hand stretched out against Jerusalem. David and the elders, clothed in sackcloth, prostrated themselves face to the ground, 17 and David prayed to God: "Was it not I who ordered the census of the people? I am the one who sinned, I did this wicked thing. But these sheep, what have they done? O LORD, my God, strike me and my father's family, but do not afflict your people with this plague!"

18* Then the angel of the LORD commanded Gad to tell David to go up and erect an altar to the LORD on the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite. 19 David went up at Gad's command, given in the name of the LORD. 20 While Ornan was threshing wheat, he turned around and saw the king, and his four sons who were with him, without recognizing them. 21 But as David came on toward him, he looked up and saw that it was David. Then he left the threshing floor and bowed down before David, his face to the ground. 22 David said to Ornan: "Sell me the ground of this threshing floor, that I may build on it an altar to the LORD. Sell it to me at its full price, that the plague may be stayed from the people." 23 But Ornan said to David: "Take it as your own, and let my lord the king do what seems best to him. See, I also give you the oxen for the holocausts, the threshing sledges for the wood, and the wheat for the cereal offering. I give it all to you." 24 But King David replied to Ornan: "No! I will buy it from you properly, at its full price. I will not take what is yours for the LORD, nor offer up holo-

† 21,1: A satan: in the parallel passage of 2 Sm 24, 1 the Lord's anger. The change in the term reflects the changed theological outlook of postexilic Israel, when evil could no longer be attributed directly to God. At an earlier period the Hebrew word satan ("adversary," or, especially in a court of law, "accuser"), when not used of men, designated an angel who accused men before God (Jb 1, 6-12; 2, 1-7; Zec 3, 1f). Here, as in later Judaism (Wis 2, 24) and in the New Testament, satan, or the "devil" (from the Greek translation of the word), designates an evil spirit who tempts men to wrongdoing.

causts that cost me nothing." [25]† So David paid Ornan six hundred shekels of gold for the place.

Altar of Holocausts. [26]* David then built an altar there to the LORD, and offered up holocausts and peace offerings. When he called upon the LORD, he answered him by sending down fire from heaven upon the altar of holocausts. [27] Then the LORD gave orders to the angel to return his sword to its sheath.

[28] Once David saw that the LORD had heard him on the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite, he continued to offer sacrifices there. [29]* The Dwelling of the LORD, which Moses had built in the desert, and the altar of holocausts were at that time on the high place at Gibeon. [30] But David could not go there to worship God, for he was fearful of the sword of the angel of the LORD. [1]* Therefore David said, "This is the house of the LORD God, and this is the altar of holocausts for Israel."

Material for the Temple. [2]† David then ordered that all the aliens who lived in the land of Israel be brought together, and he appointed them stonecutters to hew out stone blocks for building the house of God. [3] He also laid up large stores of iron to make nails for the doors of the gates, and clamps, together with so much bronze that it could not be weighed, [4]* and cedar trees without number. The Sidonians and Tyrians brought great stores of cedar logs to David, [5]* who said: "My son Solomon is young and immature; but the house that is to be built for the LORD must be made so magnificent that it will be renowned and glorious in all countries. Therefore I will make preparations for it." Thus before his death David laid up materials in abundance.

Charge to Solomon. [6] Then he called for his son Solomon and commanded him to build a house for the LORD, the God of Israel. [7]* David said to Solomon: "My son, it was my purpose to build a house myself for the honor of the LORD, my God. [8] But this word of the LORD came to me: 'You have shed much blood, and you have waged great wars. You may not build a house in my honor, because you have shed too much blood upon the earth in my sight. [9]† However, a son is to be born to you. He will be a peaceful man, and I will give him rest from all his enemies on every side. For Solomon shall be his name, and in his time I will bestow peace and tranquillity on Israel. [10] It is he who shall build a house in my honor; he shall be a son to me, and I will be a father to him, and I will establish the throne of his kingship over Israel forever.' [11] Now, my son, the LORD be with you, and may you succeed in building the house of the LORD your God, as he has said you shall. [12] May the LORD give you prudence and discernment when he brings you to rule over Israel, so that you keep the law of the LORD, your God. [13]* Only then shall you succeed, if you are careful to observe the precepts and decrees which the LORD gave Moses for Israel. Be brave and steadfast; do not fear or lose heart. [14]*† See, with great effort I have laid up for the house of the LORD a hundred thousand talents of gold, a million talents of silver, and bronze and iron in such great quantities that they cannot be weighed. I have also stored up wood and stones, to which you must add. [15] Moreover, you have available an unlimited supply of workmen, stonecutters, masons, carpenters, and every kind of craftsman [16] skilled in gold, silver, bronze, and iron. Set to work, therefore, and the LORD be with you!"

Charge to the Leaders. [17] David also commanded all of Israel's leaders to help his son Solomon: [18]* "Is not the LORD your God with you? Has he not given you rest on every side? Indeed, he has delivered the occupants of the land into my power, and the land is subdued before the LORD and his people. [19]* Therefore, devote your hearts and 21, 25: Six hundred shekels of gold: about 10,000 dollars. According to 2 Sm 24, 24, David paid 50 shekels of silver, about 20 dollars, for Ornan's threshing floor; but for the Chronicler the site of the temple was much more precious than that.

22, 2ff: According to 1 Kgs 5, 15-32, it was Solomon who made the material preparations for building the temple, even though David had wished to do so (1 Kgs 5, 17ff). The Chronicler, however, sought to have David, who was Israel's ideal king, more closely connected with Israel's most sacred sanctuary, the temple of Jerusalem.

22, 9: The Hebrew word for peace, shalom, is reflected in the name Solomon, in Hebrew, Shelomo. A contrast is drawn here between Solomon, the peaceful man, and David, who waged great wars (v 8). David was prevented from building the temple, not only because all his time was taken up in waging war (1 Kgs 5, 17), but also, because he shed much blood (v 8), and in the eyes of the Chronicler this made him ritually unfit for the task.

22, 14: A hundred thousand talents of gold: about 3,775 tons of gold. A million talents of silver: about 37,750 tons of silver. The fantastically exaggerated figures are intended merely to stress the inestimable value of the temple as the center of Israelite worship. More modest figures are given in 1 Kgs 9, 14.28; 10, 10.14.

souls to seeking the LORD your God. Proceed to build the sanctuary of the LORD God, that the ark of the covenant of the LORD and God's sacred vessels may be brought into the house built in honor of the LORD."

CHAPTER 23

The Levitical Classes. 1* When David had grown old and was near the end of his days, he made his son Solomon king over Israel. 2 He then gathered together all the leaders of Israel, together with the priests and the Levites.

3* The Levites thirty years old and above were counted, and their total number was found to be thirty-eight thousand men. 4 Of these, twenty-four thousand were to direct the service of the house of the LORD, six thousand were to be officials and judges, 5* four thousand were to be gatekeepers, and four thousand were to praise the LORD with the instruments which David had devised for praise. 6* David divided them into classes according to the sons of Levi: Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

7 To the Gershonites belonged Ladan and Shimei. 8* The sons of Ladan: Jehiel the chief, then Zetham and Joel; three in all. 9 The sons of Shimei were Shelomoth, Haziel, and Haran; three. These were the heads of the families of Ladan. 10 The sons of Shimei were Jahath, Zizah, Jeush, and Beriah; these were the sons of Shimei, four in all. 11 Jahath was the chief and Zizah was second to him; but Jeush and Beriah had not many sons, and therefore they were classed as a single family, fulfilling a single office.

12* The sons of Kohath: Amram, Izhar, Hebron, and Uzziel; four in all. 13* The sons of Amram were Aaron and Moses. Aaron was set apart to be consecrated as most holy, he and his sons forever, to offer sacrifice before the LORD, to minister to him, and to bless his name forever. 14 As for Moses, however, the man of God, his sons were counted as part of the tribe of Levi. 15* The sons of Moses were Gershom and Eliezer. 16* The sons of Gershom: Shubael the chief. 17 The sons of Eliezer were Rehabiah the chief—Eliezer had no other sons, but the sons of Rehabiah were very numerous. 18 The sons of Izhar: Shelomith the chief. 19* The sons of Hebron: Jeriah, the chief, Amariah, the second, Jahaziel, the third, and Jekameam, the fourth. 20* The sons of Uzziel: Micah, the chief, and Isshiah, the second.

21* The sons of Merari: Mahli and Mushi. The sons of Mahli: Eleazar and Kish. 22* Eleazar died leaving no sons, only daughters; the sons of Kish, their kinsmen, married them. 23* The sons of Mushi: Mahli, Eder, and Jeremoth; three in all.

24* These were the sons of Levi according to their ancestral houses, the family heads as they were enrolled one by one according to their names. They performed the work of the service of the house of the LORD from twenty years of age upward, 27 for David's final orders were to enlist the Levites from the time they were twenty years old.

25* David said: "The LORD, the God of Israel, has given rest to his people, and has taken up his dwelling in Jerusalem. 26* Henceforth the Levites need not carry the Dwelling or any of its furnishings or equipment. 28 Rather, their duty shall be to assist the sons of Aaron in the service of the house of the LORD, having charge of the courts, the chambers, and the preservation of everything holy: they shall take part in the service of the house of God. 29* They shall also have charge of the showbread, of the fine flour for the cereal offering, of the wafers of unleavened bread, and of the baking and mixing, and of all measures of quantity and size. 30* They must be present every morning to offer thanks and to praise the LORD, and likewise in the evening; 31* and at every offering of holocausts to the LORD on sabbaths, new moons, and feast days, in such numbers as are prescribed, they must always be present before the LORD. 32* They shall observe what is prescribed for them concerning the meeting tent, the sanctuary, and the sons of Aaron, their brethren, in the service of the house of the LORD."

The Priestly Classes. 1* The descendants of Aaron also were divided into classes. The sons of Aaron were Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar. 2* Nadab and Abihu died before their father, leaving no sons; therefore only Eleazar and Ithamar served as priests. 3* David, with Zadok, a descendant of Eleazar, and Ahimelech, a descendant of Ithamar, assigned the functions for the priestly service. [4] But since the descendants of Eleazar were found to be more numerous than those of Ithamar, the former were divided into sixteen groups, and the latter into eight groups, each under its family head. [5] Their functions were assigned impartially by lot, for there were officers of the holy place, and officers of the divine presence, descended both from Eleazar and from Ithamar. [6*†] The scribe Shemaiah, son of Nethanel, a Levite, made a record of it in the presence of the king, and of the leaders, of Zadok the priest, and of Ahimelech, son of Abiathar, and of the heads of the ancestral houses of the priests and of the Levites, listing two successive family groups from Eleazar before each one from Ithamar.

[7*] The first lot fell to Jehoiarib, the second to Jedaiah, [8] the third to Harim, the fourth to Seorim, [9] the fifth to Malchijah, the sixth to Mijamin, [10*] the seventh to Hakkoz, the eighth to Abijah, [11] the ninth to Jeshua, the tenth to Shecaniah, [12] the eleventh to Eliashib, the twelfth to Jakim, [13] the thirteenth to Huppah, the fourteenth to Ishbaal, [14] the fifteenth to Bilgah, the sixteenth to Immer, [15] the seventeenth to Hezir, the eighteenth to Happizzez, [16] the nineteenth to Pethahiah, the twentieth to Jehezkel, [17] the twenty-first to Jachin, the twenty-second to Gamul, [18] the twenty-third to Delaiah, the twenty-fourth to Maaziah. [19*] This was the appointed order of their service when they functioned in the house of the LORD in keeping with the precepts given them by Aaron, their father, as the LORD, the God of Israel, had commanded him.

Other Levites. [20*] Of the remaining Levites, there were Shubael, of the descendants of Amram, and Jehdeiah, of the descendants of Shubael; [21] Isshiah, the chief, of the descendants of Rehabiah; [22] Shelomith of the Izharites, and Jahath of the descendants of Shelomith. [23] The descendants of Hebron were Jeriah, the chief, Amariah, the second, Jahaziel, the third, Jekameam, the fourth. [24] The descendants of Uzziel were Micah; Shamir, of the descendants of Micah; [25] Isshiah, the brother of Micah; and Zechariah, a descendant of Isshiah. [26] The descendants of Merari were Mahli, Mushi, and the descendants of his son Uzziah. [27] The descendants of Merari through his son Uzziah: Shoham, Zaccur, and Ibri. [28] Descendants of Mahli were Eleazar, who had no sons, [29] and Jerahmeel, of the descendants of Kish. [30] The descendants of Mushi were Mahli, Eder, and Jerimoth.

These were the descendants of the Levites according to their ancestral houses. [31*] They too, in the same manner as their relatives, the descendants of Aaron, cast lots in the presence of King David, Zadok, Ahimelech, and the heads of the priestly and levitical families; the more important family did so in the same way as the less important one.

The Singers. [1*] David and the leaders of the liturgical cult set apart for service the descendants of Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun, as singers of inspired songs to the accompaniment of lyres and harps and cymbals.

This is the list of those who performed this service: [2†] Of the sons of Asaph: Zaccur, Joseph, Nethaniah, and Asharelah, sons of Asaph, under the direction of Asaph, who sang inspired songs under the guidance of the king. [3] Of Jeduthun, these sons of Jeduthun: Gedaliah, Zeri, Jeshaiah, Shimei, Hashabiah, and Mattithiah; six, under the direction of their father Jeduthun, who sang inspired songs to the accompaniment of a lyre, to give thanks and praise to the LORD. [4] Of Heman, these sons of Heman: Bukkiah, Mattaniah, Uzziel, Shubael, and Jerimoth; Hananiah, Hanani, Eliathah, Giddalti, Romamti-ezer, Joshbekashah, Mallothi, Hothir, and Mahazioth. [5*] All these were the sons of Heman, the king's seer in divine matters; to enhance his prestige, God gave Heman fourteen sons and three daughters. [6*] All these, whether of Asaph, Jeduthun, or Heman, were under their fathers' direction in the singing in the house of the LORD to the accompaniment of cymbals, harps and lyres, serving in the house of God, under the guidance of the king. [7] Their number, together with that of their brethren who were trained in singing to the LORD, all of them skilled men, was two hundred and eighty-eight. [8*] They cast lots for their functions equally, young and old, master and pupil alike.

25, 2-31: This list of twenty-four classes of temple singers balances the list of the twenty-four classes of priests (24, 4-19). The last nine names in 25, 4, which seem to form a special group, appear to have been originally fragments or incipits of hymns. With some slight changes in the vocalization, the names would mean: "Have mercy on me, O LORD," "Have mercy on me," "You are my God," "I magnify," "I extol the help of . . . ," "Sitting in adversity," "I have fulfilled," "He made abundant," and "Visions."

9 The first lot fell to Asaph, the family of Joseph; he and his sons and his brethren were twelve. Gedaliah was the second; he and his brethren and his sons were twelve. 10 The third was Zaccur, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 11 The fourth fell to Izri, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 12 The fifth was Nethaniah, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 13 The sixth was Bukkiah, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 14 The seventh was Jesarelah, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 15 The eighth was Jeshaiah, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 16 The ninth was Mattaniah, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 17 The tenth was Shimei, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 18 The eleventh was Uzziel, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 19 The twelfth fell to Hashabiah, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 20 The thirteenth was Shubael, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 21 The fourteenth was Mattithiah, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 22 The fifteenth fell to Jeremoth, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 23 The sixteenth fell to Hananiah, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 24 The seventeenth fell to Joshbekashah, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 25 The eighteenth fell to Hanani, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 26 The nineteenth fell to Mallothi, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 27 The twentieth fell to Eliathah, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 28 The twenty-first fell to Hothir, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 29 The twenty-second fell to Giddalti, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 30 The twenty-third fell to Mahazioth, his sons, and his brethren: twelve. 31 The twenty-fourth fell to Romamti-ezer, his sons, and his brethren: twelve.

CHAPTER 26

Classes of Gatekeepers. 1* As for the classes of gatekeepers. Of the Korahites was Meshelemiah, the son of Kore, one of the sons of Abiasaph. 2 Meshelemiah's sons: Zechariah, the first-born, Jediael, the second son, Zebadiah, the third, Jathniel, the fourth, 3 Elam, the fifth, Jehohanan, the sixth, Eliehoenai, the seventh. 4 Obed-edom's sons: Shemaiah, the first-born, Jehozabad, a second son, Joah, the third, Sachar, the fourth, Nethanel, the fifth, 5 Ammiel, the sixth, Issachar, the seventh, Peullethai, the eighth, for God blessed him. 6 To his son Shemaiah were born sons who ruled over their family, for they were warriors. 7 The sons of Shemaiah were Othni, Rephael, Obed, and Elzabad; also his brethren who were men of might, Elihu and Semachiah. 8 All these were the sons of Obed-edom, who, together with their sons and their brethren, were mighty men, fit for the service. Of Obed-edom, sixty-two. 9 Of Meshelemiah, eighteen sons and brethren, mighty men.

10* Hosah, a descendant of Merari, had these sons: Shimri, the chief (for though he was not the first-born, his father made him chief), 11 Hilkiah, the second son, Tebaliah, the third, Zechariah, the fourth. All the sons and brethren of Hosah were thirteen.

12 To these classes of gatekeepers, under their chief men, were assigned watches in the service of the house of the LORD, for each group in the same way. 13 They cast lots for each gate, the small and the large families alike. 14* When the lot was cast for the east side, it fell to Meshelemiah. Then they cast lots for his son Zechariah, a prudent counselor, and the north side fell to his lot. 15 To Obed-edom fell the south side, and to his sons the storehouse. 16 To Hosah fell the west side with the Shallecheth gate at the ascending highway. For each family, watches were established. 17 On the east, six watched each day, on the north, four each day, on the south, four each day, and at the storehouse they were two and two; 18† as for the large building on the west, there were four at the highway and two at the large building. 19 These were the classes of the gatekeepers, descendants of Kore and Merari.

Treasurers. 20* Their brother Levites superintended the stores for the house of God and the stores of votive offerings. 21* Among the descendants of Ladan the Gershonite, the family heads were descendants of Jehiel: the descendants of Jehiel, 22* Zetham and his brother Joel, who superintended the treasures of the house of the LORD. 23 From the Amramites, Izharites, Hebronites, and Uzzielites, 24 Shubael, son of Gershon, son of Moses, was chief superintendent over the treasures. 25* His associate pertained to Eliezer, whose son was Rehabiah, whose son was Jeshaiah, whose son was Joram, whose son was Zichri, whose son was Shelomith. 26* This Shelomith and his brethren superintended all the stores of the votive offerings dedicated by King David, the heads of the families, the commanders of thousands and of hundreds, and the commanders of the army, 27 from the booty they had taken in the wars, for the enhancement of the house of the LORD. 28 Also, whatever Samuel the seer, Saul, son of Kish, Abner, son of Ner, Joab, son of Zeruiah, and all others had consecrated, was under the charge of Shelomith and his brethren.

Magistrates. 29* Among the Izharites, Chenaniah and his sons were in charge of Israel's civil affairs as officials and judges. 30* Among the Hebronites, Hashabiah and his brethren, one thousand seven hundred police officers, had the administration of Israel on the western side of the Jordan in all the work of the LORD and in the service of the king. 31* Among the Hebronites, Jerijah was their chief according to their family records. In the fortieth year of David's reign search was made, and there were found among them outstanding officers at Jazer of Gilead. 32 His brethren were also police officers, two thousand seven hundred heads of families. King David appointed them to the administration of the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh in everything pertaining to God and to the king.

Army Commanders. 1† This is the list of the Israelite family heads, commanders of thousands and of hundreds, and other officers who served the king in all that pertained to the divisions, of twenty-four thousand men each, that came and went month by month throughout the year.

2 Over the first division for the first month was Ishbaal, son of Zabdiel, and in his division were twenty-four thousand men; 3 a descendant of Perez, he was chief over all the commanders of the army for the first month. 4* Over the division of the second month was Eleazar, son of Dodo, from Ahoh, and in his division were twenty-four thousand men. 5* The third army commander, chief for the third month, was Benaiah, son of Jehoiada the priest, and in his division were twenty-four thousand men. 6 This Benaiah was a warrior among the Thirty and over the Thirty. His son Ammizabad was over his division. 7* Fourth, for the fourth month, was Asahel, brother of Joab, and after him his son Zebadiah, and in his division were twenty-four thousand men. 8 Fifth, for the fifth month, was the commander Shamhuth, a descendant of Zerah, and in his division were twenty-four thousand men. 9 Sixth, for the sixth month, was Ira, son of Ikkesh, from Tekoa, and in his division were twenty-four thousand men. 10 Seventh, for the seventh month, was Hellez, from Beth-phelet, of the sons of Ephraim, and in his division were twenty-four thousand men. 11* Eighth, for the eighth month, was Sibbecai the Hushathite, a descendant of Zerah, and in his division were twenty-four thousand men. 12 Ninth, for the ninth month, was Abiezer from Anathoth, of Benjamin, and in his division were twenty-four thousand men. 13 Tenth, for the tenth month, was Maharai from Netophah, a descendant of Zerah, and in his division were twenty-four thousand men. 14 Eleventh, for the eleventh month, was Benaiah the Pirathonite, of Ephraim, and in his division were twenty-four thousand men. 15 Twelfth, for the twelfth month, was Heldai the Netophathite, of the family of Othniel, and in his division were twenty-four thousand men.

Tribal Heads. 16 Over the tribes of Israel, for the Reubenites the leader was Eliezer, son of Zichri; for the Simeonites, Shephatiah, son of Maacah; 17 for Levi, Hashabiah, son of Kemuel; for Aaron, Zadok; 18* for Judah, Eliab, one of David's brothers; for Issachar, Omri, son of Michael; 19 for Zebulun, Ishmaiah, son of Obadiah; for Naphtali, Jeremoth, son of Azriel; 20 for the sons of Ephraim, Hoshea, son of Azaziah; for the half-tribe of Manasseh, Joel, son of Pedaiah; 21 for the half-tribe of Manasseh in Gilead, Iddo, son of Zechariah; for Benjamin, Jaasiel, son of Abner; 22 for Dan, Azarel, son of Jeroham. These were the commanders of the tribes of Israel.

23* David did not count those who were twenty years of age or younger, for the LORD had promised to multiply Israel like the stars of the heavens. 24* Joab, son of Zeruiah, began to take the census, but he did not complete it, for because of it wrath fell upon Israel. Therefore the number did not enter into the book of chronicles of King David.

Overseers. 25* Over the treasures of the king was Azmaveth, the son of Adiel. Over the stores in the country, the cities, the villages, and the towers was Jonathan, son of Uzziah. 26 Over the farm workers who tilled the soil was Ezri, son of Chelub. 27 Over the vineyards was Shimei from Ramah, and over their produce for the wine cellars was Zabdi

The schematic enumeration of the soldiers as presented here is, no doubt, artificial and grossly exaggerated (12 × 24,000 = 288,000 men!), unless the Hebrew word (eleph) for thousand is understood as designating a military unit of much smaller size; see note on 12, 25-38.

the Shiphmite. [28] Over the olive trees and sycamores of the foothills was Baalhanan the Gederite, and over the stores of oil was Joash. [29] Over the cattle that grazed in Sharon was Shitrai the Sharonite, and over the cattle in the valleys was Shaphat, the son of Adlai; [30] over the camels was Obil the Ishmaelite; over the she-asses was Jehdeiah the Meronothite; [31] and over the flocks was Jaziz the Hagrite. All these were the overseers of King David's possessions.

David's Court. [32] Jonathan, David's uncle and a man of intelligence, was counselor and scribe; he and Jehiel, the son of Hachmoni, were tutors of the king's sons. [33]* Ahithophel was also the king's counselor, and Hushai the Archite was the king's confidant. [34]† After Ahithophel came Jehoiada, the son of Benaiah, and Abiathar. The commander of the king's army was Joab.

The Assembly at Jerusalem. [1]* David assembled at Jerusalem all the leaders of Israel, the heads of the tribes, the commanders of the divisions who were in the service of the king, the commanders of thousands and of hundreds, the overseers of all the king's estates and possessions, and his sons, together with the courtiers, the warriors, and every important man. [2]† King David rose to his feet and said: "Hear me, my brethren and my people. It was my purpose to build a house of repose myself for the ark of the covenant of the LORD, the footstool for the feet of our God; and I was preparing to build it. [3] But God said to me, 'You may not build a house in my honor, for you are a man who fought wars and shed blood.' [4] However, the LORD, the God of Israel, chose me from all my father's family to be king over Israel forever. For he chose Judah as leader, then one family of Judah, that of my father; and finally, among all the sons of my father, it pleased him to make me king over all Israel. [5]* And of all my sons—for the LORD has given me many sons—he has chosen my son Solomon to sit on the LORD's royal throne over Israel. [6]* For he said to me: 'It is your son Solomon who shall build my house and my courts, for I have chosen him for my son, and I will be a father to him. [7] I will establish his kingdom forever, if he perseveres in keeping my commandments and decrees as he keeps them now.' [8]* Therefore, in the presence of all Israel, the assembly of the LORD, and in the hearing of our God, I exhort you to keep and to carry out all the commandments of the LORD, your God, that you may continue to possess this good land and afterward leave it as an inheritance to your children forever.

[9]* "As for you, Solomon, my son, know the God of your father and serve him with a perfect heart and a willing soul, for the LORD searches all hearts and understands all the mind's thoughts. If you seek him, he will let himself be found by you; but if you abandon him, he will cast you off forever. [10] See, then! The LORD has chosen you to build a house as his sanctuary. Take courage and set to work."

Temple Plans Given to Solomon. [11]* Then David gave to his son Solomon the pattern of the portico and of the building itself, with its storerooms, its upper rooms and inner chambers, and the room with the propitiatory. [12] He provided also the pattern for all else that he had in mind by way of courts for the house of the LORD, with the surrounding compartments for the stores for the house of God and the stores of the votive offerings, [13] as well as for the divisions of the priests and Levites, for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for all the liturgical vessels of the house of the LORD. [14] He specified the weight of gold to be used in the golden vessels for the various services and the weight of silver to be used in the silver vessels for the various services; [15]* likewise for the golden lampstands and their lamps he specified the weight of gold for each lampstand and its lamps, and for the silver lampstands he specified the weight of silver for each lampstand and its lamps, depending on the use to which each lampstand was to be put. [16] He specified the weight of gold for each table to hold the showbread, and the silver for the silver tables; [17] the pure gold to be used for the forks and 20* Then David said to his son Solomon: "Be firm and steadfast; go to work without fear or discouragement, for the LORD God, my God, is with you. He will not fail you or abandon you before you have completed all the work for the service of the house of the LORD. 21* The classes of the priests and Levites are ready for all the service of the house of God; they will help you in all your work with all those who are eager to show their skill in every kind of craftsmanship. Also the leaders and all the people will do everything that you command."

Offerings for the Temple. 1* King David then said to the whole assembly: "My son Solomon, whom alone God has chosen, is still young and immature; the work, however, is great, for this castle is not intended for man, but for the LORD God. 2* For this reason I have stored up for the house of my God, as far as I was able, gold for what will be made of gold, silver for what will be made of silver, bronze for what will be made of bronze, iron for what will be made of iron, wood for what will be made of wood, onyx stones and settings for them, carnelian and mosaic stones, every other kind of precious stone, and great quantities of marble. 3 But now, because of the delight I take in the house of my God, in addition to all that I stored up for the holy house, I give to the house of my God my personal fortune in gold and silver: 4* three thousand talents of Ophir gold, and seven thousand talents of refined silver, for overlaying the walls of the rooms, 5* for the various utensils to be made of gold and silver, and for every work that is to be done by artisans. Now, who else is willing to contribute generously this day to the LORD?"

6* Then the heads of the families, the leaders of the tribes of Israel, the commanders of thousands and of hundreds, and the overseers of the king's affairs came forward willingly 7* and contributed for the service of the house of God five thousand talents and ten thousand darics of gold, ten thousand talents of silver, eighteen thousand talents of bronze, and one hundred thousand talents of iron. 8* Those who had precious stones gave them into the keeping of Jehiel the Gershonite for the treasury of the house of the LORD. 9* The people rejoiced over these free-will offerings, which had been contributed to the LORD wholeheartedly. King David also rejoiced greatly.

David's Prayer. 10 Then David blessed the LORD in the presence of the whole assembly, praying in these words:

"Blessed may you be, O LORD, God of Israel our father,
from eternity to eternity.

11 "Yours, O LORD, are grandeur and power, majesty, splendor, and glory.
For all in heaven and on earth is yours;
yours, O LORD, is the sovereignty;
you are exalted as head over all.

12* "Riches and honor are from you,
and you have dominion over all.
In your hand are power and might;
it is yours to give grandeur and strength to all.
13 Therefore, our God, we give you thanks and we praise the majesty of your name."

14 "But who am I, and who are my people, that we should have the means to contribute so freely? For everything is from you, and we only give you what we have received from you. 15* For we stand before you as aliens: we are only your guests, like all our fathers. Our life on earth is like a shadow that does not abide. 16 O LORD our God, all this wealth that we have brought together to build you a house in honor of your holy name comes from you and is entirely yours. 17 I know, O my God, that you put hearts to the test and that you take pleasure in uprightness. With a sincere heart I have willingly given all these things, and now with joy I have seen your people here present also giving to you generously. 18* O LORD, God of our fathers Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, keep such thoughts in the hearts and minds of your people forever, and direct their hearts toward you. [19] Give to my son Solomon a wholehearted desire to keep your commandments, precepts, and statutes, that he may carry out all these plans and build the castle for which I have made preparation."

[20] Then David besought the whole assembly, "Now bless the LORD your God!" And the whole assembly blessed the LORD, the God of their fathers, bowing down and prostrating themselves before the LORD and before the king. [21] On the following day they offered sacrifices and holocausts to the LORD, a thousand bulls, a thousand rams, and a thousand lambs, together with their libations and many other sacrifices for all Israel; [22]† and on that day they ate and drank in the LORD's presence with great rejoicing.

Solomon Anointed. Then for a second time they proclaimed David's son Solomon king, and they anointed him as the LORD's prince, and Zadok as priest. [23]* Thereafter Solomon sat on the throne of the LORD as king in place of his father David; he prospered, and all Israel obeyed him. [24] All the leaders and warriors, and also all the other sons of King David, swore allegiance to King Solomon. [25]* And the LORD exalted Solomon greatly in the eyes of all Israel, giving him a glorious reign such as had not been enjoyed by any king over Israel before him.

Death of David. [26] Thus David, the son of Jesse, had reigned over all Israel. [27]* The time that he reigned over Israel was forty years: in Hebron he reigned seven years, and in Jerusalem thirty-three. [28]* He died at a ripe old age, rich in years and wealth and glory, and his son Solomon succeeded him as king.

[29]* Now the deeds of King David, first and last, can be found written in the history of Samuel the seer, the history of Nathan the prophet, and the history of Gad the seer, [30] together with the particulars of his reign and valor, and of the events that affected him and all Israel and all the kingdoms of the surrounding lands.

The Second Book of

CHRONICLES

The Second Book of Chronicles takes up the history of the monarchy where the First Book breaks off. It begins with the account of the reign of Solomon from the special viewpoint of the Chronicler. The portrait of Solomon is an idealized one; he appears as second only to David. The great achievement of the building of the temple and the magnificence of Solomon's court are described in detail while the serious defects of his reign are passed over without comment. All this is in keeping with the Chronicler's purpose of stressing the supreme importance of the temple and its worship. He wishes to impress on his readers the splendor of God's dwelling and the magnificence of the liturgy of sacrifice, prayer and praise offered there. Judah's kings are judged by their attitude toward the temple and its cult. To this ideal of one people, united in the worship of the one true God at the temple of Jerusalem founded by David and Solomon, the restored community would have to conform.

In treating the period of divided monarchy, the Chronicler gives practically all his attention to the kingdom of Judah. His omission of the northern Israelite kings is significant. In his view, the northern tribes of Israel were in religious schism as long as they worshiped Yahweh in a place other than the temple of Jerusalem. The Chronicler makes no mention of the important sanctuaries of Yahweh at Dan and Bethel—as though they had never existed. Nevertheless he retains the ancient ideal of "all Israel" (a phrase occuring forty-one times in Chronicles) as the people of God. The condition he places for a united people is that "the whole congregation of Israel" worship the Lord only in his temple at Jerusalem. This explains his praise of Kings Hezekiah and Josiah for striving, after the fall of Samaria, to unite the remnants of the northern tribes of Israel into the kingdom of Judah.

At the end of the fifth century B.C., during the Chronicler's own time, "the people of the land" were the descendants of the people of all the tribes (including Judah) who had not gone into exile. These had become intermingled with aliens and had evolved a religion of Yahweh very different from the Judaism that developed during the Babylonian exile. Thus, religious and political cooperation between the returned exiles and these "people of the land" was out of the question for the Chronicler. This he clearly shows in the last part of his work, the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah.

The Second Book of Chronicles is divided as follows:

I: The Reign of Solomon (1, 1—9, 31)
II: The Monarchy before Hezekiah (10, 1—27, 9)
III: Reforms of Hezekiah and Josiah (28, 1—36, 1)
IV: End of the Kingdom (36, 2-23)

I: THE REIGN OF SOLOMON

Solomon at Gibeon. [1] Solomon, son of David, strengthened his hold on the kingdom, for the LORD, his God, was with him, constantly making him more renowned. [2] He sent a summons to all Israel, to the commanders of thousands and of hundreds, the judges, the princes of all Israel, and the family heads; [3]* and, accompanied by the whole assembly, he went to the high place at Gibeon, because the meeting tent of God, made in the desert by Moses, the LORD's servant, was there. [4] (The ark of God, however, David had brought up from Kiriath-jearim to Jerusalem, where he had provided a place and pitched a tent for it.) [5]*† The bronze altar made by Bezalel, son of Uri, son of Hur, he put in front of the LORD's Dwelling on the high place. There Solomon and the assembly consulted the LORD, 6 and Solomon offered sacrifice in the LORD's presence on the bronze altar at the meeting tent; he offered a thousand holocausts upon it.

† 1, 5: The bronze altar . . . the Lord's Dwelling: the Chronicler justifies Solomon's worship at the high place of Gibeon. He pictures the Lord's Dwelling, i.e., the Mosaic meeting tent, and the bronze altar made at Moses' command (Ex 31, 1-9) as still at Gibeon after David had removed the ark of the covenant from there to a new tent in Jerusalem (1 Chr 15, 1.25; 16, 1). The altar made by Bezalel is described as being of acacia wood plated with bronze (Ex 27, 1f). Solomon later made an all-bronze altar for the temple in Jerusalem (2 Chr 4, 1).

7 That night God appeared to Solomon and said to him, "Make a request of me, and I will grant it to you." 8 Solomon answered God: "You have shown great favor to my father David, and you have allowed me to succeed him as king. 9 Now, LORD God, may your promise to my father David be fulfilled, for you have made me king over a people as numerous as the dust of the earth. 10 Give me, therefore, wisdom and knowledge to lead this people, for otherwise who could rule this great people of yours?" 11 God then replied to Solomon: "Since this has been your wish and you have not asked for riches, treasures and glory, nor for the life of those who hate you, nor even for a long life for yourself, but have asked for wisdom and knowledge in order to rule my people over whom I have made you king, 12 wisdom and knowledge are given you; but I will also give you riches, treasures and glory, such as kings before you never had, nor will those have them who come after you."

Solomon's Wealth. 13 Solomon returned to Jerusalem from the high place at Gibeon, from the meeting tent, and became king over Israel. 14* He gathered together chariots and drivers, so that he had one thousand four hundred chariots and twelve thousand drivers he could station in the chariot cities and with the king in Jerusalem. 15* The king made silver and gold as common in Jerusalem as stones, while cedars became as numerous as the sycamores of the foothills. 16*† Solomon also imported horses from Egypt and Cilicia. The king's agents would acquire them by purchase from Cilicia, 17* and would then bring up chariots from Egypt and export them at six hundred silver shekels, with the horses going for a hundred and fifty shekels. At these rates they served as middlemen for all the Hittite and Aramean kings.

Preparations for the Temple. 18 Solomon gave orders for the building of a house to honor the LORD and also of a house for his own royal estate.

1* He conscripted seventy thousand men to carry stone and eighty thousand to cut the stone in the mountains, and over these he placed three thousand six hundred overseers. 2* Moreover, Solomon sent this message to Huram, king of Tyre: "As you dealt with my father David, sending him cedars to build a house for his dwelling, so deal with me. 3* I intend to build a house for the honor of the LORD, my God, and to consecrate it to him, for the burning of fragrant incense in his presence, for the perpetual display of the showbread, for holocausts morning and evening, and for the sabbaths, new moons, and festivals of the LORD, our God: such is Israel's perpetual obligation. 4 And the house I intend to build must be large, for our God is greater than all other gods. 5* Yet who is really able to build him a house, since the heavens and even the highest heavens cannot contain him? And who am I that I should build him a house, unless it be to offer incense in his presence? 6 Now, send me men skilled at work in gold, silver, bronze and iron, in purple, crimson, and violet fabrics, and who know how to do engraved work, to join the craftsmen who are with me in Judah and Jerusalem, whom my father David appointed. 7 Also send me boards of cedar, cypress and cabinet wood from Lebanon, for I realize that your servants know how to cut the wood of the Lebanon. My servants will labor with yours 8 in order to prepare for me a great quantity of wood, since the house I intend to build must be lofty and wonderful. 9* I will furnish as food for your servants, the hewers who cut the wood, twenty thousand kors of wheat, twenty thousand kors of barley, twenty thousand measures of wine, and twenty thousand measures of oil."

10 Huram, king of Tyre, wrote an answer which he sent to Solomon: "Because the LORD loves his people, he has placed you over them as king." 11* He added: "Blessed be the LORD, the God of Israel, who made heaven and earth, for having given King David a wise son of intelligence and understanding, who will build a house for the LORD and also a house for his royal estate. 12* I am now sending you a craftsman of great skill, Huram-abi, 13† son of a Danite woman

1, 16f: Egypt . . . Cilicia: it seems likely that the horses came from Cilicia and the chariots from Egypt. Some read the source of these data in 1 Kgs 10, 28f as containing the name (Musur) of a mountain district north of Cilicia, rather than of Egypt; but the author of Chronicles surely understood Egypt; cf 9, 28.

2, 13: A Danite woman: a widow of the tribe of Naphtali (1 Kgs 7, 14). The Danites had settled in the northern section of Naphtali's territory (Jgs 18, 27ff). Bezalel's fellow craftsman was of the tribe of Dan (Ex 31, 6).

and of a father from Tyre; he knows how to work with gold, silver, bronze and iron, with stone and wood, with purple, violet, fine linen and crimson, and also how to do all kinds of engraved work and to devise every type of artistic work that may be given him and your craftsmen and the craftsmen of my lord David your father. [14]* And now, let my lord send to his servants the wheat, barley, oil and wine which he has promised. [15]* For our part, we will cut trees on Lebanon, as many as you need, and float them down to you at the port of Joppa, whence you may take them up to Jerusalem."

[16]* Thereupon Solomon took a census of all the alien men who were in the land of Israel (following the census David his father had taken of them), who were found to number one hundred fifty-three thousand six hundred. [17]* Of these he made seventy thousand carriers and eighty thousand cutters in the mountains, and three thousand six hundred overseers to keep the people working.

Building of the Temple. [1]† Then Solomon began to build the house of the LORD in Jerusalem on Mount Moriah, which had been pointed out to his father David, on the spot which David had selected, the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite. [2] He began to build in the second month of the fourth year of his reign. [3] These were the specifications laid down by Solomon for building the house of God: the length was sixty cubits according to the old measure, and the width was twenty cubits; [4]† the porch which lay before the nave along the width of the house was also twenty cubits, and it was twenty cubits high. He overlaid its interior with pure gold. [5] The nave he overlaid with cypress wood which he covered with fine gold, embossing on it palms and chains. [6] He also decorated the building with precious stones. [7] The house, its beams and thresholds, as well as its walls and its doors, he overlaid with gold, and he engraved cherubim upon the walls. (The gold was from Parvaim.) [8]* He also made the room of the holy of holies. Its length corresponded to the width of the house, twenty cubits, and its width was also twenty cubits. He overlaid it with fine gold to the amount of six hundred talents. [9] The weight of the nails was fifty gold shekels. The upper chambers he likewise covered with gold.

[10]* For the room of the holy of holies he made two cherubim of carved workmanship, which were then overlaid with gold. [11] The wings of the cherubim spanned twenty cubits: [12] one wing of each cherub, five cubits in length, extended to a wall of the building, while the other wing, also five cubits in length, touched the corresponding wing of the second cherub. [13] The combined wingspread of the two cherubim was thus twenty cubits. They stood upon their own feet, facing toward the nave. [14]*† He made the veil of violet, purple, crimson and fine linen, and had cherubim embroidered upon it.

[15]* In front of the building he set two columns thirty-five cubits high; the capital topping each was of five cubits. [16] He worked out chains in the form of a collar with which he encircled the capitals of the columns, and he made a hundred pomegranates which he set on the chains. [17] He set up the columns to correspond with the nave, one for the right side and the other for the left, and he called the one to the right Jachin and the one to the left Boaz.

[1]* Then he made a bronze altar twenty cubits long, twenty cubits wide and ten cubits high. [2]* He also made the molten sea. It was perfectly round, ten cubits in diameter, five in depth, and thirty in circumference; [3]† below the rim a ring of figures of oxen encircled the sea, ten to the cubit, all the way around; there were two rows of these cast in the same mold with the sea. [4] It rested on twelve oxen, three facing north, three west, three south, and three east, with their

3, 1: Mount Moriah: the height in the land of Moriah (Gn 22, 2). This is the only place in the Bible where the temple mount is identified with the site where Abraham was to sacrifice Isaac.

3, 4: The porch . . . twenty cubits high: this measurement, not given in the Books of Kings, is here based on a variant Greek text that may be a later revision. The received Hebrew text says, "one hundred and twenty cubits high." The height of the two free-standing columns adjacent to the porch (1 Kgs 7, 15-16) is nearly doubled by the Chronicler (3, 15).

3, 14: The veil: at the entrance of the holy of holies, as also in the Mosaic meeting tent (Ex 26, 31f). Solomon's temple had doors at this place (1 Kgs 6, 31). Apparently there was a veil here in the temple of the Chronicler's time as there was also in Herod's temple (Mt 27, 51; Mk 15, 38; Lk 23, 45).

4, 3: Oxen: in 1 Kgs 7, 24 this double row of ornaments is described as being gourds. The text of Kings available to the Chronicler may have been faulty on this point as the words are similar in sound. In 4, 16 the forks correspond in a similar way to bowls in the text of 1 Kgs (7, 40).

haunches all toward the center; the sea rested on their backs. 5† It was a handbreadth thick, and its brim was made like that of a cup, being lily-shaped. It had a capacity of three thousand measures.

6* Then he made ten basins for washing, placing five of them to the right and five to the left. Here were cleansed the victims for the holocausts; but the sea was for the priests to wash in.

7* He made the lampstands of gold, ten of them as was prescribed, and placed them in the nave, five to the right and five to the left. 8* He made ten tables and had them set in the nave, five to the right and five to the left; and he made a hundred golden bowls. 9* He made the court of the priests and the great courtyard and the gates of the courtyard; the gates he overlaid with bronze. 10* The sea was placed off to the southeast from the right side of the temple.

11* Huram also made the pots, the shovels and the bowls. Huram thus completed the work he had to do for King Solomon in the house of God: 12 two columns, two nodes for the capitals topping these two columns, and two networks covering the nodes of the capitals topping the columns; 13 also four hundred pomegranates for the two networks, with two rows of pomegranates to each network, to cover the two nodes of the capitals topping the columns. 14 He made the stands, and the basins on the stands; 15 one sea, and the twelve oxen under it; 16 likewise the pots, the shovels and the forks. Huram-abi made all these articles for King Solomon from polished bronze for the house of the LORD. 17 The king had them cast in the Jordan region, in the clayey ground between Succoth and Zeredah. 18 Solomon made all these vessels, so many in number that the weight of the bronze was not ascertained.

19 Solomon had all these articles made for the house of God: the golden altar, the tables on which the showbread lay, 20 the lampstands and their lamps of pure gold which were to burn according to prescription before the sanctuary, 21 flowers, lamps and gold tongs [this was the purest gold], 22 snuffers, bowls, cups and firepans of pure gold. As for the entry to the house, its inner doors to the holy of holies, as well as the doors to the nave, were of gold.

Dedication of the Temple. 1* When all the work undertaken by Solomon for the temple of the LORD had been completed, he brought in the dedicated offerings of his father David, putting the silver, the gold and all the other articles in the treasuries of the house of God. 2 At Solomon's order the elders of Israel and all the leaders of the tribes, the princes of the Israelite ancestral houses, came to Jerusalem to bring up the ark of the LORD's covenant from the City of David (which is Zion). 3 All the men of Israel assembled before the king during the festival of the seventh month. 4*† When all the elders of Israel had arrived, 5 the Levites took up the ark, 5 and they carried the ark and the meeting tent with all the sacred vessels that were in the tent; it was the levitical priests who carried them.

6 King Solomon and the entire community of Israel gathered about him before the ark were sacrificing sheep and oxen so numerous that they could not be counted or numbered. 7 The priests brought the ark of the covenant of the LORD to its place beneath the wings of the cherubim in the sanctuary, the holy of holies of the temple. 8 The cherubim had their wings spread out over the place of the ark, sheltering the ark and its poles from above. 9† The poles were long enough so that their ends could be seen from that part of the holy place nearest the sanctuary; however, they could not be seen beyond. The ark has remained there to this day. 10 There was nothing in it but the two tablets which Moses put there on Horeb, the tablets of the covenant which the LORD made with the Israelites at their departure from Egypt.

11 When the priests came out of the holy place (all the priests who were present had purified themselves without reference to the rotation of their various classes), 12 the Levites who were singers, all who belonged to Asaph, Heman, Jeduthun, and their sons and brothers, clothed in fine linen, with cymbals, harps and lyres, stood east of the altar, and with them a hundred and twenty priests blowing trumpets.

13 When the trumpeters and singers were heard as a single voice praising and giving thanks to the LORD, and when they raised the sound of the trumpets, cymbals and other musical instruments to "give thanks to the LORD, for he is good, for his mercy endures forever," the building of the LORD's temple was filled with a cloud. [14]* The priests could not continue to minister because of the cloud, since the LORD's glory filled the house of God.

[1]* Then Solomon said: "The LORD intends to dwell in the dark cloud. [2] I have truly built you a princely house and dwelling, where you may abide forever." [3]* Turning about, the king greeted the whole community of Israel as they stood. [4] He said: "Blessed be the LORD, the God of Israel, who with his own mouth made a promise to my father David and by his own hands brought it to fulfillment. He said: [5] 'Since the day I brought my people out of the land of Egypt, I have not chosen any city from among all the tribes of Israel for the building of a temple to my honor, nor have I chosen any man to be commander of my people Israel; [6] but now I choose Jerusalem, where I shall be honored, and I choose David to rule my people Israel.' [7] My father David wished to build a temple to the honor of the LORD, the God of Israel, [8] but the LORD said to him: 'In wishing to build a temple to my honor, you do well. [9] However, you shall not build the temple; rather, your son whom you will beget shall build the temple to my honor.'

[10] "Now the LORD has fulfilled the promise that he made. I have succeeded my father David and have taken my seat on the throne of Israel, as the LORD foretold, and I have built the temple to the honor of the LORD, the God of Israel. [11] And I have placed there the ark, in which abides the covenant of the LORD which he made with the Israelites."

Solomon's Prayer. [12]* Solomon then took his place before the altar of the LORD in the presence of the whole community of Israel and stretched forth his hands. [13]† He had made a bronze platform five cubits long, five cubits wide, and three cubits high, which he had placed in the middle of the courtyard. Having ascended it, Solomon knelt in the presence of the whole of Israel and stretched forth his hands toward heaven. [14] Thus he prayed: "LORD, God of Israel, there is no god like you in heaven or on earth; you keep your covenant and show kindness to your servants who are wholeheartedly faithful to you. [15] You have kept the promise you made to my father David, your servant. With your own mouth you spoke it, and by your own hand you have brought it to fulfillment this day. [16] Now, therefore, LORD, God of Israel, keep the further promise you made to my father David, your servant, when you said, 'You shall always have someone from your line to sit before me on the throne of Israel, provided only that your descendants look to their conduct so as always to live according to my law, even as you have lived in my presence.' [17] Now, LORD, God of Israel, may this promise which you made to your servant David be confirmed.

[18] "Can it indeed be that God dwells with mankind on earth? If the heavens and the highest heavens cannot contain you, how much less this temple which I have built! [19] Look kindly on the prayer and petition of your servant, O LORD, my God, and listen to the cry of supplication your servant makes before you. [20] May your eyes watch day and night over this temple, the place where you have decreed you shall be honored; may you heed the prayer which I your servant offer toward this place. [21] Listen to the petitions of your servant and of your people Israel which they direct toward this place. Listen from your heavenly dwelling, and when you have heard, pardon.

[22] "When any man sins against his neighbor and is required to take an oath of execration against himself, and when he comes for the oath before your altar in this temple, [23] listen from heaven: take action and pass judgment on your servants, requiting the wicked man and holding him responsible for his conduct, but absolving the innocent and rewarding him according to his virtue. [24] When your people Israel have sinned against you and are defeated by the enemy, but afterward they return and praise your name, and they pray to you and entreat you in this temple, [25] listen from heaven and forgive the sin of your people Israel, and bring them back to the land which you gave them and their fathers. [26] When the sky is closed so that there is no rain, because they have sinned against you, but then they pray toward this place and praise your name, and they withdraw from sin because you afflict them, [27] listen in heaven and forgive the sin of your servants and of your people Israel. But teach them the right way to live, and send rain upon your land which you gave your people as their heritage. [28] When there is famine in the land, when there is pestilence, or blight,

Knowing his heart, render to everyone according to his conduct, for you alone know the hearts of men. [31] So may they fear you and walk in your ways as long as they live on the land you gave our fathers.

[32] "For the foreigner, too, who is not of your people Israel, when he comes from a distant land to honor your great name, your mighty power, and your outstretched arm, when they come in prayer to this temple, [33] listen from your heavenly dwelling place, and do whatever the foreigner entreats you, that all the peoples of the earth may know your name, fearing you as do your people Israel, and knowing that this house which I have built is dedicated to your honor.

[34] "When your people go forth to war against their enemies, wherever you send them, and pray to you in the direction of this city and of the house I have built to your honor, [35] listen from heaven to their prayer and petition, and defend their cause. [36] When they sin against you (for there is no man who does not sin), and in your anger against them you deliver them to the enemy, so that their captors deport them to another land, far or near, [37] when they repent in the land where they are captive and are converted, when they entreat you in the land of their captivity and say, 'We have sinned and done wrong; we have been wicked,' [38] and with their whole heart and with their whole soul they turn back to you in the land of those who hold them captive, when they pray in the direction of their land which you gave their fathers, and of the city you have chosen, and of the house which I have built to your honor, [39] listen from your heavenly dwelling place, hear their prayer and petitions, and uphold their cause. Forgive your people who have sinned against you. [40] My God, may your eyes be open and your ears attentive to the prayer of this place. [41] And now,

"Advance, LORD God, to your resting place,
you and the ark of your majesty.
May your priests, LORD God, be clothed with salvation,
may your faithful ones rejoice in good things.
[42] LORD God, reject not the plea of your anointed, remember the devotion of David, your servant."

CHAPTER 7

[1]* When Solomon had ended his prayer, fire came down from heaven and consumed the holocaust and the sacrifices, and the glory of the LORD filled the house. [2]* But the priests could not enter the house of the LORD, for the glory of the LORD had filled the house of the LORD. [3] All the Israelites looked on while the fire came down and the glory of the LORD was upon the house, and they fell down upon the pavement with their faces to the earth and adored, praising the LORD, "for he is good, for his mercy endures forever." [4]* The king and all the people were offering sacrifices before the LORD. [5]* King Solomon offered as sacrifice twenty-two thousand oxen, and one hundred twenty thousand sheep.

End of the Dedication. [6]* Thus the king and all the people dedicated the house of God. The priests were standing at their stations, as were the Levites, with the musical instruments of the LORD which King David had made for "praising the LORD, for his mercy endures forever," when David used them to accompany the hymns. Across from them the priests blew the trumpets and all Israel stood.

[7]* Then Solomon consecrated the middle part of the court which lay before the house of the LORD; there he offered the holocausts and the fat of the peace offerings, since the bronze altar which Solomon had made could not hold the holocausts, the cereal offerings and the fat.

[8]* On this occasion Solomon and with him all Israel, who had assembled in very large numbers from Labo of Hamath to the Wadi of Egypt, celebrated the festival for seven days. [9]*† On the eighth day they held a special meeting, for they had celebrated the dedication of the altar for seven days and the feast for seven days. [10] On the twenty-third day of the seventh month he sent the people back to their tents, rejoicing and glad at heart at the good things the LORD

The festival (v 8) for the dedication of the altar and of the temple lasted for seven days before the feast of Booths, from the seventh to the fourteenth day. had done for David, for Solomon, and for his people Israel. [11]* Solomon completed the house of the LORD and the royal palace; he successfully accomplished everything he had planned to do in regard to the house of the LORD and his own house.

God's Promise to Solomon. [12] The LORD appeared to Solomon during the night and said to him: "I have heard your prayer, and I have chosen this place for my house of sacrifice. [13] If I close heaven so that there is no rain, if I command the locust to devour the land, if I send pestilence among my people, [14] and if my people, upon whom my name has been pronounced, humble themselves and pray, and seek my presence and turn from their evil ways, I will hear them from heaven and pardon their sins and revive their land. [15] Now my eyes shall be open and my ears attentive to the prayer of this place. [16] And now I have chosen and consecrated this house that my name may be there forever; my eyes and my heart also shall be there always.

[17] "As for you, if you live in my presence as your father David did, doing all that I have commanded you and keeping my statutes and ordinances, [18] I will establish your royal throne as I covenanted with your father David when I said, 'There shall never be lacking someone of yours as ruler in Israel.' [19] But if you turn away and forsake my statutes and commands which I placed before you, if you proceed to venerate and worship strange gods, [20] then I will uproot the people from the land I gave them; I will cast from my sight this house which I have consecrated to my honor, and I will make it a proverb and a byword among all peoples. [21] This temple which is so exalted—everyone passing by it will be amazed and ask: 'Why has the LORD done this to this land and to this house?' [22] And men will answer: 'They forsook the LORD, the God of their fathers, who brought them out of the land of Egypt, and they adopted strange gods and worshiped them and served them. That is why he has brought down upon them all this evil.' "

Public Works. [1]* After the twenty years during which Solomon built the house of the LORD and his own house, [2]† he built up the cities which Huram had given him, and settled Israelites there. [3] Then Solomon went to Hamath of Zoba and conquered it. [4]† He built Tadmor in the desert region and all the supply cities, which he built in Hamath. [5]* He built Upper Beth-horon and Lower Beth-horon, fortified cities with walls, gates and bars; [6] also Baalath, all the supply cities belonging to Solomon, and all the cities for the chariots, the cities for the horsemen, and whatever else Solomon decided should be built in Jerusalem, in the Lebanon, and in the entire land under his dominion. [7] All the people that remained of the Hittites, Amorites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites, who were not of Israel—[8] that is, their descendants remaining in the land, whom the Israelites had not destroyed—Solomon subjected to forced labor, as they continue to this day. [9] But Solomon did not enslave the Israelites for his works. They became soldiers, commanders of his warriors, and commanders of his chariots and his horsemen. [10] They were also King Solomon's two hundred and fifty overseers who had charge of the people.

Solomon's Piety. [11] Solomon brought the daughter of Pharaoh up from the City of David to the palace which he had built for her, for he said, "No wife of mine shall dwell in the house of David, king of Israel, for the places where the ark of the LORD has come are holy."

[12] In those times Solomon offered holocausts to the LORD upon the altar of the LORD which he had built in front of the porch, [13]* as was required day by day according to the command of Moses, and in particular on the sabbaths, at the new moons, and on the fixed festivals three times a year: on the feast of the Unleavened Bread, the feast of Weeks and the feast of Booths.

[14]* And according to the ordinance of his father David he appointed the various classes of the priests for their service, and the Levites according to their functions of praise and ministry alongside the priests, as the daily duty required. The gatekeepers of the various classes stood guard at each gate, since such was the command of David, the man of God. [15] There was no deviation from the king's command in any respect relating to the priests and Levites or the treasuries. [16] All of Solomon's work was carried out successfully from the day the foundation of the house of the LORD was laid until the house of the Glories of the Court. 17* In those times Solomon went to Ezion-geber and to Elath on the seashore of the land of Edom. 18* Huram, through his servants, sent him ships and crewmen acquainted with the sea, who accompanied Solomon's servants to Ophir and brought back from there four hundred and fifty talents of gold to King Solomon.

1* When the queen of Sheba heard of Solomon's fame, she came to Jerusalem to test him with subtle questions, accompanied by a very numerous retinue and by camels bearing spices, much gold, and precious stones. She came to Solomon and questioned him on every subject in which she was interested. 2 Solomon explained to her everything she asked about, and there remained nothing hidden from Solomon that he could not explain to her.

3 When the queen of Sheba witnessed Solomon's wisdom, the palace he had built, 4 the food at his table, the seating of his ministers, the attendance of his servants and their dress, his cupbearers and their dress, and the holocausts he offered in the house of the LORD, it took her breath away. 5 "The account I heard in my country about your deeds and your wisdom is true," she told the king. 6 "Yet I did not believe the report until I came and saw with my own eyes. I have discovered that they did not tell me the half of your great wisdom; you have surpassed the stories I heard. 7 Happy are your men, happy these servants of yours, who stand before you always and listen to your wisdom. 8 Blessed be the LORD, your God, who has been so pleased with you as to place you on his throne as king for the LORD, your God. Because your God has so loved Israel as to will to make it last forever, he has appointed you over them as king to administer right and justice." 9 Then she gave the king one hundred and twenty gold talents and a very large quantity of spices, as well as precious stones. There was no other spice like that which the queen of Sheba gave to King Solomon.

10 The servants of Huram and of Solomon who brought gold from Ophir also brought cabinet wood and precious stones. 11 With the cabinet wood the king made stairs for the temple of the LORD and the palace of the king; also lyres and harps for the chanters. The like of these had not been seen before in the land of Judah.

12 King Solomon gave the queen of Sheba everything she desired and asked him for, more than she had brought to the king. Then she returned to her own country with her servants.

13* The gold that Solomon received each year weighed six hundred and sixty-six gold talents, 14 in addition to what was collected from travelers and what the merchants brought. All the kings of Arabia also, and the governors of the country, brought gold and silver to Solomon.

17 King Solomon also made a large ivory throne which he overlaid with fine gold. 18 The throne had six steps; a footstool of gold was fastened to it, and there was an arm on each side of the seat, with two lions standing beside the arms. 19 Twelve other lions also stood there, one on either side of each step. Nothing like this had ever been produced in any other kingdom. 20 Furthermore, all of King Solomon's drinking vessels were of gold, and all the utensils in the hall of the Forest of Lebanon were of pure gold; silver was not considered of value in Solomon's time. 21 For the king had ships that went to Tarshish with the servants of Huram. Once every three years the fleet of Tarshish would return with a cargo of gold and silver, ivory, apes and monkeys. 22 Thus King Solomon surpassed all the other kings of the earth in riches as well as in wisdom.

23 All the kings of the earth sought audience with Solomon, to hear from him the wisdom which God had put in his heart. 24 Year in and year out, each one would bring his tribute—silver and gold articles, garments, weapons, spices, horses and mules. 25 Solomon also had four thousand stalls of horses, chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, which he assigned to the chariot cities and to the king in Jerusalem. 26 He was ruler over all the kings from the River to the land of the Philistines and down to the border of Egypt. 27 The king made silver as common in Jerusalem as stones, while cedars became as numerous as the sycamores of the foothills. 28† Horses were imported for Solomon from Egypt and from all the lands.

the acts of Solomon, first and last, are written, as is well known, in the acts of Nathan the prophet, in the prophecy of Ahijah the Shilonite, and in the visions of Iddo the seer which concern Jeroboam, son of Nebat. 30 Solomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israel for forty years. 31 He rested with his ancestors; he was buried in his father's City of David, and his son Rehoboam succeeded him as king.

Division of the Kingdom. 1*† Rehoboam went to Shechem, for all Israel had come to Shechem to proclaim him king. 2 When Jeroboam, son of Nebat, heard of this in Egypt where he had fled from King Solomon, he returned from Egypt. 3 Jeroboam was summoned to the assembly, and he and all Israel said to Rehoboam: 4 "Your father laid a heavy yoke upon us. If you now lighten the harsh service and the heavy yoke that your father imposed on us, we will serve you." 5 "In three days," he answered them, "come back to me."

When the people had departed, 6 King Rehoboam consulted the elders who had been in the service of his father during Solomon's lifetime, asking, "What answer do you advise me to give this people?" 7 They replied, "If you will deal kindly with this people and give in to them, acceding to their request, they will be your servants forever." 8 But he ignored the advice the elders had given him and consulted the young men who had grown up with him and were in his service. 9 He said to them, "What answer do you advise me to give this people, who have asked me to lighten the yoke my father imposed on them?" 10 The young men who had grown up with him replied: "This is the answer you should give to this people who have said to you, 'Your father laid a heavy yoke upon us, but do you lighten our yoke'; this you should say to them: 'My little finger is thicker than my father's body. 11 Whereas my father put a heavy yoke on you, I will make it heavier! My father beat you with whips, but I will beat you with scorpions!' "

12 On the third day, Jeroboam and all the people came back to King Rehoboam as he had instructed them to do. 13 Ignoring the advice the elders had given him, the king gave them a harsh answer, 14 speaking to them according to the advice of the young men: "My father laid a heavy yoke on you, but I will make it heavier. My father beat you with whips, but I will beat you with scorpions." 15* The king would not listen to the people, for this turn of events was divinely ordained to fulfill the prophecy the LORD had uttered to Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, through Ahijah the Shilonite.

16* When all Israel saw that the king would not listen to them, the people answered the king.

"What share have we in David?
We have no heritage in the son of Jesse.
Everyone to your tents, O Israel!
Now look to your own house, David!"

So all Israel went off to their tents. 17 Rehoboam, therefore, reigned over only those Israelites who lived in the cities of Judah. 18 King Rehoboam then sent out Hadoram, who was superintendent of the forced labor, but the Israelites stoned him to death. Rehoboam himself managed to mount his chariot and flee to Jerusalem. 19 Thus Israel has been in rebellion against David's house to this day.

CHAPTER 11

1* On his arrival in Jerusalem Rehoboam gathered together the house of Judah and Benjamin, a hundred and eighty thousand seasoned warriors, to have them fight against Israel and restore the kingdom to him. 2 However, the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah, a man of God: 3 "Say to Rehoboam, son of Solomon, king of Judah, and to all the Israelites in Judah and Benjamin: 4 'Thus says the LORD: You must not march out to fight against your brothers. Let every man return home, for what has occurred I have brought about.' " They obeyed this message of the LORD and gave up the expedition against Jeroboam.

Rehoboam's Works. 5† Rehoboam took up residence in Jerusalem and built fortified cities in Judah. 6 He built up Bethlehem, Etam, Tekoa, 7 Beth-zur, Soco, Adullam, 8 Gath, Mareshah, Ziph, 9 Adoraim, Lachish, Azekah, 10 Zorah, Aijalon, and Hebron; these were fortified cities in Judah and Benjamin. 11 Then he strengthened the fortifications and put commanders in them, with supplies of Refugees from the North. 13 Now the priests and Levites throughout Israel presented themselves to him from all parts of their land, 14* for the Levites left their assigned pasture lands and their holdings and came to Judah and Jerusalem, because Jeroboam and his sons repudiated them as priests of the LORD. 15* In their place, he himself appointed priests for the high places and satyrs and calves he had made. 16 After them, all those of the Israelite tribes who firmly desired to seek the LORD, the God of Israel, came to Jerusalem to sacrifice to the LORD, the God of their fathers. 17 Thus they strengthened the kingdom of Judah and made Rehoboam, son of Solomon, prevail for three years; for they walked in the way of David and Solomon three years.

Rehoboam's Family. 18 Rehoboam took to himself as wife Mahalath, daughter of Jerimoth, son of David and of Abihail, daughter of Eliab, son of Jesse. 19 She bore him sons: Jehush, Shemariah and Zaham. 20* After her, he married Maacah, daughter of Absalom, who bore him Abijah, Attai, Ziza and Shelomith. 21 Rehoboam loved Maacah, daughter of Absalom, more than all his other wives and concubines; he had taken eighteen wives and sixty concubines, and he fathered twenty-eight sons and sixty daughters. 22 Rehoboam constituted Abijah, son of Maacah, commander among his brothers, for he intended to make him king. 23 He acted prudently, distributing various of his sons throughout all the districts of Judah and Benjamin, in all the fortified cities; and he furnished them with copious provisions and sought an abundance of wives for them.

His Apostasy. 1* After Rehoboam had consolidated his rule and had become powerful, he abandoned the law of the LORD, he and all Israel with him. 2* Thus it happened that in the fifth year of King Rehoboam, Shishak, king of Egypt, attacked Jerusalem, for they had been unfaithful to the LORD. 3† He came up with twelve hundred chariots and sixty thousand horsemen, and there was no counting the army that came with him from Egypt—Libyans, Sukkites and Ethiopians. 4 They captured the fortified cities of Judah and came as far as Jerusalem. 5* Then Shemaiah the prophet came to Rehoboam and the commanders of Judah who had gathered at Jerusalem because of Shishak, and said to them: "Thus says the LORD: 'You have abandoned me, and therefore I have abandoned you to the power of Shishak.' "

6 However, the commanders of Israel and the king humbled themselves saying, "The LORD is just." 7 When the LORD saw that they had humbled themselves, the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah: "Because they have humbled themselves, I will not destroy them; I will give them some deliverance, and my wrath shall not be poured out upon Jerusalem through Shishak. 8 But they shall be his servants, that they may know what it is to serve me and what it is to serve earthly kingdoms." 9* Therefore Shishak, king of Egypt, attacked Jerusalem and carried off the treasures of the temple of the LORD and of the king's palace. He took everything, including the gold bucklers that Solomon had made. 10 (To replace them, King Rehoboam made bronze bucklers, which he entrusted to the officers of the guard on duty at the entrance of the royal palace. 11 Whenever the king visited the temple of the LORD, the troops would come bearing them, and then they would return them to the guardroom.) 12 Because he had humbled himself, the anger of the LORD turned from him so that it did not destroy him completely; and in Judah, moreover, good deeds were found.

13* King Rehoboam consolidated his power in Jerusalem and continued to rule; he was forty-one years old when he became king, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city in which, out of all the tribes of Israel, the LORD chose to be honored. Rehoboam's mother was named Naamah, an Ammonite. 14 He did evil, for he had not truly resolved to seek the LORD. 15* The acts of Rehoboam, first and last, are written, as is well known, in the history of Shemaiah the prophet and of Iddo the seer [his family record]. There was war continually between Rehoboam and Jeroboam. 16 Rehoboam rested with his ancestors; he was buried in the City of David. His son Abijah succeeded him as king.

mother was named Michaiah, daughter of Uriel of Gibeah. There was war between Abijah and Jeroboam.

3 Abijah joined battle with a force of four hundred thousand picked warriors, while Jeroboam lined up against him in battle with eight hundred thousand picked and valiant warriors. 4† Abijah stood on Mount Zemariam, which is in the highlands of Ephraim, and said: "Listen to me, Jeroboam and all Israel! 5 Do you not know that the LORD, the God of Israel, has given the kingdom of Israel to David forever, to him and to his sons, by a covenant made in salt? 6* Yet Jeroboam, son of Nebat, the servant of Solomon, son of David, has stood up and rebelled against his lord! 7 Worthless men, scoundrels, joined him and overcame Rehoboam, son of Solomon, when Rehoboam was young and unthinking, and no match for them. 8 But now, do you think you are a match for the kingdom of the LORD commanded by the sons of David, simply because you are a huge multitude and have with you the golden calves which Jeroboam made you for gods?

9 "Have you not expelled the priests of the LORD, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites, and made for yourselves priests like the peoples of foreign lands? Everyone who comes to consecrate himself with a young bull and seven rams becomes a priest of no-gods. 10 But as for us, the LORD is our God, and we have not forsaken him. The priests ministering to the LORD are sons of Aaron, and the Levites also have their offices. 11 They burn holocausts to the LORD and fragrant incense morning after morning and evening after evening; they display the showbread on the pure table, and the lamps of the golden lampstand burn evening after evening; for we observe our duties to the LORD, our God, but you have abandoned him. 12 See, God is with us, at our head, and his priests are here with trumpets to sound the attack against you. Do not battle against the LORD, the God of your fathers, O Israelites, for you will not succeed!"

13 But Jeroboam had an ambush go around them to come at them from the rear; so that while his army faced Judah, his ambush lay behind them. 14 When Judah turned and saw that they had to battle on both fronts, they cried out to the LORD and the priests sounded the trumpets. 15 Then the men of Judah shouted; and when they did so, God defeated Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah. 16 The Israelites fled before Judah, and God delivered them into their hands. 17 Abijah and his people inflicted a severe defeat upon them; five hundred thousand picked men of Israel fell slain. 18 The Israelites were subdued on that occasion and the Judahites were victorious because they relied on the LORD, the God of their fathers. 19 Abijah pursued Jeroboam and took cities from him: Bethel and its dependencies, Jeshanah and its dependencies, and Ephron and its dependencies. 20 Jeroboam did not regain power during the time of Abijah; the LORD struck him down and he died, 21 while Abijah continued to grow stronger. He took to himself fourteen wives and fathered twenty-two sons and sixteen daughters.

Death of Abijah. 22* The rest of Abijah's acts, his deeds and his words, are written in the midrash of the prophet Iddo. 23 Abijah rested with his ancestors; they buried him in the City of David. His son Asa succeeded him as king. During his time, ten years of peace began in the land.

Asa the Reformer. 1* Asa did what was good and pleasing to the LORD, his God, 2 removing the heathen altars and the high places, breaking to pieces the sacred pillars, and cutting down the sacred poles. 3 He commanded Judah to seek the LORD, the God of their fathers, and to observe the law and its commands. 4 He removed the high places and incense stands from all the cities of Judah, and under him the kingdom had peace. 5 He built fortified cities in Judah, for the land had peace and no war was waged against him during these years, because the LORD had given him peace. 6 He said to Judah: "Let us build these cities and surround them with walls, towers, gates and bars. The land is still ours, for we have sought the LORD, our God; we sought him, and he has given us rest on every side." So they built and prospered.

The Ethiopian Invasion. 7† Asa had an army of three hundred thousand shield- and lance-bearers from Judah, and two hundred and eighty thousand from Benjamin who carried bucklers and were archers, all of them valiant warriors. 8* Zerah the Ethiopian moved against them with a force of one million men and three hundred chariots, and he came as far as Mareshah. 9 Asa went out to meet him and set himself in battle array in the valley of Zephathah, near Mareshah. 10* Asa called upon the LORD, his God, praying: "O LORD, there is none like you to help the powerless against the strong. Help us, O LORD, our God, for we rely on you, and in your name we have come against this multitude. You are the LORD, our God; let no man prevail against you." 11* And so the LORD defeated the Ethiopians before Asa and Judah, and they fled. 12 Asa and those with him pursued them as far as Gerar, and the Ethiopians fell until there were no survivors, for they were crushed before the LORD and his army, which carried away enormous spoils. 13 Then the Judahites conquered all the cities around Gerar, for the fear of the LORD was upon them; they despoiled all the cities, for there was much booty in them. 14 They attacked also the tents of the cattle-herders and carried off a great number of sheep and camels. Then they returned to Jerusalem.

Cult Reform. 1 Upon Azariah, son of Oded, came the spirit of God. 2* He went forth to meet Asa and said to him: "Hear me, Asa and all Judah and Benjamin! The LORD is with you when you are with him, and if you seek him he will be present to you; but if you abandon him, he will abandon you. 3 For a long time Israel had no true God, no priest-teacher and no law, 4* but when in their distress they turned to the LORD, the God of Israel, and sought him, he was present to them. 5 In that former time there was no peace for anyone to go or come, but there were many terrors upon the inhabitants of the lands. 6* Nation crushed nation and city crushed city, for God destroyed them by every kind of adversity. 7* But as for you, be strong and do not relax, for your work shall be rewarded."

8 When Asa heard these words and the prophecy [Oded the prophet], he was encouraged to remove the detestable idols from the whole land of Judah and Benjamin and from the cities he had taken in the highlands of Ephraim, and to restore the altar of the LORD which was before the vestibule of the LORD. 9 Then he convened all Judah and Benjamin, together with those of Ephraim, Manasseh and Simeon who sojourned with them; for many had fled to him from Israel when they saw that the LORD, his God, was with him. 10† They gathered at Jerusalem in the third month of the fifteenth year of Asa's reign, 11 and sacrificed to the LORD at that time seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep of the booty they had brought. 12 They entered into a covenant to seek the LORD, the God of their fathers, with all their heart and soul; 13* and everyone who would not seek the LORD, the God of Israel, was to be put to death, whether small or great, whether man or woman. 14 They swore to the LORD with a loud voice, with shouting and with trumpets and horns. 15* All Judah rejoiced over the oath, for they had sworn with their whole heart and sought him with complete desire, so that he was present to them. And the LORD gave them rest on every side.

16* Maacah, the mother of King Asa, he deposed as queen mother because she had made an outrageous object for Asherah; Asa cut this down, smashed it, and burnt it in the Kidron Valley. 17 Although the high places did not disappear from Israel, yet Asa's heart was undivided as long as he lived. 18 He brought into the house of God his father's votive offerings and his own: silver, gold, and various utensils. 19 There was no war until the thirty-fifth year of Asa's reign.

CHAPTER 16

Asa's Infidelity. 1*In the thirty-sixth year of Asa's reign, Baasha, king of Israel, attacked Judah and fortified Ramah to prevent any communication with Asa, king of Judah. 2 Asa then brought out silver and gold from the treasuries of the temple of the LORD and of the royal palace and sent them to Ben-hadad, king of Aram, who lived in Damascus, with this message: 3 "There is a treaty between you and me, as there was between your father and my father. See, I am sending you silver and gold. Go, break your treaty with Baasha, king of Israel, that he may withdraw from me." 4 Ben-hadad agreed to King Asa's request and sent the leaders of his troops against the cities of Israel. They attacked Ijon, Dan, Abel-maim, and all the store cities of Naphtali. 5 When Baasha heard of it, he left off fortifying Ramah; he stopped his work. 6 Then King Asa commandeered all of Judah to carry away the stone and wood with which Baasha had been fortifying Ramah, and with them he fortified Geba and Mizpah.

7† At that time Hanani the seer came to Asa, king of Judah, and said to him: "Because you relied on the king of Aram and did not rely on the LORD, your God, the army of the king of Aram has escaped your hand. 8* Were not the Ethiopians and Libyans a vast army, with great numbers of chariots and drivers? And yet, because you relied on the LORD, he delivered them into your power. 9* The eyes of the LORD roam over the whole earth, to encourage those who are devoted to him wholeheartedly. You have acted foolishly in this matter, for from now on you will have wars." 10 But Asa became angry with the seer and imprisoned him in the stocks, so greatly was he enraged at him over this. Asa also oppressed some of his people at this time.

11* Now the acts of Asa, first and last, can be found recorded in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel. 12 In the thirty-ninth year of his reign, Asa contracted a serious disease in his feet. But even in his sickness he did not seek the LORD, but only the physicians. 13 Asa rested with his ancestors; he died in the forty-first year of his reign. 14 They buried him in the tomb he had hewn for himself in the City of David, having laid him upon a couch which was filled with spices and various kinds of aromatics compounded into an ointment. They also burned a very great funeral pyre for him.

Zeal of Jehoshaphat for the Law. 1* His son Jehoshaphat succeeded him as king and strengthened his hold against Israel. 2 He placed armed forces in all the fortified cities of Judah, and put garrisons in the land of Judah and in the cities of Ephraim which his father Asa had taken. 3† The LORD was with Jehoshaphat, for he walked in the ways his father had pursued in the beginning, and he did not consult the Baals. 4 Rather, he sought the God of his father and observed his commands, and not the practices of Israel. 5 As a result, the LORD made his kingdom secure, and all Judah gave Jehoshaphat gifts, so that he enjoyed great wealth and glory. 6* Thus he was encouraged to follow the LORD's ways, and again he removed the high places and the sacred poles from Judah.

7 In the third year of his reign he sent his leading men, Ben-hail, Obadiah, Zechariah, Nethanel and Micaiah, to teach in the cities of Judah. 8* With them he sent the Levites Shemaiah, Nethaniah, Zebadiah, Asahel, Shemiramoth, Jehonathan, Adonijah and Tobijah, together with the priests Elishama and Jehoram. 9* They taught in Judah, having with them the book containing the law of the LORD; they traveled through all the cities of Judah and taught among the people.

His Power. 10 Now the fear of the LORD was upon all the kingdoms of the countries surrounding Judah, so that they did not war against Jehoshaphat. 11 Some of the Philistines brought Jehoshaphat gifts and a tribute of silver; and the Arabs also brought him a flock of seven thousand seven hundred rams and seven thousand seven hundred he-goats.

12 Jehoshaphat grew steadily greater. He built strongholds and store cities in Judah. 13 He carried out many works in the cities of Judah, and he had soldiers, valiant warriors, in Jerusalem. 14 This was their mustering according to their ancestral houses. Of Judah, the commanders of thousands: Adnah the commander, and with him three hundred thousand valiant warriors. 15 Next to him, Jehohanan the commander, and with him two hundred eighty thousand. 16 Next to him, Amasiah, son of Zichri, who offered himself to the LORD, and with him two hundred thousand valiant warriors. 17 From Benjamin: Eliada, a valiant warrior, and with him two hundred thousand armed with bow and buckler. 18 Next to him, Jozabad, and with him one hundred and eighty thousand equipped for war. 19 These were at the service of the king; in addition were those whom the king had placed in the fortified cities throughout all Judah.

Alliance with Israel. 1* Jehoshaphat therefore had wealth and glory in abundance; but he became related to Ahab by marriage. 2 After some years he went down to Ahab at Samaria; Ahab offered numerous sheep and oxen for him and the people with him, and persuaded him to go up against Ramoth-gilead. 3 Ahab, king of Israel, asked Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, "Will you come with me to Ramoth-gilead?" "You and I are as one," was his answer; "your people and my people as well. We will be with you in the battle." 4 But Jehoshaphat also said, to the king of Israel, "Seek the word of the LORD at once."

The Prophets. [5] The king of Israel gathered his prophets, four hundred in number, and asked them, "Shall we go to attack Ramoth-gilead, or shall I refrain?" "Go up," they answered, "God will deliver it over to the king." [6] But Jehoshaphat said, "Is there no other prophet of the LORD here whom we may consult?" [7] The king of Israel answered Jehoshaphat, "There is still another through whom we may consult the LORD, but I hate him, for he prophesies not good but always evil about me. That is Micaiah, son of Imlah." Jeshoshaphat said, "Let not your Majesty speak of evil against you." [8] So the king of Israel called an official, to whom he said, "Get Micaiah, son of Imlah, at once." [9] The king of Israel and King Jehoshaphat of Judah were seated each on his throne, clothed in their robes of state on a threshing floor at the entrance of the gate of Samaria, and all the prophets were prophesying before them.

[10] Zedekiah, son of Chenaanah, made iron horns for himself and said: "The LORD says, 'With these you shall gore Aram until you have destroyed them.'" [11] The other prophets prophesied in the same vein, saying: "Go up to Ramoth-gilead. You shall succeed; the LORD will deliver it over to the king." [12]† The messenger who had gone to call Micaiah said to him: "Look now, the prophets unanimously predict good for the king. Let your word, like each of theirs, predict good." [13] "As the LORD lives," Micaiah answered, "I will say what my God tells me."

[14] When he came to the king, the king said to him, "Micaiah, shall we go to fight against Ramoth-gilead, or shall I refrain?" "Go up," he answered, "and succeed; they will be delivered into your power." [15] But the king said to him, "How many times must I adjure you to tell me nothing but the truth in the name of the LORD?" [16] Then Micaiah answered:

> "I see all Israel > scattered on the mountains,
> like sheep without a shepherd,
> and the LORD saying, 'These have no master!
> Let each of them go back home in peace.'"

[17] The king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, "Did I not tell you that he prophesies no good about me, but only evil?" [18] But Micaiah continued:

"Therefore hear the word of the LORD: I saw the LORD seated on his throne, with the whole host of heaven standing by to his right and to his left. [19] The LORD asked, 'Who will deceive Ahab, king of Israel, so that he will go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead?' And one said this, another that, [20] until a spirit came forward and presented himself to the LORD, saying, 'I will deceive him.' The LORD asked, 'How?' [21] He answered, 'I will go forth and become a lying spirit in the mouths of all his prophets.' The LORD agreed: 'You shall succeed in deceiving him. Go forth and do this.' [22] So now the LORD has put a lying spirit in the mouths of these your prophets, but the LORD himself has decreed evil against you."

[23] Thereupon Zedekiah, son of Chenaanah, came up and slapped Micaiah on the cheek, saying, "Which way did the spirit of the LORD go when he left me to speak to you?" [24] "You shall find out," Micaiah replied, "on that day when you enter an innermost chamber to hide." [25] The king of Israel then said: "Seize Micaiah and take him back to Amon, prefect of the city, and to Joash the king's son, [26] and say, 'This is the king's order: Put this man in prison and feed him scanty rations of bread and water until I return in safety!'" [27]† But Micaiah said, "If ever you return in safety, the LORD has not spoken through me." And he said, "Hear, O peoples, all of you!"

Ahab's Death. [28] The king of Israel and King Jehoshaphat of Judah went up to Ramoth-gilead [29] and the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, "I will go into battle disguised, but you put on your own clothes." So the king of Israel disguised himself and they entered the fray. [30] Meanwhile, the king of Aram had given his chariot commanders the order, "Fight with no one, small or great, except the king of Israel." [31] When the commanders saw Jehoshaphat, they exclaimed, "That must be the king of Israel!" and shifted to fight him. But Jehoshaphat cried out and the LORD helped him; God induced them to leave him. [32] The chariot commanders became aware that he was not the king of Israel and gave up their pursuit of him. [33]* Someone, however, drew his bow at random and hit the king of Israel between the joints of his breastplate. He ordered his charioteer, "Rein about and take me out of the ranks, for I am disabled." [34] The battle grew fierce during the day, and the king of Israel braced himself up on his chariot facing the Arameans until evening. He died as the sun was setting.

Jehoshaphat Rebuked. 1 King Jehoshaphat of Judah returned in safety to his house in Jerusalem. 2† Jehu the seer, son of Hanani, met King Jehoshaphat and said to him: "Should you help the wicked and love those who hate the LORD? For this reason, wrath is upon you from the LORD. 3 Yet some good things are to be found in you, since you have removed the sacred poles from the land and have been determined to seek God."

Judges Appointed. 4 Jehoshaphat dwelt in Jerusalem; but he went out again among the people from Beersheba to the highlands of Ephraim and brought them back to the LORD, the God of their fathers. 5 He appointed judges in the land, in all the fortified cities of Judah, city by city, 6* and he said to them: "Take care what you do, for you are judging, not on behalf of man, but on behalf of the LORD; he judges with you. 7* And now, let the fear of the LORD be upon you. Act carefully, for with the LORD, our God there is no injustice, no partiality, no bribe-taking." 8* In Jerusalem also, Jehoshaphat appointed some Levites and priests and some of the family heads of Israel to judge in the name of the LORD and to settle quarrels among the inhabitants of Jerusalem. 9 He gave them this command: "You shall act faithfully and wholeheartedly in the fear of the LORD. 10* And in every dispute that your brethren living in their cities bring to you, whether it concerns bloodguilt or questions of law, command, statutes, or judgments, warn them lest they become guilty before the LORD and his wrath come upon you and your brethren. Do that and you shall be guiltless. 11 See now, Amariah is high priest over you in everything that pertains to the LORD, and Zebadiah, son of Ishmael, is leader of the house of Judah in all that pertains to the king; and the Levites will be your officials. Act firmly, and the LORD will be with the good."

Invasion from Edom. 1† After this the Moabites, the Ammonites, and with them some Meunites came to fight against Jehoshaphat. 2 The message was brought to Jehoshaphat: "A great multitude is coming against you from across the sea, from Edom; they are already in Hazazon-tamar" (which is En-gedi). 3 Jehoshaphat was frightened, and he hastened to consult the LORD. He proclaimed a fast for all Judah. 4* Then Judah gathered to seek help from the LORD; from every one of the cities of Judah they came to seek the LORD.

Prayer of Jehoshaphat. 5 Jehoshaphat stood up in the assembly of Judah and Jerusalem in the house of the LORD before the new court, 6* and he said: "LORD, God of our fathers, are you not the God in heaven, and do you not rule over all the kingdoms of the nations? In your hand is power and might, and no one can withstand you. 7* Was it not you, our God, who drove out the inhabitants of this land before your people Israel and gave it forever to the descendants of Abraham, your friend? 8 They have dwelt in it and they built in it a sanctuary to your honor, saying, 9 'When evil comes upon us, the sword of judgment, or pestilence, or famine, we will stand before this house and before you, for your name is in this house, and we will cry out to you in our affliction, and you will hear and save!' 10* And now, see the Ammonites, Moabites, and those of Mount Seir whom you did not allow Israel to invade when they came from the land of Egypt, but instead they passed them by and did not destroy them. 11 See how they are now repaying us by coming to drive us out of the possession you have given us. 12 O our God, will you not pass judgment on them? We are powerless before this vast multitude that comes against us. We are at a loss what to do, hence our eyes are turned toward you."

Victory Prophesied. 13 All Judah was standing before the LORD, with their little ones, their wives, and their young sons. 14 And the spirit of the LORD came upon Jahaziel, son of Zechariah, son of Benaiah, son of Jeiel, son of Mattaniah, a Levite of the clan of Asaph, in the midst of the assembly, 15 and he said: "Listen, all of Judah, inhabitants of Jerusalem, and King Jehoshaphat! The LORD says to you: 'Do not fear or lose heart at the sight of this vast multitude, for the battle is not yours but God's. 16 Go down against them tomorrow. You will see them coming up by the ascent of Ziz, and you will come upon them at the end of the wadi which opens on the wilderness of Jeruel. 17* You will not have to fight in this encounter. Take your places, 19, 2: Jehu the seer, son of Hanani: hardly the same seer as Jehu, son of Hanani, who prophesied against Baasha almost fifty years earlier (1 Kgs 16, 1).

20, 1-30: Although the account here seems to be a free composition of the Chronicler, there is probably a basis in fact for it; there could well have been a raid of nomads against Judah in the reign of Jehoshaphat, similar to Zerah's attack on Asa (14, 8-14). The story may also, in some way, be connected with the campaign of Israel and Judah against Moab through the territory of Edom (2 Kgs 3, 4-27).

stand firm, and see how the LORD will be with you to deliver you, Judah and Jerusalem. Do not fear or lose heart. Tomorrow go out to meet them, and the LORD will be with you.'" [18] Then Jehoshaphat knelt down with his face to the ground, and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell down before the LORD in worship. [19] Levites from among the Kohathites and Korahites rose to sing the praises of the LORD, the God of Israel, in a resounding chorus.

The Invaders Destroyed. [20]* In the early morning they hastened out to the wilderness of Tekoa. As they were going out, Jehoshaphat halted and said: "Listen to me, Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem! Trust in the LORD, your God, and you will be found firm. Trust in his prophets and you will succeed." [21]* † After consulting with the people, he appointed some to sing to the LORD and some to praise the holy Appearance as it went forth at the head of the army. They sang: "Give thanks to the LORD, for his mercy endures forever." [22] At the moment they began their jubilant hymn, the LORD laid an ambush against the Ammonites, Moabites, and those of Mount Seir who were coming against Judah, so that they were vanquished. [23]* For the Ammonites and Moabites set upon the inhabitants of Mount Seir and completely exterminated them. And when they had finished with the inhabitants of Seir, they began to destroy each other.

[24] When Judah came to the watchtower of the desert and looked toward the throng, they saw only corpses fallen on the ground, with no survivors. [25] Jehoshaphat and his people came to take plunder, and they found an abundance of cattle and personal property, garments and precious vessels. They took so much that they were unable to carry it all; they were three days taking the spoil, so great was it. [26]† On the fourth day they held an assembly in the Valley of Beracah—for there they blessed the LORD; therefore that place has ever since been called the Valley of Beracah. [27] Then all the men of Judah and Jerusalem, with Jehoshaphat at their head, turned back toward Jerusalem celebrating the joyful victory the LORD had given them over their enemies. [28] They came to Jerusalem, to the house of the LORD, with harps, lyres and trumpets. [29] And the fear of God came upon all the kingdoms of the surrounding lands when they heard how the LORD had fought against the enemies of Israel. [30] Thereafter Jehoshaphat's kingdom enjoyed peace, for his God gave him rest on every side.

Jehoshaphat's Other Deeds. [31]* Thus Jehoshaphat reigned over Judah. He was thirty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned twenty-five years in Jerusalem. His mother was named Azubah, daughter of Shilhi. [32] He followed the path of his father Asa unswervingly, doing what was right in the LORD's sight. [33] But the high places were not removed, nor as yet had the people fixed their hearts on the God of their fathers.

[34] The rest of the acts of Jehoshaphat, first and last, can be found written in the chronicle of Jehu, son of Hanani, which is inserted in the book of the kings of Israel. [35] After this, King Jehoshaphat of Judah allied himself with King Ahaziah of Israel, who did evil. [36]* He joined with him in building ships to sail to Tarshish; the fleet was built at Ezion-geber. [37] But Eliezer, son of Dodavahu from Mareshah, prophesied against Jehoshaphat, saying, "Because you have joined with Ahaziah, the LORD will shatter your work." And the ships were wrecked and were unable to sail to Tarshish.

[1]* Jehoshaphat rested with his ancestors; he was buried with them in the City of David. Jehoram, his son, succeeded him as king. [2] His brothers, sons of Jehoshaphat, were Azariah, Jehiel, Zechariah, Azariah, Michael and Shephatiah; all these were sons of King Jehoshaphat of Judah. [3] Their father gave them numerous gifts of silver, gold and precious objects, together with fortified cities in Judah, but the kingship he gave to Jehoram because he was the first-born.

Evil Deeds of Jehoram. [4] When Jehoram had come into his father's kingdom and had consolidated his power, he put to the sword all his brothers and also some of the princes of Israel. [5]* Jehoram was thirty-two years old when he became king, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem. [6]† He conducted himself like the kings of Israel of the line of Ahab, because one of Ahab's daughters was his wife. He did evil in the sight of the LORD, [7]* but the LORD would not destroy the house of David because of the covenant he had made with David and because of his promise to give him and his sons a lamp for all time.

8* During his time Edom revolted against the sovereignty of Judah; they chose a king of their own. 9 Thereupon Jehoram crossed over with his officers and all the chariots he had. He arose by night and broke through the Edomites when they had surrounded him and the commanders of his chariots. 10 However, Edom has continued in revolt against the sovereignty of Judah down to the present time. Libnah also revolted at that time against Jehoram's sovereignty because he had forsaken the LORD, the God of his fathers. 11 He also set up high places in the mountains of Judah; he led the inhabitants of Jerusalem into idolatry and seduced Judah.

Retribution. 12† He received a letter from the prophet Elijah with this message: "Thus says the LORD, the God of your ancestor David: 'Because you have not followed the path of your father Jehoshaphat, nor of Asa, king of Judah, 13 but instead have walked in the way of the kings of Israel and have led Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem into idolatry, as did the house of Ahab, and also because you have murdered your brothers of your father's house who were better than you, 14 the LORD will strike your people, your children, your wives, and all that is yours with a great plague; 15 and you shall have severe pains from a disease in your bowels, while your bowels issue forth because of the disease, day after day.'"

16 Then the LORD stirred up against Jehoram the animosity of the Philistines and of the Arabs who bordered on the Ethiopians. 17 They came up against Judah, invaded it, and carried away all the wealth found in the king's palace, along with his sons and his wives; there was left to him only one son, Jehoahaz, his youngest. 18 After these events, the LORD afflicted him with an incurable disease of the bowels. 19 As time went on until a period of two years had elapsed, his bowels issued forth because of the disease and he died in great pain. His people did not made a pyre for him like that of his fathers. 20* He was thirty-two years old when he became king, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem. He departed unloved and was buried in the City of David, but not in the tombs of the kings.

Ahaziah. 1* Then the inhabitants of Jerusalem made Ahaziah, his youngest son, king in his stead, since all the older sons had been slain by the band that had come into the fort with the Arabs. Thus Ahaziah, son of Jehoram, reigned as the king of Judah. 2 He was twenty-two years old when he became king, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. His mother was named Athaliah, daughter of Omri. 3 He, too, followed the ways of the house of Ahab, because his mother counseled him to act sinfully. 4 To his own destruction, he did evil in the sight of the LORD, as did the house of Ahab, since they were his counselors after the death of his father.

5 He was also following their counsel when he accompanied Jehoram, son of Ahab, king of Israel, to battle against Hazael, king of Aram, at Ramoth-gilead. There Jehoram was wounded by the Arameans. 6 He returned to Jezreel to be healed of the wounds he had received at Rama in his battle against Hazael, king of Aram. Because of this illness, Ahaziah, son of Jehoram, king of Judah, went down to visit Jehoram, son of Ahab, in Jezreel. 7* Now it was willed by God for Ahaziah's downfall that he should join Jehoram, for after his arrival he rode out with Jehoram to Jehu, son of Nimshi, whom the LORD had anointed to cut down the house of Ahab. 8* While Jehu was executing judgment on the house of Ahab, he also encountered the princes of Judah and the nephews of Ahaziah who were his attendants, and he slew them. 9*† Then he looked for Ahaziah himself. They caught him where he was hiding in Samaria and brought him to Jehu, who put him to death. They buried him, for they said, "He was the grandson of Jehoshaphat, who sought the LORD with his whole heart." There remained in Ahaziah's house no one powerful enough to wield the kingship.

Usurpation of Athaliah. 10* When Athaliah, mother of Ahaziah, learned that her son was dead, she proceeded to kill off all the royal offspring of the house of Judah. 11 But Jehosheba, a royal princess, secretly took Ahaziah's son Joash from among the king's sons who were about to be slain, and put him and his nurse in a bedroom. In this way Jehosheba, who was the daughter of King Jehoram, a sister of Ahaziah, and wife of Jehoiada the priest, hid the child from Athaliah's sight, so that she did not put him to death. 12 For six years he remained hidden with them in the house of God, while Athaliah ruled over the land.

Athaliah Overthrown. 1* In the seventh year, Jehoiada took courage and entered a conspiracy with certain captains: Azariah, son of Jehoram; Ishmael, son of Jehohanan; Azariah, son of Obed; Masseiah, son of Adaiah; and Elishaphat, son of Zichri. 2 They journeyed about Judah, gathering the Levites from all the cities of Judah and also the heads of the Israelite families. When they had come to Jerusalem, 3 the whole assembly made a covenant with the king in the house of God. Jehoiada said to them: "Here is the king's son who must reign, as the LORD promised concerning the sons of David. 4 This is what you must do: a third of your number, both priests and Levites, who come in on the sabbath must guard the thresholds, 5 another third must be at the king's palace, and the final third at the Foundation Gate, when all the people will be in the courts of the LORD's temple. 6 Let no one enter the LORD's house except the priests and those Levites who are ministering. They may enter because they are holy; but all the other people must observe the prescriptions of the LORD. 7 The Levites shall surround the king on all sides, each with his weapon drawn. Whoever tries to enter the house must be slain. Stay with the king wherever he goes."

8* The Levites and all Judah did just as Jehoiada the priest commanded. Each brought his men, those who were to come in on the sabbath as well as those who were to depart on the sabbath, since Jehoiada the priest had not dismissed any of the divisions. 9 Jehoiada the priest gave the captains the spears, shields and bucklers of King David which were in the house of God. 10 He stationed all the people, each with his spear in hand, from the southern to the northern extremity of the enclosure, around the altar and the temple on the king's behalf. 11 Then they brought out the king's son, set the crown and the insignia upon him, and made him king. Jehoiada and his sons anointed him, and they cried, "Long live the king!"

12 When Athaliah heard the din of the people running and acclaiming the king, she went to the people in the temple of the LORD. 13† She looked, and there was the king standing beside his pillar at the entrance, the officers and the trumpeters around him, and all the people of the land rejoicing and blowing trumpets, while the singers with their musical instruments were leading the acclaim. Athaliah tore her garments and cried out, "Treason! treason!" 14 Then Jehoiada the priest sent out the captains who were in command of the army; he said to them: "Take her outside through the ranks, and if anyone tries to follow her, let him die by the sword. For," the priest continued, "you must not put her to death in the LORD's temple." 15 So they seized her, and when she arrived at the entrance to the Horse Gate of the palace, they put her to death there.

16 Then Jehoiada made a covenant between himself and all the people and the king, that they should be the LORD's people. 17 And all the people went to the temple of Baal and tore it down. They smashed its altars and images, and they slew Mattan, the priest of Baal, before the altars. 18* Then Jehoiada gave the charge of the LORD's temple into the hands of the levitical priests, to whom David had assigned turns in the temple for offering the holocausts of the LORD, as is written in the law of Moses, with rejoicing and song, as David had provided. 19 Moreover, he stationed guards at the gates of the LORD's temple so that no one unclean in any respect might enter. 20 Then he took the captains, the nobles, the rulers among the people, and all the people of the land, and led the king out of the LORD's house. When they had come within the upper gate of the king's house, they seated the king upon the royal throne. 21 All the people of the land rejoiced and the city was quiet, now that Athaliah had been put to death by the sword.

The Temple Restored. 1* Joash was seven years old when he became king, and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem. His mother, named Zibiah, was from Beer-sheba. 2 Joash did what was pleasing to the LORD as long as Jehoiada the priest lived. 3 Jehoiada provided him with two wives, and he became the father of sons and daughters.

4 After some time, Joash decided to restore the LORD's temple. 5† He called to-

23, 13: Beside his pillar: the king had a special place in the eastern gateway of the temple court that contained the altar of holocausts. He occupied this place on feasts and sabbaths at the time of the statutory offerings, or when he made free-will offerings of his own; cf 2 Kgs 11, 4 and also Ez 46, 1-8 for a later reflection of this.

24, 5: Collect money: according to 2 Kgs 12, 5, the people themselves brought the money to the temple; it consisted, at least in part, of voluntary contributions. At the time of the Chronicler (see Neh 10, 32) there was a fixed head tax for the upkeep of the temple (2 Chr 34, 9), based on Ex 30, 12-16. This was still in force in New Testament times (Mt 17, 24f).

gether the priests and Levites and said to them: "Go out to all the cities of Judah and collect money from all Israel that you may repair the house of your God over the years. You must hasten this affair." But the Levites did not hasten. 6* Then the king summoned Jehoiada, who was in charge, and said to him: "Why have you not required the Levites to bring in from Judah and Jerusalem the tax levied by Moses, the servant of the LORD, and by the assembly of Israel, for the tent of the testimony?" 7 For the wicked Athaliah and her sons had damaged the house of God and had even turned over to the Baals the dedicated resources of the LORD's temple.

8* At the king's command, therefore, they made a chest, which they put outside the gate of the LORD's temple. 9* They had it proclaimed throughout Judah and Jerusalem that the tax which Moses, the servant of God, had imposed on Israel in the desert should be brought to the LORD. 10 All the princes and the people rejoiced; they brought what was asked and cast it into the chest until it was filled. 11 Whenever the chest was brought to the royal officials by the Levites and they saw that it contained much money, the royal scribe and an overseer for the high priest came, emptied the chest, then took it back and returned it to its place. This they did day after day until they had collected a large sum of money. 12 Then the king and Jehoiada gave it to the workmen in charge of the labor on the LORD's temple, who hired masons and carpenters to restore the temple, and also iron- and bronzesmiths to repair it. 13 The workmen labored, and the task of restoration progressed under their hands. They restored the house of God according to its original form, and reinforced it. 14 After they had finished, they brought the rest of the money to the king and to Jehoiada, who had it made into utensils for the LORD's temple, utensils for the service and the holocausts, and basins and other gold and silver utensils. They offered holocausts in the LORD's temple continually throughout the lifetime of Jehoiada. 15 Jehoiada lived to a ripe old age; he was a hundred and thirty years old when he died. 16 He was buried in the City of David with the kings, because he had done good in Israel, in particular with respect to God and his temple.

Apostasy of King Joash. 17 After the death of Jehoiada, the princes of Judah came and paid homage to the king, and the king then listened to them. 18* They forsook the temple of the LORD, the God of their fathers, and began to serve the sacred poles and the idols; and because of this crime of theirs, wrath came upon Judah and Jerusalem. 19 Although prophets were sent to them to convert them to the LORD, the people would not listen to their warnings. 20 Then the spirit of God possessed Zechariah, son of Jehoiada the priest. He took his stand above the people and said to them: "God says, 'Why are you transgressing the LORD's commands, so that you cannot prosper? Because you have abandoned the LORD, he has abandoned you.'" 21 But they conspired against him, and at the king's order they stoned him to death in the court of the LORD's temple. 22 Thus King Joash was unmindful of the devotion shown him by Jehoiada, Zechariah's father, and slew his son. And as he was dying, he said, "May the LORD see and avenge."

Retribution. 23* At the turn of the year a force of Arameans came up against Joash. They invaded Judah and Jerusalem, did away with all the princes of the people, and sent all their spoil to the king of Damascus. 24* Though the Aramean force came with few men, the LORD surrendered a very large force into their power, because Judah had abandoned the LORD, the God of their fathers. So punishment was meted out to Joash. 25* After the Arameans had departed from him, leaving him in grievous suffering, his servants conspired against him because of the murder of the son of Jehoiada the priest. They killed him on his sickbed. He was buried in the City of David, but not in the tombs of the kings.

26 These conspired against him: Zabad, son of Shimeath from Ammon, and Jehozabad, son of Shimrith from Moab. 27* Of his sons, and the great tribute imposed on him, and of his rebuilding of the house of God, there is a written account in the midrash of the book of the kings. His son Amaziah succeeded him as king.

Campaign in Edom. 1* Amaziah was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother, named Jehoaddan, was from Jerusalem. 2 He did what was pleasing in the sight of the LORD, though not wholeheartedly. 3 After he had strengthened his hold on the kingdom, he slew those of his servants who had killed the king, his father; 4* but he did not put their children to death, for he acted according to what is written in the law, in the Book of Moses, as the LORD commanded: "Fathers shall not be put to death for their children, nor children for their fathers; but only for his own guilt shall a man be put to death."

5 Amaziah mustered Judah and placed them, out of all Judah and Benjamin according to their ancestral houses, under leaders of thousands and of hundreds. When he had counted those of twenty years and over, he found them to be three hundred thousand picked men fit for war, capable of handling lance and shield. 6 He also hired a hundred thousand valiant warriors from Israel for a hundred talents of silver. 7 But a man of God came to him and said: "O king, let not the army of Israel go with you, for the LORD is not with Israel, with any Ephraimite. 8 Instead, go on your own, strongly prepared for the conflict; otherwise the LORD will defeat you in the face of the enemy. It is God who has the power to reinforce or to defeat." 9 Amaziah answered the man of God, "But what is to be done about the hundred talents that I paid for the troops of Israel?" The man of God replied, "The LORD can give you much more than that." 10 Amaziah then disbanded the troops that had come to him from Ephraim, and sent them home. They, however, became furiously angry with Judah, and returned home blazing with resentment.

11* Amaziah now assumed command of his army. They proceeded to the Valley of Salt, and there they killed ten thousand men of Seir. 12 The Judahites also brought back another ten thousand alive, whom they led to the summit of the Rock and then cast down, so that they were all crushed. 13 Meanwhile, the mercenaries whom Amaziah had dismissed from battle service with him raided the cities of Judah from Samaria to Beth-horon. They killed three thousand of the inhabitants and took away much booty.

Infidelity of Amaziah. 14 When Amaziah returned from his conquest of the Edomites he brought back with him the gods of the people of Seir, which he set up as his own gods; he bowed down before them and offered sacrifice to them. 15 Then the anger of the LORD blazed out against Amaziah, and he sent a prophet to him who said: "Why have you had recourse to this people's gods that could not save their own people from your hand?" 16 While he was still speaking, however, the king said to him: "Have you been made the king's counselor? Be silent! Why should it be necessary to kill you?" Therefore the prophet desisted. "I know, however," he said, "that God has let you take counsel to your own destruction, because you have done this thing and have refused to hear my counsel."

Retribution. 17* Having taken counsel, King Amaziah of Judah sent messengers to Joash, son of Jehoahaz, son of Jehu, the king of Israel, saying, "Come, let us meet each other face to face." 18* King Joash of Israel sent this reply to King Amaziah of Judah: "The thistle of the Lebanon sent a message to the cedar of the Lebanon, saying, 'Give your daughter to my son for his wife.' But the wild beasts of the Lebanon passed by and trampled the thistle down. 19 You are thinking, 'See, I have beaten Edom!', and thus ambition makes you proud. Remain at home. Why involve yourself, and Judah with you, in misfortune and failure?" 20 But Amaziah would not listen, for God had determined to hand them over because they had had recourse to the gods of Edom.

21 Therefore King Joash of Israel advanced and he and King Amaziah met in battle at Beth-shemesh of Judah. 22 There Judah was defeated by Israel, and all the Judean soldiers fled homeward. 23 King Joash of Israel captured Amaziah, king of Judah, son of Joash, son of Jehoahaz, at Beth-shemesh and brought him to Jerusalem. Then he tore down the wall of Jerusalem from the Ephraim Gate to the Corner Gate, a distance of four hundred cubits. 24† He took away all the gold and silver and all the vessels he found in the house of God with Obed-edom, together with the treasures of the palace, and hostages as well. Then he returned to Samaria.

25* Amaziah, son of Joash, king of Judah, survived Joash, son of Jehoahaz, king of Israel, by fifteen years. 26 The rest of the acts of Amaziah, first and last, can be found written, as is well known, in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel. 27 Now from the time that Amaziah ceased to follow the LORD, a conspiracy was formed against him in Jerusalem; hence he fled to Lachish. But they pursued him to Lachish and put him to death there. 28† They brought him back on horses and buried him with his ancestors in the City of Judah.

The Works of Uzziah. 1* All the people of Judah chose Uzziah, though he was but sixteen years of age, and proclaimed him king to succeed his father Amaziah. 2 He rebuilt Elath and restored it to Judah; this was after King Amaziah had gone to rest with his ancestors. 3 Uzziah was sixteen years old when he became king, and he reigned fifty-two years in Jerusalem. His mother, named Jecoliah, was from Jerusalem. 4 He pleased the LORD, just as his father Amaziah had done.

5*† He was prepared to seek God as long as Zechariah lived, who taught him to fear God; and as long as he sought the LORD, God made him prosper. 6* He went out and fought the Philistines and razed the walls of Gath, Jabneh and Ashdod [and built cities in the district of Ashdod and in Philistia]. 7 God helped him against the Philistines, against the Arabs who dwelt in Gurbaal, and against the Meunites. 8 The Ammonites paid tribute to Uzziah and his fame spread as far as Egypt, for he grew stronger and stronger. 9 Moreover, Uzziah built towers in Jerusalem at the Corner Gate, at the Valley Gate, and at the Angle, and he fortified them. 10 He built towers in the desert and dug numerous cisterns, for he had many cattle. He had plowmen in the foothills and the plains, and vinedressers in the highlands and the garden land. He was a lover of the soil.

11 Uzziah also had a standing army of fit soldiers divided into bands according to the number in which they were mustered by Jeiel the scribe and Maaseiah the recorder, under the command of Hananiah, one of the king's officials. 12 The entire number of family heads over these valiant warriors was two thousand six hundred, 13 and at their disposal was a mighty army of three hundred seven thousand five hundred fighting men of great valor to help the king against his enemies. 14 Uzziah provided for them—for the entire army—bucklers, lances, helmets, breastplates, bows and slingstones. 15 He also built machines in Jerusalem, devices contrived to stand on the towers and at the angles of the walls to shoot arrows and cast large stones. His fame spread far and wide, and his power was ascribed to the marvelous help he had received.

Pride and Fall. 16 But after he had become strong, he became proud to his own destruction and broke faith with the LORD, his God. He entered the temple of the LORD to make an offering on the altar of incense. 17 But Azariah the priest, and with him eighty other priests of the LORD, courageous men, followed him. 18* They opposed King Uzziah, saying to him: "It is not for you, Uzziah, to burn incense to the LORD, but for the priests, the sons of Aaron, who have been consecrated for this purpose. Leave the sanctuary, for you have broken faith and no longer have a part in the glory that comes from the LORD God." 19* Uzziah, who was holding a censer for burning the incense, became angry, but at the moment he showed his anger to the priests, while they were looking at him in the house of the LORD beside the altar of incense, leprosy broke out on his forehead. 20 Azariah the chief priest and all the other priests examined him, and when they saw that his forehead was leprous, they expelled him from the temple. He himself fled willingly, for the LORD had afflicted him. 21* King Uzziah remained a leper to the day of his death. As a leper he dwelt in a segregated house, for he was excluded from the house of the LORD. Therefore his son Jotham was regent of the palace and ruled the people of the land.

22 The prophet Isaiah, son of Amos, wrote the rest of the acts of Uzziah, first and last. 23 Uzziah rested with his ancestors; he was buried with them in the field adjoining the royal cemetery, for they said, "He was a leper." His son Jotham succeeded him as king.

Jotham. 1* Jotham was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. His mother was named Jerusha, daughter of Zadok. 2 He pleased the LORD just as his father Uzziah had done, though he did not enter the temple of the LORD; the people, however, continued to act sinfully.

3 He built the upper gate of the LORD's house and had much construction done on the wall of Ophel. 4 Moreover, he built cities in the hill country of Judah, and in the forest land he set up fortresses and towers. 5 He fought with the king of the Ammonites and conquered them. That year the Ammonites paid him one hundred talents of silver, together with ten thousand kors of wheat and ten thousand of barley. They brought the same to him also in the second and in the third year. 6 Thus Jotham continued to grow strong because he lived resolutely in the presence of the LORD, his God. 7* The rest of the acts of Jotham, his wars and his activities, can be found written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah. 8 He was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. 9 Jotham rested with his ancestors and was buried in the City of David, and his son Ahaz succeeded him as king.

III: REFORMS OF HEZEKIAH AND JOSIAH

CHAPTER 28

Impiety of Ahaz. 1* Ahaz was twenty years old when he became king, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. He did not please the LORD as his forefather David had done, 2 but conducted himself like the kings of Israel and even made molten idols of the Baals. 3* Moreover, he offered sacrifice in the Valley of Ben-hinnom, and immolated his sons by fire according to the abominable practice of the nations which the LORD had cleared out before the Israelites. 4 He offered sacrifice and incense on the high places, on hills, and under every leafy tree.

Retribution. 5* Therefore the LORD, his God, delivered him into the power of the king of Aram. The Arameans defeated him and carried away captive a large number of his people, whom they brought to Damascus. He was also delivered into the power of the king of Israel, who defeated him with great slaughter. 6 For Pekah, son of Remaliah, slew one hundred and twenty thousand of Judah in a single day, all of them valiant men, because they had abandoned the LORD, the God of their fathers. 7 Zichri, an Ephraimite warrior, killed Maaseiah, the king's son, and Azrikam, the master of the palace, and also Elkanah, who was second to the king. 8 The Israelites took away as captives two hundred thousand of their brethren's wives, sons and daughters; they also took from them much plunder, which they brought to Samaria.

The Prophecy of Oded. 9 In Samaria there was a prophet of the LORD by the name of Oded. He went out to meet the army returning to Samaria and said to them: "It was because the LORD, the God of your fathers, was angry with Judah that he delivered them into your hands. You, however, have slaughtered them with a fury that has reached up to heaven. 10 And now you are planning to make the children of Judah and Jerusalem your slaves and bondwomen. Are not you yourselves, therefore, guilty of a crime against the LORD, your God? 11 Now listen to me: send back the captives you have carried off from among your brethren, for the burning anger of the LORD is upon you."

12 At this, some of the Ephraimite leaders, Azariah, son of Johanan, Berechiah, son of Meshillemoth, Jehizkiah, son of Shallum, and Amasa, son of Hadlai, themselves stood up in opposition to those who had returned from the war. 13 They said to them: "Do not bring the captives here, for what you propose will make us guilty before the LORD and increase our sins and our guilt. Our guilt is already great, and there is a burning anger upon Israel." 14 Therefore the soldiers left their captives and the plunder before the princes and the whole assembly. 15* Then the men just named proceeded to help the captives. All of them who were naked they clothed from the booty; they clothed them, put sandals on their feet, gave them food and drink, anointed them, and all who were weak they set on asses. They brought them to Jericho, the city of palms, to their brethren. Then they returned to Samaria.

Further Sins of Ahaz. 16* At that time King Ahaz sent an appeal for help to the kings of Assyria. 17* The Edomites had returned, attacked Judah, and carried off captives. 18 The Philistines too had raided the cities of the foothills and the Negeb of Judah; they captured Beth-shemesh, Aijalon, Gederoth, Soco and its dependencies, Timnah and its dependencies, and Gimzo and its dependencies, and occupied them. 19† For the LORD had brought Judah low because of Ahaz, king of Israel, who let Judah go its own way and proved utterly faithless to the LORD. 20* Tilgath-pilneser, king of Assyria, did indeed come to him, but to oppress him rather than to help him. 21* Though Ahaz plundered the LORD's house and the houses of the king and the princes to make payment to the king of Assyria, it availed him nothing.

22 While he was already in distress, the same King Ahaz became even more unfaithful to the LORD. 23* He sacrificed to the gods of Damascus who had defeated him, saying, "Since it was the gods of the kings of Aram who helped them, I will sacrifice to them that they may help me also." However, they only caused further disaster to him and to all Israel. 24* Ahaz gathered up the utensils of God's house and broke them in pieces. He closed the doors of the LORD's house and had altars made for himself in every corner of Jerusalem. 25 In every city throughout Judah he set up high places to offer sacrifice to other gods. Thus he angered the LORD, the God of his fathers.

28* The rest of his deeds and his activities, first and last, can be found written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel. 27 Ahaz rested with his ancestors and was buried in Jerusalem—in the city, for they did not bring him to the tombs of the kings of Israel. His son Hezekiah succeeded him as king.

CHAPTER 29

Reforms of Hezekiah. 1* Hezekiah was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother was named Abia, daughter of Zechariah. 2 He pleased the LORD just as his forefather David had done. 3* It was he who, in the first month of the first year of his reign, opened the doors of the LORD's house and repaired them. 4 He summoned the priests and Levites, gathered them in the open space to the east, 5 and said to them: "Listen to me, you Levites! Sanctify yourselves now and sanctify the house of the LORD, the God of your fathers, and clean out the filth from the sanctuary. 6 Our fathers acted faithlessly and did evil in the eyes of the LORD, our God. They abandoned him, turned away their faces from the LORD's dwelling, and turned their backs on him. 7* They also closed the doors of the vestibule, extinguished the lamps, and refused to burn incense and offer holocausts in the sanctuary to the honor of the God of Israel. 8* Therefore the anger of the LORD has come upon Judah and Jerusalem; he has made them an object of terror, astonishment and mockery, as you see with your own eyes. 9 For our fathers, as you know, fell by the sword, and our sons, our daughters and our wives have been taken captive because of this. 10 Now, I intend to make a covenant with the LORD, the God of Israel, that his burning anger may withdraw from us. 11 My sons, be not negligent any longer, for it is you whom the LORD has chosen to stand before him, to minister to him, to be his ministers and to offer incense."
12 Then the Levites arose: Mahath, son of Amasai, and Joel, son of Azariah, descendants of the Kohathites; of the sons of Merari: Kish, son of Abdi, and Azariah, son of Jehallel; of the Gershonites: Joah, son of Zimmah, and Eden, son of Joah; 13 of the sons of Elizaphan: Shimri and Jeuel; of the sons of Asaph: Zechariah and Mattaniah; 14 of the sons of Heman: Jehuel and Shimei; of the sons of Jeduthun: Shemiah and Uzziel. 15 They gathered their brethren together and sanctified themselves; then they came as the king had ordered, to cleanse the LORD's house in keeping with his words.
16 The priests entered the interior of the LORD's house to cleanse it; and whatever they found in the LORD's temple that was unclean they brought out to the court of the LORD's house, where the Levites took it from them and carried it out to the Kidron Valley. 17 They began the work of consecration on the first day of the first month, and on the eighth day of the month they arrived at the vestibule of the LORD; they consecrated the LORD's house during eight days, and on the sixteenth day of the first month, they had finished.
18 Then they went inside to King Hezekiah and said: "We have cleansed the entire house of the LORD, the altar of holocausts with all its utensils, and the table for the showbread with all its utensils. 19 All the articles which King Ahaz during his reign had thrown away because of his apostasy, we have restored and consecrated, and they are now before the LORD's altar."
The Rite of Expiation. 20 Then King Hezekiah hastened to convoke the princes of the city and went up to the LORD's house. 21 Seven bulls, seven rams, seven lambs and seven he-goats were brought for a sin offering for the kingdom, for the sanctuary, and for Judah, and he ordered the sons of Aaron, the priests, to offer them on the altar of the LORD. 22 They slaughtered the bulls, and the priests collected the blood and cast it on the altar. Then they slaughtered the rams and cast the blood on the altar; then they slaughtered the lambs and cast the blood on the altar. 23 Then the he-goats for the sin offering were led before the king and the assembly, who laid their hands upon them. 24 The priests then slaughtered them and offered their blood on the altar to atone for the sin of all Israel; for "The holocaust and the sin offering," the king had said, "is for all Israel."
25 He stationed the Levites in the LORD's house with cymbals, harps and lyres according to the prescriptions of David, of Gad the king's seer, and of Nathan the prophet; for the prescriptions were from the LORD through his prophets. 26 The Levites were stationed with the instruments of David, and the priests with the trumpets. 27 Then Hezekiah ordered the holocaust to be sacrificed on the altar, and in the same instant that the holocaust began, they also began the song of the LORD, to the accompaniment of the trumpets and the instruments of David, king of Israel. 28 The entire assembly prostrated itself, and they continued to sing the song and to sound the trumpets until the holocaust had been completed. 29 As the holocaust was completed, the king and all who were with him knelt and prostrated themselves. 30 King Hezekiah and the princes then commanded the Levites to sing the praises of the LORD in the words of David and of Asaph the seer. They sang praises till their joy was full, then fell down and prostrated themselves.

31 Hezekiah now spoke out this command: "You have undertaken a work for the LORD. Approach, and bring forward the sacrifices and thank offerings for the house of the LORD." Then the assembly brought forward the sacrifices and thank offerings and all the holocausts which were free-will offerings. 32 The number of holocausts that the assembly brought forward was seventy oxen, one hundred rams, and two hundred lambs: all of these as a holocaust to the LORD. 33 As consecrated gifts there were six hundred oxen and three thousand sheep. 34* Since the priests were too few in number to be able to skin all the victims for the holocausts, their brethren the Levites assisted them until the task was completed and the priests had sanctified themselves; the Levites, in fact, were more willing than the priests to sanctify themselves. 35 Also, the holocausts were many, along with the fat of the peace offerings and the libations for the holocausts. Thus the service of the house of the LORD was reestablished. 36 Hezekiah and all the people rejoiced over what God had reestablished for the people, and at how suddenly this had been done.

Invitation to the Passover. 1* Hezekiah sent a message to all Israel and Judah, and even wrote letters to Ephraim and Manasseh saying that they should come to the house of the LORD in Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover in honor of the LORD, the God of Israel. 2* The king, his princes, and the entire assembly in Jerusalem had agreed to celebrate the Passover during the second month, 3 for they could not celebrate it at the time of the restoration: the priests had not sanctified themselves in sufficient numbers, and the people were not gathered at Jerusalem. 4 When this proposal had been approved by the king and the entire assembly, 5 they issued a decree to be proclaimed throughout all Israel from Beer-sheba to Dan, that everyone should come to Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover in honor of the LORD, the God of Israel; for not many had kept it in the manner prescribed. 6 Accordingly the couriers, with the letters written by the king and his princes, traversed all Israel and Judah, and at the king's command they said: "Israelites, return to the LORD, the God of Abraham, Isaac and Israel, that he may return to you, the remnant left from the hands of the Assyrian kings. 7* Be not like your fathers and your brethren who proved faithless to the LORD, the God of their fathers, so that he delivered them over to desolation, as you yourselves now see. 8 Be not obstinate, as your fathers were; extend your hands to the LORD and come to his sanctuary that he has consecrated forever, and serve the LORD, your God, that he may turn away his burning anger from you. 9* For when you return to the LORD, your brethren and your children will find mercy with their captors and return to this land; for merciful and compassionate is the LORD, your God, and he will not turn away his face from you if you return to him."

10 So the couriers passed from city to city in the land of Ephraim and Manasseh and as far as Zebulun, but they were derided and scoffed at. 11 Nevertheless, some from Asher, Manasseh and Zebulun humbled themselves and came to Jerusalem. 12 In Judah, however, the power of God brought it about that the people were of one mind to carry out the command of the king and the princes in accordance with the word of the LORD. 13 Thus many people gathered in Jerusalem to celebrate the feast of Unleavened Bread in the second month; it was a very great assembly.

The Passover Celebrated. 14* They proceeded to take down the altars that were in Jerusalem; also they removed all the altars of incense and cast them into the Kidron Valley. 15 They slaughtered the Passover on the fourteenth day of the second month. The priests and Levites, touched with shame, sanctified themselves and brought holocausts into the house of the LORD. 16 They stood in the places prescribed for them according to the law of Moses, the man of God. The priests sprinkled the blood given them by the Levites; 17* for many in the assembly had not sanctified themselves, and the Levites were in charge of slaughtering the Passover victims for all who were unclean and therefore could not consecrate them to the LORD. 18 The greater part of the people, in fact, chiefly from Ephraim, Manasseh, Issachar and Zebulun, had not cleansed themselves. Nevertheless they ate the Passover, contrary to the prescription; for Hezekiah prayed for them, saying, "May the ened Bread with great rejoicing for seven days, and the Levites and the priests sang the praises of the LORD day after day with all their strength.

22 Hezekiah spoke encouragingly to all the Levites who had shown themselves
well skilled in the service of the LORD.
And when they had completed the seven days of festival, slaying peace offerings and singing praises to the LORD, the God of their fathers, 23 the whole assembly agreed to celebrate another seven days.
With joy, therefore, they continued the festivity seven days longer. 24 King Hezekiah of Judah had contributed a thousand bulls and seven thousand sheep to the assembly, and the princes had contributed to the assembly a thousand bulls and ten thousand sheep. The priests sanctified themselves in great numbers, 25 and the whole assembly of Judah rejoiced, together with the priests and Levites and the rest of the assembly that had come from Israel, as well as the sojourners from the land of Israel and those that lived in Judah. 26 There was great rejoicing in Jerusalem, for since the days of Solomon, son of David, king of Israel, there had not been the like in the city. 27 Then the levitical priests rose and blessed the people; their voice was heard and their prayer reached heaven, God's holy dwelling.

CHAPTER 31

Liturgical Reform. 1* After all this was over, those Israelites who had been present went forth to the cities of Judah and smashed the sacred pillars, cut down the sacred poles, and tore down
the high places and altars throughout Judah, Benjamin, Ephraim and Manasseh, until all were destroyed. Then the Israelites returned to their various cities, each to his own possession.

2 Hezekiah reestablished the classes of the priests and the Levites according to their former classification, assigning to each priest and Levite his proper service, whether in regard to holocausts or peace offerings, thanksgiving or praise, or ministering in the gates of the encampment of the LORD. 3* From his own wealth the king allotted a portion for ho-locausts, those of morning and evening and those on sabbaths, new moons and festivals, as prescribed in the law of the LORD. 4 He also commanded the people living in Jerusalem to provide the support of the priests and Levites, that they might devote themselves entirely to the law of the LORD.

5* As soon as the order was promulgated, the Israelites brought, in great quantities, the best of their grain, wine, oil and honey, and all the produce of the fields; they gave a generous tithe of everything. 6* Israelites and Judahites living in other cities of Judah also brought in tithes of oxen, sheep, and things that had been consecrated to the LORD, their God; these they brought in and set out in heaps. 7† It was in the third month that they began to establish these heaps,
and they completed them in the seventh month. 8 When Hezekiah and the princes had come and seen the heaps, they blessed the LORD and his people Israel.
9 Then Hezekiah questioned the priests and the Levites concerning the heaps, 10* and the priest Azariah, head of the house of Zadoc, answered him, "Since they began to bring the offerings to the house of the LORD, we have eaten to the full and have had much left over, for the LORD has blessed his people. This great supply is what was left over."

11 Hezekiah then gave orders that chambers be constructed in the house of the LORD. When this had been done, 12 the offerings, tithes and consecrated things were deposited there in safekeeping. The overseer of these things was Conaniah the Levite, and his brother
Shimei was second in charge. 13 Jehiel,
Azaziah, Nahath, Asahel, Jerimoth, Jozabad, Eliel, Ismachiah, Mahath and Benaiah were supervisors subject to Conaniah and his brother Shimei by appointment of King Hezekiah and of Aza-riah, the prefect of the house of God.
14 Kore, the son of Imnah, a Levite and the keeper of the eastern gate, was in charge of the free-will gifts made to God;
he distributed the offerings made to the LORD and the most holy of the consecrated things. 15 Under him in the priestly cities were Eden, Miniamin, Jeshua, Shemaiah, Amariah and Sheca-niah, who faithfully made the distribution to their brethren, great and small alike, according to their classes.

16* There was also a register by ancestral houses of males thirty years of age and over, for all priests who were eligible to enter the house of the LORD according to the daily rule to fulfill their service in the order of their classes. 17* The priests were inscribed in their family records according to their ancestral houses, and the Levites of twenty years and over according to their various offices and classes. 18 A distribution was also made to all who were inscribed in the family records, for their little ones, wives, sons and daughters—thus for the entire assembly, since they were to sanctify themselves by sharing faithfully in the consecrated things. 19 The sons of Aaron, the priests who lived on the lands attached to their cities, had in every city men designated by name to distribute portions to every male among the priests and to every Levite listed in the family records.

20 This Hezekiah did in all Judah. He did what was good, upright and faithful before the LORD, his God. 21* Everything that he undertook, for the service of the house of God or for the law and the commandments, was to do the will of his God. He did this wholeheartedly, and he prospered.

Invasion of Sennacherib. 1* But after he had proved his fidelity by such deeds, Sennacherib, king of Assyria, came. He invaded Judah, besieged the fortified cities, and proposed to take them by storm. 2 When Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib was coming with the intention of attacking Jerusalem, 3 he decided in counsel with his princes and warriors to stop the waters of the springs outside the city. When they had pledged him their support, 4* a large crowd was gathered which stopped all the springs and also the running stream in the valley nearby. For they said, "Why should the kings of Assyria come and find an abundance of water?" 5* He then looked to his defenses: he rebuilt the wall where it was broken down, raised towers upon it, and built another wall outside. He strengthened the Millo of the City of David and had a great number of spears and shields prepared. 6 Then he appointed army commanders over the people. He gathered them together in his presence in the open space at the gate of the city and encouraged them with these words: 7* "Be brave and steadfast; do not be afraid or dismayed because of the king of Assyria and all the throng that is coming with him, for there is more with us than with him. 8* For he has only an arm of flesh, but we have the LORD, our God, to help us and to fight our battles." And the people took confidence from the words of King Hezekiah of Judah.

Threat of Sennacherib. 9* After this, while Sennacherib, king of Assyria, himself remained at Lachish with all his forces, he sent his officials to Jerusalem with this message for Hezekiah of Judah, and all the Judahites who were in Jerusalem: 10 "King Sennacherib of Assyria has this to say: On what are you relying, while you remain under siege in Jerusalem? 11 Has not Hezekiah deceived you, delivering you over to a death of famine and thirst, by his claim that 'the LORD, our God, will save us from the grasp of the king of Assyria'? 12 Has not this same Hezekiah removed his high places and altars and commanded Judah and Jerusalem, 'You shall prostrate yourselves before one altar only, and on it alone you shall offer incense'? 13 Do you not know what my fathers and I have done to all the peoples of other lands? Were the gods of the nations in those lands able to save their lands from my hand? 14 Who among all the gods of those nations which my fathers put under the ban was able to save his people from my hand? Will your god, then, be able to save you from my hand? 15 Let not Hezekiah mislead you further and deceive you in any such way. Do not believe him! Since no other god of any other nation or kingdom has been able to save his people from my hand or the hands of my fathers, how much the less shall your god save you from my hand!"

16 His officials said still more against the LORD God and against his servant Hezekiah, 17* for he had written letters to deride the LORD, the God of Israel, speaking of him in these terms: "As the gods of the nations in other lands have not saved their people from my hand, neither shall Hezekiah's god save his people from my hand." 18 In a loud voice they shouted in the Judean language to the people of Jerusalem who were on the wall, to frighten and terrify them so that they might capture their city. 19 They spoke of the God of Israel as though he were one of the gods of the other peoples of the earth, a work of human hands. 20* But because of this, King Hezekiah and the prophet Isaiah, son of Amos, prayed and called out to heaven.

Defeat of Sennacherib. 21* Then the LORD sent an angel, who destroyed every valiant warrior, leader and commander in the camp of the Assyrian king, so that he had to return shamefaced to his own country. And when he entered the temple of his god, some of his own offspring struck him down there with the sword. [22] Thus the LORD saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the hand of Sennacherib, king of Assyria, as from every other power; he gave them rest on every side. [23]* Many brought gifts for the LORD to Jerusalem and costly objects for King Hezekiah of Judah, who thereafter was exalted in the eyes of all the nations.

Hezekiah's Other Deeds. [24]* In those days Hezekiah became mortally ill. He prayed to the LORD, who answered him by giving him a sign. [25] Hezekiah, however, did not then discharge his debt of gratitude, for he had become proud. Therefore anger descended upon him and upon Judah and Jerusalem. [26]* But then Hezekiah humbled himself for his pride—both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and therefore the LORD did not vent his anger on them during the time of Hezekiah.

[27]* Hezekiah possessed very great wealth and glory. He had treasuries made for his silver, gold, precious stones, spices, jewels, and other precious things of all kinds; [28] also storehouses for the harvest of grain, for wine and oil, and barns for the various kinds of cattle and for the flocks. [29] He built cities for himself, and he acquired sheep and oxen in great numbers, for God gave him very great riches. [30]* This same Hezekiah stopped the upper outflow of water from Gihon and led it underground westward to the City of David. Hezekiah prospered in all his undertakings. [31] Nevertheless, in respect to the ambassadors [princes] sent to him from Babylon to investigate the sign that had occurred in the land, God forsook him to test him, that he might know all that was in his heart.

[32] The rest of Hezekiah's acts, including his pious works, can be found written in the Vision of the Prophet Isaiah, son of Amos, and in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel. [33]† Hezekiah rested with his ancestors; he was buried at the approach to the tombs of the descendants of David. All Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem paid him honor at his death. His son Manasseh succeeded him as king.

Impiety of Manasseh. [1]* Manasseh was twelve years old when he became king, and he reigned fifty-five years in Jerusalem. [2] He did evil in the sight of the LORD, following the abominable practices of the nations whom the LORD had cleared out of the way of the Israelites. [3] He rebuilt the high places which his father Hezekiah had torn down, erected altars for the Baals, made sacred poles, and prostrated himself before the whole host of heaven and worshiped them. [4] He even built altars in the temple of the LORD, of which the LORD had said, "In Jerusalem shall my name be forever": [5] he built altars to the whole host of heaven in the two courts of the LORD's house. [6] It was he, too, who immolated his sons by fire in the Valley of Ben-hinnom. He practiced augury, divination and magic, and appointed necromancers and diviners of spirits, so that he provoked the LORD with the great evil that he did in his sight. [7] He placed an idol that he had carved in the house of God, of which God had said to David and his son Solomon: "In this house and in Jerusalem which I have chosen from all the tribes of Israel I shall place my name forever. [8] I will not again allow Israel's feet to leave the land which I assigned to your fathers, provided they are careful to observe all that I commanded them, keeping the whole law and the statutes and the ordinances given by Moses." [9] Manasseh misled Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem into doing even greater evil than the nations which the LORD had destroyed at the coming of the Israelites. [10] The LORD spoke to Manasseh and his people, but they paid no attention.

His Conversion. [11]*† Therefore the LORD brought against them the army commanders of the Assyrian king; they took Manasseh with hooks, shackled him with chains, and transported him to Babylon. [12] In this distress, he began to appease the LORD, his God. He humbled himself abjectly before the God of his fathers [13]† and prayed to him. The LORD let himself be won over: he heard his prayer and restored him to his kingdom in Jerusalem. Then Manasseh understood that the LORD is indeed God.

[14] Afterward he built an outer wall for the City of David to the west of Gihon in the valley, extending to the Fish Gate and encircling Ophel; he built it very high. He stationed army officers in all the fortified cities of Judah. [15]* He removed the foreign gods and the idol

However, according to the Assyrian inscriptions, he paid tribute to the Assyrian kings Esarhaddon (680-669 B.C.) and Asshurbanipal (668-627 B.C.). He may well have been obliged to go to Nineveh to take the oath of allegiance as vassal to the king of Assyria.

from the LORD's house and all the altars he had built on the mount of the LORD's house and in Jerusalem, and he cast them outside the city. [16] He restored the altar of the LORD, and sacrificed on it peace offerings and thank offerings, and commanded Judah to serve the LORD, the God of Israel. [17] Though the people continued to sacrifice on the high places, they now did so to the LORD, their God.

[18]* The rest of the acts of Manasseh, his prayer to his God, and the words of the seers who spoke to him in the name of the LORD, the God of Israel, can be found written in the chronicles of the kings of Israel. [19] His prayer and how his supplication was heard, all his sins and his infidelity, the sites where he built high places and erected sacred poles and carved images before he humbled himself, all can be found written down in the history of his seers. [20] Manasseh rested with his ancestors and was buried in his own palace. His son Amon succeeded him as king.

Amon. [21]* Amon was twenty-two years old when he became king, and he reigned two years in Jerusalem. [22] He did evil in the sight of the LORD, just as his father Manasseh had done. Amon offered sacrifice to all the idols which his father Manasseh had made, and worshiped them. [23] Moreover, he did not humble himself before the LORD as his father Manasseh had done; on the contrary, Amon only increased his guilt. [24] His servants conspired against him and put him to death in his own house. [25] But the people of the land slew all those who had conspired against King Amon, and then they, the people of the land, made his son Josiah king in his stead.

Reforms of Josiah. [1]* Josiah was eight years old when he became king, and he reigned thirty-one years in Jerusalem. [2] He pleased the LORD, following the path of his ancestor David. [3]*† In the eighth year of his reign, while he was still a youth, he began to seek after the God of his forefather David, and in his twelfth year he began to purge Judah and Jerusalem of the high places, the sacred poles and the carved and molten images. [4] In his presence, the altars of the Baals were destroyed; the incense stands erected above them were torn down; the sacred poles and the carved and molten images were shattered and beaten into dust, which was strewn over the tombs of those who had sacrificed to them; [5] and the bones of the priests he burned upon their altars. Thus he purged Judah and Jerusalem. [6] He did likewise in the cities of Manasseh, Ephraim, Simeon, and in the ruined villages of the surrounding country as far as Naphtali; [7] he destroyed the altars, broke up the sacred poles and carved images and beat them into dust, and tore down the incense stands throughout the land of Israel. Then he returned to Jerusalem.

The Temple Restored. [8]* In the eighteenth year of his reign, in order to cleanse the temple as well as the land, he sent Shaphan, son of Azaliah, Maaseiah, the ruler of the city, and Joah, son of Joahaz, the chamberlain, to restore the house of the LORD, his God. [9]* They came to Hilkiah the high priest and turned over the money brought to the house of God which the Levites, the guardians of the threshold, had collected from Manasseh, Ephraim, and all the remnant of Israel, as well as from all of Judah, Benjamin, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. [10] They turned it over to the master workmen in the house of the LORD, and these in turn used it to pay the workmen in the LORD's house who were restoring and repairing the temple. [11] They also gave it to the carpenters and the masons to buy hewn stone and timber for the tie beams and rafters of the buildings which the kings of Judah had allowed to fall into ruin. [12] The men worked faithfully at their task; their overseers were Jahath and Obadiah, Levites of the line of Merari, and Zechariah and Meshullam, of the Kohathites, who directed them. All those Levites who were skillful with musical instruments [13] were in charge of the men who carried the burdens, and they directed all the workers in every kind of labor. Some of the other Levites were scribes, officials and gatekeepers.

The Finding of the Law. [14]* When they brought out the money that had been deposited in the house of the LORD, Hilkiah the priest found the book of the law of the LORD given through Moses. [15] He reported this to Shaphan the scribe, saying, "I have found the book of the law in the house of the LORD." Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan, [16] who brought it to the king at the same time that he was making his report to him.

† 34, 3: In his twelfth year: c. 628 B.C., the year after Asshurbanipal's death, when Judah could free itself from Assyrian domination. From 2 Kgs 22, 1—23, 25 alone, one might think that Josiah's reform began only after the discovery of the book of the law in the temple, in the eighteenth year of his reign. But the Chronicler is no doubt right in placing the beginning of the reform at an earlier period. The very repair of the temple, which led to the finding of the book of the law, must have been occasioned by a cultic reform.

He said, "Your servants are doing everything that has been entrusted to them;[17] they have turned into bullion the metals deposited in the LORD's house and have handed it over to the overseers and the workmen." [18] Then Shaphan the scribe announced to the king, "Hilkiah the priest has given me a book." And Shaphan read from it before the king.

[19] When the king heard the words of the law, he tore his garments [20] and issued this command to Hilkiah, to Ahikam, son of Shaphan, to Abdon, son of Michah, to Shaphan the scribe, and to Asaiah, the king's servant: [21] "On behalf of myself and those who are left in Israel and Judah, go, consult the LORD concerning the words of the book that has been found. For the anger of the LORD has been set furiously ablaze against us, since our fathers have not kept the word of the LORD and have not done all that is written in this book." [22] Then Hilkiah and the other men from the king went to the prophetess Huldah, the wife of Shallum, son of Tokhath, son of Hasrah, the guardian of the wardrobe; she dwelt in Jerusalem, in the new quarter. They spoke to her as they had been instructed, [23] and she said to them: "Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: 'Tell the one who sent you to me, [24] The LORD says: I am prepared to bring evil upon this place and upon its inhabitants, all the curses written in the book that has been read before the king of Judah. [25] Because they have abandoned me and have offered incense to other gods, provoking me by every deed that they have performed, my anger is ablaze against this place and cannot be extinguished.'

[26] "But to the king of Judah who sent you to consult the LORD, give this response: 'Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning the threats you have heard: [27] Because you were heart-sick and have humbled yourself before God on hearing his words spoken against this place and its inhabitants; because you have humbled yourself before me, have torn your garments, and have wept before me, I in turn have listened—so declares the LORD. [28] I will gather you to your ancestors and you shall be taken to your grave in peace. Your eyes shall not see all the evil I will bring upon this place and upon its inhabitants.'"

They brought back this message to the king.

Renewal of the Covenant. [29]* The king now convened all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem. [30] He went up to the house of the LORD with all the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the priests, the Levites, and all the people, great and small; and he had read aloud to them the entire text of the book of the covenant that had been found in the house of the LORD. [31]† Standing at his post, the king made a covenant before the LORD to follow the LORD and to keep his commandments, decrees, and statutes with his whole heart and soul, thus observing the terms of the covenant written in this book. [32] He thereby committed all who were of Jerusalem and Benjamin, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem conformed themselves to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers. [33]* Josiah removed every abominable thing from all the territory belonging to the Israelites, and he obliged all who were in Israel to serve the LORD, their God. During his lifetime they did not desert the LORD, the God of their fathers.

The Passover. [1]* Josiah celebrated in Jerusalem a Passover to honor the LORD; the Passover sacrifice was slaughtered on the fourteenth day of the first month. [2] He reappointed the priests to their duties and encouraged them in the service of the LORD's house. [3]* He said to the Levites who were to instruct all Israel, and who were consecrated to the LORD: "Put the holy ark in the house built by Solomon, son of David, king of Israel. It shall no longer be a burden on your shoulders. Serve now the LORD, your God, and his people Israel. [4] Prepare yourselves in your ancestral houses and your classes according to the prescriptions of King David of Israel and his son Solomon. [5]* Stand in the sanctuary according to the divisions of the ancestral houses of your brethren, the common people, so that the distribution of the Levites and the families may be the same. [6]* Slay the Passover sacrifice, sanctify yourselves, and be at the disposition of your brethren, that all may be carried out according to the word of the LORD given through Moses."

[7]* Josiah contributed to the common people a flock of lambs and kids, thirty thousand in number, each to serve as a Passover victim for any who were present, and also three thousand oxen; these were from the king's property. [8]* His princes also gave a free-will gift to the people, the priests and the Levites. Hilkiah, Zechariah and Jehiel, prefects of the house of God, gave to the priests two thousand six hundred Passover victims together with three hundred oxen. 9 Conaniah and his brothers Shemaiah, Nethanel, Hashabiah, Jehiel and Jozabad, the rulers of the Levites, contributed to the Levites five thousand Passover victims, together with five hundred oxen.

10 When the service had been arranged, the priests took their places, as did the Levites in their classes according to the king's command. 11 The Passover sacrifice was slaughtered, whereupon the priests sprinkled some of the blood and the Levites proceeded to the skinning. 12 They separated what was destined for the holocaust and gave it to various groups of the ancestral houses of the common people to offer to the LORD, as is prescribed in the book of Moses. They did the same with the oxen. 13* They cooked the Passover on the fire as prescribed, and also cooked the sacred meals in pots, caldrons and pans, then brought them quickly to all the common people. 14 Afterward they prepared the Passover for themselves and for the priests. Indeed the priests, the sons of Aaron, were busy offering holocausts and the fatty portions until night; therefore the Levites prepared for themselves and for the priests, the sons of Aaron. 15 The singers, the sons of Asaph, were at their posts as prescribed by David: Asaph, Heman and Jeduthun, the king's seer. The gatekeepers were at every gate; there was no need for them to leave their stations, for their brethren, the Levites, prepared for them. 16 Thus the entire service of the LORD was arranged that day so that the Passover could be celebrated and the holocausts offered on the altar of the LORD, as King Josiah had commanded. 17 The Israelites who were present on that occasion kept the Passover and the feast of the Unleavened Bread for seven days. 18* No such Passover had been observed in Israel since the time of the prophet Samuel, nor had any king of Israel kept a Passover like that of Josiah, the priests and Levites, all of Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. 19 It was in the eighteenth year of Josiah's reign that this Passover was observed.

Josiah's Reign Ends. 20 After Josiah had done all this to restore the temple, Neco, king of Egypt, came up to fight at Carchemish on the Euphrates, and Josiah went out to intercept him. 21 Neco sent messengers to him, saying: "What quarrel is between us, king of Judah? I have not come against you this day, for my war is with another kingdom, and God has told me to hasten. Do not interfere with God who is with me, as otherwise he will destroy you." 22 But Josiah would not withdraw from him, for he had sought a pretext for fighting with him. Therefore he would not listen to the words of Neco that came from the mouth of God, but went out to fight in the plain of Megiddo. 23* Then the archers shot King Josiah, who said to his servants, "Take me away, for I am seriously wounded." 24 His servants removed him from his own chariot, placed him in another he had in reserve, and brought him to Jerusalem, where he died. He was buried in the tombs of his ancestors, and all Judah and Jerusalem mourned him. 25† Jeremiah also composed a lamentation over Josiah, which is recited to this day by all the male and female singers in their lamentations over Josiah. These have been made obligatory for Israel, and can be found written in the Lamentations.

26* The rest of the chronicle of Josiah, his pious deeds in regard to what is written in the law of the LORD, and his acts, first and last, can be found written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah.

1* The people of the land took Jehoahaz, son of Josiah, and made him king in Jerusalem in his father's stead.

IV: END OF THE KINGDOM

Jehoahaz. 2 Jehoahaz was twenty-three years old when he became king, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem. 3 The king of Egypt deposed him in Jerusalem and fined the land one hundred talents of silver and a talent of gold. 4 Then the king of Egypt made his brother Eliakim king over Judah and Jerusalem, and changed his name to Jehoiakim. Neco took his brother Jehoahaz away and brought him to Egypt.

Jehoiakim. 5* Jehoiakim was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. He did evil in the sight of the LORD, his God. 6*† Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, came up against him and bound him with chains to take him to Babylon. [7] Nebuchadnezzar also carried away to Babylon some of the vessels of the house of the LORD and put them in his palace in Babylon. [8*] The rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, the abominable things that he did, and what therefore happened to him, can be found written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah. His son Jehoiachin succeeded him as king.

Jehoiachin. [9*] Jehoiachin was eighteen years old when he became king, and he reigned three months [and ten days] in Jerusalem. He did evil in the sight of the LORD. [10*†] At the turn of the year, King Nebuchadnezzar sent for him and had him brought to Babylon, along with precious vessels from the temple of the LORD. He made his brother Zedekiah king over Judah and Jerusalem.

Zedekiah. [11*] Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he became king, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. [12*] He did evil in the sight of the LORD, his God, and he did not humble himself before the prophet Jeremiah, who spoke the word of the LORD. [13*] He also rebelled against King Nebuchadnezzar, who had made him swear by God. He became stiff-necked and hardened his heart rather than return to the LORD, the God of Israel. [14] Likewise all the princes of Judah, the priests and the people added infidelity to infidelity, practicing all the abominations of the nations and polluting the LORD's temple which he had consecrated in Jerusalem.

Dissolution of Judah. [15*] Early and often did the LORD, the God of their fathers, send his messengers to them, for he had compassion on his people and his dwelling place. [16*] But they mocked the messengers of God, despised his warnings, and scoffed at his prophets, until the anger of the LORD against his people was so inflamed that there was no remedy. [17*] Then he brought up against them the king of the Chaldeans, who slew their young men in their own sanctuary building, sparing neither young man nor maiden, neither the aged nor the decrepit; he delivered all of them over into his grip. [18*] All the utensils of the house of God, the large and the small, and the treasures of the LORD's house and of the king and his princes, all these he brought to Babylon. [19*] They burnt the house of God, tore down the walls of Jerusalem, set all its palaces afire, and destroyed all its precious objects. [20] Those who escaped the sword he carried captive to Babylon, where they became his and his sons' servants until the kingdom of the Persians came to power. [21] All this was to fulfill the word of the LORD spoken by Jeremiah: "Until the land has retrieved its lost sabbaths, during all the time it lies waste it shall have rest while seventy years are fulfilled."

Decree of Cyrus. [22*†] In the first year of Cyrus, king of Persia, in order to fulfill the word of the LORD spoken by Jeremiah, the LORD inspired King Cyrus of Persia to issue this proclamation throughout his kingdom, both by word of mouth and in writing: [23] "Thus says Cyrus, king of Persia: 'All the kingdoms of the earth the LORD, the God of heaven, has given to me, and he has also charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah. Whoever, therefore, among you belongs to any part of his people, let him go up, and may his God be with him!' "

36, 10: His brother Zedekiah: Zedekiah was actually the brother of Jehoiakim and the uncle of Jehoiachin (2 Kgs 24, 17; Jer 37, 1), though scarcely older than his nephew (2 Kgs 24, 8.18; 2 Chr 36, 9.11).

36, 22f: The words of these verses are identical with those of Ezr 1, 1-3a. Originally Ezra-Nehemiah formed the last part of the single work of the Chronicler, of which 1 and 2 Chronicles formed the first part. But when Ezra-Nehemiah was regarded as a natural sequence to the Books of Samuel and of Kings, it was separated from 1 and 2 Chronicles and placed before them. Thus, 1 and 2 Chronicles became the last part of the Hebrew Bible. To prevent this work from ending on a note of doom, Ezr 1, 1-3a was repeated as 2 Chr 36, 22f.

The Book of

EZRA

The last four books of the Hebrew canon are Ezra, Nehemiah, 1 and 2 Chronicles, in that order. Originally, however, Ezra and Nehemiah followed the Books of Chronicles, and formed with them a unified historical work so homogeneous in spirit that one usually speaks of a single author for the four books. He is called "the Chronicler." The treatment of Ezra-Nehemiah as a single book by the earliest chroniclers was undoubtedly due to the fact that in ancient times the two books were put under the one name—Ezra. The combined work Ezra-Nehemiah is our most important literary source for the formation of the Jewish religious community after the Babylonian exile. This is known as the period of the Restoration, and the two men most responsible for the reorganization of Jewish life at this time were Ezra and Nehemiah.

In the present state of the Ezra-Nehemiah text, there are several dislocations of large sections so that the chronological or logical sequence is disrupted. The major instances are pointed out in the footnotes. Although Ezra appears before Nehemiah in this work, it seems probable that Nehemiah's activity preceded his.

What is known of Ezra and his work is due almost exclusively to Ezra 7—10 (the "Ezra Memoirs") and to Neh 8—9. Strictly speaking, the term "Ezra Memoirs" should be used only of that section in which Ezra speaks in the first person, i.e., 7, 27—9, 15. Compare the "Nehemiah Memoirs" in Neh 1, 1—7, 72a; 11, 1f; 12, 27-43; 13, 4-31. The Chronicler combined this material with other sources at his disposal. The personality of Ezra is less known than that of Nehemiah. Ben Sirach, in his praise of the fathers, makes no mention of Ezra. The genealogy of Ezra (7, 1-5) traces his priesthood back to Aaron, brother of Moses. This was the accepted way of establishing the legality of one's priestly office. He is also called a scribe, well-versed in the law of Moses (7, 6), indicating Ezra's dedication to the study of the Torah, which he sought to make the basic rule of life in the restored community. It was in religious and cultic reform rather than in political affairs that Ezra made his mark as a postexilic leader. Jewish tradition holds him in great honor; the Talmud even regards him as a second Moses, claiming that the Torah would have been given to Israel through Ezra had not Moses preceded him.

Ezra is sometimes accused of having been a mere legalist who gave excessive attention to the letter of the law. His work, however, should be seen and judged within a specific historical context. He gave to his people a cohesion and spiritual unity which prevented the disintegration of the small Jewish community. Had it not been for the intransigence of Ezra and of those who adopted his ideal, it is doubtful that Judaism would have so effectively resisted Hellenism, then or in later centuries. Ezra set the tone of the postexilic community, and it was characterized by fidelity to the Torah, Judaism's authentic way of life. It is in this light that we can judge most fairly the work of Ezra during the Restoration.

The Book of Ezra is divided as follows:

I: The Return from Exile (1, 1—6, 22)
II: The Deeds of Ezra (7, 1—10, 44)

I: THE RETURN FROM EXILE

CHAPTER 1

The Decree of Cyrus. 1*† In the first year of Cyrus, king of Persia, in order to fulfill the word of the LORD spoken by Jeremiah, the LORD inspired King Cyrus of Persia to issue this proclamation throughout his kingdom, both by word of mouth and in writing: 2 "Thus says Cyrus, king of Persia: 'All the kingdoms of the earth the LORD, the God of heaven, has given to me, and he has also charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah. 3 Whoever, therefore, among you belongs to any part of his people, let him go up, and may his God be with him! 4 Let everyone who has survived, in whatever place he may have dwelt, be assisted by the people of that place with silver, gold, goods, and cattle, together with free-will offerings for the house of God in Jerusalem.' "

5 Then the family heads of Judah and Benjamin and the priests and Levites—everyone, that is, whom God had inspired to do so—prepared to go up to build the house of the LORD in Jerusalem. 6* All their neighbors gave them help in every way, with silver, gold, goods, and cattle, and with many precious gifts besides all their free-will offerings. 7 King Cyrus, too, had the utensils of the house of the LORD brought forth which Nebuchadnezzar had taken away from Jerusalem and placed in the house of his god. 8† Cyrus, king of Persia, had them brought forth by the treasurer Mithredath, and counted out to Sheshbazzar, the prince of Judah. 9 This was the inventory: sacks of goldware, thirty; sacks of silverware, one thousand and twenty-nine; 10 golden bowls, thirty; silver bowls, four hundred and ten; other ware, one thousand pieces. 11† Total of the gold- and silver ware: five thousand four hundred pieces. All these Sheshbazzar took with him when the exiles were brought back from Babylon to Jerusalem.

Census of the Province. 1*† These are the inhabitants of the province who returned from the captivity of the exiles, whom Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, had carried away to Babylon, and who came back to Jerusalem and Judah, each man in his own city 2 (those who returned with Zerubbabel, Jeshua, Nehemiah, Seraiah, Reelaiah, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mispereth, Bigvai, Rehum, and Baanah):

The census of the men of Israel: 3 sons of Parosh, two thousand one hundred and seventy-two; 4 sons of Shephatiah, three hundred and seventy-two; 5 sons of Arah, seven hundred and seventy-five; 6 sons of Pahath-moab, who were sons of Jeshua and Joab, two thousand eight hundred and twelve; 7 sons of Elam, one thousand two hundred and fifty-four; 8 sons of Zattu, nine hundred and forty-five; 9 sons of Zaccai, seven hundred and sixty; 10 sons of Bani, six hundred and forty-two; 11 sons of Bebai, six hundred and twenty-three; 12 sons of Azgad, one thousand two hundred and twenty-two; 13 sons of Adonikam, six hundred and sixty-six; 14 sons of Bigvai, two thousand and fifty-six; 15 sons of Adin, four hundred and fifty-four; 16 sons of Ater, who were sons of Hezekiah, ninety-eight; 17 sons of Bezai, three hundred and twenty-three; 18 sons of Jorah, one hundred and twelve; 19 sons of Hashum, two hundred and twenty-three; 20 sons of Gibeon, ninety-five; 21 sons of Bethlehem, one hundred and twenty-three; 22 men of Netophah, fifty-six; 23 men of Anathoth, one hundred and twenty-eight; 24 men of Beth-azmaveth, forty-two; 25 men of Kiriath-jearim, Chephirah, and Beeroth, seven hundred and forty-three; 26 men of Ramah and Geba, six hundred and twenty-one; 27 men of Michmas, one hundred and twenty-two; 28 men of Bethel and Ai, two hundred and twenty-three; 29 sons of Nebo, fifty-two; 30 sons of Magbish one hundred and fifty-six; 31 sons of the other Elam, one thousand two hundred and fifty-four; [32] sons of Harim, three hundred and twenty; [33] sons of Lod, Hadid, and Ono, seven hundred and twenty-five; [34] sons of Jericho, three hundred and forty-five; [35] sons of Senaah, three thousand six hundred and thirty.

[36] The priests: sons of Jedaiah, who were of the house of Jeshua, nine hundred and seventy-three; [37] sons of Immer, one thousand and fifty-two; [38] sons of Pashhur, one thousand two hundred and forty-seven; [39] sons of Harim, one thousand and seventeen.

[40]* The Levites: sons of Jeshua, Kadmiel, Binnui, and Hodaviah, seventy-four.

[42] The gatekeepers: sons of Shallum, sons of Ater, sons of Talmon, sons of Akkub, sons of Hatita, sons of Shobai, one hundred and thirty-nine in all.

[43] The temple slaves: sons of Ziha, sons of Hasupha, sons of Tabbaoth, [44] sons of Keros, sons of Siaha, sons of Padon, [45] sons of Lebanah, sons of Hagabah, sons of Akkub, [46] sons of Hagab, sons of Shamlai, sons of Hanan, [47] sons of Giddel, sons of Gahar, sons of Reaiah, [48] sons of Rezin, sons of Nekoda, sons of Gazzam, [49] sons of Uzza, sons of Paseah, sons of Besai, [50] sons of Asnah, sons of the Meunites, sons of the Nephusites, [51] sons of Bakbuk, sons of Hakupha, sons of Harhur, [52] sons of Bazluth, sons of Mehida, sons of Harsha, [53] sons of Barkos, sons of Sisera, sons of Temah, [54] sons of Neziah, sons of Hatipha.

[59] The following who returned from Tel-melah, Tel-harsha, Cherub, Addan, and Immer were unable to prove that their ancestral houses and their descent were Israelite: [60] sons of Delaiah, sons of Tobiah, sons of Nekoda, six hundred and fifty-two. [61]* Also, of the priests: sons of Habaiah, sons of Hakkoz, sons of Barzillai (he had married one of the daughters of Barzillai the Gileadite and became known by his name). [62] These men searched their family records, but their names could not be found written there; hence they were degraded from the priesthood, [63]† and His Excellency ordered them not to partake of the most holy foods until there should be a priest bearing the Urim and Thummim.

[64] The entire assembly taken together came to forty-two thousand three hundred and sixty, [65] not counting their male and female slaves, who were seven thousand three hundred and thirty-seven. They also had two hundred male and female singers. [66] Their horses were seven hundred and thirty-six, their mules two hundred and forty-five, [67] their camels four hundred and thirty-five, their asses six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

[68] When they arrived at the house of the LORD in Jerusalem, some of the family heads made free-will offerings for the house of God, to rebuild it in its place. [69] According to their means they contributed to the treasury for the temple service: sixty-one thousand drachmas of gold, five thousand minas of silver, and one hundred garments for the priests. [70] The priests, the Levites, and some of the common people took up residence in Jerusalem; but the singers, the gatekeepers, and the temple slaves dwelt in their cities. Thus all the Israelites dwelt in their cities.

Restoration of the Altar. [1]† Now when the seventh month came, after the Israelites had settled in their cities, the people gathered at Jerusalem as one man. [2] Then Jeshua, son of Jozadak, together with his brethren the priests, and Zerubbabel, son of Shealtiel, together with his brethren, set about rebuilding the altar of the God of Israel in order to offer on it the holocausts prescribed in the law of Moses, the man of God. [3] Despite their fear of the peoples of the land, they replaced the altar on its foundations and offered holocausts to the LORD on it, both morning and evening. [4]* They also kept the feast of Booths in the manner prescribed, and they offered the daily holocausts in the proper number required for each day. [5] Thereafter

3, 1f: The seventh month: Tishri (September-October), apparently of 538 B.C.; cf 1, 1; 4, 5. In this case, it was Sheshbazzar who erected the first altar, since he began the work on the foundations of the temple in Jerusalem; cf 5, 16. It was in the second year of Darius I, i.e., in 520 B.C., that Jeshua and Zerubbabel resumed the work on the temple that had been temporarily interrupted (4, 24—5, 1; Hg 1, 1; 2, 1). The Chronicler or a later editor of the text here attributes to them the beginning of the work which, in reality, they merely completed. Shealtiel: the eldest son of King Jehoiachin of Judah and the brother of Sheshbazzar (1 Chr 3, 18f); Zerubbabel was therefore the grandson of Jehoiachin; see note on 1, 8.

they offered the established holocaust, the sacrifices prescribed for the new moons and all the festivals sacred to the LORD, and those which anyone might offer as a freewill gift to the LORD. 6 From the first day of the seventh month they began to offer holocausts to the LORD, though the foundation of the temple of the LORD had not yet been laid.

Founding of the Temple. 7* Then they hired stonecutters and carpenters, and sent food and drink and oil to the Sidonians and Tyrians that they might ship cedar trees from the Lebanon to the port of Joppa, as Cyrus, king of Persia, had authorized. 8 In the year after their coming to the house of God in Jerusalem, in the second month, Zerubbabel, son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua, son of Jozadak, together with the rest of their brethren, the priests and Levites and all who had come from the captivity to Jerusalem, began by appointing the Levites twenty years of age and over to supervise the work on the house of the LORD. 9 Jeshua and his sons and brethren, with Kadmiel and Binnui, son of Henadad, and their sons and their brethren, the Levites, stood as one man to supervise those who were engaged in the work on the house of God. 10* When the builders had laid the foundation of the LORD's temple, the vested priests with the trumpets and the Levites, sons of Asaph, were stationed there with the cymbals to praise the LORD in the manner laid down by David, king of Israel. 11* They alternated in songs of praise and thanksgiving to the LORD, "for he is good, for his kindness to Israel endures forever"; and all the people raised a great shout of joy, praising the LORD because the foundation of the LORD's house had been laid. 12* Many of the priests, Levites, and family heads, the old men who had seen the former house, cried out in sorrow as they watched the foundation of the present house being laid. Many others, however, lifted up their voices in shouts of joy, 13* and no one could distinguish the sound of the joyful shouting from the sound of those who were weeping; for the people raised a mighty clamor which was heard afar off.

Samaritan Interference. 1 When the enemies of Judah and Benjamin heard that the exiles were building a temple for the LORD, the God of Israel, 2 they approached Zerubbabel and the family heads and said to them, "Let us build with you, for we seek your God just as you do, and we have sacrificed to him since the days of Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, who had us brought here." 3 But Zerubbabel, Jeshua, and the rest of the family heads of Israel answered them, "It is not your responsibility to build with us a house for our God, but we alone must build it for the LORD, the God of Israel, as King Cyrus of Persia has commanded us." 4 Thereupon the people of the land set out to intimidate and dishearten the people of Judah so as to keep them from building. 5† They also suborned counselors to work against them and thwart their plans during the remaining years of Cyrus, king of Persia, and until the reign of Darius, king of Persia.

Later Hostility. 6 Also at the beginning of the reign of Ahashuerus they prepared a written accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem.

7† Again, in the time of Artaxerxes, Mithredath wrote in concert with Tabeel and the rest of his fellow officials to Artaxerxes, king of Persia. The document was written in Aramaic and was accompanied by a translation. [Aramaic:]

8† Then Rehum, the governor, and Shimshai, the scribe, wrote the following letter against Jerusalem to King Artaxerxes: 9 "Rehum, the governor, Shimshai, the scribe, and their fellow judges, officials, and agents from among the Persian, Urukian, Babylonian, Susian (that is Elamite), 10 and the other peoples whom the great and illustrious Assurbanipal transported and settled in the city of Samaria and elsewhere in the province West-of-Euphrates, as follows. . . ." 11 This is a copy of the letter that they sent to him:

"To King Artaxerxes, your servants, the men of West-of-Euphrates, as follows: 12 Let it be known to the king that the Jews who came up from you to us have arrived at Jerusalem and are now rebuilding this rebellious and evil city. They are raising up its walls, and the foundations have already been laid. 13 Now let it be known to the king that if this city is rebuilt and its walls are raised up again, they will no longer pay taxes, tributes, or tolls; thus it can only result in harm to the throne. 14 Now, since we partake of the salt of the palace, we ought not simply to look on while the king is being dishonored. Therefore we have sent this message to inform you, O king, 15 so that inquiry may be made in the historical records of your fathers. In the historical records you can discover and verify that this city is a rebellious city which has proved fatal to kings and provinces, and that sedition has been fostered there since ancient times. For that reason this city was destroyed. 16 We inform you, O king, that if this city is rebuilt and its walls are raised up again, by that very fact you will no longer own any part of West-of-Euphrates."

† 4, 5: Darius: Darius I (521-485 B.C.). The temple-building narrative continues in 4, 24. In between (4, 6-23) is a series of notes about the opposition to the returned exiles voiced at the Persian court in the early fifth century B.C., after the temple had been reestablished.

4, 7: Aramaic: this word in the original text seems to be a note indicating a change of language from Hebrew to Aramaic, which in fact takes place here. The Aramaic section ends with 6, 18, but again in 7, 12-26 a royal letter is cited in Aramaic.

4, 8-23: The central question here is the rebuilding of the fortification walls of Jerusalem, not the building of the temple. The interruption of work on the city wall some time before 445 B.C. was the occasion for the coming of Nehemiah to Palestine (Neh 1, 1-4; 2, 1-5). Artaxerxes: Artaxerxes I (464-423 B.C.).

17 The king sent this answer: "To Rehum, the governor, Shimshai, the scribe, and their fellow officials living in Samaria and elsewhere in the province West-of-Euphrates, greetings and the following: 18 The communication which you sent us has been read plainly in my presence. 19 When at my command inquiry was made, it was verified that from ancient times this city has risen up against kings and that rebellion and sedition have been fostered there. 20 Powerful kings were once in Jerusalem who ruled over all West-of-Euphrates, and taxes, tributes, and tolls were paid to them. 21 Give orders, therefore, that will stop the work of these men. This city may not be rebuilt until a further decree has been issued by me. 22 Take care that you do not neglect this matter, lest the evil grow to the detriment of the throne."

23* As soon as a copy of King Artaxerxes' letter had been read before Rehum, the governor, Shimshai, the scribe, and their fellow officials, they went in all haste to the Jews in Jerusalem and stopped their work by force of arms.

Rebuilding of the Temple. 24† Thus it was that the work on the house of God in Jerusalem was halted. This inaction lasted until the second year of the reign of Darius, king of Persia.

CHAPTER 5

1*† Then the prophets Haggai and Zechariah, son of Iddo, began to prophesy to the Jews in Judah and Jerusalem in the name of the God of Israel. 2 Thereupon Zerubbabel, son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua, son of Jozadak, began again to build the house of God in Jerusalem, with the prophets of God giving them support. 3 At that time there came to them Tattenai, governor of West-of-Euphrates, and Shethar-bozenai, and their fellow officials, who asked of them: "Who issued the decree for you to build this house and raise this edifice? 4 What are the names of the men who are building this structure?" 5 But their God watched over the elders of the Jews so that they were not hindered, until a report could go to Darius and then a written order be sent back concerning this matter.

6 A copy of the letter sent to King Darius by Tattenai, governor of West-of-Euphrates, and Shethar-bozenai, and their fellow officials from West-of-Euphrates; 7 they sent him a report in which was written the following:

"To King Darius, all good wishes! 8 Let it be known to the king that we have visited the province of Judah and the house of the great God: it is being rebuilt of cut stone and the walls are being reinforced with timber; the work is being carried on diligently and is making good progress under their hands. 9 We then questioned the elders, addressing to them the following words: 'Who issued the decree for you to build this house and raise this edifice?' 10 We also asked them their names, to report them to you in a list of the men who are their leaders. 11 This was their answer to us: 'We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth, and we are rebuilding the house built here long years ago, which a great king of Israel built and finished. 12 But because our fathers provoked the wrath of the God of heaven, he delivered them into the power of the Chaldean, Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, who destroyed this house and led the people captive to Babylon. 13 However, in the first year of Cyrus, king of Babylon, King Cyrus issued a decree for the rebuilding of this house of God. 14 Moreover, the gold and silver utensils of the house of God which Nebuchadnezzar had taken from the temple in Jerusalem and carried off to the temple in Babylon, King Cyrus ordered to be removed from the temple in Babylon and consigned to a certain Sheshbazzar, whom he named governor. 15 And he commanded him: Take these utensils and deposit them in the temple of Jerusalem, and let the house of God be rebuilt on its former site. 16 Then this same Sheshbazzar came and laid the foundations of the house of God in Jerusalem. Since that time the building has been going on, and it is not yet completed.' 17 Now, if it please the king, let a search be made in the royal archives of Babylon to discover whether a decree really was issued by King Cyrus for the rebuilding of this house of God in Jerusalem. And may the king's pleasure in this matter be communicated to us."

CHAPTER 6

The Decree of Darius. 1 Thereupon King Darius issued an order to search the archives in which the Babylonian records were stored away; 2* and in Ecbatana, the stronghold in the province of Media, a scroll was found containing the following text: "Memorandum. 3 In the first year of King Cyrus, King Cyrus issued a decree: The house of God in Jerusalem. The house is to be rebuilt as a place for offering sacrifices and bringing burnt offerings. Its height is to be sixty cubits and its width sixty cubits. 4 It shall have three courses of cut stone for each one of timber. The costs are to be borne by the royal palace. 5 Also, the gold and silver utensils of the house of God which Nebuchadnezzar took from the temple of Jerusalem and brought to Babylon are to be sent back: to be returned to their place in the temple of Jerusalem and deposited in the house of God.

6 "Now, therefore, Tattenai, governor of West-of-Euphrates, and Shethar-bozenai, and you, their fellow officials in West-of-Euphrates, do not interfere in that place. 7 Let the governor and the elders of the Jews continue to work on that house of God; they are to rebuild it on its former site. 8 I also issue this decree concerning your dealing with these elders of the Jews in the rebuilding of that house of God: From the royal revenue, the taxes of West-of-Euphrates, let these men be repaid for their expenses, in full and without delay. 9 Whatever else is required—young bulls, rams, and lambs for holocausts to the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, and oil, according to the requirements of the priests who are in Jerusalem—is to be delivered to them day by day without fail, 10 that they may continue to offer sacrifices of pleasing odor to the God of heaven and pray for the life of the king and his sons. 11 I also issue this decree: If any man violates this edict, a beam is to be taken from his house, and he is to be lifted up and impaled on it; and his house is to be reduced to rubble for this offense. 12 And may the God who causes his name to dwell there overthrow every king or people who may undertake to alter this or to destroy this house of God in Jerusalem. I, Darius, have issued this decree; let it be carefully executed."

13 Then Tattenai, the governor of West-of-Euphrates, and Shethar-bozenai, and their fellow officials carried out fully the instructions King Darius had sent them. 14 The elders of the Jews continued to make progress in the building, supported by the message of the prophets, Haggai and Zechariah, son of Iddo. They finished the building according to the command of the God of Israel and the decrees of Cyrus and Darius [and of Artaxerxes, king of Persia]. 15 They completed this house on the third day of the month Adar, in the sixth year of the reign of King Darius. 16 The Israelites—priests, Levites, and the other returned exiles—celebrated the dedication of this house of God with joy. 17 For the dedication of this house of God, they offered one hundred bulls, two hundred rams, and four hundred lambs, together with twelve he-goats as a sin-offering for all Israel, in keeping with the number of the tribes of Israel. 18 Finally, they set up the priests in their classes and the Levites in their divisions for the service of God in Jerusalem, as is prescribed in the book of Moses.

The Passover. 19* The exiles kept the Passover on the fourteenth day of the first month. 20 The Levites, every one of whom had purified himself for the occasion, sacrificed the Passover for the rest of the exiles, for their brethren the priests, and for themselves. 21* The Israelites who had returned from the exile partook of it together with all those who had separated themselves from the uncleanness of the peoples of the land to join them in seeking the LORD, the God of Israel. 22† They joyfully kept the feast of Unleavened Bread for seven days, for the LORD had filled them with joy by making the king of Assyria favorable to them, so that he gave them help in their work on the house of God, the God of Israel.

7, 1-8: The date of Ezra's journey to Palestine is not known with certainty. The seventh year of King Artaxerxes I would be 458 B.C., and the present order of the text suggests that date. The narratives of Ezra and Nehemiah make it seem to many, however, that the arrival of Nehemiah in 445 B.C. should precede that of Ezra. If so, Ezra may be thought to have come in 398 B.C., the seventh year of King Artaxerxes II. Others argue for the thirty-seventh year of Artaxerxes I, that is, 428 B.C.; this would suppose that the date given in the text has suffered in transmission.

Persia, Ezra, son of Seraiah, son of Azariah, son of Hilkiah, 2 son of Shallum, son of Zadok, son of Ahitub, 3 son of Amariah, son of Azariah, son of Meraioth, 4 son of Zerahiah, son of Uzzi, son of Bukki, 5 son of Abishua, son of Phinehas, son of Eleazar, son of the high priest Aaron—6* this Ezra came up from Babylon. He was a scribe, well-versed in the law of Moses which was given by the LORD, the God of Israel. Because the hand of the LORD, his God, was upon him, the king granted him all that he requested.

7 Some of the Israelites and some priests, Levites, singers, gatekeepers, and temple slaves also came up to Jerusalem in the seventh year of King Artaxerxes. 8 Ezra came to Jerusalem in the fifth month of that seventh year of the king. 9 On the first day of the first month he resolved on the journey up from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month he arrived at Jerusalem, for the favoring hand of his God was upon him. 10* Ezra had set his heart on the study and practice of the law of the LORD and on teaching statutes and ordinances in Israel.

The Decree of Artaxerxes. 11 This is a copy of the rescript which King Artaxerxes gave to Ezra the priest-scribe, the scribe of the text of the LORD's commandments and statutes for Israel:

12* "Artaxerxes, king of kings, to Ezra the priest, scribe of the law of the God of heaven (then, after greetings): 13 I have issued this decree, that anyone in my kingdom belonging to the people of Israel, its priests or Levites, who is minded to go up to Jerusalem with you, may do so. 14 You are the envoy from the king and his seven counselors to supervise Judah and Jerusalem in respect of the law of your God which is in your possession, 15 and to bring with you the silver and gold which the king and his counselors have freely contributed to the God of Israel, whose dwelling is in Jerusalem, 16 as well as all the silver and gold which you may receive throughout the province of Babylon, together with the free-will offerings which the people and priests freely contribute for the house of their God in Jerusalem. 17 You must take care, therefore, to use this money to buy bulls, rams, lambs, and the cereal offerings and libations proper to these, and to offer them on the altar of the house of your God in Jerusalem. 18 You and your brethren may do whatever seems best to you with the remainder of the silver and gold, conformably to the will of your God. 19 The utensils consigned to you for the service of the house of your God you are to deposit before the God of Jerusalem. 20 Whatever else you may be required to supply for the needs of the house of your God, you may draw from the royal treasury. 21 I, Artaxerxes the king, issue this decree to all the treasurers of West-of-Euphrates: Whatever Ezra the priest, scribe of the law of the God of heaven, requests of you, dispense to him accurately, 22 within these limits: silver, one hundred talents; wheat, one hundred kors; wine, one hundred baths; oil, one hundred baths; salt, without limit. 23 Let everything that is ordered by the God of heaven be carried out exactly for the house of the God of heaven, that wrath may not come upon the realm of the king and his sons. 24 We also inform you that it is not permitted to impose taxes, tributes, or tolls on any priest, Levite, singer, gatekeeper, temple slave, or any other servant of that house of God.

25*† "As for you, Ezra, in accordance with the wisdom of your God which is in your possession, appoint magistrates and judges to administer justice to all the people in West-of-Euphrates, to all, that is, who know the laws of your God. Instruct those who do not know these laws. 26 Whoever does not obey the law of your God and the law of the king, let strict judgment be executed upon him, whether death, or corporal punishment, or a fine on his goods, or imprisonment."

Ezra and His Companions. 27 Blessed be the LORD, the God of our fathers, who thus disposed the mind of the king to glorify the house of the LORD in Jerusalem, 28* and who let me find favor with the king, with his counselors, and with all the most influential royal officials. I therefore took courage and, with the hand of the LORD, my God, upon me, I gathered together Israelite family heads to make the return journey with me.

CHAPTER 8

1 This is the list of the family heads who returned with me from Babylon during the reign of King Artaxerxes:

2 Of the sons of Phinehas, Gershon; of the sons of Ithamar, Daniel; of the sons of David, Hattush, 3 son of Shecaniah; of the sons of Parosh, Zechariah, and with him one hundred and fifty males were enrolled; 4 of the sons of Pahath-moab, Eliehoenai, son of Zerahiah, and with him two hundred males; 5 of the sons of Zattu, Shecaniah, son of Jahaziel, and with him three hundred males; 6 of the sons of Adin, Ebed, son of Jonathan, and with him fifty males; 7 of the sons of Elam, Jeshaiah, son of Athaliah, and with him seventy males; [8] of the sons of Shephatiah, Zebadiah, son of Michael, and with him eighty males; [9] of the sons of Joab, Obadiah, son of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen males; [10] of the sons of Bani, Shelomith, son of Josiphiah, and with him one hundred and sixty males; [11] of the sons of Bebai, Zechariah, son of Bebai, and with him twenty-eight males; [12] of the sons of Azgad, Johanan, son of Hakkatan, and with him one hundred and ten males; [13] of the sons of Adonikam, younger sons, whose names were Eliphelet, Jeiel, and Shemaiah, and with them sixty males; [14] of the sons of Bigvai, Uthai, son of Zakkur, and with him seventy males.

The Journey to Jerusalem. [15]† I had them assemble by the river that flows toward Ahava, where we made camp for three days. There I perceived that both laymen and priests were present, but I could not discover a single Levite. [16] Therefore I sent Eliezer, Ariel, Shemaiah, Jarib, Elnathan, Nathan, Zechariah, and Meshullam, wise leaders, [17] with a command for Iddo, the leader in the place Casiphia, instructing them what to say to Iddo and his brethren, and to the temple slaves in Casiphia, in order to procure for us ministers for the house of our God. [18]* They sent to us—for the favoring hand of our God was upon us—a well-instructed man, one of the sons of Mahli, son of Levi, son of Israel, namely Sherebiah, with his sons and brethren, eighteen men. [19] They also sent us Hashabiah, and with him Jeshaiah, sons of Merari, and their brethren and their sons, twenty men. [20]* Of the temple slaves (those whom David and the princes appointed to serve the Levites) there were two hundred and twenty. All these men were enrolled by name.

[21] Then I proclaimed a fast, there by the river of Ahava, that we might humble ourselves before our God to petition from him a safe journey for ourselves, our children, and all our possessions. [22]* For I would have been ashamed to ask the king for troops and horsemen to protect us against enemies along the way, since we had said to the king, "The favoring hand of our God is upon all who seek him, but his mighty wrath is against all who forsake him." [23] So we fasted, and prayed to our God for this, and our petition was granted. [24] Next I selected twelve of the priestly leaders along with Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren, [25] and I weighed out before them the silver and the gold and the utensils offered for the house of our God by the king, his counselors, his officials, and all the Israelites of that region. [26] I consigned it to them in these amounts: silver, six hundred and fifty talents; silver utensils, one hundred; gold, one hundred talents; [27] twenty golden bowls valued at a thousand darics; two vases of excellent polished bronze, as precious as gold. [28] I addressed them in these words: "You are consecrated to the LORD, and the utensils are also consecrated; the silver and the gold are a free-will offering to the LORD, the God of your fathers. [29] Keep good watch over them till you weigh them out in Jerusalem in the presence of the chief priests and Levites and the family leaders of Israel, in the chambers of the house of the LORD." [30] The priest and the Levites then took over the silver, the gold, and the utensils that had been weighed out, to bring them to Jerusalem, to the house of our God.

[31] We set out for Jerusalem from the river of Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month. The hand of our God remained upon us, and he protected us from enemies and bandits along the way. [32] Thus we arrived in Jerusalem, where we first rested for three days. [33] On the fourth day, the silver, the gold, and the utensils were weighed out in the house of our God and consigned to the priest Meremoth, son of Uriah, who was assisted by Eleazar, son of Phinehas; they were assisted by the Levites Jozabad, son of Jeshua, and Noadiah, son of Binnui. [34] Everything was in order as to number and weight, and the total weight was registered. At that same time, [35] those who had returned from the captivity, the exiles, offered as holocausts to the God of Israel twelve bulls for all Israel, ninety-six rams, seventy-seven lambs, and twelve goats as sin-offerings: all these as a holocaust to the LORD. [36]† Finally, the orders of the king were presented to the king's satraps and to the governors in West-of-Euphrates who gave their support to the people and to the house of God.

Denunciation of Mixed Marriages. [1]* When these matters had been concluded, the leaders approached me with this report: "Neither the Israelite laymen nor the priests nor the Levites have kept themselves aloof from the peoples of the land and their abominations [Canaanites, Hittites, Perizzites, Jebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egyptians, and Amorites]; 2 for they have taken some of their daughters as wives for themselves and their sons, and thus they have desecrated the holy race with the peoples of the land. Furthermore, the leaders and rulers have taken a leading part in this apostasy!"

Ezra's Exhortation. 3* When I had heard this thing, I tore my cloak and my mantle, plucked hair from my head and beard, and sat there stupefied. 4* Around me gathered all who were in dread of the sentence of the God of Israel on this apostasy of the exiles, while I remained motionless until the evening sacrifice. 5 Then, at the time of the evening sacrifice, I rose in my wretchedness, and with cloak and mantle torn I fell on my knees, stretching out my hands to the LORD my God.

6* I said: "My God, I am too ashamed and confounded to raise my face to you, O my God, for our wicked deeds are heaped up above our heads and our guilt reaches up to heaven. 7† From the time of our fathers even to this day great has been our guilt, and for our wicked deeds we have been delivered over, we and our kings and our priests, to the will of the kings of foreign lands, to the sword, to captivity, to pillage, and to disgrace, as is the case today.

8* "And now, but a short time ago, mercy came to us from the LORD our God, who left us a remnant and gave us a stake in his holy place; thus our God has brightened our eyes and given us relief in our servitude. 9* For slaves we are, but in our servitude our God has not abandoned us; rather, he has turned the good will of the kings of Persia toward us. Thus he has given us new life to raise again the house of our God and restore its ruins, and has granted us a fence in Judah and Jerusalem. 10 But now, O our God, what can we say after all this? For we have abandoned your commandments, 11* which you gave through your servants the prophets: the land which you are entering to take as your possession is a land unclean with the filth of the peoples of the land, with the abominations with which they have filled it from one end to the other in their uncleanness. 12* Do not, then, give your daughters to their sons in marriage, and do not take their daughters for your sons. Never promote their peace and prosperity; thus you will grow strong, enjoy the produce of the land, and leave it as an inheritance to your children forever.

13 "After all that has come upon us for our evil deeds and our great guilt—though you, our God, have made less of our sinfulness than it deserved and have allowed us to survive as we do—14 shall we again violate your commandments by intermarrying with these abominable peoples? Would you not become so angered with us as to destroy us without remnant or survivor? 15 O LORD, God of Israel, you are just; yet we have been spared, the remnant we are today. Here we are before you in our sins. Because of all this, we can no longer stand in your presence."

The People's Response. 1 While Ezra prayed and acknowledged their guilt, weeping and prostrate before the house of God, a very large assembly of Israelites gathered about him, men, women, and children; and the people wept profusely. 2 Then Shecaniah, the son of Jehiel, one of the sons of Elam, made this appeal to Ezra: "We have indeed betrayed our God by taking as wives foreign women of the peoples of the land. Yet even now there remains a hope for Israel. 3 Let us therefore enter into a covenant before our God to dismiss all our foreign wives and the children born of them, in keeping with what you, my lord, advise, and those who fear the commandments of our God. Let the law be observed! 4 Rise, then, for this is your duty! We will stand by you, so have courage and take action!"

5 Ezra rose to his feet and demanded an oath from the chiefs of the priests, from the Levites and from all Israel that they would do as had been proposed; and they swore it. 6† Then Ezra retired from his place before the house of God and entered the chamber of Johanan, son of Eliashib, where he spent the night neither eating food nor drinking water, for he was in mourning over the betrayal by the exiles. 7 A proclamation was made throughout Judah and Jerusalem that all the exiles should gather together in Jerusalem, 8 and that whoever failed to appear within three days would, according to the judgment of the leaders and elders, suffer the confiscation of all his possessions, and himself be ex-

10, 6: Johanan, son of Eliashib: actually, the grandson of Eliashib; the father of Johanan was Eliashib's son Joiada (Neh 12, 10f.22). Since Eliashib was high priest at the time of Nehemiah (Neh 3, 1.20f; 13, 4.7) and Johanan, if not yet high priest, was at least old enough to have his own separate quarters (chamber) in the temple at the time of Ezra, it is practically certain that Nehemiah's activity in Jerusalem must have preceded that of Ezra.

9† All the men of Judah and Benjamin gathered together in Jerusalem within the three-day period: it was in the ninth month, on the twentieth day of the month. All the people, standing in the open place before the house of God, were trembling both over the matter at hand and because it was raining. 10 Then Ezra, the priest, stood up and said to them: "Your unfaithfulness in taking foreign women as wives has added to Israel's guilt. 11* But now, give praise to the LORD, the God of your fathers, and do his will: separate yourselves from the peoples of the land and from these foreign women." 12 In answer, the whole assembly cried out with a loud voice: "Yes, it is our duty to do as you say! 13 But the people are numerous and it is the rainy season, so that we cannot remain out-of-doors; besides, this is not a task that can be performed in a single day or even two, for those of us who have sinned in this regard are many. 14 Let our leaders represent the whole assembly; then let all those in our cities who have taken foreign women for wives appear at appointed times, accompanied by the elders and magistrates of each city in question, till we have turned away from us our God's burning anger over this affair." 15 Only Jonathan, son of Asahel, and Jahzeiah, son of Tikvah, were against this proposal, with Meshullam and Shabbethai the Levite supporting them.

The Guilty. 16† The exiles did as agreed. Ezra appointed as his assistants men who were family heads, one for each family, all of them designated by name. They held sessions to examine the matter, beginning with the first day of the tenth month. 17 By the first day of the first month they had passed judgment on all the men who had taken foreign women for wives.

18 Among the priests, the following were found to have taken foreign women for wives: Of the sons of Jeshua, son of Jozadak, and his brethren: Maaseiah, Eliezer, Jarib, and Gedaliah. 19 They pledged themselves to dismiss their wives, and as a guilt-offering for their guilt they gave a ram from the flock. 20 Of the sons of Immer: Hanani and Zebadiah; 21 of the sons of Harim: Maaseiah, Elijah, Shemaiah, Jehiel, and Uzziah; 22 of the sons of Pashhur: Elioenai, Maaseiah, Ishmael, Nethanel, Jozabad, and Elasah.

23* Of the Levites: Jozabad, Shimei, Kelaiah (also called Kelita), Pethahiah, Judah and Eliezer.

24 Of the singers: Eliashib and Zakkur; of the gatekeepers: Shallum, Telem, and Uri.

25 Among the other Israelites: Of the sons of Parosh: Ramiah, Izziah, Malchijah, Mijamin, Eleazar, Malchijah, and Benaiah; 26 of the sons of Elam: Mattaniah, Zechariah, Jehiel, Abdi, Jeremoth, and Elijah; 27 of the sons of Zattu: Elioenai, Eliashib, Mattaniah, Jeremoth, Zabad, and Aziza; 28 of the sons of Bebai: Jehohanan, Hananiah, Zabbai, and Athlai; 29 of the sons of Bani: Meshullam, Malluch, Adaiah, Jashub, Sheal, and Jeremoth; 30 of the sons of Pahath-moab: Adna, Chelal, Benaiah, Maaseiah, Mattaniah, Bezalel, Binnui, and Manasseh; 31 of the sons of Harim: Eliezer, Isshijah, Malchijah, Shemaiah, Shimeon, 32 Benjamin, Malluch, Shemariah, 33 of the sons of Hashum: Mattenai, Mattattah, Zabad, Eliphelet, Jeremai, Manasseh, Shimei; 34 of the sons of Begui: Maadai, Amram, Uel, 35 Benaiah, Bedeiah, Cheluhi, 36 Vaniah, Meremoth, Eliashib, 37 Mattaniah, Mattenai, and Jaasu; 38 of the sons of Binnui: Shimei, 39 Shelemiah, Nathan, and Adaiah; 40 of the sons of Zachai: Shashai, Sharai, 41 Azarel, Shelemiah, Shemariah, 42 Shallum, Amariah, Joseph; 43 of the sons of Nebo: Jeiel, Mattithiah, Zabad, Zebina, Jaddai, Joel, Benaiah.

NEHEMIAH

Problems common to the combined Books Ezra-Nehemiah have been pointed out in the Introduction to the Book of Ezra. The achievements of the two men were complementary; each helped to make it possible for Judaism to maintain its identity during the difficult days of the Restoration. Nehemiah was the man of action who rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem and introduced necessary administrative reforms. Ezra in turn was the great religious reformer who succeeded in establishing the Torah as the constitution of the returned community.

The biblical sources for Nehemiah's life and work are the autobiographical portions scattered through the book. They are called the "Memoirs of Nehemiah," and have been used more extensively and effectively by "the Chronicler" than the "Memoirs of Ezra." No competent scholar questions the authenticity of Nehemiah's memoirs. From these and other sources, the picture emerges of a man dedicated to the single purpose of the welfare of his people. Despite temperamental shortcomings, Nehemiah was a man of good practical sense combined with deep faith in God. In view of his selfless service to a community capable of severely testing any leader, we can be indulgent toward his numerous appeals to God to credit him with the work he had done. Nehemiah was a layman, and his generous dedication of talents to the service of God and of God's people remains an example of undiminished force for laymen today.

The Book of Nehemiah is divided as follows:

I: The Deeds of Nehemiah (1, 1—7, 72)
II: Promulgation of the Law (8, 1—13, 31)

I: THE DEEDS OF NEHEMIAH

CHAPTER 1

Nehemiah's Vocation. [1]† The words of Nehemiah, the son of Hacaliah.

In the month Chislev of the twentieth year, I was in the citadel of Susa [2] when Hanani, one of my brothers, came with other men from Judah. I asked them about the Jews, the remnant preserved after the captivity, and about Jerusalem, [3] and they answered me: "The survivors of the captivity there in the province are in great distress and under reproach. Also, the wall of Jerusalem lies breached, and its gates have been gutted with fire." [4] When I heard this report, I began to weep and continued mourning for several days; I fasted and prayed before the God of heaven.

[5]* I prayed: "O LORD, God of heaven, great and awesome God, you who preserve your covenant of mercy toward those who love you and keep your commandments, [6]* may your ear be attentive, and your eyes open, to heed the prayer which I, your servant, now offer in your presence day and night for your servants the Israelites, confessing the sins which we of Israel have committed against you, I and my father's house included. [7]* Grievously have we offended you, not keeping the commandments, the statutes, and the ordinances which you committed to your servant Moses. [8]* But remember, I pray, the promise which you gave through Moses, your servant, when you said: 'Should you prove faithless, I will scatter you among the nations; [9] but should you return to me and carefully keep my commandments, even though your outcasts have been driven to the farthest corner of the world, I will gather them from there, and bring them back to the place which I have chosen as the dwelling place for my name.' [10]* They are your servants, your people, whom you freed by your great might and your strong hand. [11]*† O Lord, may your ear be attentive to my prayer and that of all your willing servants who revere your name. Grant

† 1, 1: The first mission of Nehemiah, from the twentieth year of Artaxerxes I, lasted from the spring (2, 1) of 445 B. C. until 433 B. C. (5, 14). It is recounted in Neh 1, 1—6, 15; 12, 27-43; 6, 16—7, 5; 11, 1-21, which may be read in that order.

success to your servant this day, and let him find favor with this man"—for I was cupbearer to the king.

CHAPTER 2

Appointment by the King. [1] In the month Nisan of the twentieth year of King Artaxerxes, when the wine was in my charge, I took some and offered it to the king. As I had never before been sad in his presence, [2] the king asked me, "Why do you look sad? If you are not sick, you must be sad at heart." Though I was seized with great fear, [3] I answered the king: "May the king live forever! How could I not look sad when the city where my ancestors are buried lies in ruins, and its gates have been eaten out by fire?" [4] The king asked me, "What is it, then, that you wish?" I prayed to the God of heaven [5] and then answered the king: "If it please the king, and if your servant is deserving of your favor, send me to Judah, to the city of my ancestors' graves, to rebuild it." [6] Then the king, and the queen seated beside him, asked me how long my journey would take and when I would return. I set a date that was acceptable to him, and the king agreed that I might go.

[7] I asked the king further: "If it please the king, let letters be given to me for the governors of West-of-Euphrates, that they may afford me safe-conduct till I arrive in Judah; [8]* also a letter for Asaph, the keeper of the royal park, that he may give me wood for timbering the gates of the temple-citadel and for the city wall and the house that I shall occupy." The king granted my requests, for the favoring hand of my God was upon me. [9]* Thus I proceeded to the governors of West-of-Euphrates and presented the king's letters to them. The king also sent with me army officers and cavalry.

[10]† When Sanballat the Horonite and Tobiah the Ammonite slave had heard of this, they were very much displeased that someone had come to seek the welfare of the Israelites.

Circuit of the City. [11] When I had arrived in Jerusalem, I first rested there for three days. [12] Then I set out by night with only a few other men (for I had not told anyone what my God had inspired me to do for Jerusalem) and with no other animals but my own mount. [13]† I rode out at night by the Valley Gate, passed by the Dragon Spring, and came to the Dung Gate, observing how the walls of Jerusalem lay in ruins and its gates had been eaten out by fire. [14] Then I passed over to the Spring Gate and to the King's Pool. Since there was no room here for my mount to pass with me astride, [15] I continued on foot up the wadi by night, inspecting the wall all the while till I once more reached the Valley Gate, by which I went back in. [16] The magistrates knew nothing of where I had gone or what I was doing, for as yet I had disclosed nothing to the Jews, neither to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the magistrates, nor to the others who would be concerned about the matter.

Rebuilding Jerusalem's Walls. [17] Afterward I said to them: "You see the evil plight in which we stand: how Jerusalem lies in ruins and its gates have been gutted by fire. Come, let us rebuild the wall of Jerusalem, so that we may no longer be an object of derision!" [18]* Then I explained to them how the favoring hand of my God had rested upon me, and what the king had said to me. They replied, "Let us be up and building!" And they undertook the good work with vigor.

[19] On hearing of this, Sanballat the Horonite, Tobiah the Ammonite slave, and Geshem the Arab mocked us and ridiculed us. "What is this that you are about?" they asked. "Are you rebelling against the king?" [20]† My answer to them was this: "It is the God of heaven who will grant us success. We, his servants, shall set about the rebuilding; but for you there is to be neither share nor claim nor memorial in Jerusalem."

† 2, 10: Sanballat the Horonite: the governor of the province of Samaria (3, 33ff), apparently a native of one of the Bethhorons. A letter from the Jews living at Elephantine in southern Egypt, dated 408-407 B. C., mentions "Delayah and Shelemyah, the sons of Sanballat, the governor of Samaria." Although his own name was Babylonian—Sin-uballit, i.e., "Sin (the moon god) has given life"—his two sons had names referring to Yahweh. Tobiah, the Ammonite slave: the governor of the province of Ammon in Transjordan. His honorary title, "servant" (in Hebrew, ebed), i.e., of the king, could also be understood as slave, and Nehemiah no doubt meant it in this derogatory sense. The Tobiads remained a powerful family even in Maccabean times (2 Mc 3, 11). Sanballat and Tobiah, together with Geshem the Arab (2, 19; 6, 1f), who was probably in charge of Edom and the regions to the south and southeast of Judah, opposed the rebuilding of Jerusalem's walls on political grounds; the city was the capital of a rival province.

2, 13ff: Nehemiah left Jerusalem by the Valley Gate near the northwestern end of the old City of David and went south down the Tyropoean Valley toward the Dragon Spring (or the En-rogel of Jos 15, 7; 18, 16; 2 Sm 17, 17; 1 Kgs 1, 9; now known as Job's Well) at the juncture of the Valley of Hinnom and the Kidron Valley; he then turned north at the Dung Gate (or the Potsherd Gate of Jer 19, 2) at the southern end of the city and proceeded up the wadi, that is, the Kidron Valley, passing the Spring Gate (at the Spring of Gihon) and the King's Pool (unidentified); finally he turned west and then south to his starting point.

2, 20: Neither share nor claim nor memorial: although Sanballat and Tobiah were Yahwist, Nehemiah would not let them participate in any of the rights of the religious community in Jerusalem.

List of Workers. [1]† Eliashib the high priest and his priestly brethren took up the task of rebuilding the Sheep Gate. They timbered it and set up its doors, its bolts, and its bars, then continued the rebuilding to the Tower of Hananel. [2] At their side the men of Jericho were rebuilding, and next to them was Zaccur, son of Imri. [3] The Fish Gate was rebuilt by the sons of Hassenaah; they timbered it and set up its doors, its bolts, and its bars. [4] At their side Meremoth, son of Uriah, son of Hakkoz, carried out the work of repair; next to him was Meshullam, son of Berechiah, son of Meshezabel; and next to him was Zadok, son of Baana. [5] Next to him the Tekoites carried out the work of repair; however, some of their outstanding men would not submit to the labor asked by their lords.

[6] The New City Gate was repaired by Joiada, son of Paseah; and Meshullam, son of Besodeiah; they timbered it and set up its doors, its bolts, and its bars. [7] At their side were Melatiah the Gibeonite, Jadon the Meronothite, and the men of Gibeon and of Mizpah, who were under the jurisdiction of the governor of West-of-Euphrates. [8]† Next to them the work of repair was carried out by Uzziel, son of Harhaiah, a member of the goldsmiths' guild, and at his side was Hananiah, one of the perfumers' guild. They restored Jerusalem as far as the wall of the public square. [9] Next to them the work of repair was carried out by Rephaiah, son of Hur, leader of half the district of Jerusalem, [10] and at his side was Jedaiah, son of Harumaph, who repaired opposite his own house. Next to him Hattush, son of Hashabneiah, carried out the work of repair. [11] The adjoining sector, as far as the Oven Tower, was repaired by Malchijah, son of Harim, and Hasshub, of Pahath-moab. [12] At their side the work of repair was carried out by Shallum, son of Hallohesh, leader of half the district of Jerusalem, by himself and his daughters. [13] The Valley Gate was repaired by Hanun and the inhabitants of Zanoah; they rebuilt it and set up its doors, its bolts, and its bars. They also repaired a thousand cubits of the wall up to the Dung Gate. [14] The Dung Gate was repaired by Malchijah, son of Rechab, leader of the district of Beth-haccherem; he rebuilt it and set up its doors, its bolts, and its bars. [15] The Spring Gate was repaired by Shallum, son of Colhozeh, leader of the district of Mizpah; he rebuilt it, roofed it over, and set up its doors, its bolts, and its bars. He also repaired the wall of the Aqueduct Pool near the king's garden as far as the steps that lead down from the City of David. [16] After him, the work of repair was carried out by Nehemiah, son of Azbuk, leader of half the district of Bethzur, to a place opposite the tombs of David, as far as the artificial pool and the barracks.

[17] After him, the Levites carried out the work of repair: Rehum, son of Bani. Next to him, for his own district, was Hashabiah, leader of half the district of Keilah. [18] After him, their brethren carried out the work of repair: Binnui, son of Henadad, leader of half the district of Keilah; [19] next to him Ezer, son of Jeshua, leader of Mizpah, who repaired the adjoining sector, the Corner, opposite the ascent to the arsenal. [20] After him, Baruch, son of Zabbai, repaired the adjoining sector from the Corner to the entrance of the house of Eliashib, the high priest. [21] After him, Meremoth, son of Uriah, son of Hakkoz, repaired the adjoining sector from the entrance of Eliashib's house to the end of the house.

[22] After him, the work of repair was carried out by the priests, men of the surrounding country. [23] After them, Benjamin and Hasshub carried out the repair in front of their houses; after them, Azariah, son of Maaseiah, son of Ananiah, made the repairs alongside his house. [24] After him, Binnui, son of Henadad, repaired the adjoining sector from the house of Azariah to the Corner [that is, to the Angle]. [25] After him, Palal, son of Uzai, carried out the work of repair opposite the Corner and the tower projecting from the Upper Palace at the quarters of the guard. After him, Pedaiah, son of Parosh, carried out the work of repair [26] to a point opposite the Water Gate on the east, and the projecting tower. [27] After him, the Tekoites repaired the adjoining sector opposite the great projecting tower, to the wall of Ophel [the temple slaves were dwelling on Ophel].

[28] Above the Horse Gate the priests carried out the work of repair, each before his own house. [29]* After them Zadok, son of Immer, carried out the repair before his house, and after him the repair was carried out by Shemaiah, son of Shecaniah, keeper of the East Gate. [30] After him, Hananiah, son of Shelemiah, and Hanun, the sixth son of Za-

laph, repaired the adjoining sector; after them, Meshullam, son of Berechiah, repaired the place opposite his own lodging. 31 After him, Malchijah, a member of the goldsmiths' guild, carried out the work of repair as far as the quarters of the temple slaves and the merchants, before the Gate of Inspection and as far as the upper chamber of the Angle. 32 Between the upper chamber of the Angle and the Sheep Gate, the goldsmiths and the merchants carried out the work of repair.

Opposition from Judah's Foes. 33 When Sanballat heard that we were rebuilding the wall, it roused his anger and he became very much incensed. He ridiculed the Jews, 34 saying in the presence of his brethren and the troops of Samaria: "What are these miserable Jews trying to do? Will they complete their restoration in a single day? Will they recover these stones, burnt as they are, from the heaps of dust?" 35 Tobiah the Ammonite was beside him, and he said: "It is a rubble heap they are building. Any fox that attacked it would breach their wall of stones!" 36 Take note, O our God, how we were mocked! Turn back their derision upon their own heads and let them be carried away to a land of captivity! 37* Hide not their crime and let not their sin be blotted out in your sight, for they insulted the builders to their face! 38 We, however, continued to build the wall, which was soon filled in and completed up to half its height. The people worked with a will.

1 When Sanballat, Tobiah, the Arabs, the Ammonites, and the Ashdodites heard that the restoration of the walls of Jerusalem was progressing—for the gaps were beginning to be closed up—they became extremely angry. 2 Thereupon they all plotted together to come and fight against Jerusalem and thus to throw us into confusion. 3 We prayed to our God and posted a watch against them day and night for fear of what they might do. 4 Meanwhile the Judahites were saying:

"Slackened is the bearers' strength,
there is no end to the rubbish;
Never shall we be able
the wall to rebuild."

5 Our enemies thought, "Before they are aware of it or see us, we shall come into their midst, kill them, and put an end to the work."

6 When the Jews who lived near them had come to us from one place after another, and had told us ten times over that they were about to attack us, 7 I stationed guards down below, behind the wall, near the exposed points, assigning them by family groups with their swords, their spears, and their bows. 8 I made an inspection, then addressed these words to the nobles, the magistrates, and the rest of the people: "Have no fear of them! Keep in mind the LORD, who is great and to be feared, and fight for your brethren, your sons and daughters, your wives and your homes." 9 When our enemies became aware that we had been warned and that God had upset their plan, we all went back, each to his own task at the wall.

10* From that time on, however, only half my able men took a hand in the work, while the other half, armed with spears, bucklers, bows, and breastplates, stood guard behind the whole house of Judah 11 as they rebuilt the wall. The load carriers, too, were armed; each did his work with one hand and held a weapon with the other. 12 Every builder, while he worked, had his sword girt at his side. Also, a trumpeter stood beside me, 13 for I had said to the nobles, the magistrates, and the rest of the people: "Our work is scattered and extensive, and we are widely separated from one another along the wall; 14 wherever you hear the trumpet sound, join us there; our God will fight with us." 15 Thus we went on with the work, half of the men with spears at the ready, from daybreak till the stars came out.

16 At the same time I told the people to spend the nights inside Jerusalem, each man with his own attendant, so that they might serve as a guard by night and a working force by day. 17 Neither I, nor my kinsmen, nor any of my attendants, nor any of the bodyguard that accompanied me took off his clothes; everyone kept his weapon at his right hand.

CHAPTER 5

Antisocial Conduct. 1* Then there rose a great outcry of the common people and their wives against certain of their fellow Jews. 2 Some said: "We are forced to pawn our sons and daughters in order to get grain to eat that we may live." 3 Others said: "We are forced to pawn our fields, our vineyards, and our houses, that we may have grain during the famine." 4 Still others said: "To pay the king's tax we have borrowed money on our fields and our vineyards. 5* And though these are our own kinsmen and our children are as good as theirs, we have had to reduce our sons and daughters to slavery, and violence has been done to some of our daughters! Yet we can do nothing about it, for our fields and our vineyards belong to others."

Nehemiah's Action. 6 I was extremely angry when I heard the reasons they had for complaint. 7† After some deliberation, I called the nobles and magistrates to account, saying to them, "You are exacting interest from your own kinsmen!" I then rebuked them severely, 8• saying to them: "As far as we were able, we bought back our fellow Jews who had been sold to Gentiles; you, however, are selling your own brothers, to have them bought back by us." They remained silent, for they could find no answer. 9 I continued: "What you are doing is not good. Should you not walk in the fear of our God, and put an end to the derision of our Gentile enemies? 10 I myself, my kinsmen, and my attendants have lent the people money and grain without charge. Let us put an end to this usury! 11 I ask that you return to them this very day their fields, their vineyards, their olive groves, and their houses, together with the interest on the money, the grain, the wine, and the oil that you have lent them." 12 They answered: "We will return everything and exact nothing further from them. We will do just what you ask." Then I called for the priests and had them administer an oath to these men that they would do as they had promised. 13 I also shook out the folds of my garment, saying, "Thus may God shake from his home and his fortune every man who fails to keep this promise, and may he thus be shaken out and emptied!" And the whole assembly answered, "Amen," and praised the LORD. Then the people did as they had promised.

Nehemiah's Lack of Self-interest. 14 Moreover, from the time that King Artaxerxes appointed me governor in the land of Judah, from his twentieth to his thirty-second year—during these twelve years neither I nor my brethren lived from the governor's allowance. 15 The earlier governors, my predecessors, had laid a heavy burden on the people, taking from them each day forty silver shekels for their food; then too, their men oppressed the people. But I, because I feared God, did not act thus. 16 Moreover, though I had acquired no land of my own, I did my part in this work on the wall, and all my men were gathered there for the work. 17 Though I set my table for a hundred and fifty persons, Jews and magistrates, as well as those who came to us from the nations round about, 18 and though the daily preparations were made at my expense—one beef, six choice muttons, poultry—besides all kinds of wine in abundance every ten days, despite this I did not claim the governor's allowance, for the labor lay heavy upon this people. 19 Keep in mind, O my God, in my favor all that I did for this people.

Plots against Nehemiah. 1 When it had been reported to Sanballat, Tobiah, Geshem the Arab, and our other enemies that I had rebuilt the wall and that there was no breach left in it (though up to that time I had not yet set up the doors in the gates), 2 Sanballat and Geshem sent me this message: "Come, let us hold council together at Caphirim in the plain of Ono." They were planning to do me harm. 3 However, I sent messengers to them with this reply: "I am engaged in a great enterprise and am unable to come down; why should the work stop, while I leave it to come down to you?" 4 Four times they sent me this same proposal, and each time I gave the same reply. 5 Then, the fifth time, Sanballat sent me the same message by one of his servants, who bore an unsealed letter 6 containing this text: "Among the nations it has been reported—Geshem is witness to this—that you and the Jews are planning a rebellion; that for this reason you are rebuilding the wall; and that you are to be their king"—and so on. 7 "Also, that you have set up prophets in Jerusalem to proclaim you king of Judah. Now, since matters like these must reach the ear of the king, come, let us hold council together." 8 I sent him this answer: "Nothing of what you report has taken place; rather, it is the invention of your own mind." 9 They were all trying to frighten us, thinking, "Their hands will slacken in the work, and it will never be completed." But instead, I now redoubled my efforts.

10 I went to the house of Shemaiah, son of Delaiah, son of Mehetabel, who was unable to go about, and he said:

> "Let us meet in the house of God,
> inside the temple building;
> let us lock the doors of the temple.
> For men are coming to kill you;
> by night they are coming to kill you."

11 My answer was: "A man like me take flight? Can a man like me enter the temple to save his life? I will not go!" 12 For on consideration it was plain to me that God had not sent him; rather, because Tobiah and Sanballat had bribed him, he voiced this prophecy concerning me

• 8: Lv 25, 48.

† 5, 7: You are exacting interest from your own kinsmen!: contrary to the Mosaic law (Dt 23, 20).

13 that I might act on it out of fear and commit this sin. Then they would have had a shameful story with which to discredit me. 14* Keep in mind Tobiah and Sanballat, O my God, because of these things they did; keep in mind as well Noadiah the prophetess and the other prophets who were trying to frighten
me.

Conclusion of the Work. 15† The wall was finished on the twenty-fifth day of Elul; it had taken fifty-two days.
16* When all our enemies had heard of this, and all the nations round about had taken note of it, our enemies lost much face in the eyes of the nations, for they knew that it was with our God's help that this work had been completed. 17† At that same time, however, many letters were going to Tobiah from the nobles of Judah, and Tobiah's letters were reaching them, 18 for many in Judah were in league with him, since he was the son-in-law of Shecaniah, son of Arah, and his son Jehohanan had married the daughter of Meshullam, son of Berechiah. 19 Thus they would praise his good deeds in my presence and relate to him whatever I said; and Tobiah sent letters trying to frighten me.

CHAPTER 7

1 When the wall had been rebuilt, I had the doors set up, and the gatekeepers [and the singers and the Levites] were put in charge of them. 2 Over Jerusalem
I placed Hanani, my brother, and Hana-niah, the commander of the citadel, who was a more trustworthy and God-fearing man than most. 3 I said to them: "The gates of Jerusalem are not to be opened until the sun is hot, and while the sun is still shining they shall shut and bar the doors. Appoint as watchmen the inhabitants of Jerusalem, some at their watch posts, and others before their own houses."

Census of the Province. 4 Now the city was quite wide and spacious, but its population was small, and none of the houses had been rebuilt. 5 When my God had put it into my mind to gather together the nobles, the magistrates, and the common people, and to examine their family records, I came upon the family list of those who had returned in the earliest period. There I found the following written:

6*† These are the inhabitants of the province who returned from the captivity of the exiles whom Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, had carried away, and who came back to Jerusalem and Judah, each man to his own city 7 (those who returned with Zerubbabel, Jeshua, Nehemiah, Azariah, Raamiah, Naha-
mani, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mispereth, Bigvai, Nehum, and Baanah).

sons of Ater, sons of Talmon, sons of Akkub, sons of Hatita, sons of Shobai, one hundred and thirty-eight.

46 The temple slaves: sons of Ziha, sons of Hasupha, sons of Tabbaoth, 47 sons of Keros, sons of Sia, sons of Padon, 48 sons of Lebana, sons of Hagaba, sons of Shalmai, 49 sons of Hanan, sons of Giddel, sons of Gahar, 50 sons of Reaiah, sons of Rezin, sons of Nekoda, 51 sons of Gazzam, sons of Uzza, sons of Paseah, 52 sons of Besai, sons of the Meunites, sons of the Nephusites, 53 sons of Bakbuk, sons of Hakupha, sons of Harhur, 54 sons of Bazlith, sons of Mehida, sons of Harsha, 55 sons of Barkos, sons of Sisera, sons of Temah, 56 sons of Neziah, sons of Hatipha.

61 The following who returned from Tel-melah, Tel-harsha, Cherub, Addon, and Immer were unable to prove that their ancestral houses and their descent were Israelite: 62 sons of Delaiah, sons of Tobiah, sons of Nekoda, six hundred and forty-two. 63 Also, of the priests: sons of Hobaiah, sons of Hakkoz, sons of Barzillai (he had married one of the daughters of Barzillai the Gileadite and became known by his name). 64 These men searched their family records, but their names could not be found written there; hence they were degraded from the priesthood, 65† and His Excellency ordered them not to partake of the most holy foods until there should be a priest bearing the Urim and Thummim.

66 The entire assembly taken together came to forty-two thousand three hundred and sixty, 67 not counting their male and female slaves, who were seven thousand three hundred and thirty-seven. They also had two hundred male and female singers. Their horses were seven hundred and thirty-six, their mules two hundred and forty-five, 68 their camels four hundred and thirty-five, their asses six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

69 Certain of the family heads contributed to the service. His Excellency put into the treasury one thousand drachmas of gold, fifty basins, thirty garments for priests, and five hundred minas of silver. 70 Some of the family heads contributed to the treasury for the temple service: twenty thousand drachmas of gold and two thousand two hundred minas of silver. 71 The contributions of the rest of the people amounted to twenty thousand drachmas of gold, two thousand minas of silver, and sixty-seven garments for priests.

72† The priests, the Levites, the gatekeepers, the singers, the temple slaves, and all Israel took up residence in their cities.

II: PROMULGATION OF THE LAW

Ezra Reads the Law. 1* Now when the seventh month came, the whole people gathered as one man in the open space before the Water Gate, and they called upon Ezra the scribe to bring forth the book of the law of Moses which the LORD prescribed for Israel. 2 On the first day of the seventh month, therefore, Ezra the priest brought the law before the assembly, which consisted of men, women, and those children old enough to understand. 3 Standing at one end of the open place that was before the Water Gate, he read out of the book from daybreak till midday, in the presence of the men, the women, and those children old enough to understand; and all the people listened attentively to the book of the law. 4 Ezra the scribe stood on a wooden platform that had been made for the occasion; at his right side stood Mattithiah, Shema, Anaiah, Uriah, Hilkiah, and Maaseiah, and on his left Pedaiah, Mishael, Malchijah, Hashum, Hashbaddanah, Zechariah, Meshullam. 5 Ezra opened the scroll so that all the people might see it (for he was standing higher up than any of the people); and, as he opened it, all the people rose. 6 Ezra blessed the LORD, the great God, and all the people, their hands raised high, answered, "Amen, amen!" Then they bowed down and prostrated themselves before the LORD, their faces to the ground. 7* [The Levites Jeshua, Bani, Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodiah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, and Pelaiah explained the law to the people, who remained in their places.] 8* Ezra read plainly from the book of the law of God, interpreting it so that all could understand what was read. 9 Then [Nehemiah, that is, His Excellency, and] Ezra the priest-scribe [and the Levites who were instructing the people] said to all the people: "Today is holy to the LORD your God. Do not be sad, and do not weep"—for all the people were weeping as they heard the words of the law. 10* He said further: "Go, eat rich foods and drink sweet drinks, and allot portions to those who had nothing prepared; for today is holy to our LORD. Do not be saddened this day, for rejoicing in the LORD must be your strength!" 11 [And the Levites quieted all the people, saying, "Hush, for today is holy, and you must not be saddened."] 12 Then all the people went to eat and drink, to distribute portions, and to celebrate with great joy, for they understood the words that had been expounded to them.

The Feast of Booths. 13 On the second day, the family heads of the whole people and also the priests and the Levites gathered around Ezra the scribe and examined the words of the law more closely. 14* They found it written in the law prescribed by the LORD through Moses that the Israelites must dwell in booths during the feast of the seventh month; 15* and that they should have this proclamation made throughout their cities and in Jerusalem: "Go out into the hill country and bring in branches of olive trees, oleasters, myrtle, palm, and other leafy trees, to make booths, as the law prescribes." 16 The people went out and brought in branches with which they made booths for themselves, on the roof of their houses, in their courtyards, in the courts of the house of God, and in the open spaces of the Water Gate and the Gate of Ephraim. 17 Thus the entire assembly of the returned exiles made booths and dwelt in them. Now the Israelites had done nothing of this sort from the days of Jeshua, son of Nun, until this occasion; therefore there was very great joy. 18 Ezra read from the book of the law of God day after day, from the first day to the last. They kept the feast for seven days, and the solemn assembly on the eighth day, as was required.

Confession of the People. 1*† On the twenty-fourth day of this month, the Israelites gathered together fasting and in sackcloth, their heads covered with dust. 2* Those of Israelite descent separated themselves from all who were of foreign extraction, then stood forward and confessed their sins and the guilty deeds of their fathers. 3 When they had taken their places, they read from the book of the law of the LORD their God, for a fourth part of the day, and during another fourth part they made their confession and prostrated themselves before the LORD their God. 4 Standing on the platform of the Levites were Jeshua, Binnui, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, who cried out to the LORD their God, with a loud voice. 5* The Levites Jeshua, Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabneiah, Sherebiah, Hodiah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah said,

"Arise, bless the LORD, your God,
from eternity to eternity!"

The Israelites answered with the blessing,

"Blessed is your glorious name,
and exalted above all blessing and praise."

6† Then Ezra said: "It is you, O LORD, you are the only one; you made the heavens, the highest heavens and all their host, the earth and all that is upon it, the seas and all that is in them. To all of them you give life, and the heavenly hosts bow down before you.

7* "You, O LORD, are the God who chose Abram, who brought him out from Ur of the Chaldees, and named him Abraham. 8* When you had found his heart faithful in your sight, you made the covenant with him to give to him and his posterity the land of the Canaanites, Hittites, Amorites, Perizzites, Jebusites, and Girgashites. These promises of yours you fulfilled, for you are just.

9* "You saw the affliction of our fathers in Egypt,
you heard their cry by the Red Sea;
10* You worked signs and wonders against Pharaoh,
against all his servants and the people of his land,
Because you knew of their insolence toward them;
thus you made for yourself a name even to this day.
11* The sea you divided before them,
on dry ground they passed through the midst of the sea;
Their pursuers you hurled into the depths,
like a stone into the mighty waters.
12* With a column of cloud you led them by day,
and by night with a column of fire,

To light the way of their journey,
the way in which they must travel.
13* On Mount Sinai you came down,
you spoke with them from heaven;
You gave them just ordinances, firm laws,
good statutes, and commandments;
14* Your holy sabbath you made known to them,
commandments, statutes, and law you prescribed for them,
by the hand of Moses your servant.
15* Food from heaven you gave them in their hunger,
water from a rock you sent them in their thirst.
You bade them enter and occupy the land which you had sworn with upraised hand to give them.

16 "But they, our fathers, proved to be insolent; they held their necks stiff and would not obey your commandments. 17* They refused to obey and no longer remembered the miracles you had worked for them. They stiffened their necks and turned their heads to return to their slavery in Egypt. But you are a God of pardons, gracious and compassionate, slow to anger and rich in mercy; you did not forsake them. 18* Though they made for themselves a molten calf, and proclaimed, 'Here is your God who brought you up out of Egypt,' and were guilty of great effronteries, 19 yet in your great mercy you did not forsake them in the desert. The column of cloud did not cease to lead them by day on their journey, nor did the column of fire by night cease to light for them the way by which they were to travel.

20* "Your good spirit you bestowed on them, to give them understanding; your manna you did not withhold from their mouths, and you gave them water in their thirst. 21* Forty years in the desert you sustained them: they did not want; their garments did not become worn, and their feet did not become swollen. 22* You gave them kingdoms and peoples, which you divided up among them as border lands. They possessed the land of Sihon, king of Heshbon, and the land of Og, king of Bashan.

23* "You made their children as numerous as the stars of the heavens, and you brought them into the land which you had commanded their fathers to enter and possess. 24 The sons went in to take possession of the land, and you humbled before them the Canaanite inhabitants of the land and delivered them over into their power, their kings as well as the peoples of the land, to do with them as they would. 25* They captured fortified cities and fertile land; they took possession of houses filled with all good things, cisterns already dug, vineyards, olive groves, and fruit trees in abundance. They could eat and have their fill, fatten and feast themselves on your immense good gifts.

26* "But they were contemptuous and rebellious: they cast your law behind their backs, they slew your prophets who bore witness against them in order to bring them back to you, and they were guilty of great effronteries. 27* Therefore you delivered them into the power of their enemies, who oppressed them. But in the time of their oppression they would cry out to you, and you would hear them from heaven, and according to your great mercy give them saviors to deliver them from the power of their enemies.

28 "As soon as they had relief, they would go back to doing evil in your sight. Then again you abandoned them to the power of their enemies, who crushed them. Then they cried out to you, and you heard them from heaven and delivered them according to your mercy, many times over. 29* You bore witness against them, in order to bring them back to your law. But they were insolent and would not obey your commandments; they sinned against your ordinances, from which men draw life when they practice them. They turned stubborn backs, stiffened their necks, and would not obey. 30 You were patient with them for many years, bearing witness against them through your spirit, by means of your prophets; still they would not listen. Thus you delivered them over into the power of the peoples of the lands. 31 Yet in your great mercy you did not completely destroy them and you did not forsake them, for you are a kind and merciful God.

32* "Now, therefore, O our God, great, mighty, and awesome God, you who in your mercy preserve the covenant, take into account all the disasters that have befallen us, our kings, our princes, our priests, our prophets, our fathers, and your entire people, from the time of the kings of Assyria until this day! 33* In all that has come upon us you have been just, for you kept faith while we have done evil. 34 Yes, our kings, our princes, our priests, and our fathers have not kept your law; they paid no attention to your commandments and the obligations of which you reminded them. 35 While they were yet in their kingdom, in the midst of the many good things that you had given them and in the wide and fertile land that you had spread out before them, they did not serve you nor did they turn away from their evil deeds. 36 But, see, we today are slaves; and as for the land which you gave our fathers that they might eat its fruits and good things—see, we have become slaves upon it! 37 Its rich produce goes to the kings whom you set over us because of our sins, who rule over our bodies and our cattle as they please. We are in great distress!"

CHAPTER 10

Agreement of the People. 1*† In view of all this, we are entering into a firm pact, which we are putting into writing. On the sealed document appear the names of our princes, our Levites, and our priests.

2 On the sealed document: His Excellency Nehemiah, son of Hacaliah, and Zedekiah.

3 Seraiah, Azariah, Jeremiah, 4 Pashhur, Amariah, Malchijah, 5 Hattush, Shebaniah, Malluch, 6 Harim, Meremoth, Obadiah, 7 Daniel, Ginnethon, Baruch, 8 Meshullam, Abijah, Mijamin, 9 Maaziah, Bilgai, Shemaiah: these are the priests.

10 The Levites: Jeshua, son of Azaniah; Binnui, of the sons of Henadad; Kadmiel; 11* and their brethren Shebaniah, Hodiah, Kelita, Pelaiah, Hanan, 12 Mica, Rehob, Hashabiah, 13 Zaccur, Sherebiah, Shebaniah, 14 Hodiah, Bani, Beninu.

15 The leaders of the people: Parosh, Pahath-moab, Elam, Zattu, Bani, 16 Bunni, Azgad, Bebai, 17 Adonijah, Bigvai, Adin, 18 Ater, Hezekiah, Azzur, 19 Hodiah, Hashum, Bezai, 20 Hariph, Anathoth, Nebai, 21 Magpiash, Meshullam, Hezir, 22 Meshezabel, Zadok, Jaddua, 23 Pelatiah, Hanan, Anaiah, 24 Hoshea, Hananiah, Hasshub, 25 Hallohesh, Pilha, Shobek, 26 Rehum, Hashabnah, Maaseiah, 27 Ahiah, Hanan, Anan, 28 Malluch, Harim, Baanah.

Provisions of the Pact. 29 The rest of the people, priests, Levites, gatekeepers, singers, temple slaves, and all others who have separated themselves from the peoples of the lands in favor of the law of God, with their wives, their sons, their daughters, all who are of the age of discretion, 30* join with their brethren who are their princes, and with the sanction of a curse take this oath to follow the law of God which was given through Moses, the servant of God, and to observe carefully all the commandments of the LORD, our LORD, his ordinances and his statutes.

31* Agreed, that we will not marry our daughters to the peoples of the land, and that we will not take their daughters for our sons.

32* When the peoples of the land bring in merchandise or any kind of grain for sale on the sabbath day, we will not buy from them on the sabbath or on any other holyday. We will forgo the seventh year, as well as every kind of debt.

33* We impose these commandments on ourselves: to give a third of a shekel each year for the service of the house of our God, 34 for the showbread, for the daily cereal offering, for the daily holocaust, for the sabbaths, new moons, and festivals, for the holy offerings, for sin offerings to make atonement for Israel, and for every service of the house of our God. 35* We, priests, Levites, and people, have determined by lot concerning the procurement of wood: it is to be brought to the house of our God by each of our family houses at stated times each year, to be burnt on the altar of the LORD, our God, as the law prescribes. 36* We have agreed to bring each year to the house of the LORD the first fruits of our fields and of our fruit trees, of whatever kind; 37 also, as is prescribed in the law, to bring to the house of our God, to the priests who serve in the house of our God, the first-born of our children and our animals, including the first-born of our flocks and herds. 38* The first batch of our dough, and our offerings of the fruit of every tree, of wine and of oil, we will bring to the priests, to the chambers of the house of our God. The tithe of our fields we will bring to the Levites; they, the Levites, shall take the tithe in all the cities of our service. 39 An Aaronite priest shall be with the Levites when they take the tithe, and the Levites shall bring the tithe of the tithes to the house of our God, to the chambers of the treasury. 40 For to these chambers the Israelites and Levites bring the offerings of grain, wine, and oil; there also are housed the utensils of the sanctuary, and

Repeopling of Jerusalem. 1*† The leaders of the people took up residence in Jerusalem, and the rest of the people cast lots to bring one man in ten to reside in Jerusalem, the holy city, while the other nine would remain in the other cities. 2 The people applauded all those men who willingly agreed to take up residence in Jerusalem.

The Residents of Jerusalem. 3* These are the heads of the province who took up residence in Jerusalem. (In the cities of Judah dwelt lay Israelites, priests, Levites, temple slaves, and the descendants of the slaves of Solomon, each man on the property he owned in his own city.)

4 In Jerusalem dwelt both Judahites and Benjaminites. Of the Judahites: Athaiah, son of Uzziah, son of Zechariah, son of Amariah, son of Shephatiah, son of Mehallalel, of the sons of Perez; 5 Maaseiah, son of Baruch, son of Colhozeh, son of Hazaiah, son of Adaiah, son of Joiarib, son of Zechariah, a son of the Shelanites. 6 The total of the sons of Perez who dwelt in Jerusalem was four hundred and sixty-eight valiant men.

7 These were the Benjaminites: Sallu, son of Meshullam, son of Joed, son of Pedaiah, son of Kolaiah, son of Maaseiah, son of Ithiel, son of Jeshaiah, 8 and his brethren, warriors, nine hundred and twenty-eight in number. 9 Joel, son of Zichri, was their commander, and Judah, son of Hassenuah, was second in charge of the city.

10 Among the priests were: Jedaiah; Joiarib; Jachin; 11 Seraiah, son of Hilkiah, son of Meshullam, son of Zadok, son of Meraioth, son of Ahitub, the ruler of the house of God, 12 and their brethren who carried out the temple service, eight hundred and twenty-two; Adaiah, son of Jeroham, son of Pelaliah, son of Amzi, son of Zechariah, son of Pashhur, son of Malchijah, 13 and his brethren, family heads, two hundred and forty-two; and Amasai, son of Azarel, son of Ahzai, son of Meshillemoth, son of Immer, 14 and his brethren, warriors, one hundred and twenty-eight. Their commander was Zabdiel, son of Haggadol.

15 Among the Levites were Shemaiah, son of Hasshub, son of Azrikam, son of Hashabiah, son of Bunni; 16 Shabbethai and Jozabad, levitical chiefs who were placed over the external affairs of the house of God; 17 Mattaniah, son of Micah, son of Zabdi, son of Asaph, director of the psalms, who led the thanksgiving at prayer; Bakbukiah, second in rank among his brethren; and Abda, son of Shammua, son of Galal, son of Jeduthun. 18 The total of the Levites in the holy city was two hundred and eighty-four.

19 The gatekeepers were Akkub, Talmon, and their brethren, who kept watch over the gates; one hundred and seventy-two in number.

20 The rest of Israel, including priests and Levites, were in all the other cities of Judah, each man in his inheritance.

21 The temple slaves lived on Ophel. Ziha and Gishpa were in charge of the temple slaves.

22* The prefect of the Levites in Jerusalem was Uzzi, son of Bani, son of Hashabiah, son of Mattaniah, son of Micah; he was one of the sons of Asaph, the singers appointed to the service of the house of God—23 for they had been appointed by royal decree, and there was a fixed schedule for the singers assigning them their daily duties.

24 Pethahiah, son of Meshezabel, a descendant of Zerah, son of Judah, was royal deputy in all affairs that concerned the people.

The Other Cities. 25 As concerns their villages in the country: Judahites lived in Kiriath-arba and its dependencies, in Dibon and its dependencies, in Jekabzeel and its villages, 26 in Jeshua, Moladah, Beth-pelet, 27 in Hazarshual, in Beer-sheba and its dependencies, 28 in Ziklag, in Meconah and its dependencies, 29 in En-rimmon, Zorah, Jarmuth, 30 Zanoah, Adullam, and their villages, Lachish and its countryside, Azekah and its dependencies. They were settled from Beer-sheba to Ge-hinnom.

31 Benjaminites were in Geba, Michmash, Aija, Bethel and its dependencies, 32 Anathoth, Nob, Ananiah, 33 Hazor, Ramah, Gittaim, 34 Hadid, Zeboim, Neballat, 35 Lod, Ono, and the Valley of the Artisans.

36 Some sections of the Levites from Judah settled in Benjamin.

Priests and Levites under Zerubbabel. 1* The following are the priests and Levites who returned with Zerubbabel, son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua: Seraiah, Jeremiah, Ezra, 2 Amariah, Malluch, Hattush, 3 Shecaniah, Rehum, Meremoth, 4 Iddo, Ginnethon, Abijah, 5 Mijamin, Maadiah, Bilgah, [6] Shemaiah, and Joiarib, Jedaiah, [7] Sallu, Amok, Hilkiah, Jedaiah. These were the priestly heads and their brethren in the days of Jeshua.

[8] The Levites were Jeshua, Binnui, Kadmiel, Sherebiah, Judah, Mattaniah; the last-mentioned, together with his brethren, was in charge of the hymns, [9] while Bakbukiah and Unno and their brethren ministered opposite them by turns.

High Priests. [10]† Jeshua became the father of Joiakim, Joiakim became the father of Eliashib, and Eliashib became the father of Joiada. [11] Joiada became the father of Johanan, and Johanan became the father of Jaddua.

Priests and Levites under Joiakim. [12]* In the days of Joiakim these were the priestly family heads: for Seraiah, Meraiah; for Jeremiah, Hananiah; [13] for Ezra, Meshullam; for Amariah, Jehohanan; [14] for Malluchi, Jonathan; for Shebaniah, Joseph; [15] for Harim, Adna; for Meremoth, Helkai; [16] for Iddo, Zechariah; for Ginnethon, Meshullam; [17] for Abijah, Zichri; for Miamin, . . . ; for Maadiah, Piltai; [18] for Bilgah, Shammua; for Shemaiah, Jehonathan; [19] and for Joiarib, Mattenai; for Jedaiah, Uzzi; [20] for Sallu, Kallai; for Amok, Eber; [21] for Hilkiah, Hashabiah; for Jedaiah, Nethanel.

[22] In the time of Eliashib, Joiada, Johanan, and Jaddua, the family heads of the priests were written down in the Book of Chronicles, up until the reign of Darius the Persian. [23] The sons of Levi: the family heads were written down in the Book of Chronicles, up until the time of Johanan, the son of Eliashib.

[24]* The heads of the Levites were Hashabiah, Sherebiah, Jeshua, Binnui, Kadmiel. Their brethren who stood opposite them to sing praises and thanksgiving in fulfillment of the command of David, the man of God, one section opposite the other, [25]* were Mattaniah, Bakbukiah, Obadiah.

Meshullam, Talmon, and Akkub were gatekeepers. They kept watch over the storerooms at the gates.

[26] All these lived in the time of Joiakim, son of Jeshua, son of Jozadak [and in the time of Nehemiah the governor and of Ezra the priest-scribe].

Dedication of the City Wall. [27]† At the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem, the Levites were sought out wherever they lived and were brought to Jerusalem to celebrate a joyful dedication with thanksgiving hymns and the music of cymbals, harps, and lyres. [28] The levitical singers gathered together from the region about Jerusalem, from the villages of the Netophathites, [29] from Bethgilgal, and from the plains of Geba and Azmaveth (for the singers had built themselves settlements about Jerusalem). [30] The priests and Levites first purified themselves, then they purified the people, the gates, and the wall.

[31] I had the princes of Judah mount the wall, and I arranged two great choirs. The first of these proceeded to the right, along the top of the wall, in the direction of the Dung Gate, [32] followed by Hoshaiah and half the princes of Judah, [33] along with Azariah, Ezra, Meshullam, [34] Judah, Benjamin, Shemaiah, and Jeremiah, [35] priests with the trumpets, and also Zechariah, son of Jonathan, son of Shemaiah, son of Mattaniah, son of Micaiah, son of Zaccur, son of Asaph, [36] and his brethren Shemaiah, Azarel, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nethanel, Judah, and Hanani, with the musical instruments of David, the man of God. [Ezra the scribe was at their head.] [37] At the Spring Gate they went straight up by the steps of the City of David and continued along the top of the wall above the house of David until they came to the Water Gate on the east.

[38] The second choir proceeded to the left, followed by myself and the other half of the princes of the people, along the top of the wall past the Oven Tower as far as the Broad Wall, [39] then past the Ephraim Gate [the New City Gate], the Fish Gate, the Tower of Hananel, and the Hundred Tower, as far as the Sheep Gate [and they came to a halt at the Prison Gate].

[40] The two choirs took up a position in the house of God; I, too, who had with me half the magistrates, [41] the priests Eliakim, Maaseiah, Minjamin, Micaiah, Elioenai, Zechariah, Hananiah, with the trumpets, [42] and Maaseiah, Shemaiah, Eleazar, Uzzi, Jehohanan, Malchijah, Elam, and Ezer. The singers were heard under the leadership of Jezrahiah. [43] Great sacrifices were offered on that day, and there was rejoicing over the great feast of the LORD in which they shared. The women and the children

Eliashib, in turn, was the grandfather of Johanan, a grown man, if not yet a high priest, at the time of Ezra, i.e., c. 400 B.C. (Ezr 10, 6; and note). According to Josephus (Antiquites xi, v), whose testimony here is doubtful, Jaddua, son of Johanan, died as an old man about the time that Alexander the Great died, i.e., 323 B.C. If this list of the postexilic high priests, at least as far as Johanan, comes, as seems probable (cf v 23), from the Chronicler himself and not from a later scribe, it is of prime importance for dating the Chronicler's work in the first decades of the fourth century B.C.

Offerings for Priests and Levites. [44]† At that time men were appointed over the chambers set aside for stores, offerings, first fruits, and tithes; in them they were to collect from the fields of the various cities the portions legally assigned to the priests and Levites. For Judah rejoiced in its appointed priests and Levites [45] who carried out the ministry of their God and the ministry of purification (as did the singers and the gatekeepers) in accordance with the prescriptions of David and of Solomon, his son. [46] For the heads of the families of the singers and the hymns of praise and thanksgiving to God came down from the days of David and Asaph in times of old. [47]* Thus all Israel, in the days of Zerubbabel [and in the days of Nehemiah], gave the singers and the gatekeepers their portions, according to their daily needs. They made their consecrated offering to the Levites, and the Levites made theirs to the sons of Aaron.

Separation from Aliens. [1]† At that time, when there was reading from the book of Moses in the hearing of the people, it was found written there that "no Ammonite or Moabite may ever be admitted into the assembly of God; [2] for they would not succor the Israelites with food and water, but they hired Balaam to curse them, though our God turned the curse into a blessing." [3]* When they had heard the law, they separated from Israel every foreign element.

Reform in the Temple. [4]† Before this, the priest Eliashib, who had been placed in charge of the chambers of the house of our God and who was an associate of Tobiah, [5]* had set aside for the latter's use a large chamber in which had previously been stored the cereal offerings, incense and utensils, the tithes in grain, wine, and oil allotted to the Levites, singers, and gatekeepers, and the offerings due the priests. [6]† During all this time I had not been in Jerusalem, for in the thirty-second year of Artaxerxes, king of Babylon, I had gone back to the king. After due time, however, I asked leave of the king [7] and returned to Jerusalem, where I discovered the evil thing that Eliashib had done for Tobiah, in setting aside for him a chamber in the courts of the house of God. [8] This displeased me very much, and I had all of Tobiah's household goods thrown outside the chamber. [9] Then I gave orders to purify the chambers, and I had them replace there the utensils of the house of God, the cereal offerings, and the incense.

[10] I learned, too, that the portions due the Levites were no longer being given, so that the Levites and the singers who should have been carrying out the services had deserted, each man to his own field. [11] I took the magistrates to task, demanding, "Why is the house of God abandoned?" Then I brought the Levites together and had them resume their stations. [12]* All Judah once more brought in the tithes of grain, wine, and oil to the storerooms; [13] and in charge of the storerooms I appointed the priest Shelemiah, Zadok the scribe, and Pedaiah, one of the Levites, together with Hanan, son of Zaccur, son of Mattaniah, as their assistant; for these men were held to be trustworthy. It was their duty to make the distribution to their brethren. [14] Remember this to my credit, O my God! Let not the devotion which I showed for the house of my God and its services be forgotten!

Sabbath Observance. [15]* In those days I perceived that men in Judah were treading the winepresses on the sabbath; that they were bringing in sheaves of grain, loading them on their asses, together with wine, grapes, figs, and every other kind of burden, and bringing them to Jerusalem on the sabbath day. I warned them to sell none of these victuals. [16] In Jerusalem itself the Tyrians who were resident there were importing fish and every other kind of merchandise and selling it to the Judahites on the sabbath. [17] I took the nobles of Judah to task, demanding of them: "What is this evil thing that you are doing, profaning the sabbath day? [18] Did not your fathers act in this same way, with the result that our God has brought all this evil upon us and upon this city? Would you add to the wrath against Israel by once more profaning the sabbath?"

12, 44-47: This account of the provisions made for the temple services is apparently a composition of the Chronicler. At that time: a mere connective; no particular time is meant, but the account fits best after that of the restoration of the temple (Ezr 6, 13-18) in the days of Zerubbabel (v 47). The gloss mentioning Nehemiah is not in the ancient Greek version.

13, 1ff: These verses were composed by the Chronicler to serve as an introduction to the reforms that Nehemiah instituted during his second mission in Jerusalem (vv 4-31). The part of the book of Moses read to the people is freely quoted here from Dt 23, 3-6.

13, 4-31: This is part of the "Memoirs of Nehemiah"; it is continued in 10, 1-40.

13, 6: After due time: It is not known when Nehemiah returned to Jerusalem or how long his second period of activity there lasted, but it probably ended before Ezra came to Palestine; see note on Ezr 7, 1-8.

19 When the shadows were falling on the gates of Jerusalem before the sabbath, I ordered the doors to be closed and forbade them to be reopened till after the sabbath. I posted some of my own men at the gates so that no burden might enter on the sabbath day. 20 The merchants and sellers of various kinds of merchandise spent the night once or twice outside Jerusalem, 21 but then I warned them, saying to them: "Why do you spend the night alongside the wall?
If you keep this up, I will lay hands on you!" From that time on, they did not return on the sabbath. 22 Then I ordered the Levites to purify themselves and to go and watch the gates, so that the sabbath day might be kept holy. This, too, remember in my favor, O my God, and have mercy on me in accordance with your great mercy!

Mixed Marriages. 23* Also in those days I saw Jews who had married Ashdodite, Ammonite, or Moabite wives.
24† Of their children, half spoke Ashdodite, and none of them knew how to speak Jewish; and so it was in regard to the languages of the various other peoples. 25 I took them to task and cursed them; I had some of them beaten and their hair pulled out; and I adjured them by God: "You shall not marry your daughters to their sons nor take any of their daughters for your sons or for yourselves! 26* Did not Solomon, the king of Israel, sin because of them?
Though among the many nations there was no king like him, and though he was beloved of his God and God had made him king over all Israel, yet even he was made to sin by foreign women. 27 Must it also be heard of you that you have done this same very great evil, betraying our God by marrying foreign women?"

28* One of the sons of Joiada, son of Eliashib the high priest, was the son-in-law of Sanballat the Horonite! I drove him from my presence. 29 Remember against them, O my God, how they defiled the priesthood and the covenant of the priesthood and the Levites!

30 Thus I cleansed them of all foreign contamination. I established the various functions for the priests and Levites, so that each had his appointed task. 31* I also provided for the procurement of wood at stated times and for the first fruits. Remember this in my favor, O my God!

The Book of

TOBIT

The Book of Tobit, named after its principal hero, combines specifically Jewish piety and morality with oriental folklore in a fascinating story that has enjoyed wide popularity in both Jewish and Christian circles. Prayers, psalms, and words of wisdom, as well as the skillfully constructed story itself, provide valuable insights into the faith and the religious milieu of its unknown author. The book was probably written early in the second century B.C.; it is not known where.

Tobit, a devout and wealthy Israelite living among the captives deported to Nineveh from the northern kingdom of Israel in 721 B.C., suffers severe reverses and is finally blinded. Because of his misfortunes he begs the Lord to let him die. But recalling the large sum he had formerly deposited in far-off Media, he sends his son Tobiah there to bring back the money. In Media, at this same time, a young woman, Sarah, also prays for death, because she has lost seven husbands, each killed in turn on his wedding night by the demon Asmodeus. God hears the prayers of Tobit and Sarah, and sends the angel Raphael in disguise to aid them both.

Raphael makes the trip to Media with Tobiah. When Tobiah is attacked by a large fish as he bathes, Raphael orders him to seize it and to remove its gall, heart, and liver because they make "useful medicines." Later, at Raphael's urging, Tobiah marries Sarah, and uses the the fish's heart and liver to drive Asmodeus from the bridal chamber. Returning to Nineveh with his wife and his father's money, Tobiah rubs the fish's gall into his father's eyes and cures them. Finally, Raphael reveals his true identity and returns to heaven. Tobit then utters his beautiful hymn of praise. Before dying, Tobit tells his son to leave Nineveh because God will destrov that wicked city. After Tobiah buries his father and mother, he and his family depart for Media, where he later learns that the destruction of Nineveh has taken place.

The inspired author of the book used the literary form of religious novel (as in Jonah and Judith) for the purpose of instruction and edification. There may have been a historical nucleus around which the story was composed, but this possibility has nothing to do with the teaching of the book. The seemingly historical data—names of kings, cities, etc.—are used merely as vivid details to create interest and charm.

Although the Book of Tobit is usually listed with the historical books, it more correctly stands midway between them and the wisdom literature. It contains numerous maxims like those found in the wisdom books (cf 4, 3-19.21; 12, 6-10; 14, 7.9) as well as the customary sapiential themes: fidelity to the law, the intercessory function of angels, piety toward parents, the purity of marriage, reverence for the dead, and the value of almsgiving, prayer, and fasting. The book makes Tobit a relative of Ahiqar, a hero of ancient Near Eastern folklore.

Written in Aramaic, the original of the book was lost for centuries. The Greek translation, existing in three different recensions, is our primary source. In 1955, fragments of the book in Aramaic and in Hebrew were recovered from Cave IV at Qumran. These texts are in substantial agreement with the Greek recension that has served as the basis for the present translation.

The divisions of the Book of Tobit are:

VII: Epilogue (14, 1-15)

CHAPTER 1

Tobit. 1† This book tells the story of Tobit, son of Tobiel, son of Hananiel, son of Aduel, son of Gabael of the family of Asiel, of the tribe of Naphtali, 2*† who during the reign of Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, was taken captive from Thisbe, which is south of Kedesh Naphtali in upper Galilee, above and to the west of Asser, north of Phogor.

I: TOBIT'S ORDEALS

His Virtue. 3 I, Tobit, have walked all the days of my life on the paths of truth and righteousness. I performed many charitable works for my kinsmen and my people who had been deported with me to Nineveh, in Assyria. 4 When I lived as a young man in my own country, Israel, the entire tribe of my forefather Naphtali had broken away from the house of David and from Jerusalem. This city had been singled out of all Israel's tribes, so that they all might offer sacrifice in the place where the temple, God's dwelling, had been built and consecrated for all generations to come. 5*† All my kinsmen, like the rest of the tribe of my forefather Naphtali, used to offer sacrifice on all the mountains of Galilee as well as to the young bull which Jeroboam, king of Israel, had made in Dan.

6*† I, for my part, would often make the pilgrimage alone to Jerusalem for the festivals, as is prescribed for all Israel by perpetual decree. Bringing with me the first fruits of the field and the firstlings of the flock, together with a tenth of my income and the first shearings of the sheep, I would hasten to Jerusalem 7* and present them to the priests, Aaron's sons, at the altar. To the Levites who were doing service in Jeusalem I would give the tithe of grain, wine, olive oil, pomegranates, figs, and other fruits. And except for sabbatical years, I used to give a second tithe in money, which each year I would go and disburse in Jerusalem. 8 The third tithe I gave to orphans and widows, and to converts who were living with the Israelites. Every third year I would bring them this offering, and we ate it in keeping with the decree of the Mosaic law and the commands of Deborah, the mother of my father Tobiel; for when my father died, he left me an orphan.

9 When I reached manhood, I married Anna, a woman of our own lineage. By her I had a son whom I named Tobiah. 10* Now, after I had been deported to Nineveh, all my brothers and relatives ate the food of heathens, 11 but I refrained from eating that kind of food. 12 Because of this wholehearted service of God, 13* the Most High granted me favor and status with Shalmaneser, so that I became purchasing agent for all his needs. 14† Every now and then until his death I would go to Media to buy goods for him. I also deposited several pouches containing a great sum of money with my kinsman Gabael, son of Gabri, who lived at Rages, in Media. 15† But when Shalmaneser died and his son Sennacherib succeeded him as king, the roads to Media became unsafe, so I could no longer go there.

Courage in Burying the Dead. 16 During Shalmaneser's reign I performed many charitable works for my kinsmen and my people. 17*† I would give my bread to the hungry and my clothing to the naked. If I saw one of my people who had died and been thrown outside the walls of Nineveh, I would bury him. 18 I also buried anyone whom Sennacherib slew when he returned as a fugitive from Judea during the days of judgment decreed against him by the heavenly King because of the blasphemies he had uttered. In his rage he killed many Israelites, but I used to take their bodies by stealth and bury them; so when Sennacherib looked for them, he could not find them. 19 But a certain citizen of Nineveh informed the king that it was I who buried the dead. When I found out that the king knew all about me and wanted to put me to death, I went into hiding; then in my fear I took to flight. [20] Afterward, all my property was confiscated; I was left with nothing. All that I had was taken to the king's palace, except for my wife Anna and my son Tobiah.

1, 5: Jeroboam established sanctuaries in Dan and Bethel so that the people would no longer go to Jerusalem for the festivals. The gold statues of bulls which he placed in the sanctuaries were considered the throne of Yahweh; but the people soon came to worship the images themselves. Jeroboam also encouraged the high places or hilltop shrines (1 Kgs 12, 26-33).

[21]*† But less than forty days later the king was assassinated by two of his sons, who then escaped into the mountains of Ararat. His son Esarhaddon, who succeeded him as king, placed Ahiqar, my brother Anael's son, in charge of all the accounts of his kingdom, so that he took control over the entire administration. [22] Then Ahiqar interceded on my behalf, and I was able to return to Nineveh. For under Sennacherib, king of Assyria, Ahiqar had been chief cupbearer, keeper of the seal, administrator, and treasurer; and Esarhaddon reappointed him. He was a close relative—in fact, my nephew.

[1]*† Thus under King Esarhaddon I returned to my home, and my wife Anna and my son Tobiah were restored to me. Then on our festival of Pentecost, the feast of Weeks, a fine dinner was prepared for me, and I reclined to eat. [2]† The table was set for me, and when many different dishes were placed before me, I said to my son Tobiah: "My son, go out and try to find a poor man from among our kinsmen exiled here in Nineveh. If he is a sincere worshiper of God, bring him back with you, so that he can share this meal with me. Indeed, son, I shall wait for you to come back."

[3] Tobiah went out to look for some poor kinsman of ours. When he returned he exclaimed, "Father!" I said to him, "What is it, son?" He answered, "Father, one of our people has been murdered! His body lies in the market place where he was just strangled!" [4] I sprang to my feet, leaving the dinner untouched; and I carried the dead man from the street and put him in one of the rooms, so that I might bury him after sunset. [5]† Returning to my own quarters, I washed myself and ate my food in sorrow. [6] I was reminded of the oracle pronounced by the prophet Amos against Bethel:

> "Your festivals shall be turned into mourning,
> And all your songs into lamentation."

[7] And I wept. Then at sunset I went out, dug a grave, and buried him.

[8] The neighbors mocked me, saying to one another: "Will this man never learn! Once before he was hunted down for execution because of this very thing; yet now that he has escaped, here he is again burying the dead!"

Tobit's Blindness. [9] That same night I bathed, and went to sleep next to the wall of my courtyard. Because of the heat I left my face uncovered. [10]† I did not know there were birds perched on the wall above me, till their warm droppings settled in my eyes, causing cataracts. I went to see some doctors for a cure, but the more they anointed my eyes with various salves, the worse the cataracts became, until I could see no more. For four years I was deprived of eyesight, and all my kinsmen were grieved at my condition. Ahiqar, however, took care of me for two years, until he left for Elymais.

[11] At that time my wife Anna worked for hire at weaving cloth, the kind of work women do. [12]† When she sent back the goods to their owners, they would pay her. Late in winter she finished the cloth and sent it back to the owners. They paid her the full salary, and also gave her a young goat for the table. [13] On entering my house the goat began to bleat. I called to my wife and said: "Where did this goat come from? Perhaps it was stolen! Give it back to its owners; we have no right to eat stolen food!" [14]*† But she said to me, "It was given to me as a bonus over and above my wages." Yet I would not believe her, and told her to give it back to its owners. I became very angry with her over this.

1 Grief-stricken in spirit, I groaned and wept aloud. Then with sobs I began to pray:

Tobit's Prayer for Death

2* "You are righteous, O Lord,
and all your deeds are just;
All your ways are mercy and truth;
you are the judge of the world.
3* And now, O Lord, may you be mindful of me,
and look with favor upon me.
Punish me not for my sins,
nor for my inadvertent offenses,
nor for those of my fathers.

"They sinned against you,
4* and disobeyed your commandments.
So you handed us over to plundering, exile, and death,
till we were an object lesson, a byword, a reproach
in all the nations among whom you scattered us.

5 "Yes, your judgments are many and true
in dealing with me as my sins
and those of my fathers deserve.
For we have not kept your commandments,
nor have we trodden the paths of truth before you.

6*† "So now, deal with me as you please,
and command my life breath to be taken from me,
that I may go from the face of the earth into dust.
It is better for me to die than to live,
because I have heard insulting calumnies,
and I am overwhelmed with grief.

"Lord, command me to be delivered from such anguish;
let me go to the everlasting abode;
Lord, refuse me not.
For it is better for me to die
than to endure so much misery in life,
and to hear these insults!"

II: SARAH'S PLIGHT

Sarah Falsely Accused. 7† On the same day, at Ecbatana in Media, it so happened that Raguel's daughter Sarah also had to listen to abuse, from one of her father's maids. 8† For she had been married to seven husbands, but the wicked demon Asmodeus killed them off before they could have intercourse with her, as it is prescribed for wives. So the maid said to her: "You are the one who strangles your husbands! Look at you! You have already been married seven times, but you have had no joy with any one of your husbands. 9 Why do you beat us? Because your husbands are dead? Then why not join them! May we never see a son or daughter of yours!"

10* That day she was deeply grieved in spirit. She went in tears to an upstairs room in her father's house with the intention of hanging herself. But she reconsidered, saying to herself: "No! People would level this insult against my father: 'You had only one beloved daughter, but she hanged herself because of ill fortune!' And thus would I cause my father in his old age to go down to the nether world laden with sorrow. It is far better for me not to hang myself, but to beg the Lord to have me die, so that I need no longer live to hear such insults."

11*† At that time, then, she spread out her hands, and facing the window, poured out this prayer:

Sarah's Prayer for Death

"Blessed are you, O Lord, merciful God!
Forever blessed and honored is your holy name;

† 3, 6: It is better for me to die than to live: in his distress Tobit uses the words of the petulant Jonah (Jon 4, 3.8), who wished to die because God did not destroy the hated Ninevites. In similar circumstances, Moses (Nm 11, 15), Elijah (1 Kgs 19, 4), and Job (Jb 7, 15) also prayed for death. Everlasting abode: a reference to Sheol, the dismal abode of the dead from which no one returns (Jb 7, 9-10; 14, 12; Is 26, 14). The revelation of a blessed immortality had not yet been made. See note on 4, 6.

may all your works forever bless you.
12 And now, O Lord, to you I turn my face and raise my eyes.
13 Bid me to depart from the earth,
never again to hear such insults.

14 "You know, O Master, that I am innocent of any impure act with a man, 15 And that I have never defiled my own name or my father's name in the land of my exile.

"I am my father's only daughter,
and he has no other child to make his heir,
Nor does he have a close kinsman or other relative whom I might bide my time to marry.
I have already lost seven husbands;
why then should I live any longer?
But if it please you, Lord, not to slay me,
look favorably upon me and have pity on me;
never again let me hear these insults!"

An Answer to Prayer. 16 At that very time, the prayer of these two suppliants was heard in the glorious presence of Almighty God. 17*† So Raphael was sent to heal them both: to remove the cataracts from Tobit's eyes, so that he might again see God's sunlight; and to marry Raguel's daughter Sarah to Tobit's son Tobiah, and then drive the wicked demon Asmodeus from her. For Tobiah had the right to claim her before any other who might wish to marry her.

In the very moment that Tobit returned from the courtyard to his house, Raguel's daughter Sarah came downstairs from her room.

III: TOBIAH'S JOURNEY AND MARRIAGE TO SARAH

CHAPTER 4

A Father's Instruction. 1 That same day Tobit remembered the money he had deposited with Gabael at Rages in Media, and he thought, 2 "Now that I have asked for death, why should I not call my son Tobiah and let him know about this money before I die?" 3*† So he called his son Tobiah; and when he came, he said to him: "My son, when I die, give me a decent burial. Honor your mother, and do not abandon her as long as she lives. Do whatever pleases her, and do not grieve her spirit in any way. 4 Remember, my son, that she went through many trials for your sake while you were in her womb. And when she dies, bury her in the same grave with me.

5 "Through all your days, my son, keep the Lord in mind, and suppress every desire to sin or to break his commandments. Perform good works all the days of your life, and do not tread the paths of wrongdoing. 6*† For if you are steadfast in your service, your good works will bring success, not only to you, but also to all those who live uprightly.

7 "Give alms from your possessions. Do not turn your face away from any of the poor, and God's face will not be turned away from you. 8 Son, give alms in proportion to what you own. If you have great wealth, give alms out of your abundance; if you have but little, distribute even some of that. But do not hesitate to give alms; 9* you will be storing up a goodly treasure for yourself against the day of adversity. 10 Almsgiving frees one from death, and keeps one from going into the dark abode. 11* Alms are a worthy offering in the sight of the Most High for all who give them.

12* "Be on your guard, son, against every form of immorality, and above all, marry a woman of the lineage of your forefathers. Do not marry a stranger who is not of your father's tribe, because we are sons of the prophets. My boy, keep in mind Noah, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, our fathers from of old: all of them took wives from among their own kinsmen and were blessed in their children. Remember that their posterity shall inherit the land. 13 Therefore, my son, love your kinsmen. Do not be so proudhearted toward your kinsmen, the sons and daughters of your people, as to refuse to take a wife for yourself from among them. For in such arrogance

3, 17: Tobiah had the right: according to the patriarchal custom of marriage within the family group. Tobiah was Sarah's closest eligible relative (6, 12). Cf 4, 12-13; Gn 24.

4, 3-19: A collection of maxims which parallel those in the wisdom literature, especially Prv and Sir (see Introduction): duties toward parents (3-4); cf also 14, 13; perseverance in virtue and avoidance of evil (5-6.14b); necessity and value of almsgiving and charity (7-11.16-17); marriage to a kinsman (12-13a); industry (13b); prompt payment of wages (14a); the golden rule (15a); temperance (15b); docility (18); prayer (19).

4, 6: Before the revelation of retribution for all men in the afterlife—a doctrine taught in the Book of Wisdom—Old Testament man believed that virtue guaranteed earthly prosperity, and sin earthly disaster (cf Dt 28).

there is ruin and great disorder. Likewise, in worthlessness there is decay and dire poverty, for worthlessness is the mother of famine.

14* "Do not keep with you overnight the wages of any man who works for you, but pay him immediately. If you thus behave as God's servant, you will receive your reward. Keep a close watch on yourself, my son, in everything you do, and discipline yourself in all your conduct. 15* Do to no one what you yourself dislike. Do not drink wine till you become drunk, nor let drunkenness accompany you on your way.

16* "Give to the hungry some of your bread, and to the naked some of your clothing. Whatever you have left over, give away as alms; and do not begrudge the alms you give. 17*† Be lavish with your bread and wine at the burial of the virtuous, but do not share them with sinners.

18 "Seek counsel from every wise man, and do not think lightly of any advice that can be useful. 19*† At all times bless the Lord God, and ask him to make all your paths straight and to grant success to all your endeavors and plans. For no pagan nation possesses good counsel, but the Lord himself gives all good things. If the Lord chooses, he raises a man up; but if he should decide otherwise, he casts him down to the deepest recesses of the nether world. So now, my son, keep in mind my commandments, and never let them be erased from your heart.

20 "And now, son, I wish to inform you that I have deposited a great sum of money with Gabri's son Gabael at Rages in Media. 21* Do not be discouraged, my child, because of our poverty. You will be a rich man if you fear God, avoid all sin, and do what is right before the Lord your God."

The Angel Raphael. 1 Then Tobiah replied to his father Tobit: "Everything that you have commanded me, father, I will do. 2 But how shall I be able to obtain the money from him, since he does not know me nor do I know him? What can I show him to make him recognize me and trust me, so that he will give me the money? I do not even know which roads to take for the journey into Media!" 3† Tobit answered his son Tobiah: "We exchanged signatures on a document written in duplicate; I divided it into two parts, and each of us kept one; his copy I put with the money. Think of it, twenty years have already passed since I deposited that money! So now, my son, find yourself a trustworthy man who will make the journey with you. We will, of course, give him a salary when you return; but get back that money from Gabael."

4*† Tobiah went to look for someone acquainted with the roads who would travel with him to Media. As soon as he went out, he found the angel Raphael standing before him, though he did not know that this was an angel of God. 5 Tobiah said to him, "Who are you, young man?" He replied "I am an Israelite, one of your kinsmen. I have come here to work." Tobiah said, "Do you know the way to Media?" 6† The other replied: "Yes, I have been there many times. I know the place well and I know all the routes. I have often traveled to Media; I used to stay with our kinsman Gabael, who lives at Rages in Media. It is a good two days' travel from Ecbatana to Rages, for Rages is situated at the mountains, Ecbatana out on the plateau." 7* Tobiah said to him, "Wait for me, young man, till I go back and tell my father; for I need you to make the journey with me. I will, of course, pay you." 8 Raphael replied, "Very well, I will wait for you; but do not be long."

9 Tobiah went back to tell his father Tobit what had happened. He said to him, "I have just found a man who is one of our own Israelite kinsmen!" Tobit said, "Call the man, so that I may find out what family and tribe he comes from, and whether he is trustworthy enough to travel with you, son." Tobiah went out to summon the man, saying, "Young man, my father would like to see you."

4, 17: Tobit counsels his son either to give alms in honor of the dead, or, more probably, to give the "bread of consolation" to the family of the deceased. Cf Jer 16, 7; Ez 24, 17.

4, 19: Prayer is the foundation of a moral life.

5, 3: Document: in Greek cheirographon. In the Middle Ages, notably in England, a deed and its duplicate were written on one piece of parchment, with the Latin word chirographum inscribed across the top of the sheet or between the two copies of the text. The document was then cut in two in either a straight or a wavy line, the parts being given to the persons concerned. Perhaps this procedure derived from the present verse of Tobit. Duplicate documents, usually one open and the other sealed, are well known from the ancient Near East.

5, 4: He did not know: the theme of an angel in disguise occurs frequently in folklore as well as in the Old Testament (Gn 18; cf Heb 13, 2).

5, 6: It is a good two days' travel from Ecbatana to Rages: Alexander's army took eleven days in forced marches to cover this distance, about 180 miles. The author is merely using popular impressions about faraway places; he is not teaching geography. (See notes on 1, 15; 3, 7 and Introduction.)

10† When Raphael entered the house, Tobit greeted him first. Raphael said,
"Hearty greetings to you!" Tobit replied:
"What joy is left for me any more? Here I am, a blind man who cannot see God's sunlight, but must remain in darkness,
like the dead who no longer see the light!
Though alive, I am among the dead. I can hear a man's voice, but I cannot see him." Raphael said, "Take courage! God has healing in store for you; so take courage!" Tobit then said: "My son Tobiah wants to go to Media. Can you go with him to show him the way? I will of course pay you, brother." Raphael answered: "Yes, I can go with him, for I know all the routes. I have often traveled to Media and crossed all its plains and mountains; so I know every road
well." 11 Tobit asked, "Brother, tell me, please, what family and tribe are you from?" 12* Raphael said: "Why? Do you need a tribe and a family? Or are you looking for a hired man to travel with your son?" Tobit replied, "I wish to know truthfully whose son you are, brother, and what your name is."

13† Raphael answered, "I am Azariah, son of Hananiah the elder, one of your own kinsmen." 14 Tobit exclaimed:
"Welcome! God save you, brother! Do not be provoked with me, brother, for wanting to learn the truth about your family. So it turns out that you are a kinsman, and from a noble and good line! I knew Hananiah and Nathaniah, the two sons of Shemaiah the elder; with me they used to make the pilgrimage to Jerusalem, where we would worship together. No, they did not stray from the right path; your kinsmen are good men.
You are certainly of good lineage, and welcome!"

15† Then he added: "For each day you are away I will give you the normal wages, plus expenses for you and for my son. If you go with my son, 16 I will even add a bonus to your wages!" Raphael replied: "I will go with him; have no fear.
In good health we shall leave you, and in good health we shall return to you, for the way is safe." 17 Tobit said, "God bless you, brother." Then he called his son and said to him: "My son, prepare whatever you need for the journey, and set out with your kinsman. May God in heaven protect you on the way and bring you back to me safe and sound; and may his angel accompany you for safety, my son."

Before setting out on his journey, Tobiah kissed his father and mother. Tobit said to him, "Have a safe journey." 18 But his mother began to weep. She said to Tobit: "Why have you decided to send my child away? Is he not the staff to which we cling, ever there with us in all that we do? 19 I hope more money is not your chief concern! Rather let it be a ransom for our son! 20 What the Lord has given us to live on is certainly enough for us." 21 Tobit reassured her: "Have no such thought. Our son will leave in good health and come back to us in good health. Your own eyes will see the day when he returns to you safe and sound. 22† So, no such thought; do not worry about them, my love. For a good angel will go with him, his journey will be successful, and he will return unharmed." 1 Then she stopped weeping.

CHAPTER 6

Journey to Rages. 2 When the boy left home, accompanied by the angel, the dog followed Tobiah out of the house and went with them. The travelers walked till nightfall, and made camp beside the Tigris River. 3 Now when the boy went down to wash his feet in the river, a large fish suddenly leaped out of the water and tried to swallow his foot. He shouted in alarm. 4 But the angel said to him, "Take hold of the fish and don't let it get away!"
The boy seized the fish and hauled it up on the shore. 5† The angel then told him:
"Cut the fish open and take out its gall, heart, and liver, and keep them with you; but throw away the entrails. Its gall, heart, and liver make useful medicines."
6 After the lad had cut the fish open, he put aside the gall, heart, and liver. Then he broiled and ate part of the fish; the rest he salted and kept for the journey.

Raphael's Instructions. 7 Afterward
they traveled on together till they were near Media. The boy asked the angel this question: "Brother Azariah, what medicinal value is there in the fish's heart, liver, and gall?" 8 He answered: "As regards the fish's heart and liver, if you burn them so that the smoke surrounds
a man or a woman who is afflicted by a demon or evil spirit, the affliction will leave him completely, and no demons will ever return to him again. 9 And as for the gall, if you rub it on the eyes of a man who has cataracts, blowing into his eyes right on the cataracts, his sight will be restored."

10 When they had entered Media and were getting close to Ecbatana, 11 Raphael said to the boy, "Brother Tobiah!" He answered, "Yes, what is it?" Raphael continued: "Tonight we must stay with Raguel, who is a relative of yours. He has a daughter named Sarah, 12* but no other child. Since you are Sarah's closest relative, you before all other men have the right to marry her. Also, her father's estate is rightfully yours to inherit. Now the girl is sensible, courageous, and very beautiful; and her father loves her dearly." 13† He continued: "Since you have the right to marry her, listen to me, brother. Tonight I will ask the girl's father to let us have her as your bride. When we return from Rages, we will hold the wedding feast for her. I know that Raguel cannot keep her from you or let her become engaged to another man; that would be a capital crime according to the decree in the Book of Moses, and he knows that it is your right, before all other men, to marry his daughter. So heed my words, brother; tonight we must speak for the girl, so that we may have her engaged to you. And when we return from Rages, we will take her and bring her back with us to your house."

14 Tobiah objected, however: "Brother Azariah, I have heard that this woman has already been married seven times, and that her husbands died in their bridal chambers. On the very night they approached her, they dropped dead. And I have heard it said that it was a demon who killed them. 15* So now I too am afraid of this demon. Because he loves her, he does not harm her; but he does slay any man who wishes to come close to her. I am my father's only child. If I should die, I would bring my father and mother down to their grave in sorrow over me. And they have no other son to bury them!"

16 Raphael said to him: "Do you not remember your father's orders? He commanded you to marry a woman from your own family. So now listen to me, brother; do not give another thought to this demon, but marry Sarah. I know that tonight you shall have her for your wife! 17 When you go into the bridal chamber, take the fish's liver and heart, and place them on the embers for the incense. 18† As soon as the demon smells the odor they give off, he will flee and never again show himself near her. Then when you are about to have intercourse with her, both of you first rise up to pray. Beg the Lord of heaven to show you mercy and grant you deliverance. But do not be afraid, for she was set apart for you before the world existed. You will save her, and she will go with you. And I suppose that you will have children by her, who will take the place of brothers for you. So do not worry."

When Tobiah heard Raphael say that she was his kinswoman, of his own family's lineage, he fell deeply in love with her, and his heart became set on her.

At the House of Raguel. 1 When they entered Ecbatana, Tobiah said, "Brother Azariah, lead me straight to our kinsman Raguel." So he brought him to the house of Raguel, whom they found seated by his courtyard gate. They greeted him first. He said to them, "Greetings to you too, brothers! Good health to you, and welcome!" When he brought them into his home, 2 he said to his wife Edna, "This young man looks just like my kinsman Tobit!" 3 So Edna asked them, "Who are you, brothers?" They answered, "We are of the exiles from Naphtali at Nineveh." 4 She said, "Do you know our kinsman Tobit?" They answered, "Indeed we do!" She asked, "Is he well?" 5 They answered, "Yes, he is alive and well." Then Tobiah exclaimed, "He is my father!" 6 Raguel sprang up and kissed him, shedding tears of joy. 7 But when he heard that Tobit had lost his eyesight, he was grieved and wept aloud. He said to Tobiah: "My child, God bless you! You are the son of a noble and good father. But what a terrible misfortune that such a righteous and charitable man should be afflicted with blindness!" He continued to weep in the arms of his kinsman Tobiah. 8 His wife Edna also wept for Tobit; and even their daughter Sarah began to weep.

Marriage of Tobiah and Sarah. 9 Afterward, Raguel slaughtered a ram from the flock and gave them a cordial reception. When they had bathed and reclined to eat, Tobiah said to Raphael, "Brother Azariah, ask Raguel to let me marry my kinswoman Sarah." 10 Raguel overheard the words; so he said to the boy: "Eat and drink and be merry tonight, for no man is more entitled to marry my daughter Sarah than you, brother. Besides, not even I have the right to give her to anyone but you, because you are my closest relative. But I will explain the situation to you very frankly. 11 I have given her in marriage to seven men, all of whom were kinsmen of ours, and all died on the very night they approached her. But now, son, eat and drink. I am sure the Lord will look after you both." Tobiah answered, "I will eat or drink nothing until you set aside what belongs to me."

Raguel said to him: "I will do it. She is yours according to the decree of the Book of Moses. Your marriage to her has been decided in heaven! Take your kinswoman; from now on you are her love, and she is your beloved. She is yours today and ever after. And tonight, son, may the Lord of heaven prosper you both. May he grant you mercy and peace." 12* Then Raguel called his daughter Sarah, and she came to him. He took her by the hand and gave her to Tobiah with the words: "Take her according to the law. According to the decree written in the Book of Moses she is your wife. Take her and bring her back safely to your father. And may the God of heaven grant both of you peace and prosperity." 13* He then called her mother and told her to bring a scroll, so that he might draw up a marriage contract stating that he gave Sarah to Tobiah as his wife according to the decree of the Mosaic law. Her mother brought the scroll, and he drew up the contract, to which they affixed their seals.

14 Afterward they began to eat and drink. 15 Later Raguel called his wife Edna and said, "My love, prepare the other bedroom and bring the girl there." 16 She went and made the bed in the room, as she was told, and brought the girl there. After she had cried over her, she wiped away the tears and said: 17 "Be brave, my daughter. May the Lord of heaven grant you joy in place of your grief. Courage, my daughter." Then she left.

CHAPTER 8

Expulsion of the Demon. 1 When they had finished eating and drinking, the girl's parents wanted to retire. They brought the young man out of the dining room and led him into the bedroom. 2† At this point Tobiah, mindful of Raphael's instructions, took the fish's liver and heart from the bag which he had with him, and placed them on the embers for the incense. 3† The demon, repelled by the odor of the fish, fled into Upper Egypt; Raphael pursued him there and bound him hand and foot. Then Raphael returned immediately.

4 When the girl's parents left the bedroom and closed the door behind them, Tobiah arose from bed and said to his wife, "My love, get up. Let us pray and beg our Lord to have mercy on us and to grant us deliverance." 5* She got up, and they started to pray and beg that deliverance might be theirs. He began with these words:

"Blessed are you, O God of our fathers;
praised be your name forever and ever.
Let the heavens and all your creation praise you forever.
6* You made Adam and you gave him his wife Eve
to be his help and support;
and from these two the human race descended.
You said, 'It is not good for the man to be alone;
let us make him a partner like himself.'
7 Now, Lord, you know that I take this wife of mine not because of lust,
but for a noble purpose.
Call down your mercy on me and on her,
and allow us to live together to a happy old age."

8 They said together, "Amen, amen," 9 and went to bed for the night.

But Raguel got up and summoned his servants. With him they went out to dig a grave, 10 for he said, "I must do this, because if Tobiah should die, we would be subjected to ridicule and insult." 11 When they had finished digging the grave, Raguel went back into the house and called his wife, 12 saying, "Send one of the maids in to see whether Tobiah is alive or dead, so that if necessary we may bury him without anyone's knowing about it." 13 She sent the maid, who lit a lamp, opened the bedroom door, went in, and found them sound asleep together. 14 The maid went out and told the girl's parents that Tobiah was alive, and that there was nothing wrong. 15 Then Raguel praised the God of heaven in these words:

"Blessed are you, O God, with every holy and pure blessing!
Let all your chosen ones praise you;
let them bless you forever!

It is clear that the author places primary emphasis on the value of prayer to God (6, 18; 8, 4-8), on the role of the angel as God's agent, and on the pious disposition of Tobiah.

what I feared did not happen.
Rather you have dealt with us
according to your great mercy.
17 Blessed are you, for you were merciful toward two only children.
Grant them, Master, mercy and deliverance,
and bring their lives to fulfillment

18 Then he told his servants to fill in the grave before dawn.

Wedding Feast. 19 He asked his wife to bake many loaves of bread; he himself went out to the herd and picked out two steers and four rams which he ordered to be slaughtered. So the servants began to prepare the feast. 20† He summoned Tobiah and made an oath in his presence, saying: "For fourteen days you shall not stir from here, but shall remain here eating and drinking with me; and you shall bring joy to my daughter's sorrowing spirit. 21 Take, to begin with, half of whatever I own when you go back in good health to your father; the other half will be yours when I and my wife die. Be of good cheer, my son! I am your father, and Edna is your mother; and we belong to you and to your beloved now and forever. So be happy, son!"

CHAPTER 9

The Money Recovered. 1 Then Tobiah called Raphael and said to him: 2 "Brother Azariah, take along with you four servants and two camels and travel to Rages. Go to Gabael's house and give him this bond. Get the money and then bring him along with you to the wedding celebration. 4 For you know that my father is counting the days. If I should delay my return by a single day, I would cause him intense grief. 3 You witnessed the oath that Raguel has sworn; I cannot violate his oath." 5 So Raphael, together with the four servants and two camels, traveled to Rages in Media, where they stayed at Gabael's house. Raphael gave Gabael his bond and told him about Tobit's son Tobiah, and that he had married and was inviting him to the wedding celebration. Gabael promptly checked over the sealed moneybags, and they placed them on the camels.

6 The following morning they got an early start and traveled to the wedding celebration. When they entered Raguel's house, they found Tobiah reclining at table. He sprang up and greeted Gabael, who wept and blessed him, exclaiming: "O noble and good child, son of a noble and good, upright and charitable man, may the Lord grant heavenly blessing to you and to your wife, and to your wife's father and mother. Blessed be God, because I have seen the very image of my cousin Tobit!"

IV: TOBIAH'S RETURN; CURE OF TOBIT'S BLINDNESS

Anxiety of the Parents. 1 Meanwhile, day by day, Tobit was keeping track of the time Tobiah would need to go and to return. When the number of days was reached and his son did not appear, 2 he said, "I wonder what has happened. Perhaps he has been detained there; or perhaps Gabael is dead, and there is no one to give him the money." 3 And he began to worry. 4 His wife Anna said, "My son has perished and is no longer among the living!" And she began to weep aloud and to wail over her son: 5 "Alas, my child, light of my eyes, that I let you make this journey!" 6 But Tobit kept telling her: "Hush, do not think about it, my love; he is safe! Probably they have to take care of some unexpected business there. The man who is traveling with him is trustworthy, and is one of our own kinsmen. So do not worry over him, my love. He will be here soon." 7* But she retorted, "Stop it, and do not lie to me! My child has perished!" She would go out and keep watch all day at the road her son had taken, and she ate nothing. At sunset she would go back home to wail and cry the whole night through, getting no sleep at all.

Departure from Ecbatana. Now at the end of the fourteen-day wedding celebration which Raguel had sworn to hold for his daughter, Tobiah went to him and said: "Please let me go, for I know that my father and mother do not believe they will ever see me again. So I beg you, father, let me go back to my father. I have already told you how I left him." 8 Raguel said to Tobiah: "Stay, my child, stay with me. I am sending messengers to your father Tobit, and they will give him news of you." 9 But Tobiah insisted, "No, I beg you to let me go back to my father."

10 Raguel then promptly handed over to Tobiah Sarah his wife, together with half of all his property: male and female slaves, oxen and sheep, asses and camels, clothing, money, and household goods. 11 Bidding them farewell, he let them go. He embraced Tobiah and said to him: "Good-bye, my son. Have a safe journey. May the Lord of heaven grant prosperity to you and to your wife Sarah. And may I see children of yours before I die!" 12 Then he kissed his daughter Sarah and said to her: "My daughter, honor your father-in-law and your mother-in-law, because from now on they are as much your parents as the ones who brought you into the world. Go in peace, my daughter; let me hear good reports about you as long as I live." Finally he said good-bye to them and sent them away.

13 Then Edna said to Tobiah: "My child and beloved kinsman, may the Lord bring you back safely, and may I live long enough to see children of you and of my daughter Sarah before I die. Before the Lord, I entrust my daughter to your care. Never cause her grief at any time in your life. Go in peace, my child. From now on I am your mother, and Sarah is your beloved. May all of us be prosperous all the days of our lives." She kissed them both and sent them away in peace.

14 When Tobiah left Raguel, he was full of happiness and joy, and he blessed the Lord of heaven and earth, the King of all, for making his journey so successful. Finally he said good-bye to Raguel and his wife Edna, and added, "May I honor you all the days of my life!"

CHAPTER 11

Homeward Journey. 1 Then they left and began their return journey. When they were near Kaserin, just before Nineveh, 2 Raphael said: "You know how we left your father. 3 Let us hurry on ahead of your wife to prepare the house while the rest of the party are still on the way." 4 So they both went on ahead and Raphael said to Tobiah, "Have the gall in your hand!" And the dog ran along behind them.

5 Meanwhile, Anna sat watching the road by which her son was to come. 6 When she saw him coming, she exclaimed to his father, "Tobit, your son is coming, and the man who traveled with him!"

7 Raphael said to Tobiah before he reached his father: "I am certain that his eyes will be opened. 8 Smear the fish gall on them. This medicine will make the cataracts shrink and peel off from his eyes; then your father will again be able to see the light of day."

Sight Restored. 9* Then Anna ran up to her son, threw her arms around him, and said to him, "Now that I have seen you again, son, I am ready to die!" And she sobbed aloud. 10 Tobit got up and stumbled out through the courtyard gate. Tobiah went up to him 11 with the fish gall in his hand, and holding him firmly, blew into his eyes. "Courage, father," he said. 12 Next he smeared the medicine on his eyes, 13 and it made them smart. Then, beginning at the corners of Tobit's eyes, Tobiah used both hands to peel off the cataracts. When Tobit saw his son, he threw his arms around him 14 and wept. He exclaimed, "I can see you, son, the light of my eyes!" Then he said:

"Blessed be God,
and praised be his great name,
and blessed be all his holy angels.
May his holy name be praised throughout all the ages, 15* Because it was he who scourged me,
and it is he who has had mercy
on me.
Behold, I now see my son Tobiah!"

Then Tobit went back in, rejoicing and praising God with full voice. Tobiah told his father that his journey had been a success; that he had brought back the money; and that he had married Raguel's daughter Sarah, who would arrive shortly, for she was approaching the gate of Nineveh.

16 Rejoicing and praising God, Tobit went out to the gate of Nineveh to meet his daughter-in-law. When the people of Nineveh saw him walking along briskly, with no one leading him by the hand, they were amazed. 17 Before them all Tobit proclaimed how God had mercifully restored sight to his eyes. When Tobit reached Sarah, the wife of his son Tobiah, he greeted her: "Welcome, my daughter! Blessed be your God for bringing you to us, daughter! Blessed are your father and your mother. Blessed is my son Tobiah, and blessed are you, daughter! Welcome to your home with blessing and joy. Come in, daughter!" That day there was joy for all the Jews who lived in Nineveh. 18 Ahiqar and his nephew Nadab also came to rejoice with Tobit. They celebrated Tobiah's wedding feast for seven happy days, and he received many gifts.

V: RAPHAEL REVEALS HIS IDENTITY

Raphael's Wages. 1† When the wedding celebaration came to an end, Tobit called his son Tobiah and said to him, "Son, see to it that you give what is due to the man who made the journey with you; give him a bonus too." 2* Tobiah said: "Father, how much shall I pay him? It would not hurt me at all to give him half of all the wealth he brought back with me. 3 He led me back safe and sound; he cured my wife; he brought the money back with me; and he cured you. How much of a bonus should I give him?" 4 Tobit answered, "It is only fair, son, that he should receive half of all that he brought back." 5 So Tobiah called Raphael and said, "Take as your wages half of all that you have brought back, and go in peace."

Exhortation. 6† Raphael called the two men aside privately and said to them: "Thank God! Give him the praise and the glory. Before all the living, acknowledge the many good things he has done for you, by blessing and extolling his name in song. Before all men, honor and proclaim God's deeds, and do not be slack in praising him. 7 A king's secret it is prudent to keep, but the works of God are to be declared and made known. Praise them with due honor. Do good, and evil will not find its way to you. 8*† Prayer and fasting are good, but better than either is almsgiving accompanied by righteousness. A little with righteousness is better than abundance with wickedness. It is better to give alms than to store up gold; 9* for almsgiving saves one from death and expiates every sin. Those who regularly give alms shall enjoy a full life; 10 but those habitually guilty of sin are their own worst enemies.

Raphael's Identity. 11 "I will now tell you the whole truth; I will conceal nothing at all from you. I have already said to you, 'A king's secret it is prudent to keep, but the works of God are to be made known with due honor.' 12*† I can now tell you that when you, Tobit, and Sarah prayed, it was I who presented and read the record of your prayer before the Glory of the Lord; and I did the same thing when you used to bury the dead. 13 When you did not hesitate to get up and leave your dinner in order to go and bury the dead, 14† I was sent to put you to the test. At the same time, however, God commissioned me to heal you and your daughter-in-law Sarah. 15* I am Raphael, one of the seven angels who enter and serve before the Glory of the Lord."

16 Stricken with fear, the two men fell to the ground. 17 But Raphael said to them: "No need to fear; you are safe. Thank God now and forever. 18 As for me, when I came to you it was not out of any favor on my part, but because it was God's will. So continue to thank him every day; praise him with song. 19 Even though you watched me eat and drink. I did not really do so; what you were seeing was a vision. 20* So now get up from the ground and praise God. Behold, I am about to ascend to him who sent me; write down all these things that have happened to you." 21 When Raphael ascended they rose to their feet and could no longer see him. 22 They kept thanking God and singing his praises; and they continued to acknowledge these marvelous deeds which he had done when the angel of God appeared to them.

VI: TOBIT'S SONG OF PRAISE

1*† Then Tobit composed this joyful prayer:

Blessed be God who lives forever,
because his kingdom lasts for all ages.
2* For he scourges and then has mercy;
he casts down to the depths of the nether world,
and he brings up from the great abyss.
No one can escape his hand.

3 Praise him, you Israelites, before the Gentiles,
for though he has scattered you among them,
4 he has shown you his greatness even there.
Exalt him before every living being,
because he is the Lord our God,
our Father and God forever.

5* He scourged you for your iniquities,

Then he will turn back to you,
and no longer hide his face from you.

So now consider what he has done for you,
and praise him with full voice.
Bless the Lord of righteousness,
and exalt the King of the ages.

In the land of my exile I praise him,
and show his power and majesty to a sinful nation.

and bless the King of the ages,
so that his tent may be rebuilt in you with joy.

May he gladden within you all who were captives;
all who were ravaged may he cherish within you for all generations to come.

many nations shall come to you from afar,
And the inhabitants of all the limits of the earth,

Bearing in their hands their gifts for the King of heaven.
Every generation shall give joyful praise in you,
and shall call you the chosen one, through all ages forever.

accursed are all who destroy you and pull down your walls,
And all who overthrow your towers and set fire to your homes;
but forever blessed are all those who build you up.

13 Go, then, rejoice over the children of the righteous, who shall all be gathered together and shall bless the Lord of the ages.
14* Happy are those who love you,
and happy those who rejoice in your prosperity.

Happy are all the men who shall grieve over you,
over all your chastisements,
For they shall rejoice in you
as they behold all your joy forever.

15 My spirit blesses the Lord, the great King;
16* Jerusalem shall be rebuilt as his home forever.
Happy for me if a remnant of my offspring survive
to see your glory and to praise the King of heaven!

The gates of Jerusalem shall be built with sapphire and emerald,
and all your walls with precious stones.
The towers of Jerusalem shall be built with gold,
and their battlements with pure gold.

17 The streets of Jerusalem shall be paved with rubies and stones of Ophir;
18 The gates of Jerusalem shall sing hymns of gladness,
and all her houses shall cry out, "Alleluia!

"Blessed be God who has raised you up!
may he be blessed for all ages!"
For in you they shall praise his holy name forever.

The end of Tobit's hymn of praise.

Nineveh. [2] He was sixty-two years old when he lost his eyesight, and after he recovered it he lived in prosperity, giving alms and continually blessing God and praising the divine Majesty.

[3]* Just before he died, he called his son Tobiah and Tobiah's seven sons, and gave him this command: "Son, take your children [4]*† and flee into Media, for I believe God's word which was spoken by Nahum against Nineveh. It shall all happen, and shall overtake Assyria and Nineveh; indeed, whatever was said by Israel's prophets, whom God commissioned, shall occur. Not one of all the oracles shall remain unfulfilled, but everything shall take place in the time appointed for it. So it will be safer in Media than in Assyria or Babylon. For I know and believe that whatever God has spoken will be accomplished. It shall happen, and not a single word of the prophecies shall prove false.

"As for our kinsmen who dwell in Israel, they shall all be scattered and led away into exile from the Good Land. The entire country of Israel shall become desolate; even Samaria and Jerusalem shall become desolate! God's temple there shall be burnt to the ground and shall be desolate for a while. [5]† But God will again have mercy on them and bring them back to the land of Israel. They shall rebuild the temple, but it will not be like the first one, until the era when the appointed times shall be completed. Afterward all of them shall return from their exile, and they shall rebuild Jerusalem with splendor. In her the temple of God shall also be rebuilt; yes, it will be rebuilt for all generations to come, just as the prophets of Israel said of her. [6]† All the nations of the world shall be converted and shall offer God true worship; all shall abandon their idols which have deceitfully led them into error, [7]* and shall bless the God of the ages in righteousness. Because all the Israelites who are to be saved in those days will truly be mindful of God, they shall be gathered together and go to Jerusalem; in security shall they dwell forever in the land of Abraham, which will be given over to them. Those who sincerely love God shall rejoice, but those who become guilty of sin shall completely disappear from the land.

[9] "Now, children, I give you this command: serve God faithfully and do what is right before him; you must tell your children to do what is upright and to give alms, to be mindful of God and at all times to bless his name sincerely and with all their strength.

[8] "Now, as for you, my son, depart from Nineveh; do not remain here. [10]*† The day you bury your mother next to me, do not even stay overnight within the confines of the city. For I see that people here shamelessly commit all sorts of wickedness and treachery. Think, my son, of all that Nadab did to Ahiqar, the very one who brought him up: Ahiqar went down alive into the earth! Yet God made Nadab's disgraceful crime rebound against him. Ahiqar came out again into the light, but Nadab went into the everlasting darkness, for he had tried to kill Ahiqar. Because Ahiqar had given alms to me, he escaped from the deadly trap Nadab had set for him. But Nadab himself fell into the deadly trap, and it destroyed him. [11] So, my children, note well what almsgiving does, and also what wickedness does—it kills! But now my spirit is about to leave me."

Death of Tobit and Tobiah. They placed him on his bed and he died; and he received an honorable burial. [12]* When Tobiah's mother died, he buried her next to his father. He then departed with his wife and children for Media, where he settled in Ecbatana with his father-in-law Raguel. [13] He took respectful care of his aging father-in-law and mother-in-law; and he buried them at Ecbatana in Media. Then he inherited Raguel's estate as well as that of his father Tobit. [14] He died at the venerable age of a hundred and seventeen. [15]† But before he died, he heard of the destruction of Nineveh and saw its ef-

Tobiah praised God for all that he had done against the citizens of Nineveh and Assyria. Before dying he rejoiced over Nineveh's destruction, and he blessed the Lord God forever and ever. Amen.

JUDITH

The Book of Judith is a vivid story relating how, in a grave crisis, God delivered the Jewish people through the instrumentality of a woman. The unknown author composed this edifying narrative of divine providence at the end of the second or the beginning of the first century B.C. The original was almost certainly written in Hebrew, but the Greek text shows so much freedom in adapting from the Septuagint the language of older biblical books that it must be regarded as having a literary character of its own. It is this Greek form of the book, accepted as canonical by the Catholic Church, which is translated here. St. Jerome, who prepared (with some reluctance) a Latin text of Judith, based his work on a secondary Aramaic text available to him in Palestine, combined with an older Latin rendering from the Greek. The long hymn of chapter 16 he took in its entirety from that earlier Latin text.

Since it is no longer possible to determine with any precision the underlying events which may have given rise to this narrative, it is enough to note that the author sought to strengthen the faith of his people in God's abiding presence among them. The Book of Judith is a tract for difficult times; the reader, it was hoped, would take to heart the lesson that God was still the Master of history, who could save Israel from her enemies. Note the parallel with the time of the Exodus: as God had delivered his people by the hand of Moses, so he could deliver them by the hand of the pious widow Judith (see note on 2, 12).

The story can be divided into two parts. In the first (cc 1—7), Holofernes, commander-in-chief of the armies of Nebuchadnezzar, leads an overwhelming Assyrian force in a punitive campaign against the vassals who refused to help in the Assyrian war against the Medes. The Jewish people stubbornly resist the enemy at Bethulia, guarding the route of access to Jerusalem. Despite the warning of Achior that the Jews cannot be conquered unless they sin against God, the proud general lays siege to the town and cuts off its water supply. After a siege of thirty-four days, the exhausted defenders are desperate and ready to surrender.

At this point, the climax of the story, Judith (the name means "Jewess") appears and promises to defeat the Assyrians. The rest of the story is too well known to repeat in detail. Having fasted and prayed, Judith dresses in her finest garments and proceeds to the Assyrian camp, where she succeeds in killing Holofernes while he lies in a drunken stupor. The Assyrians panic when they discover this, and the Jews are able to rout and slaughter them. The beautiful hymn of the people honoring Judith (15, 9-10) is often applied to Mary in the liturgy.

Any attempt to read the book directly against the backdrop of Jewish history in relation to the empires of the ancient world is bound to fail. The story was written as a pious reflection on the meaning of the yearly Passover observance. It draws its inspiration from the Exodus narrative (especially Ex 14, 31) and from the texts of Isaiah and the Psalms portraying the special intervention of God for the preservation of Jerusalem. The theme of God's hand as the agent of this providential activity, reflected of old in the hand of Moses and now in the hand of Judith, is again exemplified at a later time in Jewish synagogue art. God's hand reaching down from heaven appears as part of the scene at Dura-Europos (before A.D. 250) in paintings of the Exodus, of the sacrifice of Isaac (Gn 22), and of Ezekiel's valley of dry bones (Ez 37).

The Book of Judith is divided as follows:

I: Peril of the Jews (1, 1—7, 32)
II: Deliverance of the Jews (8, 1—14, 10)
III: Victory (14, 11—16, 25)

CHAPTER 1

War against the Medes. 1 It was the twelfth year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians in the great city of Nineveh. At that time Arphaxad ruled over the Medes in Ecbatana. 2 Around this city he built a wall of blocks of stone, each three cubits in height and six in length. He made the wall seventy cubits high and fifty thick. 3 At the gates he raised towers of a hundred cubits, with a thickness of sixty cubits at the base. 4 The gateway he built to a height of seventy cubits, with an opening forty cubits wide for the passage of his chariot forces and the marshaling of his infantry. 5 Then King Nebuchadnezzar waged war against King Arphaxad in the vast plain, in the district of Ragae. 6† To him there rallied all the inhabitants of the mountain region, all who dwelt along the Euphrates, the Tigris, and the Hydaspes, and King Arioch of the Elamites, in the plain. Thus many nations came together to resist the people of Cheleoud.

Ultimatum to the West. 7 Now Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, sent messengers to all the inhabitants of Persia, and to all those who dwelt in the West: to the inhabitants of Cilicia and Damascus, Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon, to all who dwelt along the seacoast, 8 to the peoples of Carmel, Gilead, Upper Galilee, and the vast plain of Esdraelon, 9 to all those in Samaria and its cities, and west of the Jordan as far as Jerusalem, Bethany, Chelous, Kadesh, and the River of Egypt; to Tahpanhes, Raamses, all the land of Goshen, 10 Tanis, Memphis and beyond, and to all the inhabitants of Egypt as far as the borders of Ethiopia.

11 But the inhabitants of all that land disregarded the summons of Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, and would not go with him to the war. They were not afraid of him but regarded him as a lone individual opposed to them, and turned away his envoys empty-handed, in disgrace. 12† Then Nebuchadnezzar fell into a violent rage against all that land, and swore by his throne and his kingdom that he would avenge himself on all the territories of Cilicia and Damascus and Syria, and also destroy with his sword all the inhabitants of Moab, Ammon, the whole of Judea, and those living anywhere in Egypt as far as the borders of the two seas.

Defeat of Arphaxad. 13 In the seventeenth year he proceeded with his army against King Arphaxad, and was victorious in his campaign. He routed the whole force of Arphaxad, his entire cavalry and all his chariots, 14 and took possession of his cities. He pressed on to Ecbatana and took its towers, sacked its marketplaces, and turned its glory into shame. 15 Arphaxad himself he overtook in the mountains of Ragae, ran him through with spears, and utterly destroyed him. 16* Then he returned home with all his numerous, motley horde of warriors; and there he and his army relaxed and feasted for a hundred and twenty days.

Council of War against the West. 1 In the eighteenth year, on the twenty-second day of the first month, there was a discussion in the palace of Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, about taking revenge on the whole world, as he had threatened. 2 He summoned all his ministers and nobles, laid before them his secret plan, and urged the total destruction of those countries. 3 They decided to do away with all those who had refused to comply with the order he had issued.

4 When he had completed his plan, Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, summoned Holofernes, general in chief of his forces, second to himself in command, and said to him:

5* "Thus says the great king, the lord of all the earth: Go forth from my presence, take with you men of proven valor, a hundred and twenty thousand infantry and twelve thousand cavalry, 6 and proceed against all the land of the West, because they did not comply with the order I issued. 7† Tell them to have earth and water ready, for I will come against them in my wrath; I will cover all the land with the feet of my soldiers, to whom I will deliver them as spoils. 8 Their slain shall fill their ravines and wadies, the swelling torrent shall be choked with their dead; 9 and I will deport them as exiles to the very ends of the earth.

10 "You go before me and take possession of all their territories for me. If they surrender to you, guard them for me till the day of their punishment. 11 As for those who resist, show them no quarter, but deliver them up to slaughter and plunder in each country you occupy.

† 1, 6: Cheleoud: probably the Chaldeans are meant.

1, 12: The two seas: the ancient rulers in Mesopotamia often designated the limits of their realm as extending from the Upper Sea (the Mediterranean) to the Lower Sea (the Persian Gulf).

2, 7: Earth and water: in the Persian period, the offering of these to a conqueror was a symbolic gesture of unconditional surrender.

12† For as I live, and by the strength of my kingdom, what I have spoken I will accomplish by my power. 13 Do not disobey a single one of the orders of your lord; fulfill them exactly as I have commanded you, and do it without delay."

Campaign of Holofernes. 14 So Holofernes left the presence of his lord, and summoned all the princes, and the generals and officers of the Assyrian army. 15 He mustered a hundred and twenty thousand picked troops, as his lord had commanded, and twelve thousand mounted archers, 16 and grouped them into a complete combat force. 17 He took along a very large number of camels, asses, and mules for their baggage; innumerable sheep, cattle, and goats for their food supply; 18 abundant provisions for each man, and much gold and silver from the royal palace.

19 Then he and his whole army proceeded on their expedition in advance of King Nebuchadnezzar, to cover all the western region with their chariots and cavalry and regular infantry. 20* A huge, irregular force, too many to count, like locusts or the dust of the earth, went along with them.

21 After a three-day march from Nineveh, they reached the plain of Bectileth, and from Bectileth they next encamped near the mountains to the north of Upper Cilicia. 22 From there Holofernes took his whole force, the infantry, cavalry, and chariots, and marched into the mountain region. 23† He devastated Put and Lud, and plundered all the Rassisites and the Ishmaelites on the border of the desert toward the south of Chaldea.

24 Then, following the Euphrates, he went through Mesopotamia, and battered down every fortified city along the Wadi Abron, until he reached the sea. 25 He seized the territory of Cilicia, and cut down everyone who resisted him. Then he proceeded to the southern borders of Japheth, toward Arabia. 26 He surrounded all the Midianites, burned their tents, and plundered their sheepfolds. 27 Descending to the plain of Damascus at the time of the wheat harvest, he set fire to all their fields, destroyed their flocks and herds, despoiled their cities, devastated their plains, and put all their youths to the sword.

28 The fear and dread of him fell upon all the inhabitants of the coastland, upon those in Sidon and Tyre, and those who dwelt in Sur and Ocina, and the inhabitants of Jamnia. Those in Azotus and Ascalon also feared him greatly.

Submission of the West. 1 They therefore sent messengers to him to sue for peace in these words: 2 "We, the servants of Nebuchadnezzar the great king, lie prostrate before you; do with us as you will. 3 Our dwellings and all our wheat fields, our flocks and herds, and all our encampments are at your disposal; make use of them as you please. 4 Our cities and their inhabitants are also at your service; come and deal with them as you see fit."

5 After the spokesmen had reached Holofernes and given him this message, 6 he went down with his army to the seacoast, and stationed garrisons in the fortified cities; from them he impressed picked troops as auxiliaries. 7 The people of these cities and all the inhabitants of the countryside received him with garlands and dancing to the sound of timbrels. 8* Nevertheless, he devastated their whole territory and cut down their sacred groves, for he had been commissioned to destroy all the gods of the earth, so that every nation might worship Nebuchadnezzar alone, and every people and tribe invoke him as a god. 9 At length Holofernes reached Esdraelon in the neighborhood of Dothan, the approach to the main ridge of the Judean mountains; 10† he set up his camp between Geba and Scythopolis, and stayed there a whole month to refurbish all the equipment of his army.

Israelite Defense. 1 When the Israelites who dwelt in Judea heard of all that Holofernes, commander-in-chief of Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, had done to the nations, and how he had despoiled all their temples and destroyed them, 2 they were in extreme dread of him, and greatly alarmed for Jerusalem and the temple of the Lord, their God. 3† Now, they had lately returned from exile, and only recently had all the people of Judea been gathered together, and the vessels, the altar, and the temple been purified from profanation. 4 So they sent word to the whole region of Samaria, to Kona, Beth-horon, Belmain, and Jericho, to Choba and Aesora, and to the valley of Salem. 5 The people there posted guards on all the summits of the high mountains, fortified their villages, and since their fields had recently been harvested, stored up provisions in preparation for war.

6† Joakim, who was high priest in Jerusalem in those days, wrote to the inhabitants of Bethulia [and Betomesthaim], which is on the way to Esdraelon, facing the plain near Dothan, 7 and instructed them to keep firm hold of the mountain passes, since these offered access to Judea. It would be easy to ward off the attacking forces, as the defile was only wide enough for two abreast. 8† The Israelites carried out the orders given them by Joakim, the high priest, and the senate of the whole people of Israel, which met in Jerusalem.

Prayer and Penance. 9 All the men of Israel cried to God with great fervor and did penance— 10*† they, along with their wives, and children, and domestic animals. All their resident aliens, hired laborers, and slaves also girded themselves with sackcloth. 11† And all the Israelite men, women and children who lived in Jerusalem prostrated themselves in front of the temple building, with ashes strewn on their heads, displaying their sackcloth covering before the Lord. 12* The altar, too, they draped in sackcloth; and with one accord they cried out fervently to the God of Israel not to allow their children to be seized, their wives to be taken captive, the cities of their inheritance to be ruined, or the sanctuary to be profaned and mocked for the nations to gloat over.

13* The Lord heard their cry and had regard for their distress. For the people observed a fast of many days' duration throughout Judea, and before the sanctuary of the Lord Almighty in Jerusalem. 14 The high priest Joakim, and all the priests in attendance on the Lord who served his altar, were also girded with sackcloth as they offered the daily holocaust, the votive offerings, and the freewill offerings of the people. 15 With ashes upon their turbans, they cried to the Lord with all their strength to look with favor on the whole house of Israel.

Council against the Israelites. 1 It was reported to Holofernes, commander-in-chief of the Assyrian army, that the Israelites were ready for battle, and had blocked the mountain passes, fortified the summits of all the higher peaks, and placed roadblocks in the plains. 2 In great anger he summoned all the rulers of the Moabites, the generals of the Ammonites, and all the satraps of the seacoast 3 and said to them: "Now tell me, you Canaanites, what sort of people is this that dwells in the mountains? Which cities do they inhabit? How large is their army? In what does their power and strength consist? Who has set himself up as their king and the leader of their army? 4 Why have they refused to come out to meet me along with all the other inhabitants of the West?"

Achior's Speech. 5* Then Achior, the leader of all the Ammonites said to him: "My lord, hear this account from your servant; I will tell you the truth about this people that lives near you [that inhabits this mountain region]; no lie shall escape your servant's lips.

6† "These people are descendants of the Chaldeans. 7* They formerly dwelt in Mesopotamia, for they did not wish to follow the gods of their forefathers who were born in the land of the Chaldeans. 8 Since they abandoned the way of their ancestors, and acknowledged with divine worship the God of heaven, their forefathers expelled them from the presence of their gods. So they fled to Mesopotamia and dwelt there a long time. 9* Their God bade them leave their abode and proceed to the land of Canaan. Here they settled, and grew very rich in gold, silver, and a great abundance of livestock. 10* Later, when famine had gripped the whole land of Canaan, they went down into Egypt. They stayed there as long as they found sustenance, and grew into such a great multitude that the number of their race could not be counted. 11* The king of Egypt, however, rose up against them, shrewdly forced them to labor at brick-making, oppressed and enslaved them. 12 But they cried to their God, and he struck the land of Egypt with plagues for which there was no remedy. When the Egyptians expelled them, [13]* God dried up the Red Sea before them, [14] and led them along the route to Sinai and Kadesh-barnea. First they drove out all the inhabitants of the desert; [15]* then they settled in the land of the Amorites, destroyed all the Heshbonites by main force, crossed the Jordan, and took possession of the whole mountain region. [16]* They expelled the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Shechemites, and all the Gergesites; and they lived in these mountains a long time.

[17]* "As long as the Israelites did not sin in the sight of their God, they prospered, for their God, who hates wickedness, was with them. [18]* But when they deviated from the way he prescribed for them, they were ground down steadily, more and more, by frequent wars, and finally taken as captives into foreign lands. The temple of their God was razed to the ground, and their cities were occupied by their enemies. [19] But now that they have returned to their God, they have come back from the Dispersion wherein they were scattered, and have repossessed Jerusalem, where their sanctuary is, and have settled again in the mountain region which was unoccupied.

[20]* "So now, my lord and master, if these people are at fault, and are sinning against their God, and if we verify this offense of theirs, then we shall be able to go up and conquer them. [21] But if they are not a guilty nation, then your lordship should keep his distance; otherwise their Lord and God will shield them, and we shall become the laughing stock of the whole world."

[22] Now when Achior had concluded his recommendation, all the people standing round about the tent murmured; and the officers of Holofernes and all the inhabitants of the seacoast and of Moab alike said he should be cut to pieces. [23] "We are not afraid of the Israelites," they said, "for they are a powerless people, incapable of a strong defense. [24]* Let us therefore attack them; your great army, Lord Holofernes, will swallow them up."

Holofernes' Answer. [1] When the noise of the crowd surrounding the council had subsided, Holofernes, commander-in-chief of the Assyrian army, said to Achior, in the presence of the whole throng of coastland peoples, of the Moabites, and of the Ammonite mercenaries: [2]* "Who are you, Achior, to prophesy among us as you have done today, and to tell us not to fight against the Israelites because their God protects them? What god is there beside Nebuchadnezzar? He will send his force and destroy them from the face of the earth. Their God will not save them; [3]* but we, the servants of Nebuchadnezzar, will strike them down as one man, for they will be unable to withstand the force of our cavalry. [4]* We will overwhelm them with it, and the mountains shall be drunk with their blood, and their plains filled with their corpses. Not a trace of them shall survive our attack: they shall utterly perish, says King Nebuchadnezzar, lord of all the earth; for he has spoken, and his words shall not remain unfulfilled. [5] As for you, Achior, you Ammonite mercenary, for saying these things in a moment of perversity you shall not see my face after today, until I have taken revenge on this race of people from Egypt. [6]* Then at my return, the sword of my army or the spear of my servants will pierce your sides, and you shall fall among their slain. [7] My servants will now conduct you to the mountain region, and leave you at one of the towns along the ascent. [8] You shall not die till you are destroyed together with them. [9] If you still cherish the hope that they will not be taken, then there is no need for you to be downcast. I have spoken, and my words shall not prove false in any respect."

Achior in Bethulia. [10] Then Holofernes ordered the servants who were standing by in his tent to seize Achior, conduct him to Bethulia, and hand him over to the Israelites. [11] So the servants took him in custody and brought him out of the camp into the plain. From there they led him into the mountain region till they reached the springs below Bethulia. [12] When the men of the city saw them, they seized their weapons and ran out of the city to the crest of the ridge; and all the slingers blocked the ascent of Holofernes' servants by hurling stones upon them. [13] So they took cover below the mountain, where they bound Achior and left him lying at the foot of the mountain; then they returned to their lord.

[14] The Israelites came down to him from their city, loosed him, and brought him into Bethulia. They haled him before the rulers of the city, [15] who in those days were Uzziah, son of Micah of the tribe of Simeon, Chabris, son of Gothoniel, and Charmis, son of Melchiel. [16] They then convened all the elders of the city; and all their young men, as well as the women, gathered in haste at the place of assembly. They placed Achior in the center of the throng, and Uzziah questioned him about what had happened. [17] He replied by giving them an account of what was said in the council of Holofernes, and of all his own words among the Assyrian officers, and of all the boasting threats of Holofernes against the house of Israel.

[18] At this the people fell prostrate and worshiped God; and they cried out: [19]† "Lord, God of heaven, behold their arrogance! Have pity on the lowliness of our people, and look with favor this day on those who are consecrated to you." [20] Then they reassured Achior and praised him highly. [21] Uzziah brought him from the assembly to his home, where he gave a banquet for the elders. That whole night they called upon the God of Israel for help.

CHAPTER 7

Siege of Bethulia. [1] The following day Holofernes ordered his whole army, and all the allied troops that had come to his support, to move against Bethulia, seize the mountain passes, and engage the Israelites in battle. [2] That same day all their fighting men went into action. Their forces numbered a hundred and seventy thousand infantry and twelve thousand horsemen, not counting the baggage train or the men who accompanied it on foot—a very great army. [3] They encamped at the spring in the valley near Bethulia, and spread out in breadth toward Dothan as far as Balbaim, and in length from Bethulia to Cyamon, which faces Esdraelon.

[4] When the Israelites saw how many there were, they said to one another in great dismay: "Soon they will devour the whole country. Neither the high mountains nor the valleys and hills can support the mass of them." [5]† Yet they all seized their weapons, lighted fires on their bastions, and kept watch throughout the night.

[6] On the second day Holofernes led out all his cavalry in the sight of the Israelites who were in Bethulia. [7] He reconnoitered the approaches to their city and located their sources of water; these he seized, stationing armed detachments around them, while he himself returned to his troops.

[8] All the commanders of the Edomites and all the leaders of the Ammonites, together with the generals of the seacoast, came to Holofernes and said: [9] "Sir, listen to what we have to say, that there may be no losses among your troops. [10]* These Israelites do not rely on their spears, but on the height of the mountains where they dwell; it is not easy to reach the summit of their mountains. [11] Therefore, sir, do not attack them in regular formation; thus not a single one of your troops will fall. [12] Stay in your camp, and spare all your soldiers. Have some of your servants keep control of the source of water that flows out at the base of the mountain, [13]* for that is where the inhabitants of Bethulia get their water. Then thirst will begin to carry them off, and they will surrender their city. Meanwhile, we and our men will go up to the summits of the nearby mountains, and encamp there to guard against anyone's leaving the city. [14] They and their wives and children will languish with hunger, and even before the sword strikes them they will be laid low in the streets of their city. [15] Thus you will render them dire punishment for their rebellion and their refusal to meet you peacefully."

[16] Their words pleased Holofernes and all his ministers, and he ordered their proposal to be carried out. [17] Thereupon the Moabites moved camp, together with five thousand Assyrians. They encamped in the valley, and held the water supply and the springs of the Israelites. [18] The Edomites and the Ammonites went up and encamped in the mountain region opposite Dothan; and they sent some of their men to the south and to the east opposite Egrebel, near Chusi, which is on Wadi Mochmur. The rest of the Assyrian army was encamped in the plain, covering the whole countryside. Their enormous store of tents and equipment was spread out in profusion everywhere.

[19]* The Israelites cried to the Lord, their God, for they were disheartened, since all their enemies had them surrounded, and there was no way of slipping through their lines. [20] The whole Assyrian camp, infantry, chariots, and cavalry, kept them thus surrounded for thirty-four days. All the reservoirs of water failed the inhabitants of Bethulia, [21] and the cisterns ran dry, so that on no day did they have enough to drink, but their drinking water was rationed. [22] Their children fainted away, and the women and youths were consumed with thirst and were collapsing in the streets and gateways of the city, with no strength left in them.

6, 19: The Latin Vulgate (6, 15) has a longer form of this prayer: "Lord, God of heaven and earth, behold their arrogance; regard our lowliness and look with favor on your holy ones; show that you do not abandon those who trust in you, but that you humble those who trust in themselves and glory in their own strength."

23 All the people, therefore, including youths, women, and children, went in a crowd to Uzziah and the rulers of the city. They set up a great clamor and said before the elders: 24 "God judge between you and us! You have done us grave injustice in not making peace with the Assyrians. 25 There is no help for us now! Instead, God has sold us into their power by laying us prostrate before them in thirst and utter exhaustion. 26 Therefore, summon them and deliver the whole city as booty to the troops of Holofernes and to all his forces; 27 we would be better off to become their prey. We should indeed be made slaves, but at least we should live, and not have to behold our little ones dying before our eyes and our wives and children breathing out their souls. 28 We adjure you by heaven and earth, and by our God, the Lord of our forefathers, who is punishing us for our sins and those of our forefathers, to do as we have proposed, this very day."

29 All in the assembly with one accord broke into shrill wailing and loud cries to the Lord their God. 30 But Uzziah said to them, "Courage, my brothers! Let us wait five days more for the Lord our God, to show his mercy toward us; he will not utterly forsake us. 31 But if those days pass without help coming to us, I will do as you say." 32 Then he dispersed the men to their posts, and they returned to the walls and towers of the city; the women and children he sent to their homes. Throughout the city they were in great misery.

Judith. 1† Now in those days Judith, daughter of Merari, son of Joseph, son of Oziel, son of Elkiah, son of Ananias, son of Gideon, son of Raphain, son of Ahitob, son of Elijah, son of Hilkiah, son of Eliab, son of Nathanael, son of Salamiel, son of Sarasadai, son of Simeon, son of Israel, heard of this. 2 Her husband, Manasseh, of her own tribe and clan, had died at the time of the barley harvest. 3 While he was in the field supervising those who bound the sheaves, he suffered sunstroke; and he died of this illness in Bethulia, his native city. He was buried with his forefathers in the field between Dothan and Balamon. 4 The widowed Judith remained three years and four months at home, 5† where she set up a tent for herself on the roof of her house. She put sackcloth about her loins and wore widow's weeds. 6* She fasted all the days of her widowhood, except sabbath eves and sabbaths, new moon eves and new moons, feast-days and holidays of the house of Israel. 7 She was beautifully formed and lovely to behold. Her husband, Manasseh, had left her gold and silver, servants and maids, livestock and fields, which she was maintaining. 8 No one had a bad word to say about her, for she was a very God-fearing woman.

Her Words to the Elders. 9 When Judith, therefore, heard of the harsh words which the people, discouraged by their lack of water, had spoken against their ruler, and of all that Uzziah had said to them in reply, swearing that he would hand over the city to the Assyrians at the end of five days, 10 she sent the maid who was in charge of all her things to ask Uzziah, Chabris, and Charmis, the elders of the city, to visit her. 11 When they came, she said to them: "Listen to me, you rulers of the people of Bethulia. What you said to the people today is not proper. When you promised to hand over the city to our enemies at the end of five days unless within that time the Lord comes to our aid, you interposed between God and yourselves this oath which you took. 12* Who are you, then, that you should have put God to the test this day, setting yourselves in the place of God in human affairs? 13 It is the Lord Almighty for whom you are laying down conditions; will you never understand anything? 14* You cannot plumb the depths of the human heart or grasp the workings of the human mind; how then can you fathom God, who has made all these things, discern his mind, and understand his plan?

"No, my brothers, do not anger the Lord our God. 15 For if he does not wish to come to our aid within the five days, he has it equally within his power to protect us at such time as he pleases, or to destroy us in the face of our enemies. 16 It is not for you to make the Lord our God give surety for his plans.

if it is his good pleasure. [18]* For there has not risen among us in recent generations, nor does there exist today, any tribe, or clan, or town, or city of ours that worships gods made by hands, as happened in former days. [19]* It was for such conduct that our forefathers were handed over to the sword and to pillage, and fell with great destruction before our enemies. [20] But since we acknowledge no other god but the Lord, we hope that he will not disdain us or any of our people. [21] If we are taken, all Judea will fall, our sanctuary will be plundered, and God will make us pay for its profanation with our life's blood. [22] For the slaughter of our kinsmen, for the taking of exiles from the land, and for the devastation of our inheritance, he will lay the guilt on our heads. Wherever we shall be enslaved among the nations, we shall be a mockery and a reproach in the eyes of our masters. [23] Our enslavement will not be turned to our benefit, but the Lord our God, will maintain it to our disgrace.

[24] "Therefore, my brothers, let us set an example for our kinsmen. Their lives depend on us, and the defense of the sanctuary, the temple, and the altar rests with us. [25]* Besides all this, we should be grateful to the Lord our God, for putting us to the test, as he did our forefathers. [26] Recall how he dealt with Abraham, and how he tried Isaac, and all that happened to Jacob in Syrian Mesopotamia while he was tending the flocks of Laban, his mother's brother. [27]* Not for vengeance did the Lord put them in the crucible to try their hearts, nor has he done so with us. It is by way of admonition that he chastises those who are close to him."

Uzziah's Response. [28] Then Uzziah said to her: "All that you have said was spoken with good sense, and no one can gainsay your words. [29] Not today only is your wisdom made evident, but from your earliest years all the people have recognized your prudence, which corresponds to the worthy dispositions of your heart. [30] The people, however, were so tortured with thirst that they forced us to speak to them as we did, and to bind ourselves by an oath that we cannot break. [31] But now, God-fearing woman that you are, pray for us that the Lord may send rain to fill up our cisterns, lest we be weakened still further."

[32] Then Judith said to them: "Listen to me! I will do something that will go down from generation to generation among the descendants of our race. [33] Stand at the gate tonight to let me pass through with my maid; and within the days you have specified before you will surrender the city to our enemies, the Lord will rescue Israel by my hand. [34] You must not inquire into what I am doing, for I will not tell you until my plan has been accomplished." [35] Uzziah and the rulers said to her, "Go in peace, and may the Lord God go before you to take vengeance upon our enemies!" [36] Then they withdrew from the tent and returned to their posts.

The Prayer of Judith. [1]* Judith threw herself down prostrate, with ashes strewn upon her head, and wearing nothing over her sackcloth. While the incense was being offered in the temple of God in Jerusalem that evening, Judith prayed to the Lord with a loud voice: [2]*† "Lord, God of my forefather Simeon! You put a sword into his hand to take revenge upon the foreigners who had immodestly loosened the maiden's girdle, shamefully exposed her thighs, and disgracefully violated her body. This they did, though you forbade it. [3]† Therefore you had their rulers slaughtered; and you covered with their blood the bed in which they lay deceived, the same bed that had felt the shame of their own deceiving. You smote the slaves together with their princes, and the princes together with their servants. [4] Their wives you handed over to plunder, and their daughters to captivity; and all the spoils you divided among your favored sons, who burned with zeal for you, and in their abhorrence of the defilement of their kinswoman, called on you for help.

[5]* "O God, my God, hear me also, a widow. It is you who were the author of those events and of what preceded and followed them. The present, also, and the future you have planned. Whatever you devise comes into being; [6]* the things you decide on come forward and say, 'Here we are!' All your ways are in readiness, and your judgment is made with foreknowledge.

[7]* "Here are the Assyrians, a vast force, priding themselves on horse and rider, boasting of the power of their infantry, trusting in shield and spear, bow and sling. They do not know that

Judith's Departure. 1 As soon as Judith had thus concluded, and ceased her invocation to the God of Israel, 2 she rose from the ground. She called her maid and they went down into the house, which she used only on sabbaths and feast days. 3* She took off the sackcloth she had on, laid aside the garments of her widowhood, washed her body with water, and anointed it with rich ointment. She arranged her hair and bound it with a fillet, and put on the festive attire she had worn while her husband, Manasseh, was living. 4* She chose sandals for her feet, and put on her anklets, bracelets, rings, earrings, and all her other jewelry. Thus she made herself very beautiful, to captivate the eyes of all the men who should see her.

6 Then they went out to the gate of the city of Bethulia and found Uzziah and the elders of the city, Chabri and Charmis, standing there. 7 When these men saw Judith transformed in looks and differently dressed, they were very much astounded at her beauty and said to her, 8 "May the God of our fathers bring you to favor, and make your undertaking a success, for the glory of the Israelites and the exaltation of Jerusalem."

Judith bowed down to God. Then she said to them, 9 "Order the gate of the city opened for me, that I may go to carry out the business we discussed." So they ordered the youths to open the gate for her as she requested. 10 When they did so, Judith and her maid went out. The men of the city kept her in view as she went down the mountain and crossed the valley; then they lost sight of her.

Judith Captured. 11 As Judith and her maid walked directly across the valley, they encountered the Assyrian outpost. 12† The men took her in custody and asked her, "To what people do you belong? Where do you come from, and where are you going?" She replied: "I am a daughter of the Hebrews, and I am fleeing from them, because they are about to be delivered up to you as prey. 13* I have come to see Holofernes, the general in chief of your forces, to give him a trustworthy report; I will show him the route by which he can ascend and take possession of the whole mountain district without a single one of his men suffering injury or loss of life."

14 When the men heard her words and gazed upon her face, which appeared wondrously beautiful to them, they said to her, 15 "By coming down thus promptly to see our master, you have saved your life. Now go to his tent; some of our men will accompany you to present you to him. 16 When you stand before him, have no fear in your heart; give him the report you speak of, and he will treat you well." 17 So they detailed a hundred of their men as an escort for her and her maid, and these conducted them to the tent of Holofernes.

18 When the news of her arrival spread among the tents, a crowd gathered in the camp. They came and stood around her as she waited outside the tent of Holofernes, while he was being informed about her. 19 They marveled at her beauty, regarding the Israelites with wonder because of her, and they said to one another, "Who can despise this people that has such women among them? It is not wise to leave one man of them alive, for if any were to be spared they could beguile the whole world."

Judith Meets Holofernes. [20] The guard of Holofernes and all his servants came out and ushered her into the tent. [21] Now Holofernes was reclining on his bed under a canopy with a netting of crimson and gold, emeralds and other precious stones. [22] When they announced her to him, he came out to the antechamber, preceded by silver lamps; [23] and when Holofernes and his servants beheld Judith, they all marveled at the beauty of her face. She threw herself down prostrate before him, but his servants raised her up.

[1] Then Holofernes said to her: "Take courage, lady; have no fear in your heart! Never have I harmed anyone who chose to serve Nebuchadnezzar, king of all the earth. [2] Nor would I have raised my spear against your people who dwell in the mountain region, had they not despised me and brought this upon themselves. [3] But now tell me why you fled from them and came to us. In any case, you have come to safety. Take courage! Your life is spared tonight and for the future. [4] No one at all will harm you. Rather, you will be well treated, as are all the servants of my lord, King Nebuchadnezzar."

[5]* Judith answered him: "Listen to the words of your servant, and let your handmaid speak in your presence! I will tell no lie to my lord this night, [6] and if you follow out the words of your handmaid, God will give you complete success, and my lord will not fail in any of his undertakings. [7]* By the life of Nebuchadnezzar, king of all the earth, and by the power of him who has sent you to set all creatures aright! not only do men serve him through you; but even the wild beasts and the cattle and the birds of the air, because of your strength, will live for Nebuchadnezzar and his whole house. [8] Indeed, we have heard of your wisdom and sagacity, and all the world is aware that throughout the kingdom you alone are competent, rich in experience, and distinguished in military strategy.

[9]* "As for Achior's speech in your council, we have heard of it. When the men of Bethulia spared him, he told them all he had said to you. [10]* So then, my lord and master, do not disregard his word, but bear it in mind, for it is true. For our people are not punished, nor does the sword prevail against them, except when they sin against their God. [11] But now their guilt has caught up with them, by which they bring the wrath of their God upon them whenever they do wrong; so that my lord will not be repulsed and fail, but death will overtake them. [12] Since their food gave out and all their water ran low, they decided to kill their animals, and determined to consume all the things which God in his laws forbade them to eat. [13] They decreed that they would use up the first fruits of grain and the tithes of wine and oil which they had sanctified and reserved for the priests who minister in the presence of our God in Jerusalem: things which no layman should even touch with his hands. [14] They have sent messengers to Jerusalem to bring back to them authorization from the council of the elders; for the inhabitants there have also done these things. [15] On the very day when the response reaches them and they act upon it, they will be handed over to you for destruction.

[16] "As soon as I, your handmaid, learned all this, I fled from them. God has sent me to perform with you such deeds that people throughout the world will be astonished on hearing of them. [17] Your handmaid is, indeed, a God-fearing woman, serving the God of heaven night and day. Now I will remain with you, my lord; but each night your handmaid will go out to the ravine and pray to God. He will tell me when the Israelites have committed their crimes. [18] Then I will come and let you know, so that you may go out with your whole force, and not one of them will be able to withstand you. [19] I will lead you through Judea, till you come to Jerusalem, and there I will set up your judgment seat. You will drive them like sheep that have no shepherd, and not even a dog will growl at you. This was told me, and announced to me in advance, and I in turn have been sent to tell you."

[20]* Her words pleased Holofernes and all his servants; they marveled at her wisdom and exclaimed, [21] "No other woman from one end of the world to the other looks so beautiful and speaks so wisely!" [22] Then Holofernes said to her: "God has done well in sending you ahead of your people, to bring victory to our arms, and destruction to those who have despised my lord. [23]* You are fair to behold, and your words are well spoken. If you do as you have said, your God will be my God; you shall dwell in the palace of King Nebuchadnezzar, and shall be renowned throughout the earth."

CHAPTER 12

Judith's Conduct. 1 Then he ordered them to lead her into the room where his silverware was kept, and bade them set a table for her with his own delicacies to eat and his own wine to drink. 2* But Judith said, "I will not partake of them, lest it be an occasion of sin; but I shall be amply supplied from the things I brought with me." 3 Holofernes asked her: "But if your provisions give out, where shall we get more of the same to provide for you? None of your people are with us." 4 Judith answered him, "As surely as you, my lord, live, your hand-maid will not use up her supplies till the Lord accomplishes by my hand what he has determined."

5 Then the servants of Holofernes led her into the tent, where she slept till midnight. In the night watch just before dawn, she rose 6 and sent this message to Holofernes, "Give orders, my lord, to let your handmaid go out for prayer."
7 So Holofernes ordered his bodyguard not to hinder her. Thus she stayed in the camp three days. Each night she went out to the ravine of Bethulia, where she washed herself at the spring of the camp. 8 After bathing, she besought the Lord, the God of Israel, to direct her way for the triumph of his people. 9 Then she returned purified to the tent, and remained there until her food was brought to her toward evening.

Holofernes' Banquet. 10† On the fourth day Holofernes gave a banquet for his servants alone, to which he did not invite any of the officers. 11 And he said to Ba-goas, the eunuch in charge of his household: "Go and persuade this Hebrew woman in your care to come and to eat and drink with us. 12 It would be a disgrace for us to have such a woman with us without enjoying her company. If we do not entice her, she will laugh us to scorn."

13 So Bagoas left the presence of Holofernes, and came to Judith and said, "So fair a maiden should not be reluctant to come to my lord to be honored by him, to enjoy drinking wine with us, and to be like one of the Assyrian women who live in the palace of Nebuchadnezzar." 14 She replied, "Who am I to refuse my lord? Whatever is pleasing to him I will promptly do. This will be a joy for me till the day of my death."

15 Thereupon she proceeded to put on her festive garments and all her feminine adornments. Meanwhile her maid went ahead and spread out on the ground for her in front of Holofernes the fleece Bagoas had furnished for her daily use in reclining at her dinner.
16 Then Judith came in and reclined on
it. The heart of Holofernes was in rapture over her, and his spirit was shaken.
He was burning with the desire to possess her, for he had been biding his time to seduce her from the day he saw her.
17 Holofernes said to her, "Drink and be merry with us!" 18 Judith replied, "I will gladly drink, my lord, for at no time since I was born have I ever enjoyed life as much as I do today." 19 She then took the things her maid had prepared, and ate and drank in his presence.
20 Holofernes, charmed by her, drank a great quantity of wine, more than he had ever drunk on one single day in his life.

CHAPTER 13

1 When it grew late, his servants quickly withdrew. Bagoas closed the tent from the outside and excluded the attendants from their master's presence. They went off to their beds, for they were all tired from the prolonged banquet. 2 Judith was left alone in the tent with Holofernes, who lay prostrate on his bed, for he was sodden with wine.
3 She had ordered her maid to stand outside the bedroom and wait, as on the other days, for her to come out; she said she would be going out for her prayer.
To Bagoas she had said this also.

Beheading of Holofernes. 4 When all had departed, and no one, small or great, was left in the bedroom, Judith stood by Holofernes' bed and said within herself: "O Lord, God of all might, in this hour look graciously on my undertaking for the exaltation of Jerusalem; 5 now is the time for aiding your heritage and for carrying out my design to shatter the enemies who have risen against us."
6 She went to the bedpost near the head of Holofernes, and taking his sword from it, 7 drew close to the bed, grasped the hair of his head, and said,
"Strengthen me this day, O God of Israel!" 8* Then with all her might she struck him twice in the neck and cut off his head. 9 She rolled his body off the bed and took the canopy from its supports.
Soon afterward, she came out and handed over the head of Holofernes to her maid, 10 who put it into her food pouch; and the two went off together as they were accustomed to do for prayer.

The Return to Bethulia. They passed through the camp, and skirting the ravine, reached Bethulia on the mountain.
As they approached its gates, 11 Judith shouted to the guards from a distance:
"Open! Open the gate! God, our God, is with us. Once more he has made manifest his strength in Israel and his power against our enemies; he has done it this very day." 12 When the citizens heard her voice, they quickly descended to their city gate and summoned the city elders. 13 All the people, from the least to the greatest, hurriedly assembled, for her return seemed unbelievable. They opened the gate and welcomed the two women. They made a fire for light; and when they gathered around the two, 14 Judith urged them with a loud voice: "Praise God, praise him! Praise God, who has not withdrawn his mercy from the house of Israel, but has shattered our enemies by my hand this very night." 15* Then she took the head out of the pouch, showed it to them, and said: "Here is the head of Holofernes, general in charge of the Assyrian army, and here is the canopy under which he lay in his drunkenness. The Lord struck him down by the hand of a woman. 16 As the Lord lives, who has protected me in the path I have followed, I swear that it was my face that seduced Holofernes to his ruin, and that he did not sin with me to my defilement or disgrace."

17 All the people were greatly astonished. They bowed down and worshiped God, saying with one accord, "Blessed are you, our God, who today have brought to nought the enemies of your people." 18* Then Uzziah said to her: "Blessed are you, daughter, by the Most High God, above all the women on earth; and blessed be the Lord God, the creator of heaven and earth, who guided your blow at the head of the chief of our enemies. 19 Your deed of hope will never be forgotten by those who tell of the might of God. 20 May God make this redound to your everlasting honor, rewarding you with blessings, because you risked your life when your people were being oppressed, and you averted our disaster, walking uprightly before our God." And all the people answered, "Amen! Amen!"

Judith's Counsel. 1 Then Judith said to them: "Listen to me, my brothers. Take this head and hang it on the parapet of your wall. 2 At daybreak, when the sun rises on the earth, let each of you seize his weapons, and let all the able-bodied men rush out of the city under command of a captain, as if about to go down into the plain against the advance guard of the Assyrians, but without going down. 3 They will seize their armor and hurry to their camp to awaken the generals of the Assyrian army. When they run to the tent of Holofernes and do not find him, panic will seize them, and they will flee before you. 4 Then you and all the other inhabitants of the whole territory of Israel will pursue them and strike them down in their tracks. 5 But before doing this, summon for me Achior the Ammonite, that he may see and recognize the one who despised the house of Israel and sent him here to meet his death."

Achior Summoned. 6† So they called Achior from the house of Uzziah. When he came and saw the head of Holofernes in the hand of one of the men in the assembly of the people, he fell forward in a faint. 7 Then, after they lifted him up, he threw himself at the feet of Judith in homage, saying: "Blessed are you in every tent of Judah; and in every foreign nation, all who hear of you will be struck with terror. 8 But now, tell me all that you did during these days." So Judith told him, in the presence of the people, all that she had been doing from the day she left till the time she began speaking to them. 9 When she finished her account, the people cheered loudly, and their city resounded with shouts of joy. 10 Now Achior, seeing all that the God of Israel had done, believed firmly in him. He had the flesh of his foreskin circumcised, and he has been united with the house of Israel to the present day.

III: VICTORY

Consternation in the Camp. 11 At daybreak they hung the head of Holofernes on the wall. Then all the Israelite men took up their arms and went to the slopes of the mountain. 12 When the Assyrians saw them, they notified their captains; these, in turn, went to the generals and division leaders and all their other commanders. 13 They came to the tent of Holofernes and said to the one in charge of all his things, "Waken our master, for the slaves have dared come down to give us battle, to their utter destruction."

14 Bagoas went in, and knocked at the entry of the tent, presuming that he was sleeping with Judith. 15 As no one answered, he parted the curtains, entered the bedroom, and found him lying on the floor, a headless corpse. 16 He broke into a loud clamor of weeping, groaning, and howling, and rent his garments. 17 Then he entered the tent where Judith had her quarters; and, not finding her, he rushed out to the troops and cried: 18* "The slaves have duped us! A single Hebrew woman has brought disgrace on the house of King Nebuchadnezzar. Here is Holofernes headless on the ground!"

19 When the commanders of the Assyrian army heard these words, they rent their tunics and were seized with consternation. Loud screaming and howling arose in the camp.

1 On hearing what had happened, those still in their tents were amazed, 2 and overcome with fear and trembling. No one kept ranks any longer; they scattered in all directions, and fled along every road, both through the valley and in the mountains. 3 Those also who were stationed in the mountain district around Bethulia took to flight. Then all the Israelite warriors overwhelmed them.

Pursuit. 4 Uzziah sent messengers to Betomasthaim, to Choba and Kona, and to the whole country of Israel to report what had happened, that all might fall upon the enemy and destroy them. 5 On hearing this, all the Israelites, with one accord, attacked them and cut them down as far as Choba. Even those from Jerusalem and the rest of the mountain region took part in this, for they too had been notified of the happenings in the camp of their enemies. The Gileadites and the Galileans struck the enemy's flanks with great slaughter, even beyond Damascus and its territory. 6 The remaining inhabitants of Bethulia swept down on the camp of the Assyrians, plundered it, and acquired great riches. 7* The Israelites who returned from the slaughter took possession of what was left, till the towns and villages in the mountains and on the plain were crammed with the enormous quantity of booty they had seized.

8* The high priest Joakim and the elders of the Israelites, who dwelt in Jerusalem, came to see for themselves the good things that the Lord had done for Israel, and to meet and congratulate Judith. 9† When they had visited her, all with one accord blessed her, saying:

"You are the glory of Jerusalem,
the surpassing joy of Israel;
You are the splendid boast of our people.
10 With your own hand you have done all this;
You have done good to Israel,
and God is pleased with what you have wrought.
May you be blessed by the Lord Almighty
forever and ever!"

And all the people answered, "Amen!"

11 For thirty days the whole populace plundered the camp, giving Judith the tent of Holofernes, with all his silver, his couches, his dishes, and all his furniture which she accepted. She harnessed he mules, hitched her wagons to them, and loaded these things on them.

12* All the women of Israel gathered to see her; and they blessed her and performed a dance in her honor. She took branches in her hands and distributed them to the women around her, 13 and she and the other women crowned themselves with garlands of olive leaves. At the head of all the people, she led the women in the dance, while the men of Israel followed in their armor, wearing garlands and singing hymns.

Hymn of Praise. 14 Judith led all Israel in this song of thanksgiving, and the people swelled this hymn of praise:

CHAPTER 16

a song to my God with timbrels;
chant to the Lord with cymbals!

7 She took off her widow's garb
to raise up the afflicted in Israel.
She anointed her face with fragrant
oil;
8 with a fillet she fastened her tresses,
and put on a linen robe to beguile
him.
9* Her sandals caught his eyes,
and her beauty captivated his mind.
The sword cut through his neck.

10 "The Persians were dismayed at her daring,
the Medes appalled at her bold-
ness.
11 When my lowly ones shouted, they were terrified;
when my weaklings cried out,
they trembled;
at the sound of their war cry, they took to flight.
12 Sons of slave girls pierced them through;
the supposed sons of rebel mothers cut them down;
they perished before the ranks of my Lord.

13* "A new hymn I will sing to my God.
O Lord, great are you and glorious,
wonderful in power and unsur-
passable.
14* Let your every creature serve you;
for you spoke, and they were made,
You sent forth your spirit, and they were created;
no one can resist your word.
15* The mountains to their bases, and
the seas, are shaken;
the rocks, like wax, melt before your glance.
"But to those who fear you,
you are very merciful.

16* Though the sweet odor of every sacrifice is a trifle,
and the fat of all holocausts but little in your sight,
one who fears the Lord is forever
great.

17*† "Woe to the nations that rise against my people!
the Lord Almighty will requite
them;
in the day of judgment he will punish them:
He will send fire and worms into their flesh,
and they shall burn and suffer forever."

Thanksgiving. 18 The people then went to Jerusalem to worship God; when they were purified, they offered their holocausts, freewill offerings, and gifts. 19* Judith dedicated, as a votive offering to God, all the things of Holofernes that the people had given her, as well as the canopy that she herself had taken from his bedroom. 20 For three months the people continued their celebration in Jerusalem before the sanctuary, and Judith remained with them.

Judith's Renown. 21 When those days were over, each one returned to his inheritance. Judith went back to Bethulia and remained on her estate. For the rest of her life she was renowned throughout the land. 22 Many wished to marry her, but she gave herself to no man all the days of her life from the time of the death and burial of her husband, Manasseh. 23* She lived to be very old in the house of her husband, reaching the advanced age of a hundred and five. She died in Bethulia, where they buried her in the tomb of her husband, Manasseh; 24 and the house of Israel mourned her for seven days. Before she died, she distributed her goods to the relatives of her husband, Manasseh, and to her own relatives; and to the maid she gave her freedom.

25*† During the life of Judith and for a long time after her death, no one again disturbed the Israelites.

16, 25: The Vulgate adds: "The feast day of this victory was adopted by the Hebrews into the calendar of their holy days, and has been celebrated by the Jews from that time to the present." However, there is no other evidence of such a festivity; and it is the ancient feast of Passover to which the narrative is especially suited.

ESTHER

The Book of Esther is named after its Jewish heroine. It tells the story of the plot of Haman the Agagite, jealous and powerful vizier of King Xerxes (Ahasuerus) of Persia (485-464 B.C.), to destroy in a single day all the Jews living in the Persian Empire. He is moved to this out of hatred for the Jewish servant Mordecai, who for religious motives refuses to render him homage. The day of the proposed massacre is determined by lot. Meanwhile Esther, niece and adopted daughter of Mordecai, is chosen queen by King Xerxes in place of Vashti. She averts the pogrom planned against her people and has the royal decree of extermination reversed against Haman and the enemies of the Jews. Mordecai replaces Haman, and together with Esther, works for the welfare of their people. The event is celebrated with feasting and great joy, and the memory of it is to be perpetuated by the annual observance of the feast of Purim (lots), when the lot of destruction for the Jews was reversed for one of deliverance and triumph by Queen Esther and her uncle Mordecai.

The purpose of the book is didactic: the glorification of the Jewish people and the explanation of the origin, significance and date of the feast of Purim on the fourteenth and fifteenth of Adar (February-March). The book was intended as a consolation for Israel, a reminder that God's providence continually watches over them, never abandoning them when they serve him faithfully or turn to him in sincere repentance. There is no justification for interpreting the story in mythological or cultic terms, as though Mordecai and Esther represented Marduk and Ishtar in their mythological triumph over two Elamite deities.

The Hebrew text of Esther is found in the Hebrew Bible, where it is the last of the five megilloth (scrolls) read on special feasts of the Jewish liturgical year.

The book is a free composition—not a historical document, despite the Achaemenian coloring of the narrative. Its time of composition may well have been at the end of the Persian Empire, toward the close of the fourth century B.C. The author shows skill in developing his story and in using the art of contrast for instruction and edification. The solution to the difficulties of the book is to be found in its literary presentation rather than in a forced attempt to square detailed data of the narrative with facts. The evident literary motif of the reversal of fortune of the prosperous wicked and the oppressed virtuous through eventual punishment of the former and triumph of the latter, finds parallels in the story of Joseph (Gn 37; 39—45) and of Judith (8—16). The book is vindictive, but it should be remembered that the precept of love of enemies had not yet been taught by the word and example of Christ.

The text of Esther, written originally in Hebrew, was transmitted in two forms: a short Hebrew form and a longer Greek version. The latter contains 107 additional verses, inserted at appropriate places within the Hebrew form of the text. A few of these seem to have a Hebrew origin while the rest are Greek in original composition. It is possible that the Hebrew form of the text is original throughout. If it systematically omits reference to God and his Providence over Israel, this is perhaps due to fear of irreverent response (see note on 4, 14). The Greek text with the above-mentioned additions is probably a later literary paraphrase in which the author seeks to have the reader share his sentiments. This standard Greek text is pre-Christian in origin. The church has accepted the additions as equally inspired with the rest of the book.

In the present translation, the portions preceded by the letters A through F indicate the underlying Greek additions referred to above. The regular chapter numbers apply to the Hebrew text.

The book may be divided as follows:

I: Prologue (A, 1-17)
II: Elevation of Esther (1, 1—2, 23)
III: Haman's Plot against the Jews (3, 1-13; B, 1-7; 3, 14—4, 8; B, 8; 4, 9-16; C, 1—D, 16; 5, 1-14)

IV: Vindication of the Jews (6, 1—8, 12; E, 1-24; 8, 13—10, 3)
V: Epilogue (F, 1-11)

The order of the Vulgate text in relation to the order of the Greek text is as follows:

Vulg. 11, 2—12, 6 = A, 1—17 at the beginning of the book.
13, 1-7 = B, 1—7 after 3, 13.
13, 8—15, 3-19 = C, 1—D, 16 after 4, 16.
15, 1-2 = B, 8.9 after 4, 8.
16, 1-24 = E, 1-24 after 8, 12.
10, 4—10, 13 = F, 1-10 after 10, 3.

I: PROLOGUE

CHAPTER A

Dream of Mordecai. 1*† In the second year of the reign of the great King Ahasuerus, on the first day of Nisan, Mordecai, son of Jair, son of Shimei, son of Kish, of the tribe of Benjamin, had a dream. 2 He was a Jew residing in the city of Susa, a prominent man who served at the king's court, 3* and one of the captives whom Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, had taken from Jerusalem with Jeconiah, king of Judah.

4*† This was his dream. There was noise and tumult, thunder and earthquake—confusion upon the earth. 5 Two great dragons came on, both poised for combat. They uttered a mighty cry, 6 and at their cry every nation prepared for war, to fight against the race of the just. 7 It was a dark and gloomy day. Tribulation and distress, evil and great confusion, lay upon the earth. 8 The whole race of the just were dismayed with fear of the evils to come upon them, and were at the point of destruction. 9* Then they cried out to God, and as they cried, there appeared to come forth a great river, a flood of water from a little spring. 10 The light of the sun broke forth; the lowly were exalted and they devoured the nobles.

11 Having seen this dream and what God intended to do, Mordecai awoke. He kept it in mind, and tried in every way, until night, to understand its meaning.

The Plot Discovered. 12* Mordecai lodged at the court with Bagathan and Thares, two eunuchs of the king who were court guards. 13 He overheard them plotting, investigated their plans, and discovered that they were preparing to lay hands on King Ahasuerus. So he informed the king about them, 14 and the king had the two eunuchs questioned and, upon their confession, put to death. 15 Then the king had these things recorded; Mordecai, too, put them into writing. 16*† The king also appointed Mordecai to serve at the court, and rewarded him for his actions.

17*† Haman, however, son of Hammedatha the Agagite, who was in high honor with the king, sought to harm Mordecai and his people because of the two eunuchs of the king.

CHAPTER 1

The Banquet of Ahasuerus. 1† During the reign of Ahasuerus—this was the Ahasuerus who ruled over a hundred and twenty-seven provinces from India to Ethiopia—2† while he was occupying the royal throne in the stronghold of Susa, 3* in the third year of his reign, he presided over a feast for all his officers and ministers: the Persian and Median aristocracy, the nobles, and the governors of the provinces. 4 For as many as a hundred and eighty days, he displayed the glorious riches of his king-

The genealogy of Mordecai is designed to reflect opposition to Israel's enemy, as narrated in 1 Sm 15, 7ff, where Saul (whose father's name was Kish, of the Tribe of Benjamin) conquered Agag the Amalekite; in A, 17 Haman is said to be the son of an Agagite. Further emphasis on the Benjaminite-Agagite opposition can be seen in Shimei, the Benjaminite who reviled David (2 Sm 16, 5ff). Jair appears to be the minor Judge, a Transjordanian Manassehite (Jgs 10, 3). The chronology of the book would make Mordecai well over one hundred years old, since he was deported with Jehoiachin about 598 B.C.; cf 2, 5f.

5 At the end of this time the king gave a feast of seven days in the garden court of the royal palace for all the people, great and small, who were in the stronghold of Susa. 6 There were white cotton draperies and violet hangings, held by cords of crimson byssus from silver rings on marble pillars. Gold and silver couches were on the pavement, which was of porphyry, marble, mother-of-pearl, and colored stones. 7 Liquor was served in a variety of golden cups, and the royal wine flowed freely, as befitted the king's munificence. 8 By ordinance of the king the drinking was unstinted, for he had instructed all the stewards of his household to comply with the good pleasure of everyone.
9† Queen Vashti also gave a feast for the women inside the royal palace of King Ahasuerus.
Deposal of Vashti. 10* On the seventh day, when the king was merry with wine, he instructed Mehuman, Biztha, Harbona, Bigtha, Abagtha, Zethar, and Carkas, the seven eunuchs who attended King Ahasuerus, 11 to bring Queen Vashti into his presence wearing the royal crown, that he might display her beauty to the populace and the officials, for she was lovely to behold. 12 But Queen Vashti refused to come at the royal order issued through the eunuchs. At this the king's wrath flared up, and he burned with fury. 13 He conferred with the wise men versed in the law, because the king's business was conducted in general consultation with lawyers and jurists. 14* He summoned Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena and Memucan, the seven Persian and Median officials who were in the king's personal service and held first rank in the realm, 15 and asked them, "What is to be done by law with Queen Vashti for disobeying the order of King Ahasuerus issued through the eunuchs?"
16 In the presence of the king and of the officials, Memucan answered: "Queen Vashti has not wronged the king alone, but all the officials and the populace throughout the provinces of King Ahasuerus. 17 For the queen's conduct will become known to all the women, and they will look with disdain upon their husbands when it is reported, 'King Ahasuerus commanded that Queen Vashti be ushered into his presence, but she would not come.' 18 This very day the Persian and Median ladies who hear of the queen's conduct will rebel against all the royal officials, with corresponding disdain and rancor. 19*† If it please the king, let an irrevocable royal decree be issued by him and inscribed among the laws of the Persians and Medes, forbidding Vashti to come into the presence of King Ahasuerus and authorizing the king to give her royal dignity to one more worthy than she. 20 Thus, when the decree which the king will issue is published throughout his realm, vast as it is, all wives will honor their husbands, from the greatest to the least."
21 This proposal found acceptance with the king and the officials, and the king acted on the advice of Memucan. 22† He sent letters to all the royal provinces, to each province in its own script and to each people in its own language, to the effect that every man should be lord in his own home.

Esther Made Queen. 1 After this, when King Ahasuerus' wrath had cooled, he thought over what Vashti had done and what had been decreed against her. 2 Then the king's personal attendants suggested: "Let beautiful young virgins be sought for the king. 3 Let the king appoint commissaries in all the provinces of his realm to bring together all beautiful young virgins to the harem in the stronghold of Susa. Under the care of the royal eunuch Hegai, custodian of the women, let cosmetics be given them. 4 Then the girl who pleases the king shall reign in place of Vashti." This suggestion pleased the king, and he acted accordingly.
5 There was in the stronghold of Susa a certain Jew named Mordecai, son of Jair, son of Shimei, son of Kish, a Benjaminite, 6* who had been exiled from Jerusalem with the captives taken with Jeconiah, king of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, had deported. 7*† He was foster father to Hadassah, that is, Esther, his cousin; for she had lost both father and mother. The girl was beautifully formed and lovely to behold. On the death of her father and mother, Mordecai had taken her as his own daughter.

1, 19: Irrevocable royal decree: the historian Siculus indicates that such a concept of irrevocable laws existed in the time of Darius III (335-331 B.C.), the last of the Persian kings; cf 8, 8.
1, 22: To each province . . . script and to each people . . . language: many languages were spoken in the Persian Empire, the principal ones being Persian, Elamite, Babylonian Aramaic, Phoenician, Egyptian, and Greek. Each of them had its own script.
2, 7: Hadassah (the feminine form of hadas, myrtle), was the name by which this woman would be known among her Jewish compatriots. Esther is a variant of the name of the Babylonian goddess Ishtar.

[8] When the king's order and decree had been obeyed and many maidens brought together to the stronghold of Susa under the care of Hegai, Esther also was brought in to the royal palace under the care of Hegai, custodian of the women. [9] The girl pleased him and won his favor. So he promptly furnished her with cosmetics and provisions. Then picking out seven maids for her from the royal palace, he transferred both her and her maids to the best place in the harem. [10] Esther did not reveal her nationality or family, for Mordecai had commanded her not to do so.

[12] Each girl went in turn to visit King Ahasuerus after the twelve months' preparation decreed for the women. Of this period of beautifying treatment, six months were spent with oil of myrrh, and the other six months with perfumes and cosmetics. [13] Then, when the girl was to visit the king, she was allowed to take with her from the harem to the royal palace whatever she chose. [14]* She would go in the evening and return in the morning to a second harem under the care of the royal eunuch Shaashgaz, custodian of the concubines. She could not return to the king unless he was pleased with her and had her summoned by name.

[15] As for Esther, daughter of Abihail and adopted daughter of his nephew Mordecai, when her turn came to visit the king, she did not ask for anything but what the royal eunuch Hegai, custodian of the women, suggested. Yet she won the admiration of all who saw her. [16] Esther was led to King Ahasuerus in his palace in the tenth month, Tebeth, in the seventh year of his reign. [17] The king loved Esther more than all other women, and of all the virgins she won his favor and benevolence. So he placed the royal diadem on her head and made her queen in place of Vashti. [18]† Then the king gave a great feast in honor of Esther to all his officials and ministers, granting a holiday to the provinces and bestowing gifts with royal bounty.

The Plot Discovered. [19]† [To resume: From the time the virgins had been brought together, and while Mordecai was passing his time at the king's gate, [20] Esther had not revealed her family or nationality, because Mordecai had told her not to; and Esther continued to follow Mordecai's instructions, just as she had when she was being brought up by him. [21]† And during the time that Mordecai spent at the king's gate, Bagathan and Thares, two of the royal eunuchs who guarded the entrance, had plotted in anger to lay hands on King Ahasuerus. [22] When the plot became known to Mordecai, he told Queen Esther, who in turn informed the king for Mordecai. [23]† The matter was investigated and verified, and both of them were hanged on a gibbet. This was written in the annals for the king's use.]

III: HAMAN'S PLOT AGAINST THE JEWS

CHAPTER 3

Mordecai Refuses to Honor Haman. [1]* After these events King Ahasuerus raised Haman, son of Hammedatha the Agagite, to high rank, seating him above all his fellow officials. [2]† All the king's servants who were at the royal gate would kneel and bow down to Haman, for that is what the king had ordered in his regard. Mordecai, however, would not kneel and bow down. [3] The king's servants who were at the royal gate said to Mordecai, "Why do you disobey the king's order?" [4] When they had reminded him day after day and he would not listen to them, they informed Haman, to see whether Mordecai's explanation was acceptable, since he had told them that he was a Jew.

Haman's Reprisal. [5] When Haman observed that Mordecai would not kneel and bow down to him, he was filled with anger. [6] Moreover, he thought it was not enough to lay hands on Mordecai alone. Since they had told Haman of Mordecai's nationality, he sought to destroy all the Jews, Mordecai's people, throughout the realm of King Ahasuerus. [7]*† In the first month, Nisan, in the twelfth year of King Ahasuerus, the pur, or lot, was cast in Haman's presence to determine the day and the month for the destruction of Mordecai's people on a single day, and the lot fell on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar.

man said to King Ahasuerus: "Dispersed among the nations throughout the provinces of your kingdom, there is a certain people living apart, with laws differing from those of every other people. They do not obey the laws of the king, and so it is not proper for the king to tolerate them. 9* If it please the king, let a decree be issued to destroy them; and I will deliver to the procurators ten thousand silver talents for deposit in the royal treasury." 10*† The king took the signet ring from his hand and gave it to Haman, son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the enemy of the Jews. 11 "The silver you may keep," the king said to Haman, "but as for this people, do with them whatever you please."

12 So the royal scribes were summoned; and on the thirteenth day of the first month they wrote, at the dictation of Haman, an order to the royal satraps, the governors of every province, and the officials of every people, to each province in its own script and to each people in its own language. It was written in the name of King Ahasuerus and sealed with the royal signet ring. 13* Letters were sent by couriers to all the royal provinces, that all the Jews, young and old, including women and children, should be killed, destroyed, wiped out in one day, the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar, and that their goods should be seized as spoil.

CHAPTER B

1 This is a copy of the letter:

"The great King Ahasuerus writes to the satraps of the hundred and twenty-seven provinces from India to Ethiopia, and the governors subordinate to them, as follows: 2* When I came to rule many peoples and to hold sway over the whole world, I determined not to be carried away with the sense of power, but always to deal fairly and with clemency; to provide for my subjects a life of complete tranquillity; and by making my government humane and effective as far as the borders, to restore the peace desired by all men. 3* When I consulted my counselors as to how this might be accomplished, Haman, who excels among us in wisdom, who is outstanding for constant devotion and steadfast loyalty, and who has gained the second rank in the kingdom, 4* brought it to our attention that, mixed in with all the races throughout the world, there is one people of bad will, which by its laws is opposed to every other people and continually disregards the decrees of kings, so that the unity of empire blamelessly designed by us cannot be established.

5 "Having noted, therefore, that this most singular people is continually at variance with all men, lives by divergent and alien laws, is inimical to our interests, and commits the worst crimes, so that stability of government cannot be obtained, 6*† we hereby decree that all those who are indicated to you in the letters of Haman, who is in charge of the administration and is a second father to us, shall, together with their wives and children, be utterly destroyed by the swords of their enemies, without any pity or mercy, on the fourteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar, of the current year; 7 so that when these people, whose present ill will is of long standing, have gone down into the nether world by a violent death on a single day, they may at last leave our affairs stable and undisturbed for the future."

3, 14 A copy of the decree to be promulgated as law in every province was published to all the peoples, that they might be prepared for that day. 15 The couriers set out in haste at the king's command; meanwhile, the decree was promulgated in the stronghold of Susa. The king and Haman then sat down to feast, but the city of Susa was thrown into confusion.

CHAPTER 4

Esther's Aid Sought by Mordecai.

1* When Mordecai learned all that was happening, he tore his garments, put on sackcloth and ashes, and walked through the city crying out loudly and bitterly, 2 till he came before the royal gate, which no one clothed in sackcloth might enter. 3 (Likewise in each of the provinces, wherever the king's legal enactment reached, the Jews went into deep mourning, with fasting, weeping, and lament; they all slept on sackcloth and ashes.)

4 Queen Esther's maids and eunuchs came and told her. Overwhelmed with anguish, she sent garments for Mordecai to put on, so that he might take off his sackcloth; but he refused. 5 Esther then summoned Hathach, one of the king's eunuchs whom he had placed at her service, and commanded him to find out what this action of Mordecai meant and the reason for it. 6 So Hathach went out to Mordecai in the public square in

B:[8] "Remember the days of your lowly estate," Mordecai had him say, "when you were brought up in my charge; for Haman, who is second to the king, has asked for our death. [4,9] Invoke the Lord and speak to the king for us: save us from death."

Hathach returned to Esther and told her what Mordecai had said. [10] Then Esther replied to Hathach and gave him this message for Mordecai: [11]* "All the servants of the king and the people of his provinces know that any man or woman who goes to the king in the inner court without being summoned, suffers the automatic penalty of death, unless the king extends to him the golden scepter, thus sparing his life. Now as for me, I have not been summoned to the king for thirty days."

[12] When Esther's words were reported to Mordecai, [13] he had this reply brought to her: "Do not imagine that because you are in the king's palace, you alone of all the Jews will escape. [14]† Even if you now remain silent, relief and deliverance will come to the Jews from another source; but you and your father's house will perish. Who knows but that it was for a time like this that you obtained the royal dignity?"

[15] Esther sent back to Mordecai the response: [16]* "Go and assemble all the Jews who are in Susa; fast on my behalf, all of you, not eating or drinking, night or day, for three days. I and my maids will also fast in the same way. Thus prepared, I will go to the king, contrary to the law. If I perish, I perish!"

CHAPTER C

Prayer of Mordecai. Mordecai went away and did exactly as Esther had commanded. [1] Recalling all that the Lord had done, he prayed to him [2] and said: "O Lord God, almighty King, all things are in your power, and there is no one to oppose you in your will to save Israel. [3] You made heaven and earth and every wonderful thing under the heavens. [4] You are Lord of all, and there is no one who can resist you, Lord. [5]* You know all things. You know, O Lord, that it was not out of insolence or pride or desire for fame that I acted thus in not bowing down to the proud Haman. [6] Gladly would I have kissed the soles of his feet for the salvation of Israel. [7] But I acted as I did so as not to place the honor of man above that of God. I will not bow down to anyone but you, my Lord. It is not out of pride that I am acting thus. [8] And now, Lord God, King, God of Abraham, spare your people, for our enemies plan our ruin and are bent upon destroying the inheritance that was yours from the beginning. [9] Do not spurn your portion, which you redeemed for yourself out of Egypt. [10] Hear my prayer; have pity on your inheritance and turn our sorrow into joy: thus we shall live to sing praise to your name, O Lord. Do not silence those who praise you."

Prayer of Esther. [12]* Queen Esther, seized with mortal anguish, likewise had recourse to the Lord. [13] Taking off her splendid garments, she put on garments of distress and mourning. In place of her precious ointments she covered her head with dirt and ashes. She afflicted her body severely; all her festive adornments were put aside, and her hair was wholly disheveled.

[14] Then she prayed to the Lord, the God of Israel, saying: "My Lord, our King, you alone are God. Help me, who am alone and have no help but you, [15]* for I am taking my life in my hand. [16]* As a child I was wont to hear from the people of the land of my forefathers that you, O Lord, chose Israel from among all peoples, and our fathers from among all their ancestors, as a lasting heritage, and that you fulfilled all your promises to them. [17] But now we have sinned in your sight, and you have delivered us into the hands of our enemies, [18] because we worshiped their gods. You are just, O Lord. [19] But now they are not satisfied with our bitter servitude, but have undertaken [20] to do away with the decree you have pronounced, and to destroy your heritage; to close the mouths of those who praise you, and to extinguish the glory of your temple and your altar; [21] to open the mouths of the heathen to acclaim their false gods, and to extol an earthly king forever.

[22] "O Lord, do not relinquish your scepter to those that are nought. Let them not gloat over our ruin, but turn

Manifest yourself in the time of our distress and give me courage, King of gods and Ruler of every power. 24 Put in my mouth persuasive words in the presence of the lion, and turn his heart to hatred for our enemy, so that he and those who are in league with him may perish. 25 Save us by your power, and help me, who am alone and have no one but you, O Lord.

Save us from the power of the wicked, and deliver me from my fear."

CHAPTER D

Esther Is Received by the King. 1 On the third day, putting an end to her prayers, she took off her penitential garments and arrayed herself in her royal attire. 2 In making her state appearance, after invoking the all-seeing God and savior, she took with her two maids; 3 on the one she leaned gently for support, 4 while the other followed her, bearing her train. 5 She glowed with the perfection of her beauty and her countenance was as joyous as it was lovely, though her heart was shrunk with fear. 6 She passed through all the portals till she stood face to face with the king, who was seated on his royal throne, clothed in full robes of state, and covered with gold and precious stones, so that he inspired great awe. 7 As he looked up, his features ablaze with the height of majestic anger, the queen staggered, changed color, and leaned weakly against the head of the maid in front of her. 8 But God changed the king's anger to gentleness. In great anxiety he sprang from his throne, held her in his arms until she recovered, and comforted her with reassuring words. 9 "What is it, Esther?" he said to her. "I am your brother. Take courage! 10 You shall not die because of this general decree of ours. 11 Come near!" 12* Raising the golden scepter, he touched her neck with it, embraced her, and said, "Speak to me."

13 She replied: "I saw you, my lord, as an angel of God, and my heart was troubled with fear of your majesty. 14 For you are awesome, my lord, though your glance is full of kindness." 15 As she said this, she fainted. 16 The king became troubled and all his attendants tried to revive her.

1† [Now on the third day, Esther put on her royal garments and stood in the inner courtyard, looking toward the royal palace, while the king was seated on his royal throne in the audience chamber, facing the palace doorway. 2 He saw Queen Esther standing in the courtyard, and made her welcome by extending toward her the golden staff which he held. She came up to him, and touched the top of the staff.]

3* Then the king said to her, "What is it, Queen Esther? What is your request? Even if it is half of my kingdom, it shall be granted you." 4 "If it please your majesty," Esther replied, "come today with Haman to a banquet I have prepared." 5 And the king ordered, "Have Haman make haste to fulfill the wish of Esther."

First Banquet of Esther. So the king went with Haman to the banquet Esther had prepared. 6* During the drinking of the wine, the king said to Esther, "Whatever you ask for shall be granted, and whatever request you make shall be honored, even if it is for half my kingdom." 7 Esther replied: "This is my petition and request: 8 if I have found favor with the king and if it pleases your majesty to grant my petition and honor my request, come with Haman tomorrow to a banquet which I shall prepare for you, and then I will do as you ask."

Haman's Plot Against Mordecai. 9* That day Haman left happy and in good spirits. But when he saw that Mordecai at the royal gate did not rise, and showed no fear of him, he was filled with anger toward him. 10 Haman restrained himself, however, and went home where he summoned his friends and his wife Zeresh. 11* He recounted the greatness of his riches, the large number of his sons, and just how the king had promoted him and placed him above the officials and royal servants. 12 "Moreover," Haman added, "Queen Esther invited no one but me to the banquet with the king; again tomorrow I am to be her guest, with the king. 13* Yet none of this satisfies me as long as I continue to see the Jew Mordecai sitting at the royal gate." 14* His wife Zeresh and all his friends said to him, "Have a gibbet set up, fifty cubits in height, and in the morning ask the king to have Mordecai hanged on it. Then go to the banquet with the king in good cheer." This suggestion pleased Haman, and he had the gibbet erected.

IV: VINDICATION OF THE JEWS

CHAPTER 6

Mordecai's Reward from the King. 1 That night the king, unable to sleep, asked that the chronicle of notable events be brought in. While this was being read to him, 2* the passage occurred in which Mordecai reported Bagathan and Teresh, two of the royal eunuchs who guarded the entrance, for seeking to lay hands on King Ahasuerus. 3* The king asked, "What was done to reward and honor Mordecai for this?" The king's attendants replied, "Nothing was done for him."

4* "Who is in the court?" the king asked. Now Haman had entered the outer court of the king's palace to suggest to the king that Mordecai should be hanged on the gibbet he had raised for him. 5 The king's servants answered him, "Haman is waiting in the court." "Let him come in," the king said. 6 When Haman entered, the king said to him, "What should be done for the man whom the king wishes to reward?" Now Haman thought to himself, "Whom would the king more probably wish to reward than me?" 7 So he replied to the king: "For the man whom the king wishes to reward 8 there should be brought the royal robe which the king wore and the horse on which the king rode when the royal crown was placed on his head. 9* The robe and the horse should be consigned to one of the noblest of the king's officials, who must clothe the man the king wishes to reward, have him ride on the horse in the public square of the city, and cry out before him, 'This is what is done for the man whom the king wishes to reward!' " 10* Then the king said to Haman: "Hurry! Take the robe and horse as you have proposed, and do this for the Jew Mordecai, who is sitting at the royal gate. Do not omit anything you proposed." 11 So Haman took the robe and horse, clothed Mordecai, had him ride in the public square of the city, and cried out before him, "This is what is done for the man whom the king wishes to reward!"

12* Mordecai then returned to the royal gate, while Haman hurried home, his head covered in grief. 13 When he told his wife Zeresh and all his friends everything that had happened to him, his advisers and his wife Zeresh said to him, "If Mordecai, before whom you are beginning to decline, is of the Jewish race, you will not prevail against him, but will surely be defeated by him."

Esther's Second Banquet. 14 While they were speaking with him, the king's eunuchs arrived and hurried Haman off to the banquet Esther had prepared.

CHAPTER 7

1 So the king and Haman went to the banquet with Queen Esther. 2* Again, on this second day, during the drinking of the wine, the king said to Esther, "Whatever you ask, Queen Esther, shall be granted you. Whatever request you make shall be honored, even for half the kingdom." 3 Queen Esther replied: "If I have found favor with you, O king, and if it pleases your majesty, I ask that my life be spared, and I beg that you spare the lives of my people. 4* For my people and I have been delivered to destruction, slaughter, and extinction. If we were to be sold into slavery I would remain silent, but as it is, the enemy will be unable to compensate for the harm done to the king." 5* "Who and where," said King Ahasuerus to Queen Esther, "is the man who has dared to do this?" 6 Esther replied, "The enemy oppressing us is this wicked Haman." At this, Haman was seized with dread of the king and queen.

7 The king left the banquet in anger and went into the garden of the palace, but Haman stayed to beg Queen Esther for his life, since he saw that the king had decided on his doom. 8 When the king returned from the garden of the palace to the banquet hall, Haman had thrown himself on the couch on which Esther was reclining; and the king exclaimed, "Will he also violate the queen while she is with me in my own house!" Scarcely had the king spoken when the face of Haman was covered over.

Punishment of Haman. 9* Harbona, one of the eunuchs who attended the king, said, "At the house of Haman stands a gibbet fifty cubits high. Haman prepared it for Mordecai, who gave the report that benefited the king." The king answered, "Hang him on it." 10 So they hanged Haman on the gibbet which he had made ready for Mordecai, and the anger of the king abated.

CHAPTER 8

1* That day King Ahasuerus gave the house of Haman, enemy of the Jews, to Queen Esther; and Mordecai was admitted to the king's presence, for Esther had revealed his relationship to her.
2* The king removed his signet ring from Haman, and transferred it into the keeping of Mordecai; and Esther put Mordecai in charge of the house of Ha-
man.

The Second Royal Decree. 3 In another audience with the king, Esther fell at his feet and tearfully implored him to revoke the harm done by Haman the Agagite, and the plan he had devised against the Jews. 4 The king stretched forth the golden scepter to Esther. So she rose and, standing in his presence, 5* said: "If it pleases your majesty and seems proper to you, and if I have found favor with you and you love me, let a document be issued to revoke the letters which that schemer Haman, son of Hammedatha the Agagite, wrote for the destruction of the Jews in all the royal provinces. 6 For how can I witness the evil that is to befall my people, and how can I behold the destruction of my race?"

7 King Ahasuerus then said to Queen Esther and to the Jew Mordecai: "Now that I have given Esther the house of Haman, and they have hanged him on the gibbet because he attacked the Jews, 8*† you in turn may write in the king's name what you see fit concerning the Jews and seal the letter with the royal signet ring." For whatever is written in the name of the king and sealed with the royal signet ring cannot be revoked.

9 At that time, on the twenty-third day of the third month, Sivan, the royal scribes were summoned. Exactly as Mordecai dictated, they wrote to the Jews and to the satraps, governors, and officials of the hundred and twenty-seven provinces from India to Ethiopia:
to each province in its own script and to each people in its own language, and to the Jews in their own script and language. 10 These letters, which he wrote in the name of King Ahasuerus and sealed with the royal signet ring, he sent by mounted couriers riding thoroughbred royal steeds. 11* In these letters the king authorized the Jews in each and every city to group together and defend their lives, and to kill, destroy, wipe out, along with their wives and children, every armed group of any nation or province which should attack them, and to seize their goods as spoil 12 throughout the provinces of King Ahasuerus, on a single day, the thirteenth of the twelfth month, Adar.

CHAPTER E

1 The following is a copy of the letter:
"King Ahasuerus the Great to the governors of the provinces in the hundred and twenty-seven satrapies from India to Ethiopia, and to those responsible for our interests: Greetings!

2 "Many have become the more ambitious the more they were showered with honors through the bountiful generosity of their patrons. 3 Not only do they seek to do harm to our subjects; incapable of bearing such greatness, they even begin plotting against their own benefactors.
4 Not only do they drive out gratitude from among men; with the arrogant boastfulness of those to whom goodness has no meaning, they suppose they will escape the vindictive judgment of the all-seeing God.

5 "Often, too, the fair speech of friends entrusted with the administration of affairs has induced many placed in authority to become accomplices in the shedding of innocent blood, and has involved them in irreparable calamities 6 by deceiving with malicious slander
the sincere good will of rulers. 7 This can be verified in the ancient stories that have been handed down to us, but more fully when one considers the wicked deeds perpetrated in your midst by the pestilential influence of those undeserv-ing of authority. 8* We must provide for the future, so as to render the kingdom undisturbed and peaceful for all men, 9 taking advantage of changing conditions and deciding always with equitable treatment matters coming to our attention.

10† "For instance, Haman, son of Hammedatha, a Macedonian, certainly not of Persian blood, and very different from us in generosity, was hospitably received by us. 11* He so far enjoyed the good will which we have toward all peoples that he was proclaimed 'father of the king,' before whom everyone was to bow down; he attained the rank second

† 8, 8: Whatever is written . . . cannot be revoked: the king cannot directly grant Esther's request (v 5) to revoke the previous decree against the Jews because of the irrevocable character of the laws of the Medes and Persians (1, 19; Dn 6, 9); but he empowers Esther to issue a new decree in his name which renders the earlier decree without effect; cf 3, 12f.

E, 10: Macedonian: a redactor of the book in the Hellenistic period used the designation Macedonian, here and in v 14, to express, after Macedonia's conquest of Persia, the most odious kind of man that a Persian ruler could be supposed to think of; the Hebrew text, for a similar reason, called Haman an Agagite. See note on A, 17.

to the royal throne. 12 But, unequal to this dignity, he strove to deprive us of kingdom and of life; 13* and by weaving intricate webs of deceit, he demanded the destruction of Mordecai, our savior and constant benefactor, and of Esther, our blameless royal consort, together with their whole race. 14 For by such measures he hoped to catch us defenseless and to transfer the rule of the Persians to the Macedonians. 15 But we find that the Jews, who were doomed to extinction
by this archcriminal, are not evildoers, but rather are governed by very just laws 16 and are the children of the Most High, the living God of majesty, who has maintained the kingdom in a flourishing condition for us and for our forebears.
17 "You will do well, then, to ignore the letter sent by Haman, son of Hammedatha, 18* for he who composed it has been hanged, together with his entire household, before the gates of Susa.
Thus swiftly has God, who governs all,
brought just punishment upon him.
19 "You shall exhibit a copy of this letter publicly in every place, to certify that the Jews may follow their own laws, 20 and that you may help them on the day set for their ruin, the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar, to defend themselves against those who attack them. 21 For God, the ruler of all, has turned that day for them from one of destruction of the chosen race into one of joy. 22 Therefore, you too must celebrate this memorable day among your designated feasts with all rejoicing, 23 so that both now and in the future it may be, for us and for loyal Persians, a celebration of victory, and for those who plot against us a reminder of destruction.
24* "Every city and province, without exception, that does not observe this decree shall be ruthlessly destroyed with fire and sword, so that it will be left not merely untrodden by men, but even shunned by wild beasts and birds forever."

CHAPTER 8

13† A copy of the letter to be promulgated as law in each and every province was published among all the peoples, so that the Jews might be prepared on that day to avenge themselves on their enemies. 14 Couriers mounted on royal steeds sped forth in haste at the king's order, and the decree was promulgated in the stronghold of Susa.
15* Mordecai left the king's presence clothed in a royal robe of violet and of white cotton, with a large crown of gold and a cloak of crimson byssus. The city of Susa shouted with joy, 16 and there was splendor and merriment for the Jews, exultation and triumph. 17* In each and every province and in each and every city, wherever the king's order arrived, there was merriment and exultation, banqueting and feasting for the Jews. And many of the peoples of the land embraced Judaism, for they were seized with a fear of the Jews.

CHAPTER 9

Victory of the Jews. 1* When the day arrived on which the order decreed by the king was to be carried out, the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar, on which the enemies of the Jews had expected to become masters of them, the situation was reversed: the Jews became masters of their enemies. 2 The Jews mustered in their cities throughout the provinces of King Ahasuerus to attack those who sought to do them harm, and no one could withstand them, but all peoples were seized with a fear of them.
3 Moreover, all the officials of the provinces, the satraps, governors, and royal procurators supported the Jews from fear of Mordecai; 4 for Mordecai was powerful in the royal palace, and the report was spreading through all the provinces that he was continually growing in power.
5* The Jews struck down all their enemies with the sword, killing and destroying them; they did to their enemies as they pleased. 6* In the stronghold of Susa, the Jews killed and destroyed five hundred men. 7 They also killed Par-shandatha, Dalphon, Aspatha, 8 Porathai, Adalia, Aridatha, 9 Parmashta, Arisai, Aridai, and Vaizatha, 10*† the ten sons of Haman, son of Hammedatha, the foe of the Jews. However, they did not engage in plundering.
11 On the same day, when the number of those killed in the stronghold of Susa was reported to the king, 12 he said to Queen Esther: "In the stronghold of Susa the Jews have killed and destroyed five hundred men, as well as the ten sons of Haman. What must they have done in the other royal provinces! You shall again be granted whatever you ask, and whatever you request shall be honored."
13 So Esther said, "If it pleases your majesty, let the Jews in Susa be permitted again tomorrow to act according to today's decree, and let the ten sons of Haman be hanged on gibbets." [14]* The king then gave an order to this effect, and the decree was published in Susa. So the ten sons of Haman were hanged, [15]*† and the Jews in Susa mustered again on the fourteenth of the month of Adar and killed three hundred men in Susa. However, they did not engage in plundering.

[16]*† The other Jews, who dwelt in the royal provinces, also mustered and defended themselves, and obtained rest from their enemies. They killed seventy-five thousand of their foes, without engaging in plunder, [17] on the thirteenth day of the month of Adar. On the fourteenth of the month they rested, and made it a day of feasting and rejoicing.

[18] (The Jews in Susa, however, mustered on the thirteenth and fourteenth of the month. But on the fifteenth they rested, and made it a day of feasting and rejoicing.) [19] That is why the rural Jews, who dwell in villages, celebrate the fourteenth of the month of Adar as a day of rejoicing and feasting, a holiday on which they send gifts of food to one another.

The Feast of Purim. [20] Mordecai recorded these events and sent letters to all the Jews, both near and far, in all the provinces of King Ahasuerus. [21] He ordered them to celebrate every year both the fourteenth and the fifteenth of the month of Adar [22] as the days on which the Jews obtained rest from their enemies and as the month which was turned for them from sorrow into joy, from mourning into festivity. They were to observe these days with feasting and gladness, sending food to one another and gifts to the poor. [23]* The Jews took upon themselves for the future this observance which they instituted at the written direction of Mordecai.

[24]* Haman, son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the foe of all the Jews, had planned to destroy them and had cast the pur, or lot, for the time of their defeat and destruction. [25]* Yet, when Esther entered the royal presence, the king ordered in writing that the wicked plan Haman had devised against the Jews should instead be turned against Haman and that he and his sons should be hanged on gibbets. [26] And so these days have been named Purim after the word pur.

Thus, because of all that was contained in this letter, and because of what they had witnessed and experienced in this affair, [27]* the Jews established and took upon themselves, their descendants, and all who should join them, the inviolable obligation of celebrating these two days every year in the manner prescribed by this letter, and at the time appointed. [28] These days were to be commemorated and kept in every generation, by every clan, in every province, and in every city. These days of Purim were never to fall into disuse among the Jews, nor into oblivion among their descendants.

[29]† Queen Esther, daughter of Abihail and of Mordecai the Jew, wrote to confirm with full authority this second letter about Purim, [30]* when Mordecai sent documents concerning peace and security to all the Jews in the hundred and twenty-seven provinces of Ahasuerus' kingdom. [31]† Thus were established, for their appointed time, these days of Purim which Mordecai the Jew and Queen Esther had designated for the Jews, just as they had previously enjoined upon themselves and upon their race the duty of fasting and supplication. [32] The command of Esther confirmed these prescriptions for Purim and was recorded in the book.

CHAPTER 10

[1] King Ahasuerus laid tribute on the land and on the islands of the sea. [2] All the acts of his power and valor, as well as a detailed account of the greatness of Mordecai, whom the king promoted, are recorded in the chronicles of the kings of Media and Persia. [3]* The Jew Mordecai was next in rank to King Ahasuerus, in high standing among the Jews, and was regarded with favor by his many brethren, as the promoter of his people's welfare and the herald of peace for his whole race.

† 9, 15: This second slaughter explains the two dates (13th and 14th) of the Purim celebration by Jews in Susa (v 18).

9, 16: Seventy-five thousand: according to the Greek text this number was fifteen thousand.

9, 29: Queen Esther, daughter of Abihail and of Mordecai: the natural offspring of Abihail and adopted daughter of Mordecai; cf 2, 15. This second letter: for the burden of this letter see 9, 20ff. It was endorsed by Queen Esther. The first letter, written in the king's name, is referred to in 8, 9.

9, 31: Fasting and supplication: as the Jews had previously undertaken the duty of fasting and supplication to prevent the impending disaster, they now observe days of festival to commemorate their deliverance—in both cases (cf 4, 3.15f) at the request of Mordecai and Esther.

2 I recall the dream I had about these very things, and not a single detail has been left unfulfilled—3 the tiny spring that grew into a river, the light of the sun, the many waters. The river is Esther, whom the king married and made queen. 4 The two dragons are myself and Haman. 5 The nations are those who assembled to destroy the name of the Jews, 6 but my people is Israel, who cried to God and was saved.

"The LORD saved his people and delivered us from all these evils. God worked signs and great wonders, such as have not occurred among the nations. 7† For this purpose he arranged two lots: one for the people of God, the second for all the other nations. 8 These two lots were fulfilled in the hour, the time, and the day of judgment before God and among all the nations. 9 God remembered his people and rendered justice to his inheritance.

10*† "Gathering together with joy and happiness before God, they shall celebrate these days on the fourteenth and fifteenth of the month Adar throughout all future generations of his people Israel."

• 10: 3, 7; 9,17f.21.24-28.

† F, 7: Two lots: in this passage of the Greek text, which gives a more religious interpretation of the feast, the two lots are drawn by God to determine, respectively, the destiny of Israel and that of the nations. In 3, 7 above, translated from the Hebrew text, the feast is called Purim because of the lots which Aman cast to determine the day for the extinction of the Jews.

F, 10: The Greek text of Esther contains a postscript as follows:

In the fourth year of the reign of Ptolemy and Cleopatra, Dositheus, who said he was a priest and Levite, and his son Ptolemy brought the present letter of Purim, saying that it was genuine and that Lysimachus, son of Ptolemy, of the community of Jerusalem, had translated it.

The date referred to in this postscript is most probably 78-77 B.C., in the reign of Ptolemy XII and Cleopatra V.

The First Book of

MACCABEES

The name Maccabee, probably meaning "hammer," is actually applied in the Books of Maccabees to only one man, Judas, third son of the priest Mattathias and first leader of the revolt against the Seleucid kings who persecuted the Jews (1 Mc 2, 4.66; 2 Mc 8, 5.16; 10, 1.16). Traditionally the name has come to be applied to the brothers of Judas, his supporters, and even to other Jewish heroes of the period, such as the seven brothers (2 Mc 7).

The two Books of Maccabees, placed last in the Douai version of the Old Testament, contain independent accounts of events in part identical which accompanied the attempted suppression of Judaism in Palestine in the second century B.C. The vigorous reaction to this attempt established for a time the religious and political independence of the Jews.

1 Maccabees was written about 100 B.C., in Hebrew, but the original has not come down to us. Instead, we have an early, pre-Christian, Greek translation full of Hebrew idioms. The author, probably a Palestinian Jew, is unknown. He was familiar with the traditions and sacred books of his people and had access to much reliable information on their recent history (from 175 to 134 B.C.). He may well have played some part in it himself in his youth. His purpose in writing is to record the salvation of Israel which God worked through the family of Mattathias (5, 62)—especially through his three sons, Judas, Jonathan, and Simon, and his grandson, John Hyrcanus. Implicitly the writer compares their virtues and their exploits with those of the ancient heroes, the Judges, Samuel, and David.

There are seven poetic sections in the book which imitate the style of classical Hebrew poetry: four laments (1, 25-28.36-40; 2, 8-13; 3, 45), and three hymns of praise of "our fathers" (2, 51-64), of Judas (3, 3-9), and of Simon (14, 4-15).

The doctrine expressed in the book is the customary belief of Israel, without the new developments which appear in 2 Maccabees and Daniel. The people of Israel have been specially chosen by the one true God as his covenant-partner, and they alone are privileged to know him and worship him. He is their eternal benefactor and their unfailing source of help. The people, in turn, must be loyal to his exclusive worship and must observe exactly the precepts of the law he has given them.

There is no doctrine of individual immortality except in the survival of one's name and fame, nor does the book express any messianic expectation, though messianic images are applied historically to "the days of Simon" (14, 4-17). In true deuteronomic tradition, the author insists on fidelity to the law as the expression of Israel's love for God. The contest which he describes is a struggle, not simply between Jew and Gentile, but between those who would uphold the law and those, Jews or Gentiles, who would destroy it. His severest condemnation goes, not to the Seleucid politicians, but to the lawless apostates among his own people, adversaries of Judas and his brothers, who are models of faith and loyalty.

1 Maccabees has importance also for the New Testament. Salvation is paralleled with Jewish national aspirations (1 Mc 4, 46—14, 41), in contrast to the universal reign of God taught by Christ in the Gospel (Mt 13, 47-50; 22, 1-14). Also, destruction of the wall of the temple separating Jew from Gentile is an act of desecration in 1 Mc 9, 54 but in Eph 2, 14, an act of redemption and unification of both through Christ. On the other hand, association, in 1 Mc 2, 52, of Abraham's offering up of Isaac (Gn 22) with his justification by God (Gn 15, 6) is reflected in Jn 2, 21f, just as the Scriptures are regarded as a source of consolation in 1 Mc 12, 9 and in Rom 15, 4.

The Books of Maccabees, though regarded by Jews and Protestants as apocryphal, i.e., not inspired Scripture, because not contained in the Palestinian Canon or list of books drawn up at the end of the first century A.D., have nevertheless always been accepted by the Catholic Church as inspired, on the basis of apostolic tradition.

1 Maccabees is divided as follows:
I: Introduction: Hellenism in Asia Minor (1, 1-9)
II: The Maccabean Revolt (1, 10—2, 70)
III: Leadership of Judas Maccabeus (3, 1—9, 22)
IV: Leadership of Jonathan (9, 23—12, 54)
V: Simon, High Priest and Ethnarch (13, 1—16, 24)

I: INTRODUCTION: HELLENISM IN ASIA MINOR

CHAPTER 1

Conquests and Death of Alexander.
1* † After Alexander the Macedonian, Philip's son, who came from the land of Kittim, had defeated Darius, king of the Persians and Medes, he became king in his place, having first ruled in Greece.
2 He fought many campaigns, captured fortresses, and put kings to death. 3 He advanced to the ends of the earth, gathering plunder from many nations; the earth fell silent before him, and his heart became proud and arrogant. 4 He collected a very strong army and conquered provinces, nations, and rulers, and they became his tributaries. 5 But after all this he took to his bed, realizing that he was going to die. 6 He therefore summoned his officers, the nobles, who had been brought up with him from his youth, to divide his kingdom among them while he was still alive. 7† Alexander had reigned twelve years when he died.
8 So his officers took over his kingdom, each in his own territory, 9 and after his death they all put on royal crowns, and so did their sons after them for many years, causing much distress over the earth.

II: THE MACCABEAN REVOLT

Pact between Jews and Gentiles.
10* † There sprang from these a sinful offshoot, Antiochus Epiphanes, son of King Antiochus, once a hostage at Rome. He became king in the year one hundred and thirty-seven of the kingdom of the Greeks.
11* In those days there appeared in Israel men who were breakers of the law, and they seduced many people, saying: "Let us go and make an alliance with the Gentiles all around us; since we separated from them, many evils have come upon us." 12 The proposal was agreeable; 13* some from among the people promptly went to the king, and he authorized them to introduce the way of living of the Gentiles. 14† Thereupon they built a gymnasium in Jerusalem according to the Gentile custom. 15* They covered over the mark of their circumcision and abandoned the holy covenant; they allied themselves with the Gentiles and sold themselves to wrongdoing.

Egyptian Campaign of Antiochus.
16 When his kingdom seemed secure, Antiochus proposed to become king of Egypt, so as to rule over both kingdoms.
17*† He invaded Egypt with a strong force, with chariots and elephants, and with a large fleet, 18 to make war on Ptolemy, king of Egypt. Ptolemy was frightened at his presence and fled, leaving many casualties. 19 The fortified cities in the land of Egypt were captured, and Antiochus plundered the land of Egypt.

Persecution of the Jews.
20*† After Antiochus had defeated Egypt in the year one hundred and forty-three, he returned and went up to Israel and to Jerusalem with a strong force. 21 He insolently invaded the sanctuary and took away the golden altar, the lampstand for the light with all its fixtures, 22 the offering table, the cups and the bowls, the

† 1,1: Land of Kittim: Greece. The name referred originally to inhabitants of Kiti, capital of the isle of Cyprus, then to any Cypriots (Is 23, 1; Jer 2, 10), later to Greeks in general, and finally even to Romans. See note on Dn 11, 30. Darius: Darius III, Codoman (336-331 B.C.).

1, 7: Twelve years: 336-323 B.C.

1, 10: The year one hundred and thirty-seven: Antiochus IV seized the throne in September, 175 B.C. Dates are given in this book according to the Seleucid era, which however was reckoned in two different ways. Antiochians considered this date to be October, 312 B.C. (Syrian calendar), while Babylonians and Jewish priests accepted April, 311 B.C. as the commencement of the era (temple calendar). The author of 1 Mc dates political events by the Syrian calendar but religious events by the temple calendar. Accordingly, the civil New Year occurred variously in September or October, the religious New Year in March or April.

1, 14: Gymnasium: symbol and center of athletic and intellectual life, it was the chief instrument of Hellenistic propaganda. Jewish youth were attracted by sports and encouraged to join youth clubs. They received training in military skills and in the duties of citizens. Through participation in the intellectual life, many were gradually won over to paganism.

1, 17: Elephants: an important part of Seleucid armament. About 300 B.C. Seleucus I, founder of the dynasty, procured five hundred of them from India; cf 6, 34-37.

1, 20: Defeated Egypt in the year one hundred and forty-three: 169 B.C. No mention is made in 1 Mc of the second expedition to Egypt a year later, described in 2 Mc 5, 1.11. Dn 11, 25.19 records both.

golden censers, the curtain, the crowns,
and the golden ornament on the façade of the temple. He stripped off everything, [23] and took away the gold and silver and the precious vessels; he also took all the hidden treasures he could find.
[24] Taking all this, he went back to his own country, after he had spoken with great arrogance and shed much blood.

[25] And there was great mourning for Israel, in every place where they dwelt,
[26] and the rulers and the elders
groaned.
Virgins and young men languished,
and the beauty of the women was disfigured.
[27] Every bridegroom took up lamenta-
tion,
she who sat in the bridal chamber mourned, [28] And the land was shaken on account of its inhabitants,
and all the house of Jacob was covered with shame.

[29]* Two years later, the king sent the Mysian commander to the cities of Judah, and he came to Jerusalem with a strong force. [30] He spoke to them deceitfully in peaceful terms, and won their trust. Then he attacked the city suddenly, in a great onslaught, and destroyed many of the people in Israel.
[31] He plundered the city and set fire to it, demolished its houses and its surrounding walls, [32] took captive the women and children, and seized the cattle. [33]*† Then they built up the City of David with a high, massive wall and strong towers, and it became their citadel. [34] There they installed a sinful race, perverse men, who fortified themselves
inside it, [35] storing up weapons and provisions, and depositing there the plunder they had collected from Jerusalem. And they became a great threat.

[36] The citadel became an ambush against the sanctuary,
and a wicked adversary to Israel
at all times.
[37] And they shed innocent blood
around the sanctuary;
they defiled the sanctuary.
[38] Because of them the inhabitants of Jerusalem fled away,
and she became the abode of
strangers.
She became a stranger to her own
offspring,
and her children forsook her.
[39]* Her sanctuary was as desolate as a wilderness;
her feasts were turned into
mourning,
Her sabbaths to shame,
her honor to contempt.
[40] Her dishonor was as great as her glory had been,
and her exaltation was turned into
mourning.

Prohibitions against Religion. [41] Then the king wrote to his whole kingdom that all should be one people, [42] each abandoning his particular customs. All the Gentiles conformed to the command of the king, [43] and many Israelites were in favor of his religion; they sacrificed to idols and profaned the sabbath.

[44]* The king sent messengers with letters to Jerusalem and to the cities of Judah, ordering them to follow customs foreign to their land; [45] to prohibit holocausts, sacrifices, and libations in the sanctuary, to profane the sabbaths and feast days, [46]* to desecrate the sanctuary and the sacred ministers, [47] to build pagan altars and temples and shrines,
to sacrifice swine and unclean animals, [48] to leave their sons uncircumcised, and to let themselves be defiled with every kind of impurity and abomination, [49] so that they might forget the law and change all their observances. [50]* Whoever refused to act according to the command of the king should be put to death.
[51] Such were the orders he published throughout his kingdom. He appointed inspectors over all the people, and he ordered the cities of Judah to offer sacrifices, each city in turn. [52] Many of the people, those who abandoned the law, joined them and committed evil in the land. [53] Israel was driven into hiding, wherever places of refuge could be found.

[54]*† On the fifteenth day of the month Chislev, in the year one hundred and forty-five, the king erected the horrible abomination upon the altar of holocausts, and in the surrounding cities of Judah they built pagan altars. [55] They also burnt incense at the doors of houses and in the streets. [56]† Any scrolls of the

It was occupied for twenty-six years by the Syro-Macedonian garrison, together with apostate Jews, and was a continual threat to the temple and the Jewish people (v 36); cf 13, 49ff.

law which they found they tore up and burnt. 57* Whoever was found with a scroll of the covenant, and whoever observed the law, was condemned to death by royal decree. 58 So they used their power against Israel, against those who were caught, each month, in the cities. 59 On the twenty-fifth day of each month they sacrificed on the altar erected over the altar of holocausts. 60* Women who had had their children circumcised were put to death, in keeping with the decree, 61 with the babies hung from their necks; their families also and those who had circumcised them were killed. 62 But many in Israel were determined and resolved in their hearts not to eat anything unclean; 63* they preferred to die rather than to be defiled with unclean food or to profane the holy covenant; and they did die. Terrible affliction was upon Israel.

CHAPTER 2

Mattathias and His Sons. 1† In those days Mattathias, son of John, son of Simeon, a priest of the family of Joarib, left Jerusalem and settled in Modein. 2* He had five sons: John, who was called Gaddi; 3 Simon, who was called Thassi; 4 Judas, who was called Maccabeus; 5 Eleazar, who was called Avaran; and Jonathan, who was called Apphus. 6 When he saw the sacrileges that were being committed in Judah and in Jerusalem, 7 he said: "Woe is me! Why was I born to see the ruin of my people and the ruin of the holy city, and to sit idle while it is given into the hands of enemies, and the sanctuary into the hands of strangers?

8 "Her temple has become like a man disgraced,
9* her glorious ornaments have been carried off as spoils,
Her infants have been murdered in her streets,
her young men by the sword of the enemy.
10 What nation has not taken its share of her realm,
and laid its hand on her possessions?
11 All her adornment has been taken away.
From being free, she has become a slave.
12 We see our sanctuary and our beauty
and our glory laid waste,
And the Gentiles have defiled them!
13 Why are we still alive?"

14 Then Mattathias and his sons tore their garments, put on sackcloth, and mourned bitterly.

Pagan Worship Refused. 15 The officers of the king in charge of enforcing the apostasy came to the city of Modein to organize the sacrifices. 16 Many of Israel joined them, but Mattathias and his sons gathered in a group apart. 17 Then the officers of the king addressed Mattathias: "You are a leader, an honorable and great man in this city, supported by sons and kinsmen. 18† Come now, be the first to obey the king's command, as all the Gentiles and the men of Judah and those who are left in Jerusalem have done. Then you and your sons shall be numbered among the King's Friends, and shall be enriched with silver and gold and many gifts." 19 But Mattathias answered in a loud voice: "Although all the Gentiles in the king's realm obey him, so that each forsakes the religion of his fathers and consents to the king's orders, 20 yet I and my sons and my kinsmen will keep to the covenant of our fathers. 21 God forbid that we should forsake the law and the commandments. 22 We will not obey the words of the king nor depart from our religion in the slightest degree."

23 As he finished saying these words, a certain Jew came forward in the sight of all to offer sacrifice on the altar in Modein according to the king's order. 24 When Mattathias saw him, he was filled with zeal; his heart was moved and his just fury was aroused; he sprang forward and killed him upon the altar. 25 At the same time, he also killed the messenger of the king who was forcing them to sacrifice, and he tore down the altar. 26* Thus he showed his zeal for the law, just as Phinehas did with Zimri, son of Salu.

27 Then Mattathias went through the city shouting, "Let everyone who is zealous for the law and who stands by the covenant follow after me!" 28* Thereupon he fled to the mountains with his sons, leaving behind in the city all their possessions. 29† Many who sought to live according to righteousness and religious custom went out into the desert to settle there, 30 they and their sons, their wives and their cattle, because misfortunes pressed so hard on them.

31 It was reported to the officers and

2, 1: Modein: a village twenty miles northwest of Jerusalem.

2, 18: The King's Friends: a regular order of nobility at Hellenistic courts. The various grades are frequently mentioned in this book: Friends, Chief Friends, Kinsmen.

soldiers of the king who were in the City of David, in Jerusalem, that certain men who had flouted the king's order had gone out to the hiding places in the desert. 32* Many hurried out after them, and having caught up with them, camped opposite and prepared to attack them on the sabbath. 33 "Enough of this!" the pursuers said to them. "Come out and obey the king's command, and your lives will be spared." 34 But they replied, "We will not come out, nor will we obey the king's command to profane the sabbath." 35 Then the enemy attacked them at once; 36 but they did not retaliate; they neither threw stones, nor blocked up their own hiding places. 37 They said, "Let us all die without reproach; heaven and earth are our witnesses that you destroy us unjustly." 38 So the officers and soldiers attacked them on the sabbath, and they died with their wives, their children and their cattle, to the number of a thousand persons.

39 When Mattathias and his friends heard of it, they mourned deeply for them. 40 "If we all do as our kinsmen have done," they said to one another, "and do not fight against the Gentiles for our lives and our traditions, they will soon destroy us from the earth." 41 On that day they came to this decision: "Let us fight against anyone who attacks us on the sabbath, so that we may not all die as our kinsmen died in the hiding places."

42† Then they were joined by a group of Hasideans, valiant Israelites, all of them devout followers of the law. 43 And all those who were fleeing from the disaster joined them and supported them. 44* They gathered an army and struck down sinners in their anger and lawbreakers in their wrath, and the survivors fled to the Gentiles for safety. 45 Mattathias and his friends went about and tore down the pagan altars; 46 they also enforced circumcision for any uncircumcised boys whom they found in the territory of Israel. 47 They put to flight the arrogant, and the work prospered in their hands. 48 They saved the law from the hands of the Gentiles and of the kings and did not let the sinner triumph.

Death of Mattathias. 49 When the time came for Mattathias to die, he said to his sons: "Arrogance and scorn have now grown strong; it is a time of disaster and violent anger. 50 Therefore, my sons, be zealous for the law and give your lives for the covenant of our fathers.

51 "Remember the deeds that our fathers did in their times,
and you shall win great glory and an everlasting name.
52* Was not Abraham found faithful in trial,
and it was reputed to him as uprightness?
53* Joseph, when in distress, kept the commandment,
and he became master of Egypt.
54* Phinehas our father, for his burning zeal, received the covenant of an everlasting priesthood.
55* Joshua, for executing his commission,
became a judge in Israel.
56* Caleb, for bearing witness before the assembly,
received an inheritance in the land.
57* David, for his piety,
received as a heritage a throne of everlasting royalty.
58* Elijah, for his burning zeal for the law,
was taken up to heaven.
59* Hananiah, Azariah and Mishael, for their faith,
were saved from the fire.
60* Daniel, for his innocence,
was delivered from the jaws of lions.
61 And so, consider this from generation to generation,
that none who hope in him shall fail in strength.
62 Do not fear the words of a sinful man,
for his glory ends in corruption and worms.
63 Today he is exalted, and tomorrow he is not to be found, because he has returned to his dust,
and his schemes have perished.
64 Children! be courageous and strong in keeping the law,
for by it you shall be glorified.

65 "Here is your brother Simeon who I know is a wise man; listen to him always, and he will be a father to you. 66 And Judas Maccabeus, a warrior from his youth, shall be the leader of your army and direct the war against the nations. 67 You shall also gather about you all who observe the law, and you shall avenge the wrongs of your people. 68 Pay back

69 Then he blessed them, and he was united with his fathers. 70† He died in the year one hundred and forty-six, and was buried in the tombs of his fathers in Modein, and all Israel mourned him greatly.

III: LEADERSHIP OF JUDAS MACCABEUS

CHAPTER 3

Defeat of Apollonius and Seron. 1 Then his son Judas, who was called Maccabeus, took his place. 2 All his brothers and all who had joined his father supported him, and they carried on Israel's war joyfully.

3* He spread abroad the glory of his people, and put on his breastplate like a giant.
He armed himself with weapons of war;
he planned battles and protected the camp with his sword.
4 In his actions he was like a lion,
like a young lion roaring for prey.
5 He pursued the wicked, hunting them out,
and those who troubled his people he destroyed by fire.
6 The lawbreakers were cowed by fear of him,
and all evildoers were dismayed.
By his hand redemption was happily achieved,
7 and he afflicted many kings;
He made Jacob glad by his deeds,
and his memory is blessed forever.
8 He went about the cities of Judah destroying the impious there.
He turned away wrath from Israel 9 and was renowned to the ends of the earth;
he gathered together those who were perishing.

10† Then Apollonius gathered the Gentiles, together with a large army from Samaria, to fight against Israel. 11 When Judas learned of it, he went out to meet him and defeated and killed him. Many fell wounded, and the rest fled. 12 Their possessions were seized and the sword of Apollonius was taken by Judas, who fought with it the rest of his life.
13 But Seron, commander of the Syrian army, heard that Judas had gathered many about him, an assembly of faithful men ready for war. 14 So he said, "I will make a name for myself and win glory in the kingdom by defeating Judas and his followers, who have despised the king's command." 15 And again a large company of renegades advanced with him to help him take revenge on the Israelites. 16† When he reached the ascent of Beth-horon, Judas went out to meet him with a few men. 17 But when they saw the army coming against them, they said to Judas: "How can we, few as we are, fight such a mighty host as this? Besides, we are weak today from fasting." 18 But Judas said: "It is easy for many to be overcome by a few; in the sight of Heaven there is no difference between deliverance by many or by few; 19* for victory in war does not depend upon the size of the army, but on strength that comes from Heaven. 20 With great presumption and lawlessness they come against us to destroy us and our wives and children and to despoil us; 21 but we are fighting for our lives and our laws. 22† He himself will crush them before us; so do not be afraid of them." 23 When he finished speaking, he rushed suddenly upon Seron and his army, who were crushed before him. 24*† He pursued Seron down the descent of Beth-horon into the plain. About eight hundred of their men fell, and the rest fled to the country of the Philistines. 25 Then Judas and his brothers began to be feared, and dread fell upon the Gentiles about them. 26 His fame reached the king, and all the Gentiles talked about the battles of Judas.
Regency of Lysias. 27 When Antiochus heard about these events, he was angry; so he ordered a muster of all the forces of his kingdom, a very strong army. 28 He opened his treasure chests, gave his soldiers a year's pay, and commanded them to be prepared for anything. 29 He then found that this exhausted the money in his treasury; moreover the income from the province was small, because of the dissension and distress he had brought upon the land by abolishing the laws which had been in effect from of old. 30 He feared that, as had happened more than once, he would not have enough for his expenses and for the gifts that he had previously given with a more liberal hand than the preceding kings. 31 Greatly perplexed, he decided to go to Persia and levy tribute on those provinces, and so raise a large sum of money. 32 He left Lysias, a nobleman of royal blood, in charge of the king's affairs from the Euphrates River to the frontier of Egypt, 33 and commissioned him to take care of his son Antiochus until his own return. 34 He entrusted to him half of the army, and the elephants, and gave him instructions concerning everything he wanted done. As for the inhabitants of Judea and Jerusalem, 35 Lysias was to send an army against them to crush and destroy the power of Israel and the remnant of Jerusalem and efface their memory from the land. 36 He was to settle foreigners in all their territory and distribute their land by lot.

37† The king took the remaining half of the army and set out from Antioch, his capital, in the year one hundred and forty-seven; he crossed the Euphrates River and advanced inland.

The Victories of Judas. 38*† Lysias chose Ptolemy, son of Dorymenes, and Nicanor and Gorgias, capable men among the King's Friends, 39 and with them he sent forty thousand men and seven thousand cavalry to invade the land of Judah and ravage it according to the king's orders. 40† Setting out with all their forces, they came and pitched their camp near Emmaus in the plain. 41 When the merchants of the country heard of their fame, they came to the camp, bringing fetters and a large sum of silver and gold, to buy the Israelites as slaves. A force from Idumea and from Philistia joined with them.

42 Judas and his brothers saw that the situation had become critical now that armies were encamped within their territory; they knew of the orders which the king had given to destroy and utterly wipe out the people. 43 So they said to one another, "Let us restore our people from their ruined estate, and fight for our people and our sanctuary!"

44 The assembly gathered together to prepare for battle and to pray and implore mercy and compassion.

45 Jerusalem was uninhabited, like a desert;
not one of her children entered or came out.
The sanctuary was trampled on,
and foreigners were in the citadel;
it was a habitation of Gentiles.
Joy had disappeared from Jacob,
and the flute and the harp were silent.

46*† Thus they assembled and went to Mizpah near Jerusalem, because there was formerly at Mizpah a place of prayer for Israel. 47 That day they fasted and wore sackcloth; they sprinkled ashes on their heads and tore their clothes. 48† They unrolled the scroll of the law, to learn about the things for which the Gentiles consulted the images of their idols. 49*† They brought with them the priestly vestments, the first fruits, and the tithes; and they brought forward the nazirites who had completed the time of their vows. 50 And they cried aloud to Heaven: "What shall we do with these men, and where shall we take them? 51 For your sanctuary has been trampled on and profaned, and your priests are in mourning and humiliation. 52 Now the Gentiles are gathered together against us to destroy us. You know what they plot against us. 53 How shall we be able to resist them unless you help us?" 54 Then they blew the trumpets and cried out loudly.

55 After this Judas appointed officers among the people, over thousands, over hundreds, over fifties, and over tens. 56* He proclaimed that those who were building houses, or were just married, or were planting vineyards, and those who were afraid, could each return to his home, according to the law. 57 Then the army moved off, and they camped to the south of Emmaus. 58 Judas said: "Arm yourselves and be brave; in the morning be ready to fight these Gentiles who have assembled against us to destroy us and our sanctuary. 59* It is better for us to die in battle than to witness the ruin of our nation and our sanctuary. Whatever Heaven wills, he will do."

the citadel were their guides. [3] Judas heard of it, and himself set out with his soldiers to attack the king's army at Emmaus, [4] while the latter's forces were still scattered away from the camp. [5] During the night Gorgias came into the camp of Judas, and found no one there; so he began to hunt for them in the mountains, saying, "They are fleeing from us."

[6] But at daybreak Judas appeared in the plain with three thousand men, who lacked such armor and swords as they would have wished. [7] They saw the army of the Gentiles, strong and breastplated, flanked with cavalry, and made up of expert soldiers. [8] Judas said to the men with him: "Do not be afraid of their numbers or dread their attack. [9]* Remember how our fathers were saved in the Red Sea, when Pharaoh pursued them with an army. [10]* So now let us cry to Heaven in the hope that he will favor us, remember his covenant with our fathers, and destroy this army before us today. [11] All the Gentiles shall know that there is One who redeems and delivers Israel."

[12] When the foreigners looked up and saw them marching toward them, [13] they came out of their camp for battle, and the men with Judas blew the trumpet. [14] The battle was joined and the Gentiles were defeated and fled toward the plain. [15]† Their whole rearguard fell by the sword, and they were pursued as far as Gazara and the plains of Judea, to Azotus and Jamnia. About three thousand of their men fell.

[16] When Judas and the army returned from the pursuit, [17] he said to the people: "Do not be greedy for the plunder, for there is a fight ahead of us, [18] and Gorgias and his army are near us on the mountain. But now stand firm against our enemies and overthrow them. Afterward you can freely take the plunder."

[19] As Judas was finishing this speech, a detachment appeared, looking down from the mountain. [20] They saw that their army had been put to flight and their camp was being burned. The smoke that could be seen indicated what had happened. [21] When they realized this, they were terrified; and when they also saw the army of Judas in the plain ready to attack, [22]† they all fled to Philistine territory.

[23] Then Judas went back to plunder the camp, and his men collected much gold and silver, violet and crimson cloth, and great treasure. [24]* As they returned, they were singing hymns and glorifying Heaven, "for he is good, for his mercy endures forever." [25] Thus Israel had a great deliverance that day.

Victory over Lysias. [26]* But those of the foreigners who had escaped went and told Lysias all that had occurred. [27] When he heard it he was disturbed and discouraged, because things in Israel had not turned out as he intended and as the king had ordered.

[28] So the following year he gathered together sixty thousand picked men and five thousand cavalry, to subdue them. [29]† They came into Idumea and camped at Beth-zur, and Judas met them with ten thousand men. [30]* Seeing that the army was strong, he prayed thus:

"Blessed are you, O Savior of Israel, who broke the rush of the mighty one by the hand of your servant David and delivered the camp of the Philistines into the hand of Jonathan, the son of Saul, and his armor-bearer. [31] Give this army into the hands of your people Israel; make them ashamed of their troops and their cavalry. [32] Strike them with fear, weaken the boldness of their strength, and let them tremble at their own destruction. [33] Strike them down by the sword of those who love you, that all who know your name may hymn your praise."

[34] Then they engaged in battle, and about five thousand of Lysias' men fell in hand-to-hand fighting. [35]† When Lysias saw his ranks beginning to give way, and the increased boldness of Judas, whose men were ready either to live or to die bravely, he withdrew to Antioch and began to recruit mercenaries so as to return to Judea with greater numbers.

Purification of the Temple. [36]† Then Judas and his brothers said, "Now that our enemies have been crushed, let us go up to purify the sanctuary and rededicate it." [37] So the whole army assembled, and went up to Mount Zion. [38] They found the sanctuary desolate, the altar desecrated, the gates burnt, weeds growing in the courts as in a forest or on some mountain, and the priests' chambers demolished. [39] Then they tore their clothes and made great lamentation; they sprinkled their heads with ashes [40] and fell with their faces to the ground. And when the signal was given with trumpets, they cried out to Heaven.

41 Judas appointed men to attack those in the citadel, while he purified the sanctuary. 42 He chose blameless priests, devoted to the law; 43 these purified the sanctuary and carried away the stones of the Abomination to an unclean place.
44* They deliberated what ought to be done with the altar of holocausts that had been desecrated. 45* The happy thought came to them to tear it down, lest it be a lasting shame to them that the Gentiles had defiled it; so they tore down the altar. 46 They stored the stones in a suitable place on the temple hill, until a prophet should come and decide what to do with them. 47* Then they took uncut stones, according to the law, and built a new altar like the former one. 48 They also repaired the sanctuary and the interior of the temple and purified the courts. 49* They made new sacred vessels and brought the lampstand, the altar of incense, and the table into the temple. 50* Then they burned incense on the altar and lighted the lamps on the lampstand, and these illuminated the temple. 51 They also put loaves on the table and hung up curtains. Thus they finished all the work they had undertaken.
52† Early in the morning on the twenty-fifth day of the ninth month, that is, the month of Chislev, in the year one hundred and forty-eight, 53* they arose and offered sacrifice according to the law on the new altar of holocausts that they had made. 54 On the anniversary of the day on which the Gentiles had defiled it, on that very day it was reconsecrated with songs, harps, flutes, and cymbals. 55 All the people prostrated themselves and adored and praised Heaven, who had given them success.
56 For eight days they celebrated the dedication of the altar and joyfully offered holocausts and sacrifices of deliverance and praise. 57 They ornamented the façade of the temple with gold crowns and shields; they repaired the gates and the priests' chambers and furnished them with doors. 58 There was great joy among the people now that the disgrace of the Gentiles was removed.
59*† Then Judas and his brothers and the entire congregation of Israel decreed that the days of the dedication of the altar should be observed with joy and gladness on the anniversary every year for eight days, from the twenty-fifth day of the month Chislev.
60 At that time they built high walls and strong towers around Mount Zion, to prevent the Gentiles from coming and trampling over it as they had done before. 61 Judas also placed a garrison there to protect it, and likewise fortified Beth-zur, that the people might have a stronghold facing Idumea.

Punishment of Hostile Acts. 1*† When the Gentiles round about heard that the altar had been rebuilt and the sanctuary consecrated as before, they were very angry. 2 So they decided to destroy the descendants of Jacob who were among them, and they began to massacre and persecute the people. 3*† Then Judas attacked the sons of Esau at Akrabattene in Idumea, because they were blockading Israel; he defeated them heavily, overcame and despoiled them. 4† He also remembered the malice of the sons of Baean, who had become a snare and a stumbling block to the people by ambushing them along the roads. 5 He forced them to take refuge in towers, which he besieged; he vowed their annihilation and burned down the towers along with all the persons in them. 6† Then he crossed over to the Ammonites, where he found a strong army and a large body of people with Timothy as their leader. 7 He fought many battles with them, routed them, and struck them down. 8 After seizing Jazer and its villages, he returned to Judea.
Liberation of Galilean Jews. 9 The Gentiles in Gilead assembled to attack and destroy the Israelites who were in their territory; these then fled to the stronghold of Dathema. 10 They sent a letter to Judas and his brothers saying: "The Gentiles around us have combined against us to destroy us, 11 and they are preparing to come and seize this stronghold to which we have fled. Timothy is the leader of their army. 12 Come at once and rescue us from them, for many of us have fallen. 13* All our kinsmen who were among the Tobiads have been killed; the Gentiles have carried away their wives and children and their goods, and they have slain there about a thousand men."

14 While they were reading this letter, suddenly other messengers, in torn clothes, arrived from Galilee to deliver a similar message: 15† that the inhabitants of Ptolemais, Tyre, and Sidon, and the whole of Gentile Galilee had joined forces to destroy them. 16 When Judas and the people heard this, a great assembly convened to consider what they should do for their unfortunate kinsmen who were being attacked by enemies.
17 Judas said to his brother Simon:
"Choose men for yourself, and go, rescue your kinsmen in Galilee; I and my brother Jonathan will go to Gilead."
18 In Judea he left Joseph, son of Zechariah, and Azariah, leader of the people, with the rest of the army to guard it.
19 "Take charge of these people," he commanded them, "but do not fight against the Gentiles until we return."
20 Three thousand men were allotted to Simon, to go into Galilee, and eight thousand men to Judas, for Gilead.
21 Simon went into Galilee and fought many battles with the Gentiles. They were crushed before him, 22 and he pursued them to the very gate of Ptolemais.
About three thousand men of the Gentiles fell, and he gathered their spoils.
23 He took with him the Jews who were in Galilee and in Arbatta, with their wives and children and all that they had,
and brought them to Judea with great rejoicing.

Rescue in Gilead. 24* Judas Maccabeus and his brother Jonathan crossed the Jordan and marched for three days through the desert. 25† There they met some Nabateans, who received them peacefully and told them all that had happened to the Jews in Gilead: 26 "Many of them have been imprisoned in Bozrah, in Bosor near Alema, in Chaspho, Maked, and Carnaim"—all of these are large, fortified cities—27 "and some have been imprisoned in other cities of Gilead. Tomorrow their enemies plan to attack the strongholds and to seize and destroy all these people in one day."
28 Thereupon Judas suddenly changed direction with his army, marched across the desert to Bozrah, and captured the city. He slaughtered all the male population, took all their possessions, and set fire to the city. 29 He led his army from that place by night, and they marched toward the stronghold of Dathema.
30 When morning came, they looked ahead and saw a countless multitude of people, with ladders and devices for capturing the stronghold, and beginning to attack the people within. 31 When Judas perceived that the struggle had begun and that the noise of the battle was resounding to heaven with trumpet blasts and loud shouting, 32 he said to the men of his army, "Fight for our kinsmen
today."
33 He came up behind them with three columns blowing their trumpets and shouting in prayer. 34 When the army of Timothy realized that it was Maccabeus, they fell back before him, and he inflicted on them a crushing defeat. About eight thousand of their men fell that day.
35 Then he turned toward Alema and attacked and captured it; he killed all the male population, plundered the place, and burned it down. 36 From there he moved on and took Chaspho, Maked, Bosor, and the other cities of Gilead.
37* After these events Timothy assembled another army and camped opposite Raphon, on the other side of the stream.
38 Judas sent men to spy on the camp, and they reported to him: "All the Gentiles around us have rallied to him, making a very large force; 39 they have also hired Arabs to help them, and have camped beyond the stream, ready to attack you." So Judas went forward to attack them.
40* As Judas and his army were approaching the running stream, Timothy said to the officers of his army: "If he crosses over to us first, we shall not be able to resist him; he will certainly defeat us. 41 But if he is afraid and camps on the other side of the river, we will cross over to him and defeat him." 42 But when Judas reached the running stream, he stationed the officers of the people beside the stream and gave them this order: "Do not allow any man to pitch a tent; all must go into battle."
43 He was the first to cross to the attack, with all the people behind him, and the Gentiles were crushed before them; they threw away their arms and fled to the temple enclosure at Carnaim. 44* The Jews captured that city and burnt the enclosure with all who were in it. So Carnaim was subdued, and Judas met with no more resistance.
45 Then he assembled all the Israelites,
great and small, who were in Gilead, with their wives and children and their goods, a great crowd of people, to go into the land of Judah. 46*† When they reached Ephron, a large and strongly fortified city along the way, they found it impossible to encircle it on either the right or the left; they would have to march right through it. 47* But the men in the city shut them out and blocked up the gates with stones. 48 Then Judas sent them this peaceful message: "We wish to cross your territory in order to reach our own; no one will harm you; we will only march through." But they would not open to him.

49 So Judas ordered a proclamation to be made in the camp that everyone make an attack from the place where he was. 50 When the men of the army took up their positions, he assaulted the city all that day and night, and it was delivered to him. 51 He slaughtered every male, razed and plundered the city, and passed through it over the slain.

52 Then they crossed the Jordan to the great plain in front of Beth-shan; 53 and Judas kept rounding up the stragglers and encouraging the people the whole way, until he reached the land of Judah. 54 They ascended Mount Zion in joy and gladness and offered holocausts, because not one of them had fallen; they had returned in safety.

Joseph and Azariah Defeated. 55 During the time that Judas and Jonathan were in the land of Gilead, and Simon his brother was in Galilee opposite Ptolemais, 56 Joseph, son of Zechariah, and Azariah, the leaders of the army, heard about the brave deeds and the fighting that they were doing. 57 They said, "Let us also make a name for ourselves by going out and fighting against the Gentiles around us."

58 They gave orders to the men of their army who were with them, and marched toward Jamnia. 59 But Gorgias and his men came out of the city to meet them in battle. 60 Joseph and Azariah were beaten, and were pursued to the frontiers of Judea, and about two thousand Israelites fell that day. 61 It was a bad defeat for the people, because they had not obeyed Judas and his brothers, thinking that they would do brave deeds. 62 But they did not belong to the family of those men to whom it was granted to achieve Israel's salvation. 63 The valiant Judas and his brothers were greatly renowned in all Israel and among all the Gentiles, wherever their name was heard; 64 and men gathered about them and praised them.

65† Then Judas and his brothers went out and attacked the sons of Esau in the country toward the south; he took Hebron and its villages, and he destroyed its strongholds and burned the towers around it. 66 He then set out for the land of the Philistines and passed through Marisa. 67 At that time some priests fell in battle who had gone out rashly to fight in their desire to distinguish themselves.

68 Judas then turned toward Azotus in the land of the Philistines. He destroyed their altars and burned the statues of their gods; and after plundering their cities he returned to the land of Judah.

CHAPTER 6

Defeat and Death of Antiochus IV. 1*† As King Antiochus was traversing the inland provinces, he heard that in Persia there was a city called Elymais, famous for its wealth in silver and gold, 2 and that its temple was very rich, containing gold helmets, breastplates, and weapons left there by Alexander, son of Philip, king of Macedon, the first king of the Greeks. 3 He went therefore and tried to capture and pillage the city. But he could not do so, because his plan became known to the people of the city 4 who rose up in battle against him. So he retreated and in great dismay withdrew from there to return to Babylon.

5 While he was in Persia, a messenger brought him news that the armies sent into the land of Judah had been put to flight; 6 that Lysias had gone at first with a strong army and been driven back by the Israelites; that they had grown strong by reason of the arms, men, and abundant possessions taken from the armies they had destroyed; 7* that they had pulled down the Abomination which he had built upon the altar in Jerusalem; and that they had surrounded with high walls both the sanctuary, as it had been before, and his city of Beth-zur.

8 When the king heard this news, he was struck with fear and very much shaken. Sick with grief because his designs had failed, he took to his bed. 9 There he remained many days, overwhelmed with sorrow, for he knew he was going to die.

10 So he called in all his Friends and said to them: "Sleep has departed from my eyes, for my heart is sinking with anxiety. 11 I said to myself: 'Into what tribulation have I come, and in what floods of sorrow am I now! 12 Yet I was kindly and beloved in my rule.' But I now recall the evils I did in Jerusalem, when I carried away all the vessels of gold and silver that were in it, and for no cause gave orders that the inhabit-grief, in a foreign land."

14 Then he summoned Philip, one of his Friends, and put him in charge of his whole kingdom. 15 He gave him his crown, his robe, and his signet ring, so that he might guide the king's son Antiochus and bring him up to be king.
16† King Antiochus died in Persia in the year one hundred and forty-nine.

The Citadel Besieged. 17*† When Lys-ias learned that the king was dead, he set up the king's son Antiochus, whom he had reared as a child, to be king in his place; and he gave him the title Eupator.
18* The men in the citadel were hemming in Israel around the sanctuary, continually trying to harm them and to strengthen the Gentiles. 19 But Judas planned to destroy them, and called all the people together to besiege them.
20† So in the year one hundred and fifty
they assembled and stormed the citadel, for which purpose he constructed cata-pults and other devices. 21 Some of the besieged escaped, joined by impious Israelites; 22 they went to the king and said:
"How long will you fail to do justice and avenge our kinsmen? 23 We agreed to serve your father and to follow his orders and obey his edicts. 24 And for this the sons of our people have become our enemies; they have put to death as many of us as they could find and have plundered our estates. 25 They have acted aggressively not only against us,
but throughout their whole territory.
26 Look! They have now besieged the citadel in Jerusalem in order to capture it, and they have fortified the sanctuary and Beth-zur. 27 Unless you quickly forestall them, they will do even worse things than these, and you will not be able to stop them."

Campaign against Judas. 28* When the king heard this he was angry, and he called together all his Friends, the officers of his army, and the commanders of the cavalry. 29 Mercenary forces also came to him from other kingdoms and from the islands of the seas. 30 His army numbered a hundred thousand foot-soldiers, twenty thousand cavalry, and thirty-two elephants trained for war. 31 They passed through Idumea and camped before Beth-zur. For many days they attacked it; they constructed siege-devices, but the besieged made a sortie and burned these, and they fought bravely.
32 Then Judas marched away from the citadel and moved his camp to Bethzechariah, on the way to the king's camp. 33 The king, rising before dawn, moved his force hastily along the road to Beth-zechariah; and the armies prepared for battle, while the trumpets sounded. 34 They showed the elephants
the juice of grapes and mulberries to provoke them to fight. 35 The beasts were distributed along the phalanxes, each elephant having assigned to it a thousand men in coats of mail, with bronze helmets, and five hundred picked cavalry.
36 These anticipated the beast wherever it was; and wherever it moved, they moved too and never left it. 37 A strong wooden tower covering each elephant,
and fastened to it by a harness, held,
besides the Indian mahout, three soldiers who fought from it. 38 The remaining cavalry were stationed on one or the other of the two flanks of the army, to harass the enemy and to be protected from the phalanxes. 39 When the sun shone on the gold and bronze shields, the mountains gleamed with their brightness and blazed like flaming torches. 40 Part of the king's army extended over the heights, while some were on low ground, but they marched forward steadily and in good order. 41 All who heard the noise of their numbers, the tramp of their marching, and the clashing of the arms, trembled; for the army was very great and strong.
42 Judas with his army advanced to fight, and six hundred men of the king's army fell. 43* Eleazar, called Avaran, saw one of the beasts bigger than any of the others and covered with royal armor, and he thought the king must be on it. 44 So he gave up his life to save his people and win an everlasting name for himself. 45 He dashed up to it in the middle of the phalanx, killing men right and left, so that they fell back from him on both sides. 46 He ran right under the elephant and stabbed it in the belly, killing it. The beast fell to the ground on top of him, and he died there.
47 When the Jews saw the strength of the royal army and the ardor of its forces, they retreated from them. 48* A part of the king's army went up to Jerusalem to attack them, and the king established camps in Judea and at Mount

Zion. [49]*† He made peace with the men of Beth-zur, and they evacuated the city, because they had no food there to enable them to stand a siege, for that was a sabbath year in the land. [50] The king took Beth-zur and stationed a garrison there to hold it. [51] For many days he besieged the sanctuary, setting up artillery and machines, fire-throwers, catapults and mechanical bows for shooting arrows and slingstones. [52] The Jews countered by setting up machines of their own, and kept up the fight a long time. [53] But there were no provisions in the storerooms, because it was the seventh year, and the tide-over provisions had been eaten up by those who had been rescued from the Gentiles and brought to Judea. [54] Few men remained in the sanctuary; the rest scattered, each to his own home, for the famine was too much for them.

Peace Treaty. [55]* Lysias heard that Philip, whom King Antiochus, before his death, had appointed to train his son Antiochus to be king, [56] had returned from Persia and Media with the army that accompanied the king, and that he was seeking to take over the government. [57]* So he hastily resolved to withdraw. He said to the king, the leaders of the army, and the soldiers: "We are growing weaker every day, our provisions are scanty, the place we are besieging is strong, and it is our duty to take care of the affairs of the kingdom. [58] Therefore let us now come to terms with these men, and make peace with them and all their nation. [59] Let us grant them freedom to live according to their own laws as formerly; it was on account of their laws, which we abolished, that they became angry and did all these things."

[60] The proposal found favor with the king and the leaders; [61] he sent peace terms to the Jews, and they accepted. So the king and the leaders swore an oath to them, and on these terms they evacuated the fortification. [62] But when the king entered Mount Zion and saw how the place was fortified, he broke the oath he had sworn and gave orders for the encircling wall to be destroyed. [63] Then he departed in haste and returned to Antioch, where he found Philip in possession of the city. He fought against him and took the city by force.

Expedition of Bacchides and Alcimus. [1]*† In the year one hundred and fifty-one, Demetrius, son of Seleucus, set out from Rome, arrived with a few men in a city on the seacoast, and began to rule there. [2] As he was preparing to enter the royal palace of his ancestors, the soldiers seized Antiochus and Lysias to bring them to him. [3] When he was informed of this, he said, "Do not show me their faces." [4] So the soldiers killed them, and Demetrius sat on the royal throne.

[5]† Then all the lawless and impious men of Israel came to him. They were led by Alcimus, who desired to be high priest. [6] They made this accusation to the king against the people: "Judas and his brothers have destroyed all your friends and have driven us out of our country. [7] So now, send a man whom you trust to go and see all the havoc Judas has done to us and to the king's land, and let him punish them and all their supporters."

[8] Then the king chose Bacchides, one of the King's Friends, governor of West-of-Euphrates, a great man in the kingdom, and faithful to the king. [9]* He sent him and the impious Alcimus, to whom he granted the high priesthood, with orders to take revenge on the Israelites. [10] They set out and, on arriving in the land of Judah with a great army, sent messengers who spoke deceitfully to Judas and his brothers in peaceful terms. [11] But these paid no attention to their words, seeing that they had come with a great army. [12] A group of scribes, however, gathered about Alcimus and Bacchides to ask for a just agreement. [13]* The Hasideans were the first among the Israelites to seek peace with them, [14] for they said, "A priest of the line of Aaron has come with the army, and he will not do us any wrong." [15] He spoke with them peacefully and swore to them, "We will not try to injure you or your friends." [16] So they trusted him. But he arrested sixty of them and killed them in one day, according to the text of Scripture:

He wrought more evils on the Israelites than the Gentiles had done (v 23).

and their blood they have shed
round about Jerusalem,
and there was no one to bury
them."

18 Then fear and dread of them came upon all the people, who said: "There is no truth or justice among them; they violated the agreement and the oath that they swore."

19† Bacchides withdrew from Jerusalem and pitched his camp in Beth-zaith.
He had many of the men arrested who deserted to him, throwing them into the great pit. 20 He handed the province over to Alcimus, leaving troops to help him,
while he himself returned to the king.

21 Alcimus spared no pains to maintain his high priesthood, 22 and all those who were disturbing their people gathered about him. They took possession of the land of Judah and caused great distress in Israel. 23 When Judas saw all the evils that Alcimus and his men were bringing upon the Israelites, more than even the Gentiles had done, 24 he went about all the borders of Judea and took revenge on the men who had deserted, preventing them from going out into the country. 25 But when Alcimus saw that Judas and his followers were gaining strength and realized that he could not oppose them, he returned to the king and accused them of grave crimes.

Defeat of Nicanor. 26* Then the king sent Nicanor, one of his famous officers, who was a bitter enemy of Israel, with orders to destroy the people. 27† Nicanor came to Jerusalem with a large force and deceitfully sent to Judas and his brothers this peaceable message: 28 "Let there be no fight between me and you.
I will come with a few men to meet you peaceably."

29 So he came to Judas, and they greeted one another peaceably. But Judas' enemies were prepared to seize
him. 30* When he became aware that Nicanor had come to him with treachery in mind, Judas was afraid and would not meet him again. 31† When Nicanor saw that his plan had been discovered, he went out to fight Judas near Capharsalama. 32 About five hundred men of Nicanor's army fell; the rest fled to the City of David.

33* After this, Nicanor went up to Mount Zion. Some of the priests from the sanctuary and some of the elders of the people came out to greet him peaceably and to show him the holocaust that was being offered for the king. 34† But he mocked and ridiculed them, defiled them, and spoke disdainfully. 35 In a rage he swore: "If Judas and his army are not delivered to me at once, when I return victorious I will burn this temple down." He went away in great anger.
36* The priests, however, went in and stood before the altar and the sanctuary.
They wept and said: 37 "You have chosen this house to bear your name, to be a house of prayer and petition for your people. 38 Take revenge on this man and his army, and let them fall by the sword.
Remember their blasphemies, and do not let them continue."

39 Nicanor left Jerusalem and pitched his camp at Beth-horon, where the Syrian army joined him. 40† But Judas camped in Adasa with three thousand men. Here Judas uttered this prayer:
41* "When they who were sent by the king blasphemed, your angel went out and killed a hundred and eighty-five thousand of them. 42* In the same way, crush this army before us today, and let the rest know that Nicanor spoke wickedly against your sanctuary; judge him
according to his wickedness."

43* The armies met in battle on the thirteenth day of the month Adar. Nica-nor's army was crushed, and he himself was the first to fall in the battle. 44 When his army saw that Nicanor was dead,
they threw down their arms and fled.
45 The Jews pursued them a day's journey, from Adasa to near Gazara, blowing the trumpets behind them as signals.
46 From all the surrounding villages of Judea people came out and closed in on them. They hemmed them in, and all the enemies fell by the sword; not a single one escaped.

47 Then the Jews collected the spoils and the booty; they cut off Nicanor's head and his right arm, which he had lifted up so arrogantly. These they brought to Jerusalem and displayed there. 48 The people rejoiced greatly, and observed that day as a great festival.
49† They decreed that it should be observed every year on the thirteenth of Adar. 50† And for a short time the land of Judah was quiet.

CHAPTER 8

Treaty with the Romans. 1† Judas had heard of the reputation of the Romans. They were valiant fighters and acted amiably to all who took their side. They established a friendly alliance with all who applied to them. 2† He was also told of their battles and the brave deeds that they had performed against the Gauls, conquering them and forcing them to pay tribute. 3 They had gotten possession of the silver and gold mines in Spain, 4 and by planning and persistence had conquered the whole country, although it was very remote from their own. They had crushed the kings who had come against them from the far corners of the earth and had inflicted on them severe defeat, and the rest paid tribute to them every year. 5† Philip and Perseus, king of the Macedonians, and the others who opposed them in battle had been overwhelmed and subjugated. 6† Antiochus the Great, king of Asia, who had fought against them with a hundred and twenty elephants and with cavalry and chariots and a very great army, had been defeated by them. 7 They had taken him alive and obliged him and the kings who succeeded him to pay a heavy tribute, to give hostages and a section of 8† Lycia, Mysia, and Lydia from among their best provinces. The Romans took these from him and gave them to King Eumenes. 9† When the men of Greece had planned to come and destroy them, 10 the Romans discovered it, and sent against the Greeks a single general who made war on them. Many were wounded and fell, and the Romans took their wives and children captive. They plundered them, took possession of their land, tore down their strongholds and reduced them to slavery even to this day. 11 All the other kingdoms and islands that had ever opposed them they destroyed and enslaved; 12 with their friends, however, and those who relied on them, they maintained friendship. They had conquered kings both far and near, and all who heard of their fame were afraid of them. 13 In truth, those whom they desired to help to a kingdom became kings, and those whom they wished to depose they deposed; and they were greatly exalted. 14 Yet with all this, none of them put on a crown or wore purple as a display of grandeur. 15 They had made for themselves a senate house, and every day three hundred and twenty men took counsel, deliberating on all that concerned the people and their well-being. 16† They entrusted their government to one man every year, to rule over their entire country, and they all obeyed that one, and there was no envy or jealousy among them.

17* So Judas chose Eupolemus, son of John, son of Accos, and Jason, son of Eleazar, and sent them to Rome to establish an alliance of friendship with them. 18 He did this to get rid of the yoke, for it was obvious that the kingdom of the Greeks was subjecting Israel to slavery. 19 After making a very long journey to Rome, the envoys entered the senate and spoke as follows: 20 "Judas, called Maccabeus, and his brothers, with the Jewish people, have sent us to you to make a peaceful alliance with you, and to enroll ourselves among your allies and friends." 21 The proposal pleased the Romans, 22*† and this is a copy of the reply they inscribed on bronze tablets and sent to Jerusalem, to remain there with the Jews as a record of peace and alliance:

† 8, 1: This chapter contains the account of the embassy which Judas sent to Rome, probably before the death of Nicanor, to conclude a treaty of alliance between Rome and the Jewish nation. Without precise chronology, the pertinent data are gathered into a unified theme.

The image of the Roman Republic greatly impressed the smaller Eastern peoples seeking support against their overlords (1-16), because of Roman success in war (2-11) and effective aid to their allies (12-13). Numerous interventions by Rome in the politics of the Near East bear witness to its power and prestige in the second century B.C. Cf 1 Mc 1, 10; 7, 2; 12, 3; 15, 15-24; 2 Mc 11, 34. With the Roman control of Palestine in 63 B.C., the Republic and later the Empire became heartily detested. The eulogy of Rome in this chapter is one of the reasons why 1 Maccabees was not preserved by the Palestinian Jews of the century that followed.

8, 2: Gauls: probably the Celts of northern Italy and southern France, subdued by the Romans in 222 B.C., and again in 200-191 B.C.; but perhaps also those in Asia Minor (the Galatians), whom the Romans defeated in 189 B.C.

8, 5: Phillip: Phillip V of Macedonia, defeated by a Graeco-Roman alliance at Cynoscephalae in 197 B.C. Perseus, his son, was defeated at Pydna in 168 B.C., and died a prisoner. With this, the kingdom of Macedonia came to an end.

8, 6: Antiochus: Antiochus III, greatest of the Seleucid kings. He was defeated at Magnesia in 190 B.C. By the Treaty of Apamea in 189, he was obliged to pay Rome a crushing indemnity of 15,000 talents. It was the weakening of Antiochene power and the growing military and economic influence of Rome that led Antiochus IV to adopt the policy of political, religious and cultural unification of Syria and Palestine.

8, 8: Lycia, Mysia: regions in western Asia Minor. These names are restored here by conjectural emendation; the Greek text has "India, Media," most likely through scribal error. Eumenes: Eumenes II (197-158), king of Pergamum, an ally of Rome who benefited greatly from Antiochus' losses.

8, 9f: The revolt of the Achaean League, inserted here, occurred in 146 B.C., after Judas' time. It was crushed by the Roman consul Lucius Mummius and marked the end of Greek independence. The author regards all Greeks as the enemies of God.

8, 16: They entrusted their government to one man: actually the Roman Republic always had two consuls as joint heads of the government. Presumably, a single one dealt with embassies and answered letters, hence the impression the Jews received; cf 15, 16.

8, 22: The reply . . . on bronze tablets and sent to Jerusalem: The decree of the Senate would be inscribed on bronze and kept in the Roman Capitol, with only a copy in letter form sent to Jerusalem. The translation of the decree into Hebrew and then into Greek, as found here in 1 Mc, may have occasioned this error.

23 "May it be well with the Romans and the Jewish nation at sea and on land forever; may sword and enemy be far from them. 24 But if war is first made on Rome, or any of its allies in any of their dominions, 25 the Jewish nation will help them wholeheartedly, as the occasion shall demand; 26 and to those who wage war
they shall not give nor provide grain,
arms, money, or ships; this is Rome's
decision. They shall fulfill their obligations without receiving any recompense.
27 In the same way, if war is made first on the Jewish nation, the Romans will help them willingly, as the occasion shall demand, 28 and to those who are attacking them there shall not be given grain,
arms, money, or ships; this is Rome's
decision. They shall fulfill their obligations without deception. 29 On these terms the Romans have made an agreement with the Jewish people. 30 But if both parties hereafter decide to add or take away anything, they shall do as they choose, and whatever they shall add or take away shall be valid.
31 "Moreover, concerning the wrongs
that King Demetrius has done to them, we have written to him thus: 'Why have you made your yoke heavy upon our friends and allies the Jews? 32 If they complain about you again, we will do them justice and make war on you by land and sea.'"

CHAPTER 9

Invasion of Judah. 1 When Demetrius heard that Nicanor and his army had fallen in battle, he again sent Bacchi-des and Alcimus into the land of Judah,
along with the right wing of his army.
2† They took the road to Galilee, and camping opposite the ascent at Arbela,
they captured it and killed many people.
3† In the first month of the year one hundred and fifty-two, they encamped against Jerusalem. 4 Then they set out for Berea with twenty thousand men and two thousand cavalry. 5 Judas, with three thousand picked men, had camped at Elasa. 6 When his men saw the great number of the troops, they were very much afraid, and many slipped away from the camp, until only eight hundred men remained.
7 As Judas saw that his army was melting away just when the battle was imminent, he was panic-stricken, because he had no time to gather them together. 8 But in spite of his discouragement, he said to those who remained:
"Let us go forward to meet our enemies;
perhaps we can put up a good fight against them." 9 They tried to dissuade him, saying: "We certainly cannot. Let us save our lives now, and come back with our kinsmen, and then fight against them. Now we are too few." 10 But Judas said: "Far be it from me to do such a thing as to flee from them! If our time has come, let us die bravely for our kinsmen and not leave a stain upon our glory!"

Death of Judas. 11 Then the army of Bacchides moved out of camp and took its position for combat. The cavalry were divided into two squadrons, and the slingers and the archers came on ahead of the army, and all the valiant men were in the front line. 12 Bacchides was on the right wing. Flanked by the two squadrons, the phalanx attacked as they blew their trumpets. Those who were on Judas' side also blew their trumpets.
13 The earth shook with the noise of the armies, and the battle raged from morning until evening. 14 Seeing that Bacchides was on the right, with the main force of his army, Judas, with all the most stouthearted rallying to him, 15† drove back the right wing and pursued them as far as the mountain slopes.
16 But when the men on the left wing saw that the right wing was driven back, they turned and followed Judas and his men, taking them in the rear. 17 The battle was fought desperately, and many on both sides fell wounded. 18 Then Judas fell,
and the rest fled.
19 Jonathan and Simon took their brother Judas and buried him in the tomb of their fathers at Modein. 20 All Israel bewailed him in great grief. They mourned for him many days, and they said, 21* "How the mighty one has fallen,
the savior of Israel!" 22 The other acts of Judas, his battles, the brave deeds he performed, and his greatness have not been recorded; but they were very many.

IV: LEADERSHIP OF JONATHAN

Bacchides and Jonathan. 23 After the death of Judas, the transgressors of the law raised their heads in every part of Israel, and all kinds of evildoers appeared. 24 In those days there was a very

9, 21: 2 Sm 1, 27.

† 9, 2: They took the road . . . Arbela, they captured it: This passage is restored, in part, by conjectural emendation. The present Greek text could be translated, "They took the road to Gilgal, and camping opposite Mesaloth at Arbela, they captured it." But Arbela (modern Khirbet Irbid) was in Galilee—on a high hill overlooking the western shore of the Sea of Galilee. Gilgal, on the contrary, was in the Jordan valley near Jericho. "Mesaloth" is probably a corrupt form of a Hebrew word meaning "steps, ascent."

9, 3: The first month of the year one hundred and fifty-two: April/May 160 B.C., by the temple calendar.

9, 15: As far as the mountain slopes: conjectural emendation. The Greek text has "as far as Mount Azotus"; this is most unlikely. Apparently the Greek translator mistook the Hebrew word ashdôt, "slopes," for aśdôd, "Azotus."

great famine, and the country deserted to them. [25] Bacchides chose impious men and made them masters of the country. [26] These sought out and hunted down the friends of Judas and brought them to Bacchides, who punished and derided them. [27] There had not been such great distress in Israel since the time prophets ceased to appear among the people.

[28] Then all the friends of Judas came together and said to Jonathan: [29] "Since your brother Judas died, there has been no one like him to oppose our enemies, Bacchides and those who are hostile to our nation. [30] Now therefore we have chosen you today to be our ruler and leader in his place, and to fight our battle." [31] From that moment Jonathan accepted the leadership, and took the place of Judas his brother.

[32] When Bacchides learned of it, he sought to kill him. [33]† But Jonathan and his brother Simon and all the men with him discovered this, and they fled to the desert of Tekoa and camped by the waters of the pool of Asphar.†

[35]*† Jonathan sent his brother as leader of the convoy to ask permission of his friends, the Nabateans, to deposit with them their great quantity of baggage. [36]† But the sons of Jambri from Medaba made a raid and seized and carried off John and everything he had. [37] After this, word was brought to Jonathan and his brother Simon: "The sons of Jambri are celebrating a great wedding, and with a large escort they are bringing the bride, the daughter of one of the great princes of Canaan, from Nadabath." [38] Remembering the blood of John their brother, they went up and hid themselves under cover of the mountain. [39] They watched, and suddenly saw a noisy crowd with baggage; the bridegroom and his friends and kinsmen had come out to meet the bride's party with tambourines and musicians and much equipment. [40] The Jews rose up against them from their ambush and killed them. Many fell wounded, and after the survivors fled toward the mountain, all their spoils were taken. [41] Thus the wedding was turned into mourning, and the sound of music into lamentation. [42] Having taken their revenge for the blood of their brother, the Jews returned to the marshes of the Jordan.

[43] When Bacchides heard of it, he came on the sabbath to the banks of the Jordan with a large force. [44] Then Jonathan said to his companions, "Let us get up now and fight for our lives, for today is not like yesterday and the day before. [45]† The battle is before us, and behind us are the waters of the Jordan on one side, marsh and thickets on the other, and there is no way of escape. [46] Cry out now to Heaven for deliverance from our enemies." [47] When they joined battle, Jonathan raised his arm to strike Bacchides, but Bacchides backed away from him. [48] Jonathan and his men jumped into the Jordan and swam across to the other side, but the enemy did not pursue them across the Jordan. [49] A thousand men on Bacchides' side fell that day.

[50]† On returning to Jerusalem, Bacchides built strongholds in Judea: the Jericho fortress, as well as Emmaus, Beth-horon, Bethel, Timnath, Pharathon, and Tephon, with high walls and gates and bars. [51] In each he put a garrison to oppose Israel. [52] He fortified the city of Beth-zur, Gazara and the citadel, and put soldiers in them and stores of provisions. [53]* He took as hostages the sons of the leaders of the country and put them in custody in the citadel at Jerusalem.

[54]† In the year one hundred and fifty-three, in the second month, Alcimus ordered the wall of the inner court of the sanctuary to be torn down, thus destroying the work of the prophets. But he only began to tear it down. [55] Just at that time he had a stroke, and his work was interrupted; his mouth was closed and he was paralyzed, so that he could no longer utter a word to give orders concerning his house. [56] Finally he died in great agony. [57] Seeing that Alcimus was dead, Bacchides returned to the king, and the land of Judah was quiet for two years.

[58] Then all the transgressors of the law held a council and said: "Jonathan and his companions are living in peace and security. Now then, let us have Bacchides return, and he will capture all of them in a single night." [59] So they went and took counsel with him. [60] When Bacchides was setting out with a large force, he sent letters secretly to all his allies in Judea, telling them to seize Jonathan and his companions. They were not able to do this, however, because their plot became known. [61] In fact, Jonathan's men seized about fifty of the men of the country who were ringleaders in the mischief and put them to death. [62]† Then Jonathan and Simon and their companions withdrew to Bethbasi in the desert; they rebuilt and strengthened its fortifications that had been demolished. 63 When Bacchides learned of this, he gathered together his whole force and sent word to those who were in Judea. 64 He came and pitched his camp before Bethbasi, and constructing siege-machines, he fought against it for many days.

65 Leaving his brother Simon in the city, Jonathan, accompanied by a small group of men, went out into the field. 66 He struck down Odomera and his kinsmen and the sons of Phasiron in their encampment; these men had set out to go up to the siege with their forces. 67 Simon and his men then sallied forth from the city and set fire to the machines. 68 They fought against Bacchides, and he was beaten. This caused him great distress. Because the enterprise he had planned came to nought, 69 he was angry with the lawless men who had advised him to invade the province. He killed many of them and resolved to return to his own country.

70 Jonathan learned of this and sent ambassadors to make peace with him and to obtain the release of the prisoners. 71 He agreed to do as Jonathan had asked. He swore an oath to him that he would never try to injure him for the rest of his life; 72 and he released the prisoners he had previously taken from the land of Judah. He returned to his own country and never came into their territory again.

73† Then the sword ceased in Israel. Jonathan settled in Michmash; he began to judge the people and he destroyed the impious in Israel.

Revolt of Alexander. 1† In the year one hundred and sixty, Alexander, who was called Epiphanes, son of Antiochus, came up and took Ptolemais. He was accepted and began to reign there. 2 When King Demetrius heard of it, he mustered a very large army and marched out to engage him in combat. 3 Demetrius sent a letter to Jonathan written in peaceful terms, to pay him honor; 4 for he said: "Let us be the first to make peace with him, before he makes peace with Alexander against us, 5 since he will remember all the wrongs we have done to him, his brothers, and his nation."

6 So Demetrius authorized him to gather an army and procure arms as his ally; and he ordered that the hostages in the citadel be released to him. 7 Accordingly Jonathan went up to Jerusalem and read the letter to all the people. The men in the citadel 8 were struck with fear when they heard that the king had given him authority to gather an army. 9* They released the hostages to Jonathan, and he gave them back to their parents. 10 Thereafter Jonathan dwelt in Jerusalem, and began to build and restore the city. 11 He ordered the workmen to build the walls and encircle Mount Zion with square stones for its fortification, which they did. 12 The foreigners in the strongholds that Bacchides had built, took flight; 13 each one of them left his place and returned to his own country. 14 Only in Beth-zur did some remain of those who had abandoned the law and the commandments, for they used it as a place of refuge.

Jonathan Supports Alexander. 15 King Alexander heard of the promises that Demetrius had made to Jonathan; he was also told of the battles and valiant deeds of Jonathan and his brothers and the troubles that they had endured. 16 He said, "Shall we ever find another man like him? Let us now make him our friend and ally." 17 So he sent Jonathan a letter written in these terms: 18 "King Alexander sends greetings to his brother Jonathan. 19 We have heard of you, that you are a mighty warrior and worthy to be our friend. 20* We have therefore appointed you today to be high priest of your nation; you are to be called the King's Friend, and you are to look after our interests and preserve amity with us." He also sent him a purple robe and a crown of gold.

21† Jonathan put on the sacred vestments in the seventh month of the year one hundred and sixty at the feast of Booths, and he gathered an army and procured many arms. 22 When Demetrius heard of these things, he was distressed and said: 23 "Why have we allowed Alexander to get ahead of us by gaining the friendship of the Jews and thus strengthening himself? 24 I too will write them conciliatory words and offer dignities and gifts, so that they may be an aid to me."

He had the backing of the Romans, who had never forgiven Demetrius for becoming king without their permission. The latter meanwhile had become unpopular with his own people as well as with the Jews.

10, 21: Jonathan . . . feast of Booths: Jonathan began to discharge the office of high priest October 23-30, 152 B.C. For seven years after the death of Alcimus there had been no high priest in Jerusalem. It was taken for granted that the king, though a Gentile, had the power to appoint one. The Maccabees, though a priestly family, were not of the line of Zadok, and some in Israel regarded Jonathan's tenure as a usurpation.

25 So he sent them this message: "King Demetrius sends greetings to the Jewish nation. 26 We have heard how you have kept the treaty with us and continued in our friendship and not gone over to our enemies, and we are glad. 27 Continue, therefore, to keep faith with us, and we will reward you with favors in return for what you do in our behalf.
28 We will grant you many exemptions
and will bestow gifts on you.
29* "I now free you, as I also exempt
all the Jews, from the tribute, the salt tax, and the crown levies. 30*† Instead of collecting the third of the grain and the half of the fruit of the trees that should be my share, I renounce the right from this day forward: Neither now nor in the future will I collect them from the land of Judah or from the three districts annexed from Samaria. 31 Let Jerusalem and her territory, her tithes and her tolls, be sacred and free from tax. 32 I also yield my authority over the citadel in Jerusalem, and I transfer it to the high priest, that he may put in it such men as he shall choose to guard it. 33 Every one of the Jews who has been carried into captivity from the land of Judah into any part of my kingdom I set at liberty without ransom; and let all their taxes, even those on their cattle, be canceled. 34 Let all feast days, sabbaths, new moon festivals, appointed days, and the three days that precede each feast day,
and the three days that follow, be days of immunity and exemption for every Jew in my kingdom. 35 Let no man have authority to exact payment from them or to molest any of them in any matter.
36 "Let thirty thousand Jews be enrolled in the king's army and allowances be given them, as is due to all the king's soldiers. 37 Let some of them be stationed in the king's principal strongholds, and of these let some be given positions of trust in the affairs of the kingdom. Let their superiors and their rulers be taken from among them, and let them follow their own laws, as the king has commanded in the land of Judah.
38 "Let the three districts that have been added to Judea from the province of Samaria be incorporated with Judea so that they may be under one man and obey no other authority than the high priest. 39 Ptolemais and its confines I give as a present to the sanctuary in Jerusalem for the necessary expenses of the sanctuary. 40 I make a yearly personal grant of fifteen thousand silver shekels out of the royal revenues, from appropriate places. 41 All the additional funds that the officials did not hand over as they had done in the first years, shall henceforth be handed over for the services of the temple. 42 Moreover, the dues of five thousand silver shekels that used to be taken from the revenue of the sanctuary every year shall be canceled, since these funds belong to the priests who perform the services. 43 Whoever takes refuge in the temple of Jerusalem or in any of its precincts, because of money he owes the king, or because of any other debt, shall be released, together with all the goods he possesses in my kingdom. 44 The cost of rebuilding and restoring the structures of the sanctuary shall be covered out of the royal revenue. 45 Likewise the cost of building
the walls of Jerusalem and fortifying it all around, and of building walls in Judea, shall be donated from the royal revenue."
46 When Jonathan and the people heard these words, they neither believed nor accepted them, for they remembered the great evil that Demetrius had done in Israel, and how sorely he had afflicted them. 47 They therefore decided in favor of Alexander, for he had been the first to address them peaceably, and they remained his allies for the rest of his life.
48 King Alexander gathered together
a large army and encamped opposite Demetrius. 49 The two kings joined battle, and when the army of Demetrius fled, Alexander pursued him, and overpowered his soldiers. 50 He pressed the battle hard until sunset, and Demetrius fell that day.
Treaty of Ptolemy and Alexander.
51 Alexander sent ambassadors to Ptolemy, king of Egypt, with this message:
52 "Now that I have returned to my realm, taken my seat on the throne of my fathers, and established my rule by crushing Demetrius and gaining control of my country—53 for I engaged him in battle, defeated him and his army, and recovered the royal throne—54 let us now establish friendship with each other.
Give me your daughter for my wife; and as your son-in-law, I will give to you and to her gifts worthy of you."
55 King Ptolemy answered in these words: "Happy the day on which you returned to the land of your fathers and took your seat on their royal throne! 56 I will do for you what you have written;
but meet me in Ptolemais, so that we may see each other, and I will become your father-in-law as you have proposed."
57† So Ptolemy with his daughter Cleopatra set out from Egypt and came to Ptolemais in the year one hundred and sixty-two. [58] There King Alexander met him, and Ptolemy gave him his daughter Cleopatra in marriage. Their wedding was celebrated at Ptolemais with great splendor according to the custom of kings.

[59] King Alexander also wrote to Jonathan to come and meet him. [60]* So he went with pomp to Ptolemais, where he met the two kings and gave them and their friends silver and gold and many gifts and thus won their favor. [61] Some pestilent Israelites, transgressors of the law, united against him to accuse him, but the king paid no heed to them. [62] He ordered Jonathan to be divested of his ordinary garments and to be clothed in royal purple; and so it was done. [63] The king also had him seated at his side. He said to his magistrates: "Go with him to the center of the city and make a proclamation that no one is to bring charges against him on any grounds or be troublesome to him in any way."

[64]* When his accusers saw the honor paid to him in the proclamation, and the purple with which he was clothed, they all fled. [65] The king also honored him by numbering him among his Chief Friends and made him military commander and governor of the province. [66] So Jonathan returned in peace and happiness to Jerusalem.

Victory over Appollonius. [67]† In the year one hundred and sixty-five, Demetrius, son of Demetrius, came from Crete to the land of his fathers. [68] When King Alexander heard of it he was greatly troubled, and returned to Antioch. [69] Demetrius appointed Apollonius governor of Coelesyria. Having gathered a large army, Appollonius pitched his camp at Jamnia. From there he sent this message to Jonathan the high priest:

[70] "You are the only one who resists us. I am laughed at and put to shame on your account. Why are you displaying power against us in the mountains? [71] If you have confidence in your forces, come down now to us in the plain, and let us test each other's strength there; the city forces are on my side. [72] Inquire and learn who I am and who the others are who are helping me. Men say that you cannot make a stand against us because your fathers were twice put to flight in their own land. [73] Now you too will be unable to withstand our cavalry and such a force as this in the plain, where there is not a stone or a pebble or a place to flee."

[74] When Jonathan heard the message of Apollonius, he was roused. Choosing ten thousand men, he set out from Jerusalem, and Simon his brother joined him to help him. [75] He pitched camp near Joppa, but the men in the city shut him out because Apollonius had a garrison there. When the Jews besieged it, [76]† the men of the city became afraid and opened the gates, and so Jonathan took possession of Joppa.

[77] When Apollonius heard of it, he drew up three thousand horsemen and an innumerable infantry. He marched on Azotus as though he were going on through the country, but at the same time he advanced into the plain, because he had such a large number of horsemen to rely on. [78] Jonathan followed him to Azotus, and they engaged in battle. [79] Apollonius, however, had left a thousand cavalry in hiding behind them. [80] When Jonathan discovered that there was an ambush behind him, his army was surrounded. From morning until evening they showered his men with arrows. [81] But his men held their ground, as Jonathan had commanded, whereas the enemy's horses became tired out. [82] When the horsemen were exhausted, Simon attacked the phalanx, overwhelmed it and put it to flight. [83] The horsemen too were scattered over the plain. The enemy fled to Azotus and entered Beth-dagon, the temple of their idol, to save themselves. [84]* But Jonathan burned and plundered Azotus with its neighboring towns, and destroyed by fire both the temple of Dagon and the men who had taken refuge in it. [85] Those who fell by the sword, together with those who were burned alive, came to about eight thousand men. [86] Then Jonathan left there and pitched his camp at Ashkalon, and the people of that city came out to meet him with great pomp. [87] He and his men then returned to Jerusalem, laden with much booty.

[88] When King Alexander heard of these events, he accorded new honors to Jonathan. [89]† He sent him a gold buckle, such as is usually given to King's Kinsmen; he also gave him Ekron and all its territory as a possession.

Alliance of Demetrius and Ptolemy. [1] The king of Egypt gathered his forces, as numerous as the sands of the seashore, and many ships; and he sought by deceit to take Alexander's kingdom and add it to his own. [2] He entered Syria with peaceful words, and the people in the cities opened their gates to welcome him, as King Alexander had ordered them to do, since Ptolemy was his father-in-law. 3 But when Ptolemy entered the cities, he stationed garrison troops in each one. 4* When he reached Azotus, he was shown the temple of Dagon destroyed by fire, Azotus and its suburbs demolished, corpses lying about, and the charred bodies of those burned by Jonathan in the war and stacked up along his route. 5 To prejudice the king against Jonathan, he was told what the latter had done; but the king said nothing. 6 Jonathan met the king with pomp at Joppa, and they greeted each other and spent the night there. 7† Jonathan accompanied the king as far as the river called Eleutherus and then returned to Jerusalem.

8† Plotting evil against Alexander, King Ptolemy took possession of the cities along the seacoast as far as Seleucia-by-the-Sea. 9 He sent ambassadors to King Demetrius, saying: "Come, let us make a pact with each other; I will give you my daughter whom Alexander has married, and you shall reign over your father's kingdom. 10† I regret that I gave him my daughter, for he has sought to kill me." 11 His real reason for accusing Alexander, however, was that he coveted Alexander's kingdom. 12 After taking his daughter away and giving her to Demetrius, Ptolemy broke with Alexander; their enmity became open. 13 Then Ptolemy entered Antioch and assumed the crown of Asia; he thus wore two crowns on his head, that of Egypt and that of Asia.

Deaths of Alexander and Ptolemy. 14 King Alexander was in Cilicia at that time, because the people of that region had revolted. 15 When Alexander heard the news, he came to challenge Ptolemy in battle. Ptolemy marched out and met him with a strong force and put him to flight. 16 Alexander fled to Arabia to seek protection. King Ptolemy's triumph was complete 17 when the Arab Zabdiel cut off Alexander's head and sent it to Ptolemy. 18 But three days later King Ptolemy himself died, and his men in the fortified cities were killed by the inhabitants of the strongholds. 19† Thus Demetrius became king in the year one hundred and sixty-seven.

Pact with Demetrius. 20 At that time Jonathan gathered together the men of Judea to attack the citadel in Jerusalem, and they set up many machines against it. 21 Some transgressors of the law, enemies of their own nation, went to the king and informed him that Jonathan was besieging the citadel. 22 When Demetrius heard this, he was furious, and set out immediately for Ptolemais. He wrote to Jonathan to discontinue the siege and to meet him for a conference at Ptolemais as soon as possible.

23 On hearing this, Jonathan ordered the siege to continue. He selected some elders and priests of Israel and exposed himself to danger 24 by going to the king at Ptolemais. He brought with him silver, gold apparel, and many other presents, and found favor with the king. 25 Although some impious men of his own nation brought charges against him, 26 the king treated him just as his predecessors had done and showed him great honor in the presence of all his Friends. 27 He confirmed him in the high priesthood and in all the honors he had previously held, and had him enrolled among his Chief Friends.

28* Jonathan asked the king to exempt Judea and the three districts of Samaria from tribute, promising him in return three hundred talents. 29 The king agreed and wrote the following letter to Jonathan about all these matters:

30*† "King Demetrius sends greetings to his brother Jonathan and to the Jewish nation. 31† We are sending you, for your information, a copy of the letter that we wrote to Lasthenes our kinsman concerning you. 32 " 'King Demetrius sends greetings to his father Lasthenes. 33 Because of the good will they show us, we have decided to bestow benefits on the Jewish nation, who are our friends and who observe their obligations to us. 34*† Therefore we confirm their possession, not only of the territory of Judea, but also of the three districts of Aphairema, Lydda, and Ramathaim. The Intrigue of Trypho. 38 When King Demetrius saw that the land was peaceful under his rule and that he had no opposition, he dismissed his entire army, every man to his home, except the foreign troops which he had hired from the islands of the nations. So all the soldiers who had served under his predecessors hated him. 39* When a certain Trypho, who had previously belonged to Alexander's party, saw that all the troops were grumbling at Demetrius, he went to Imalkue the Arab, who was bringing up Alexander's young son Antiochus. 40 Trypho kept urging Imalkue to hand over the boy to him, that he might make him king in his father's place. During his stay there of many days, he told him of all that Demetrius had done and of the hatred that his soldiers had for him.

Jonathan Aids Demetrius. 41 Meanwhile Jonathan sent the request to King Demetrius to withdraw his troops from the citadel of Jerusalem and from the other strongholds, for they were constantly hostile to Israel. 42 Demetrius, in turn, sent this word to Jonathan: "I will not only do this for you and your nation, but I will greatly honor you and your nation when I find the opportunity. 43 Do me the favor, therefore, of sending men to fight for me, because all my troops have revolted."

44 So Jonathan sent three thousand good fighting men to him at Antioch. When they came to the king, he was delighted over their arrival, 45 for the populace, one hundred and twenty thousand strong, had massed in the center of the city in an attempt to kill him. 46 But he took refuge in the palace, while the populace gained control of the main streets and began to fight. 47 So the king called the Jews to his aid. They all rallied around him and spread out through the city. On that day they killed about a hundred thousand men in the city, 48 which, at the same time, they set on fire and plundered on a large scale. Thus they saved the king's life. 49 When the populace saw that the Jews held the city at their mercy, they lost courage and cried out to the king in supplication, 50 "Give us your terms and let the Jews stop attacking us and our city." So they threw down their arms and made peace. 51 The Jews thus gained glory in the eyes of the king and all his subjects, and they became renowned throughout his kingdom. Finally they returned to Jerusalem with much spoil.

52 But when King Demetrius was sure of his royal throne, and the land was peaceful under his rule, 53 he broke all his promises and became estranged from Jonathan. Instead of rewarding Jonathan for all the favors he had received from him, he caused him much trouble.

Alliance with Trypho. 54* After this, Trypho returned and brought with him the young boy Antiochus, who became king and wore the royal crown. 55 All the soldiers whom Demetrius had discharged rallied around Antiochus and fought against Demetrius, who was routed and fled. 56 Trypho captured the elephants and occupied Antioch. 57 Then young Antiochus wrote to Jonathan: "I confirm you in the high priesthood and appoint you ruler over the four districts and wish you to be one of the King's Friends." 58* He also sent him gold dishes and a dinner service, gave him the right to drink from gold cups, to dress in royal purple, and to wear a gold buckle. 59† Likewise, he made Jonathan's brother Simon governor of the region from the Ladder of Tyre to the frontier of Egypt.

60† Jonathan set out and traveled through West-of-Euphrates and its cities, and all the forces of Syria espoused his cause as allies. When he arrived at Ashkalon, the citizens welcomed him with pomp. 61 But when he set out for Gaza, the people of Gaza locked their gates against him. So he besieged it and burned and plundered its suburbs. 62 Then the people of Gaza appealed to him for mercy, and he granted them peace. He took the sons of their chief men as hostages and sent them to Jerusalem. He then traveled on through the province as far as Damascus.

War with Demetrius. 63 Jonathan heard that the generals of Demetrius had come with a strong force to Kadesh in Galilee, intending to remove him from office. 64 So he went to meet them, leaving his brother Simon in the province.

65 Simon besieged Beth-zur, attacked it for many days, and blockaded the inhabitants. 66 When they sued for peace,
he granted it to them. He expelled them from the city, took possession of it, and put a garrison there.
67† Meanwhile, Jonathan and his army pitched their camp near the waters of Gennesaret, and at daybreak they went to the plain of Hazor. 68 There, in front of him on the plain, was the army of the foreigners. This army attacked him in the open, having first detached an ambush against him in the mountains.
69 Then the men in ambush rose out of their places and joined in the battle.
70 All of Jonathan's men fled; no one stayed except the army commanders Mattathias, son of Absalom, and Judas, son of Chalphi. 71 Jonathan tore his clothes, threw earth on his head, and prayed. 72 Then he went back to the combat and so overwhelmed the enemy that they took to flight. 73 Those of his men who were running away saw it and returned to him; and with him they pursued the enemy as far as their camp in Kadesh, where they pitched their own camp. 74 Three thousand of the foreign troops fell on that day. Then Jonathan returned to Jerusalem.

CHAPTER 12

Alliances with Rome and Sparta. 1* When Jonathan saw that the times favored him, he sent selected men to Rome to confirm and renew his friendship with the Romans. 2 He also sent letters to Sparta and other places for the same purpose.
3 After reaching Rome, the men entered the senate chamber and said, "The high priest Jonathan and the Jewish people have sent us to renew the earlier friendship and alliance between you and them." 4 The Romans gave them letters addressed to the authorities in the various places, requesting them to provide the envoys with safe conduct to the land of Judah.
5 This is a copy of the letter that Jonathan wrote to the Spartans: 6 "Jonathan
the high priest, the senate of the nation,
the priests, and the rest of the Jewish people send greetings to their brothers the Spartans. 7*† Long ago a letter was sent to the high priest Onias from Arius, who then reigned over you, stating that you are our brothers, as the attached copy shows. 8 Onias welcomed the envoy with honor and received the letter, which clearly referred to alliance and friendship. 9*† Though we have no need of these things, since we have for our encouragement the sacred books that are in our possession, 10 we have ventured to send word to you for the renewal of brotherhood and friendship, so as not to become strangers to you altogether;
a long time has passed since your mission to us. 11 We, on our part, have never ceased to remember you in the sacrifices and prayers that we offer on our feasts and other appropriate days, as it is right and proper to remember brothers. 12 We likewise rejoice in your renown. 13 But many hardships and wars have beset us, and the kings around us have attacked
us. 14 We did not wish to be troublesome to you and to the rest of our allies and friends in these wars; 15 with the help of Heaven for our support, we have been saved from our enemies, and they have been humbled. 16* So we have chosen Numenius, son of Antiochus, and Antipater, son of Jason, and we have sent them to the Romans to renew our former friendship and alliance with them. 17 We have also ordered them to come to you and greet you, and to deliver to you our letter about the renewal of our brotherhood. 18 Therefore kindly send us an answer on this matter."
19 This is a copy of the letter that was sent to Onias: 20* "Arius, king of the Spartans, sends greetings to Onias the high priest. 21 A document has been found stating that the Spartans and the Jews are brothers; both nations descended from Abraham. 22 Now that we have learned this, kindly write to us about your welfare. 23 We, on our part,
are informing you that your cattle and your possessions are ours, and ours are yours. We have, therefore, given orders that you should be told of this."
Demetrius Repelled. 24 Jonathan heard that the generals of Demetrius had returned to attack him with a stronger army than before. 25† He set out from Jerusalem and went into the country of Hamath to meet them, giving them no time to enter his province.
26 The spies he had sent into their camp came back and reported that the enemy had made ready to attack the Jews that very night. 27 Therefore, when the sun set, Jonathan ordered his men to be on guard and to remain armed, ready for combat, throughout the night. He also set outposts all around the camp. 28 When the enemy heard that Jonathan and his men were ready for battle, their hearts sank with fear and dread. They lighted fires and then withdrew. 29 But because Jonathan and his men were watching the lights burning, they did not know what had happened until morning. 30 Then Jonathan pursued them, but he could not overtake them, for they had crossed the river Eleutherus.

31 So Jonathan turned aside against the Arabs who are called Zabadeans, overwhelming and plundering them. 32 Then he marched on to Damascus and traversed that whole region.

33 Simon also set out and went as far as Ashkalon and its neighboring strongholds. He then turned to Joppa and occupied it, 34 for he heard that its men had intended to hand over this stronghold to the supporters of Demetrius. He left a garrison there to guard it.

35 When Jonathan returned, he assembled the elders of the people, and with them he made plans for building strongholds in Judea, 36 for making the walls of Jerusalem still higher, and for erecting a high barrier between the citadel and the city, that would isolate the citadel and so prevent its garrison from commerce with the city. 37 The people therefore worked together on building up the city, for part of the east wall above the ravine had collapsed. The quarter called Chaphenatha was also repaired. 38 Simon likewise built up Adida in the Shephelah, and strengthened its fortifications by providing them with gates and bars.

Capture of Jonathan. 39* Trypho was determined to become king of Asia, assume the crown, and do away with King Antiochus. 40 But he was afraid that Jonathan would not permit him, but would fight against him. Looking for a way to seize and kill him, he set out and reached Beth-shan. 41 Jonathan marched out against him with forty thousand picked fighting men and came to Beth-shan. 42 But when Trypho saw that Jonathan had arrived with a large army he was afraid to offer him violence. 43 Instead, he received him with honor, introduced him to all his friends, and gave him presents. He also ordered his friends and soldiers to obey him as they would himself. 44 Then he said to Jonathan: "Why have you put all your soldiers to so much trouble when we are not at war? 45 Pick out a few men to stay with you, send the rest back home, and then come with me to Ptolemais. I will hand it over to you together with other strongholds and their garrisons, as well as the officials, then I will leave and go home. That is why I came here."

46 Jonathan believed him and did as he said. He dismissed his troops, and they returned to the land of Judah. 47 But he kept with him three thousand men, of whom he sent two thousand to Galilee while one thousand accompanied him. 48 Then as soon as Jonathan had entered Ptolemais, the men of the city closed the gates and seized him; all who had entered with him, they killed with the sword.

49† Trypho sent soldiers and cavalry to Galilee and the Great Plain to destroy all Jonathan's men. 50 These, upon learning that Jonathan had been captured and his companions killed, encouraged one another and went out in compact body ready to fight. 51 As their pursuers saw that they were ready to fight for their lives, they turned back. 52 Thus all these men of Jonathan came safely into the land of Judah. They mourned over Jonathan and his men, and were in great fear, and all Israel fell into deep mourning.

53* All the nations round about sought to destroy them. They said, "Now that they have no leader to help them, let us make war on them and wipe out their memory from among men."

Simon, Leader of the Jews. 1 When Simon heard that Trypho was gathering a large army to invade and ravage the land of Judah, 2 and saw that the people were in dread and terror, he went up to Jerusalem. There he assembled the people 3 and exhorted them in these words: "You know what I, my brothers, and my father's house have done for the laws and the sanctuary; what battles and disasters we have been through. 4 It was for the sake of these, for the sake of Israel, that all my brothers have perished, and I alone am left. 5 Far be it from me, then, to save my own life in any time of distress, for I am not better than my brothers. 6* Rather will I avenge my nation and the sanctuary, as well as your wives and children, for all the nations out of hatred have united to destroy us."

7 As the people heard these words, their spirit was rekindled. 8 They shouted in reply: "You are our leader in place of your brothers Judas and Jonathan. 9 Fight our battles, and we will do everything that you tell us." 10 So Simon mustered all the men able to fight, and quickly completing the walls of Jerusalem, fortified it on every side. 11 He sent Jonathan, son of Absalom, to Joppa with a large force; Jonathan drove out the occupants and remained there.

Deceit and Treachery of Trypho. 12 Then Trypho moved from Ptolemais with a large army to invade the land of Judah, bringing Jonathan with him as a prisoner. 13 But Simon pitched his camp at Adida, facing the plain. 14 When Trypho learned that Simon had succeeded his brother Jonathan, and that he intended to fight him, he sent envoys to him with this message: 15 "We have detained your brother Jonathan on account of the money that he owed the royal treasury in connection with the offices that he held. 16 Therefore, if you send us a hundred talents of silver, and two of his sons as hostages to guarantee that when he is set free he will not revolt against us, we will release him."

17 Although Simon knew that they were speaking deceitfully to him, he gave orders to get the money and the boys, for fear of provoking much hostility among the people, who might say 18 that Jonathan perished because Simon would not send Trypho the money and the boys. 19 So he sent the boys and the hundred talents; but Trypho broke his promise and would not let Jonathan go. 20† Next he began to invade and ravage the country. His troops went around by the road that leads to Adora, but Simon and his army moved along opposite him everywhere he went. 21 The men in the citadel sent messengers to Trypho, urging him to come to them by way of the desert, and to send them provisions. 22 Although Trypho got all his cavalry ready to go, there was a heavy fall of snow that night, and he could not go. So he left for Gilead. 23† When he was approaching Baskama, he had Jonathan killed and buried there. 24 Then Trypho returned to his own country.

Jonathan's Tomb. 25 Simon sent for the remains of his brother Jonathan, and buried him in Modein, the city of his fathers. 26 All Israel bewailed him with solemn lamentation, mourning over him for many days. 27 Then Simon erected over the tomb of his father and his brothers a monument of stones, polished front and back, and raised high enough to be seen at a distance. 28 He set up seven pyramids facing one another for his father and his mother and his four brothers. 29 For the pyramids he devised a setting of big columns, on which he carved suits of armor as a perpetual memorial, and next to the armor he placed carved ships, which could be seen by all who sailed the sea. 30 This tomb which he built at Modein is there to the present day.

Pact between Simon and Demetrius. 31 Trypho dealt treacherously with the young King Antiochus. He killed him 32 and assumed the kingship in his place, putting on the crown of Asia. Thus he brought much evil on the land. 33 Simon, on his part, built up the strongholds of Judea, strengthening their fortifications with high towers, thick walls, and gates with bars, and he stored up provisions in the fortresses. 34 Simon also sent chosen men to King Demetrius with the request that he grant the land a release from taxation, for all that Trypho did was to plunder the land. 35 In reply, King Demetrius sent him the following letter:

36 "King Demetrius sends greetings to Simon the high priest, the friend of kings, and to the elders and the Jewish people. 37 We have received the gold crown and the palm branch that you sent. We are willing to be on most peaceful terms with you and to write to our official to grant you release from tribute. 38 Whatever we have guaranteed to you remains in force, and the strongholds that you have built shall remain yours. 39 We remit any oversights and defaults incurred up to now, as well as the crown tax that you owe. Any other tax that may have been collected in Jerusalem shall no longer be collected there. 40 If any of you are qualified for enrollment in our service, let them be enrolled. Let there be peace between us."

41† Thus in the year one hundred and seventy, the yoke of the Gentiles was removed from Israel, 42 and the people began to write in their records and contracts, "In the first year of Simon, high priest, governor, and leader of the Jews."

Capture of Gazara and the Citadel. 43*† In those days Simon besieged Gazara and surrounded it with troops. He made a siege machine, pushed it up against the city, and attacked and captured one of the towers. 44 The men who had been on the siege machine jumped down into the city and caused a great tumult there. 45 The men of the city, joined by their wives and children, went up on the wall, with their garments rent, and cried out in loud voices, begging Simon to grant them peace. 46 "Do not treat us according to our evil deeds," they said, "but according to your mercy."

47 So Simon came to terms with them and did not destroy them. He made them leave the city, however, and he purified the houses in which there were idols. Then he entered the city with hymns and songs of praise. 48 After removing from it everything that was impure, he settled there men who observed the law. He improved its fortifications and built himself a residence.

49 The men in the citadel in Jerusalem were prevented from going out into the country and back for the purchase of food; they suffered greatly from hunger, and many of them died of starvation. 50 They finally cried out to Simon for peace, and he gave them peace. He expelled them from the citadel and cleansed it of impurities. 51*† On the twenty-third day of the second month, in the year one hundred and seventy-one, the Jews entered the citadel with shouts of jubilation, waving of palm branches, the music of harps and cymbals and lyres, and the singing of hymns and canticles, because a great enemy of Israel had been destroyed. 52 Simon decreed that this day should be celebrated every year with rejoicing. He also strengthened the fortifications of the temple hill alongside the citadel, and he and his companions dwelt there. 53† Seeing that his son John was now a grown man, Simon made him commander of all his soldiers, with his residence in Gazara.

Capture of Demetrius. 1† In the year one hundred and seventy-two, King Demetrius assembled his army and marched into Media to obtain help so that he could fight Trypho. 2† When Arsaces, king of Persia and Media, heard that Demetrius had invaded his territory, he sent one of his generals to take him alive. 3 The general went forth and defeated the army of Demetrius; he captured him and brought him to Arsaces, who put him in prison.

Glory of Simon

4* The land was at rest all the days of Simon, who sought the good of his nation.
His people were delighted with his power
and his magnificence throughout his reign.
5 As his crowning glory he captured the port of Joppa and made it a gateway to the isles of the sea.
6* He enlarged the borders of his nation
and gained control of the country.
7 He took many enemies prisoners of war and made himself master of Gazara, Beth-zur, and the citadel.
He cleansed the citadel of its impurities;
there was no one to withstand him.
8* The people cultivated their land in peace;
the land yielded its produce and the trees of the field their fruit.
9* Old men sat in the squares,
all talking about the good times,
while the young men wore the glorious apparel of war.
10 He supplied the cities with food
and equipped them with means of defense,
till his glorious name reached the ends of the earth.
11* He brought peace to the land,
and Israel was filled with happiness.
12* Every man sat under his vine and his fig tree,
with no one to disturb him.
13 No one was left to attack them in their land;
the kings in those days were crushed.
14 He strengthened all the lowly among his people and was zealous for the law;
he suppressed all the lawless and the wicked.
15 He made the temple splendid and enriched its equipment.

Alliance with Rome and Sparta. 16† When people heard in Rome and even in Sparta that Jonathan had died, they were deeply grieved. 17 But when the Romans heard that his brother Simon had been made high priest in his place and was master of the country and the cities, [18]* they sent him inscribed tablets of bronze to renew with him the friendship and alliance that they had established with his brothers Judas and Jonathan. [19] These were read before the assembly in Jerusalem.

[20] This is a copy of the letter that the Spartans sent: "The rulers and the citizens of Sparta send greetings to Simon the high priest, the elders, the priests, and the rest of the Jewish people, our brothers. [21] The envoys you sent to our people have informed us of your glory and fame, and we were happy that they came. [22]* In accordance with what they said we have recorded the following in the public decrees: Since Numenius, son of Antiochus, and Antipater, son of Jason, envoys of the Jews, have come to us to renew their friendship with us, [23] the people have voted to receive the men with honor, and to deposit a copy of their words in the public archives, so that the people of Sparta may have a record of them. A copy of this decree has been made for Simon the high priest."

Decree of Honor. [25] When the people heard of these things, they said, "How can we thank Simon and his sons? [26] He and his brothers and his father's house have stood firm and repulsed Israel's enemies. They have thus preserved its liberty." So they made an inscription on bronze tablets, which they affixed to pillars on Mount Zion. [27]† The following is a copy of the inscription:

"On the eighteenth day of Elul, in the year one hundred and seventy-two, that is, the third year under Simon the high priest in Asaramel, [28] in a great assembly of priests, people, rulers of the nation, and elders of the country, the following proclamation was made:

[29] " 'Since there have often been wars in our country, Simon, son of the priest Mattathias, descendant of Joarib, and his brothers have put themselves in danger and resisted the enemies of their nation, so that their sanctuary and law might be maintained, and they have thus brought great glory to their nation. [30] After Jonathan had rallied his nation and become their high priest, he was gathered to his kinsmen. [31] When the enemies of the Jews sought to invade and devastate their country and to lay hands on their temple, [32] Simon rose up and fought for his nation, spending large sums of his own money to equip the men of his nation's armed forces and giving them their pay. [33] He fortified the cities of Judea, especially the frontier city of Beth-zur, where he stationed a garrison of Jewish soldiers, and where previously the enemy's arms had been stored. [34] He also fortified Joppa by the sea and Gazara on the border of Azotus, a place previously occupied by the enemy; these cities he resettled with Jews, and furnished them with all that was necessary for their restoration. [35] When the Jewish people saw Simon's loyalty and the glory he planned to bring to his nation, they made him their leader and high priest because of all he had accomplished and the loyalty and justice he had shown his nation. In every way he sought to exalt his people.

[36] " 'In his time and under his guidance they succeeded in driving the Gentiles out of their country, especially those in the City of David in Jerusalem, who had built for themselves a citadel from which they used to sally forth to defile the environs of the temple and inflict grave injury on its purity. [37] In this citadel he stationed Jewish soldiers, and he strengthened its fortifications for the defense of the land and the city, while he also raised the wall of Jerusalem to a greater height. [38] Consequently, King Demetrius confirmed him in the high priesthood, [39]* made him one of his Friends, and conferred the highest honors on him. [40] He had indeed heard that the Romans had addressed the Jews as friends, allies, and brothers and that they had received Simon's envoys with honor.

[41] " 'The Jewish people and their priest have, therefore, made the following decisions. Simon shall be their permanent leader and high priest until a true prophet arises. [42] He shall act as governor general over them, and shall have charge of the temple, to make regulations concerning its functions and concerning the country, its weapons and strongholds, [43] he shall be obeyed by all. All contracts made in the country shall be dated by his name. He shall have the right to wear royal purple and gold ornaments. [44] It shall not be lawful for any of the people or priests to nullify any of these decisions, or to contradict the orders given by him, or to convene an assembly in the country without his consent, to be clothed in royal purple or wear an official gold brooch. [45] Whoever acts otherwise or violates any of these prescriptions shall be liable to punishment.

[48] It was decreed that this inscription should be engraved on bronze tablets, to be set up in a conspicuous place in the precincts of the temple, [49] and that copies of it should be deposited in the treasury, where they would be available to Simon and his sons.

CHAPTER 15

Letter of Antiochus. [1]† Antiochus, son of King Demetrius, sent a letter from the islands of the sea to Simon, the priest and ethnarch of the Jews, and to all the nation, [2] which read as follows:

"King Antiochus sends greetings to Simon, the priest and ethnarch, and to the Jewish nation. [3] Whereas certain villains have gained control of the kingdom of my ancestors, I intend to reclaim it, that I may restore it to its former state. I have recruited a large number of mercenary troops and equipped warships [4] to make a landing in my country and take revenge on those who have ruined it and laid waste many cities in my realm.

[5] "Now, therefore, I confirm to you all the tax exemptions that the kings before me granted you and whatever other privileges they conferred on you. [6] I authorize you to coin your own money, as legal tender in your country. [7] Jerusalem and its temple shall be free. All the weapons you have prepared and all the strongholds you have built and now occupy shall remain in your possession. [8] All debts, present or future, due to the royal treasury shall be canceled for you, now and for all time. [9] When we recover our kingdom, we will greatly honor you and your nation and the temple, so that your glory will be manifest in all the earth."

[10]† In the year one hundred and seventy-four Antiochus invaded the land of his ancestors, and all the troops rallied to him, so that few were left with Trypho. [11]† Pursued by Antiochus, Trypho fled to Dor, by the sea, [12] realizing what a mass of troubles had come upon him now that his soldiers had deserted him. [13] Antiochus encamped before Dor with a hundred and twenty thousand infantry and eight thousand horsemen. [14] While he invested the city, his ships closed in along the coast, so that he blockaded it by land and sea and let no one go in or out.

Roman Alliance Renewed. [15]* Meanwhile, Numenius and his companions left Rome with letters such as this addressed to various kings and countries:

[16]† "Lucius, Consul of the Romans, sends greetings to King Ptolemy. [17] Certain envoys of the Jews, our friends and allies, have come to us to renew their earlier alliance of friendship. They had been sent by Simon the high priest and the Jewish people, [18]* and they brought with them a gold shield worth a thousand minas. [19] Therefore we have decided to write to various kings and countries, that they are not to harm them, or wage war against them or their cities or their country, and are not to assist those who fight against them. [20] We have also decided to accept the shield from them. [21] If, then, any troublemakers from their country take refuge with you, hand them over to Simon the high priest, so that he may punish them according to their law."

[22]† The consul sent similar letters to Kings Demetrius, Attalus, Ariarthes and Arsaces; [23] to all the countries—Sampsames, Sparta, Delos, Myndos, Sicyon, Caria, Samos, Pamphylia, Lycia, Halicarnassus, Rhodes, Phaselis, Cos, Side, Aradus, Gortyna, Cnidus, Cyprus, and Cyrene. [24] A copy of the letter was also sent to Simon the high priest.

Hostility of Antiochus. [25] When King Antiochus was encamped before Dor, he assaulted it continuously both with troops and with the siege machines he had made. He blockaded Trypho by preventing anyone from going in or out. [26] Simon sent to Antiochus' support two thousand elite troops, together with gold and silver and much equipment. [27] But he refused to accept the aid; in fact, he broke all the agreements he had previously made with Simon and became hostile toward him.

[28] He sent Athenobius, one of his Friends, to confer with Simon and say: "You are occupying Joppa and Gazara and the citadel of Jerusalem; these are cities of my kingdom. [29] You have laid waste their territories, done great harm to the land, and taken possession of many districts in my realm. [30] Therefore, give up the cities you have seized and the tribute money of the districts outside the territory of Judea of which you have taken possession; [31] or instead, pay me five hundred talents of silver for the devastation you have caused and five hundred talents more for the tribute money of the cities. If you do not do this, we will come and make war on you."

[32] So Athenobius, the king's Friend, came to Jerusalem and on seeing the splendor of Simon's court, the gold and silver plate on the sideboard, and the rest of his rich display, he was amazed. When he gave him the king's message, [33] Simon said to him in reply:

"We have not seized any foreign land; what we took is not the property of others, but our ancestral heritage which for a time had been unjustly held by our enemies. [34] Now that we have the opportunity, we are holding on to the heritage of our ancestors. [35] As for Joppa and Gazara, which you demand, the men of these cities were doing great harm to our people and laying waste our country; however, we are willing to pay you a hundred talents for these cities."

[36] Athenobius made no reply, but returned to the king in anger. When he told him of Simon's words, of his splendor, and of all he had seen, the king fell into a violent rage.

Victory over Cendebeus. [37]† Trypho had gotten aboard a ship and escaped to Orthosia. [38] Then the king appointed Cendebeus commander-in-chief of the seacoast, and gave him infantry and cavalry forces. [39]† He ordered him to move his troops against Judea and to fortify Kedron and strengthen its gates, so that he could launch attacks against the Jewish people. Meanwhile the king went in pursuit of Trypho. [40] When Cendebeus came to Jamnia, he began to harass the people and to make incursions into Judea, where he took people captive or massacred them. [41] As the king ordered, he fortified Kedron and stationed horsemen and infantry there, so that they could go out and patrol the roads of Judea.

[1] John then went up from Gazara and told his father Simon what Cendebeus was doing. [2] Simon called his two oldest sons, Judas and John, and said to them: "I and my brothers and my father's house have fought the battles of Israel from our youth until today, and many times we succeeded in saving Israel. [3] I have now grown old, but you, by the mercy of Heaven, have come to man's estate. Take my place and my brother's, and go out and fight for our nation; and may the help of Heaven be with you!"

[4] John then mustered in the land twenty thousand warriors and horsemen. Setting out against Cendebeus, they spent the night at Modein, [5] rose early, and marched into the plain. There, facing them, was an immense army of foot soldiers and horsemen, and between the two armies was a stream. [6] John and his men took their position against the enemy. Seeing that his men were afraid to cross the stream, John crossed first. When his men saw this, they crossed over after him. [7] Then he divided his infantry into two corps and put his cavalry between them, for the enemy's horsemen were very numerous. [8] They blew the trumpets, and Cendebeus and his army were put to flight; many of them fell wounded, and the rest fled toward the stronghold. [9] It was then that John's brother Judas fell wounded; but John pursued them until Cendebeus reached Kedron, which he had fortified. [10] Some took refuge in the towers on the plain of Azotus, but John set fire to these, and about two thousand of the enemy perished. He then returned to Judea in peace.

Murder of Simon and His Sons. [11] Ptolemy, son of Abubus, had been appointed governor of the plain of Jericho, and he had much silver and gold, [12] being the son-in-law of the high priest. [13] But he became ambitious and sought to get control of the country. So he made treacherous plans to do away with Simon and his sons. [14]† As Simon was inspecting the cities of the country and providing for their needs, he and his sons Mattathias and Judas went down to Jericho in the year one hundred and seventy-seven, in the eleventh month (that is, the month Shebat). [15]† The son of Abubus gave them a deceitful welcome in the little stronghold called Dok which he had built. While serving them a sumptuous banquet, he had his men hidden there. [16] Then, when Simon and his sons had drunk freely, Ptolemy and his men sprang up, weapons in hand, rushed upon Simon in the banquet hall, and killed him, his two sons, and some of his servants. [17] By this vicious act of treason he repaid good with evil.

[18] Then Ptolemy wrote an account of this and sent it to the king, asking that troops be sent to help him and that the country be turned over to him. [19] He sent other men to Gazara to do away with John. To the army officers he sent letters inviting them to come to him so that he Jerusalem and the mount of the temple.

[21] But someone ran ahead and brought word to John at Gazara that his father

Ptolemy had sent men to kill him also.
[22] On hearing this, John was utterly astounded. When the men came to kill him, he had them arrested and put to death,
for he knew what they meant to do.
[23]† Now the rest of the history of John,
his wars and the brave deeds he performed, his rebuilding of the walls, and his other achievements—[24] these things are recorded in the chronicle of his pontificate, from the time that he succeeded his father as high priest.

The Second Book of

MACCABEES

Although this book, like the preceding one, receives its title from its protagonist, Judas Maccabee (or Maccabeus), it is not a sequel to 1 Maccabees. The two differ in many respects. Whereas the first covers the period from the beginning of the reign of Antiochus IV (175 B.C.) to the accession of John Hyrcanus I (134 B.C.), this present book treats of the events in Jewish history from the time of the high priest Onias III and King Seleucus IV (c. 180 B.C.) to the defeat of Nicanor's army (161 B.C.).

The author of 2 Maccabees states (2, 23) that his one-volume work is an abridgment of a certain five-volume work by Jason of Cyrene; but since this latter has not survived, it is difficult to determine its relationship to the present epitome. One does not know how freely the anonymous epitomizer may have rewritten his shorter composition, or how closely he may have followed the wording of the original in the excerpts he made. Some parts of the text here, clearly not derived from Jason's work, are the Preface (2, 19-32), the Epilogue (15, 37-39), and probably also certain moralizing reflections (e. g., 5, 17-20; 6, 12-17). It is certain, however, that both works were written in Greek, which explains why the Second Book of Maccabees was not included in the canon of the Hebrew Bible.

The book is not without genuine historical value in supplementing I Maccabees, and it contains some apparently authentic documents (11, 16-38). Its purpose, whether intended by Jason himself or read into it by the compiler, is to give a theological interpretation to the history of the period. There is less interest, therefore, in the actual exploits of Judas Maccabeus than in God's marvelous interventions. These direct the course of events, both to punish the sacriligeous and blashphemous pagans, and to purify God's holy temple and restore it to his faithful people. The author sometimes effects his purpose by transferring events from their proper chronological order, and giving exaggerated figures for the size of armies and the numbers killed in battle; he also places long, edifying discourses and prayers in the mouths of his heroes, and inclines to elaborate descriptions of celestial apparitions (3, 24-34; 5, 2ff; 10, 29f; 15, 11-16). He is the earliest known composer of stories that glorify God's holy martyrs (6, 18—7, 42; 14, 37-46).

Of theological importance are the author's teachings on the resurrection of the just on the last day (7, 9.11.14.23; 14, 46), the intercession of the saints in heaven for people living on earth (15, 11-16), and the power of the living to offer prayers and sacrifices for the dead (12, 39-46).

The beginning of 2 Maccabees consists of two letters sent by the Jews of Jerusalem to their coreligionists in Egypt. They deal with the observance of the feast commemorating the central event of the book, the purification of the temple. It is uncertain whether the author or a later scribe prefixed these letters to the narrative proper. If the author is responsible for their insertion, he must have written his book some time after 124 B.C., the date of the more recent of the two letters. In any case, Jason's five-volume work very likely continued the history of the Jews well into the Hasmonean period, so that 2 Maccabees would probably not have been produced much before the end of the second century B.C.

The main divisions of 2 Maccabees are:

- I: Letters to the Jews in Egypt (1, 1—2, 18)
- II: Author's Preface (2, 19-32)
- III: Heliodorus' Attempt To Profane the Temple (3, 1-40)
- IV: Profanation and Persecution (4, 1—7, 42)
- V: Victories of Judas and Purification of the Temple (8, 1—10, 8)
- VI: Renewed Persecution (10, 9—15, 36)
- VII: Epilogue (15, 37-39)

CHAPTER 1

First Letter 124 B.C. [1] The Jews in Jerusalem and in the land of Judea send greetings to their brethren, the Jews in Egypt, and wish them true peace! [2] May God bless you and remember his covenant with his faithful servants, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. [3] May he give to all of you a heart to worship him and to do his will readily and generously. [4] May he open your heart to his law and his commandments and grant you peace. [5] May he hear your prayers, and be reconciled to you, and never forsake you in time of adversity. [6] Even now we are praying for you here.

[7*†] In the reign of Demetrius, the year one hundred and sixty-nine, we Jews wrote to you during the trouble and violence that overtook us in those years after Jason and his followers had revolted against the holy land and the kingdom, [8*†] setting fire to the gatehouse and shedding innocent blood. But we prayed to the Lord, and our prayer was heard; we offered sacrifices and fine flour; we lighted the lamps and set out the loaves of bread. [9†] We are now reminding you to celebrate the feast of Booths in the month of Chislev. [10†] Dated in the year one hundred and eighty-eight.

Festival Letter 164 B.C. The people of Jerusalem and Judea, the senate, and Judas send greetings and good wishes to Aristobulus, counselor of King Ptolemy and member of the family of the anointed priests, and to the Jews in Egypt. [11†] Since we have been saved by God from grave dangers, we give him great thanks for having fought on our side against the king; [12*] it was he who drove out those who fought against the holy city. [13†] When their leader arrived in Persia with his seemingly irresistible army, they were cut to pieces in the temple of the goddess Nanea through a deceitful stratagem employed by Nanea's priests. [14†] On the pretext of marrying the goddess, Antiochus with his Friends had come to the place to get its great treasures by way of dowry. [15] When the priests of the Nanaeon had displayed the treasures, Antiochus with a few attendants came to the temple precincts. As soon as he entered the temple, the priests locked the doors. [16] Then they opened a hidden trapdoor in the ceiling, hurled stones at the leader and his companions and struck them down. They dismembered the bodies, cut off their heads and tossed them to the people outside. [17] Forever blessed be our God, who has thus punished the wicked!

[18†] We shall be celebrating the purification of the temple on the twenty-fifth day of the month Chislev, so we thought it right to inform you, that you too may celebrate the feast of Booths and of the fire that appeared when Nehemiah, the rebuilder of the temple and the altar, offered sacrifices. [19†] When our fathers were being exiled to Persia, devout priests of the time took some of the fire from the altar and hid it secretly in the hollow of a dry cistern, making sure that the place would be unknown to anyone. [20] Many years later, when it so pleased God, Nehemiah, commissioned by the king of Persia, sent the descendants of the priests who had hidden the fire to look for it. [21] When they informed us that they could not find any fire, but only muddy water, he ordered them to scoop some out and bring it. After the material for the sacrifices had been prepared, Nehemiah ordered the priests to sprinkle with the water the wood and what lay on it. [22] When this was done and in time the sun, which had been clouded over, began to shine, a great fire blazed up, so that everyone marveled. [23] While the sacrifice was being burned, the priests recited a prayer, and all present joined in with them, Jonathan leading and the rest responding with Nehemiah.

[24] The prayer was as follows: "Lord, Lord God, creator of all things, awesome and strong, just and merciful, the only

1, 10: 124 B.C. The date pertains to the preceding, not the following letter.

1, 10: King Ptolemy: Ptolemy VI Philometor, ruler of Egypt from 180 to 145 B.C.; he is mentioned also in 1 Mc 1, 18; 10, 51-59.

1, 11f: The king: Antiochus IV of Syria, the bitter persecutor of the Jews, who, as leader of the Syrian army that invaded Persia, perished there in 164 B.C.

1, 13: Nanea: an oriental goddess comparable to Artemis of the Greeks.

1, 14-17: A different account of the death of Antiochus IV is given in 9, 1-29, and another variant account in 1 Mc 6, 1-16. The writer of this letter had probably heard a distorted rumor of the king's death. This fact and other indications show that the letter was written very soon after Antiochus IV died, hence in 164 B.C.

1, 18-36: This purely legendary account of Nehemiah's miraculous fire is incorporated in the letter because of its connection with the temple and its rededication.

1, 18: Nehemiah, the rebuilder of the temple: he rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem, but the temple had been rebuilt by Zerubbabel almost a century before.

king and benefactor, [25] who alone are gracious, just, almighty, and eternal, Israel's savior from all evil, who chose our forefathers and sanctified them: [26] accept this sacrifice on behalf of all your people Israel and guard and sanctify your heritage. [27] Gather together our scattered people, free those who are the slaves of the Gentiles, look kindly on those who are despised and detested, and let the Gentiles know that you are our God. [28] Punish those who tyrannize over us and arrogantly mistreat us. [29]* Plant your people in your holy place, as Moses promised."

[30] Then the priests began to sing hymns. [31] After the sacrifice was burned, Nehemiah ordered the rest of the liquid to be poured upon large stones. [32] As soon as this was done, a flame blazed up, but its light was lost in the brilliance cast from a light on the altar. [33] When the event became known and the king of the Persians was told that, in the very place where the exiled priests had hidden the fire, a liquid was found with which Nehemiah and his people had burned the sacrifices, [34] the king, after verifying the fact, fenced the place off and declared it sacred. [35] To those on whom the king wished to bestow favors he distributed the large revenues he received there. [36]† Nehemiah and his companions called the liquid nephthar, meaning purification, but most people named it naphtha.

[1]† You will find in the records, not only that Jeremiah the prophet ordered the deportees to take some of the aforementioned fire with them, [2]* but also that the prophet, in giving them the law, admonished them not to forget the commandments of the Lord or be led astray in their thoughts, when seeing the gold and silver idols and their ornaments. [3] With other similar words he urged them not to let the law depart from their hearts. [4]† The same document also tells how the prophet, following a divine revelation, ordered that the tent and the ark should accompany him and how he went off to the mountain which Moses climbed to see God's inheritance. [5] When Jeremiah arrived there, he found a room in a cave in which he put the tent, the ark, and the altar of incense; then he blocked up the entrance. [6] Some of those who followed him came up intending to mark the path, but they could not find it. [7] When Jeremiah heard of this, he reproved them: "The place is to remain unknown until God gathers his people together again and shows them mercy. [8]† Then the Lord will disclose these things, and the glory of the Lord will be seen in the cloud, just as it appeared in the time of Moses and when Solomon prayed that the Place might be gloriously sanctified."

[9] It is also related how Solomon in his wisdom offered a sacrifice at the dedication and the completion of the temple. [10]* Just as Moses prayed to the Lord and fire descended from the sky and consumed the sacrifices, so Solomon also prayed and fire came down and burned up the holocausts. [11]*† Moses had said, "Because it had not been eaten, the sin offering was burned up." [12] Solomon also celebrated the feast in the same way for eight days.

[13]† Besides these things, it is also told in the records and in Nehemiah's Memoirs how he collected the books about the kings, the writings of the prophets and of David, and the royal letters about sacred offerings. [14]* In like manner Judas also collected for us the books that had been scattered because of the war, and we now have them in our possession. [15] If you need them, send messengers to get them for you.

[16] As we are about to celebrate the feast of the purification of the temple, we are writing to you requesting you also to please celebrate the feast. [17] It is God who has saved all his people and has restored to all of them their heritage, the kingdom, the priesthood, and the sacred rites, [18]* as he promised through the law. We trust in God, that he will soon have mercy on us and gather us together from everywhere under the heavens to his holy Place, for he has rescued us from great perils and has purified his Place.

chus Epiphanes and his son Eupator, [21] and of the heavenly manifestations accorded to the heroes who fought bravely for Judaism, so that, few as they were, they seized the whole land, put to flight the barbarian hordes, [22] regained possession of the world-famous temple, liberated the city, and reestablished the laws that were in danger of being abolished, while the Lord favored them with all his generous assistance. [23] All this, which Jason of Cyrene set forth in detail in five volumes, we will try to condense into a single book.

Purpose and Method. [24] In view of the flood of statistics, and the difficulties encountered by those who wish to plunge into historical narratives where the material is abundant, [25] we have aimed to please those who prefer simple reading, as well as to make it easy for the studious who wish to commit things to memory, and to be helpful to all. [26] For us who have taken upon ourselves the labor of making this digest, the task, far from being easy, is one of sweat and of sleepless nights, [27] just as the preparation of a festive banquet is no light matter for one who thus seeks to give enjoyment to others. Similarly, to win the gratitude of many we will gladly endure these inconveniences, [28] while we leave the responsibility for exact details to the original author, and confine our efforts to giving only a summary outline. [29] As the architect of a new house must give his attention to the whole structure, while the man who undertakes the decoration and the frescoes has only to concern himself with what is needed for ornamentation, so I think it is with us. [30] To enter into questions and examine them thoroughly from all sides is the task of the professional historian; [31] but the man who is making an adaptation should be allowed to aim at brevity of expression and to omit detailed treatment of the matter. [32] Here, then, we shall begin our account without further ado; it would be nonsense to write a long preface to a story and then abbreviate the story itself.

Treachery of Simon. [1*†] While the holy city lived in perfect peace and the laws were strictly observed because of the piety of the high priest Onias and his hatred of evil, [2] the kings themselves honored the Place and glorified the temple with the most magnificent gifts. [3†] Thus Seleucus, king of Asia, defrayed from his own revenues all the expenses necessary for the sacrificial services. [4*†] But a certain Simon, of the priestly course of Bilgah, who had been appointed superintendent of the temple, had a quarrel with the high priest about the supervision of the city market. [5] Since he could not prevail against Onias, he went to Apollonius of Tarsus, who at that time was governor of Coelesyria and Phoenicia, [6] and reported to him that the treasury in Jerusalem was so full of untold riches that the total sum of money was incalculable and out of all proportion to the cost of the sacrifices, and that it would be possible to bring it all under the control of the king.

Mission of Heliodorus. [7] When Apollonius had an audience with the king, he informed him about the riches that had been reported to him. The king chose his minister Heliodorus and sent him with instructions to expropriate the aforesaid wealth. [8] So Heliodorus immediately set out on his journey, ostensibly to visit the cities of Coelesyria and Phoenicia, but in reality to carry out the king's purpose. [9] When he arrived in Jerusalem and had been graciously received by the high priest of the city, he told him about the information that had been given, and explained the reason for his presence, and he asked if these things were really true. [10*] The high priest explained that part of the money was a care fund for widows and orphans, [11†] and a part was the property of Hyrcanus, son of Tobias, a man who occupied a very high position. Contrary to the calumnies of the impious Simon, the total amounted to four hundred talents of silver and two hundred of gold. [12] He added that it was utterly unthinkable to defraud those who had placed their trust in the sanctity of the Place and in the sacred inviolability of a temple venerated all over the world. [13] But because of the orders he had from the king, Heliodorus said that in any case the money must be confiscated for the royal treasury. [14] So on the day he had set he went in to take an inventory of the funds.

Anguish of the Faithful. There was great distress throughout the city.

3, 1-40: This legendary episode about Heliodorus is recounted here for the purpose of stressing the inviolability of the temple of Jerusalem; its later profanation was allowed by God because of the people's sins; cf 5, 17f.

3, 1: The high priest Onias: Onias III, who was high priest from 196 to 175 B.C., and died in 171 B.C. He was the son of Simon, whose praises are sung in Sir 50, 1-21.

3, 3: Seleucus: Seleucus IV Philopator, who reigned from 187 to 175 B.C.

3, 4: Bilgah: a priestly family mentioned in Neh 12, 5.18.

3, 11: Son of Tobias: a member of the Tobiad family of Transjordan (Neh 2, 10; 6, 17ff; 13, 4-8). Hyrcanus' father was Joseph, whose mother was the sister of the high priest Onias II.

15 Priests prostrated themselves in their priestly robes before the altar, and loudly begged him in heaven who had given the law about deposits to keep the deposits safe for those who had made them. 16 Whoever saw the appearance of the high priest was pierced to the heart, for the changed color of his face manifested the anguish of his soul. 17 The terror and bodily trembling that had come over the man clearly showed those who saw him the pain that lodged in his heart. 18 People rushed out of their houses in crowds to make public supplication, because the Place was in danger of being profaned. 19 Women, girded with sackcloth below their breasts, filled the streets; maidens secluded indoors ran together, some to the gates, some to the walls, others peered through the windows, 20 all of them with hands raised toward heaven, making supplication. 21 It was pitiful to see the populace variously prostrated in prayer and the high priest full of dread and anguish.

Divine Intervention. 22 While they were imploring the almighty Lord to keep the deposits safe and secure for those who had placed them in trust, 23 Heliodorus went on with his plan. 24 But just as he was approaching the treasury with his bodyguards, the Lord of spirits who holds all power manifested himself in so striking a way that those who had been bold enough to follow Heliodorus were panic-stricken at God's power and fainted away in terror. 25 There appeared to them a richly caparisoned horse, mounted by a dreadful rider. Charging furiously, the horse attacked Heliodorus with its front hoofs. The rider was seen to be wearing golden armor. 26 Then two other young men, remarkably strong, strikingly beautiful, and splendidly attired, appeared before him. Standing on each side of him, they flogged him unceasingly until they had given him innumerable blows. 27 Suddenly he fell to the ground, enveloped in great darkness. Men picked him up and laid him on a stretcher. 28 The man who a moment before had entered that treasury with a great retinue and his whole bodyguard was carried away helpless, having clearly experienced the sovereign power of God. 29 While he lay speechless and deprived of all hope of aid, due to an act of God's power, 30 the Jews praised the Lord who had marvelously glorified his holy Place; and the temple, charged so shortly before with fear and commotion, was filled with joy and gladness, now that the almighty Lord had manifested himself.

31 Soon some of the companions of Heliodorus begged Onias to invoke the Most High, praying that the life of the man who was about to expire might be spared. 32 Fearing that the king might think that Heliodorus had suffered some foul play at the hands of the Jews, the high priest offered a sacrifice for the man's recovery. 33 While the high priest was offering the sacrifice of atonement the same young men in the same clothing again appeared and stood before Heliodorus. "Be very grateful to the high priest Onias," they told him. "It is for his sake that the Lord has spared your life. 34 Since you have been scourged by Heaven, proclaim to all men the majesty of God's power." When they had said this, they disappeared.

Testimony of Heliodorus. 35 After Heliodorus had offered a sacrifice to the Lord and made most solemn vows to him who had spared his life, he bade Onias farewell, and returned with his soldiers to the king. 36 Before all men he gave witness to the deeds of the most high God that he had seen with his own eyes. 37 When the king asked Heliodorus who would be a suitable man to be sent to Jerusalem next, he answered: 38 "If you have an enemy or a plotter against the government, send him there, and you will receive him back well-flogged if indeed he survives at all; for there is certainly some special divine power about the Place. 39 He who has his dwelling in heaven watches over that Place and protects it, and he strikes down and destroys those who come to harm it. 40 This was how the matter concerning Heliodorus and the preservation of the treasury turned out.

CHAPTER 4

Onias Appeals to the King. 1 The Simon mentioned above as the informer about the funds against his own country made false accusation that it was Onias who threatened Heliodorus and instigated the whole miserable affair. 2 He dared to brand as a plotter against the government the man who was a benefactor of the city, a protector of his compatriots, and a zealous defender of the laws. 3 When Simon's hostility reached such a point that murders were being committed by one of his henchmen, 4 Onias saw that the opposition was serious and that Apollonius, son of Menestheus, the governor of Coelesyria and Phoenicia, was abetting Simon's wickedness. 5 So he had recourse to the king, not as an accuser of his countrymen, but as a man looking to the general and particular good of all the people. 6 He saw that, unless the king intervened, it would be impossible to have a peaceful government, and that Simon would not desist from his folly.

Jews Led by Jason to Apostatize.
7*† But Seleucus died, and when Antiochus surnamed Epiphanes succeeded him on the throne, Onias' brother Jason obtained the high priesthood by corrupt means: 8 in an interview, he promised the king three hundred and sixty talents of silver, as well as eighty talents from another source of income. 9† Besides this he agreed to pay a hundred and fifty more, if he were given authority to establish a gymnasium and a youth club for it and to enroll men in Jerusalem as Antiochians.
10 When Jason received the king's approval and came into office, he immediately initiated his countrymen into the Greek way of life. 11*† He set aside the royal concessions granted to the Jews
through the mediation of John, father of Eupolemus (that Eupolemus who would later go on an embassy to the Romans to establish a treaty of friendship with them); he abrogated the lawful institutions and introduced customs contrary to the law. 12*† He quickly established a gymnasium at the very foot of the acropolis, where he induced the noblest young men to wear the Greek hat. 13 The craze for Hellenism and foreign customs reached such a pitch, through the outrageous wickedness of the ungodly pseudo-high-priest Jason, 14 that the priests no longer cared about the service of the altar. Disdaining the temple and neglecting the sacrifices, they hastened, at the signal for the discus-throwing, to take part in the unlawful exercises on the athletic field. 15 They despised what their ancestors had regarded as honors, while they highly prized what the Greeks esteemed as glory. 16 Precisely because of this, they found themselves in serious trouble: the very people whose manner of life they emulated, and whom they desired to imitate in everything, became their enemies and oppressors. 17 It is no light matter to flout the laws of God, as the following period will show.
18 When the quinquennial games were held at Tyre in the presence of the king, 19 the vile Jason sent envoys as representatives of the Antiochians of Jerusalem, to bring there three hundred silver drachmas for the sacrifice to Hercules.
But the bearers themselves decided that the money should not be spent on a sacrifice, as that was not right, but should be used for some other purpose. 20† So the contribution destined by the sender for the sacrifice to Hercules was in fact applied, by those who brought it, to the construction of triremes.
21† When Apollonius, son of Menestheus, was sent to Egypt for the coronation of King Philometor, Antiochus learned that the king was opposed to his policies; so he took measures for his own security. 22 After going to Joppa, he proceeded to Jerusalem. There he was received with great pomp by Jason and the people of the city, who escorted him with torchlights and acclamations; following this, he led his army into Phoenicia.

Menelaus Supplants Jason.
23† Three years later Jason sent Menelaus, brother of the aforementioned Simon, to deliver the money to the king, and to obtain decisions on some important matters.
24 When he had been introduced to the king, he flattered him with such an air of authority that he secured the high priesthood for himself, outbidding Jason by three hundred talents of silver. 25 He returned with the royal commission, but with nothing that made him worthy of the high priesthood; he had the temper of a cruel tyrant and the rage of a wild beast. 26 Then Jason, who had cheated his own brother and now saw himself cheated by another man, was driven out as a fugitive to the country of the Ammonites.
27 Although Menelaus had obtained
the office, he did not make any payments of the money he had promised to the king, 28 in spite of the demand of Sostratus, the commandant of the citadel, whose duty it was to collect the taxes.
For this reason, both were summoned before the king. 29 Menelaus left his brother Lysimachus as his substitute in the high priesthood, while Sostratus left Crates, commander of the Cypriots, as his substitute.

Murder of Onias.
30† While these things were taking place, the people of Tarsus and Mallus rose in revolt, because their cities had been given as a gift to Antiochis, the king's mistress.

31 The king, therefore, went off in haste
to settle the affair, leaving Andronicus, one of his nobles, as his deputy. 32 Then Menelaus, thinking this a good opportunity, stole some gold vessels from the temple and presented them to Andronicus; he had already sold some other vessels in Tyre and in the neighboring cities. 33 When Onias had clear evidence of the facts, he made a public protest, after withdrawing to the inviolable sanctuary at Daphne, near Antioch.
34 Thereupon Menelaus approached An-dronicus privately and asked him to lay hands on Onias. So Andronicus went to Onias, and by treacherously reassuring him through sworn pledges with right hands joined, persuaded him, in spite of his suspicions, to leave the sanctuary.
Then, without any regard for justice, he immediately put him to death.

35 As a result, not only the Jews, but many people of other nations as well,
were indignant and angry over the unjust murder of the man. 36† When the king returned from the region of Cilicia, the Jews of the city, together with the Greeks who detested the crime, went to see him about the murder of Onias.
37 Antiochus was deeply grieved and full of pity; he wept as he recalled the prudence and noble conduct of the deceased. 38 Inflamed with anger, he immediately stripped Andronicus of his purple robe, tore off his other garments, and had him led through the whole city
to the very place where he had committed the outrage against Onias; and there he put the murderer to death. Thus the Lord rendered him the punishment he deserved.

Riot against Lysimachus. 39† Many sacrilegious thefts had been committed by Lysimachus in the city with the connivance of Menelaus. When word was spread that a large number of gold vessels had been stolen, the people assembled in protest against Lysimachus. 40 As the crowds, now thoroughly enraged, began to riot, Lysimachus launched an unjustified attack against them with about three thousand armed men under the leadership of Auranus, a man as advanced in folly as he was in years.
41 Reacting against Lysimachus' attack,
the people picked up stones or pieces of wood or handfuls of the ashes lying there and threw them in wild confusion at Lysimachus and his men. 42 As a result, they wounded many of them and even killed a few, while they put all the rest to flight. The sacrilegious thief himself they slew near the treasury.

43 Charges about this affair were brought against Menelaus. 44† When the king came to Tyre, three men sent by the senate presented to him the justice of their cause. 45* But Menelaus, seeing himself on the losing side, promised Ptolemy, son of Dorymenes, a substantial sum of money if he would win the king over. 46 So Ptolemy retired with the king under a colonnade, as if to get some fresh air, and persuaded him to change his mind. 47 Menelaus, who was the cause of all the trouble, the king acquitted of the charges, while he condemned to death those poor men who would have been declared innocent even if they had pleaded their case before Scythians.
48 Thus, those who had prosecuted the case for the city, for the people, and for the sacred vessels, quickly suffered unjust punishment. 49 For this reason, even some Tyrians were indignant over the crime and provided sumptuously for their burial. 50 But Menelaus, thanks to the covetousness of the men in power, remained in office, where he grew in wickedness and became the chief plotter against his fellow citizens.

CHAPTER 5

Sedition and Death of Jason.
1*† About this time Antiochus sent his second expedition into Egypt. 2* It then happened that all over the city, for nearly forty days, there appeared horsemen charging in midair, clad in garments interwoven with gold—companies fully armed with lances 3 and drawn swords; squadrons of cavalry in battle array, charges and countercharges on this side and that, with brand-ished shields and bristling spears, flights of arrows and flashes of gold ornaments,
together with armor of every sort.
4 Therefore all prayed that this vision
might be a good omen.

5† But when a false rumor circulated that Antiochus was dead, Jason gathered fully a thousand men and suddenly attacked the city. As the defenders on the walls were forced back and the city was finally being taken, Menelaus took refuge in the citadel. 6 Jason then slaughtered his fellow citizens without

The author of 2 Mc apparently combines the first pillage of Jerusalem in 169 B.C. after Antiochus' first invasion of Egypt (1 Mc 1, 20-28; cf 2 Mc 5, 5ff) with the second pillage of the city two years later (167 B.C.), following the king's second invasion of Egypt in 168 B.C. (1 Mc 1, 29-35; cf 2 Mc 5, 24ff).

mercy, not realizing that triumph over one's own kindred was the greatest failure, but imagining that he was winning a victory over his enemies, not his fellow countrymen. [7] Even so, he did not gain control of the government, but in the end received only disgrace for his treachery, and once again took refuge in the country of the Ammonites. [8]† At length he met a miserable end. Called to account before Aretas, king of the Arabs, he fled from city to city, hunted by all men, hated as a transgressor of the laws, abhorred as the butcher of his country and his countrymen. After being driven into Egypt, [9] he crossed the sea to the Spartans, among whom he hoped to find protection because of his relations with them. There he who had exiled so many from their country perished in exile; [10] and he who had cast out so many to lie unburied went unmourned himself with no funeral of any kind or any place in the tomb of his ancestors.

The City Ravaged. [11]* When these happenings were reported to the king, he thought that Judea was in revolt. Raging like a wild animal, he set out from Egypt and took Jerusalem by storm. [12] He ordered his soldiers to cut down without mercy those whom they met and to slay those who took refuge in their houses. [13] There was a massacre of young and old, a killing of women and children, a slaughter of virgins and infants. [14] In the space of three days, eighty thousand were lost, forty thousand meeting a violent death, and the same number being sold into slavery. [15] Not satisfied with this, the king dared to enter the holiest temple in the world; Menelaus, that traitor both to the laws and to his country, served as guide. [16] He laid his impure hands on the sacred vessels and gathered up with profane hands the votive offerings made by other kings for the advancement, the glory, and the honor of the Place. [17]* Puffed up in spirit, Antiochus did not realize that it was because of the sins of the city's inhabitants that the Lord was angry for a little while and hence disregarded the holy Place. [18] If they had not become entangled in so many sins, this man, like Heliodorus, who was sent by King Seleucus to inspect the treasury, would have been flogged and turned back from his presumptuous action as soon as he approached. [19]*† The Lord, however, had not chosen the people for the sake of the Place, but the Place for the sake of the people. [20] Therefore, the Place itself, having shared in the people's misfortunes, afterward participated in their good fortune; and what the Almighty had forsaken in his anger was restored in all its glory, once the great Sovereign became reconciled.

[21]* Antiochus carried off eighteen hundred talents from the temple, and hurried back to Antioch. In his arrogance he planned to make the land navigable and the sea passable on foot, so carried away was he with pride. [22]† But he left governors to harass the nation: at Jerusalem, Philip, a Phrygian by birth, and in character more cruel than the man who appointed him; [23]† at Mount Gerizim, Andronicus; and besides these, Menelaus, who lorded it over his fellow citizens worse than the others did. Out of hatred for the Jewish citizens, [24]*† the king sent Appollonius, commander of the Mysians, at the head of an army of twenty-two thousand men, with orders to kill all the grown men and sell the women and young men into slavery. [25] When this man arrived in Jerusalem, he pretended to be peacefully disposed and waited until the holy day of the sabbath; then, finding the Jews refraining from work, he ordered his men to parade fully armed. [26] All those who came out to watch, he massacred, and running through the city with armed men, he cut down a large number of people.

[27]* But Judas Maccabeus and about nine others withdrew to the wilderness, where he and his companions lived like wild animals in the hills, continuing to eat what grew wild to avoid sharing the defilement.

CHAPTER 6

The Temple Desecrated. [1]* Not long after this the king sent an Athenian senator to force the Jews to abandon the customs of their ancestors and live no longer by the laws of God; [2]*† also to profane the temple in Jerusalem and dedicate it to Olympian Zeus, and that on Mount Gerizim to Zeus the Hospitable, as the inhabitants of the place requested. [3] This intensified the evil in an intolerable and utterly disgusting way.

4† The Gentiles filled the temple with debauchery and revelry; they amused themselves with prostitutes and had intercourse with women even in the sacred court. They also brought into the temple things that were forbidden, 5 so that the altar was covered with abominable offerings prohibited by the laws.

Abolition of the Law. 6 A man could not keep the sabbath or celebrate the traditional feasts, nor even admit that he was a Jew. 7† Moreover, at the monthly celebration of the king's birthday the Jews had, from bitter necessity, to partake of the sacrifices, and when the festival of Dionysus was celebrated, they were compelled to march in his procession, wearing wreaths of ivy.

8 At the suggestion of the citizens of Ptolemais, a decree was issued ordering the neighboring Greek cities to act in the same way against the Jews: oblige them to partake of the sacrifices, 9 and put to death those who would not consent to adopt the customs of the Greeks. It was obvious, therefore, that disaster impended. 10* Thus, two women who were arrested for having circumcised their children were publicly paraded about the city with their babies hanging at their breasts and then thrown down from the top of the city wall. 11* Others, who had assembled in nearby caves to observe the sabbath in secret, were betrayed to Philip and all burned to death. In their respect for the holiness of that day, they had scruples about defending themselves.

Purpose of Divine Judgment. 12* Now I beg those who read this book not to be disheartened by these misfortunes, but to consider that these chastisements were meant not for the ruin but for the correction of our nation. 13 It is, in fact, a sign of great kindness to punish sinners promptly instead of letting them go for long. 14* Thus, in dealing with other nations, the Lord patiently waits until they reach the full measure of their sins before he punishes them; but with us he has decided to deal differently, 15 in order that he may not have to punish us more severely later, when our sins have reached their fullness. 16 He never withdraws his mercy from us. Although he disciplines us with misfortunes, he does not abandon his own people. 17 Let these words suffice for recalling this truth. Without further ado we must go on with our story.

Martyrdom of Eleazar. 18*† Eleazar, one of the foremost scribes, a man of advanced age and noble appearance, was being forced to open his mouth to eat pork. 19 But preferring a glorious death to a life of defilement, he spat out the meat, and went forward of his own accord to the instrument of torture, 20 as men ought to do who have the courage to reject the food which it is unlawful to taste even for love of life. 21 Those in charge of that unlawful ritual meal took the man aside privately, because of their long acquaintance with him, and urged him to bring meat of his own providing, such as he could legitimately eat, and to pretend to be eating some of the meat of the sacrifice prescribed by the king; 22 in this way he would escape the death penalty, and be treated kindly because of their old friendship with him. 23 But he made up his mind in a noble manner, worthy of his years, the dignity of his advanced age, the merited distinction of his gray hair, and of the admirable life he had lived from childhood; and so he declared that above all he would be loyal to the holy laws given by God.

He told them to send him at once to the abode of the dead, explaining: 24 "At our age it would be unbecoming to make such a pretense; many young men would think the ninety-year-old Eleazar had gone over to an alien religion. 25 Should I thus dissimulate for the sake of a brief moment of life, they would be led astray by me, while I would bring shame and dishonor on my old age. 26 Even if, for the time being, I avoid the punishment of men, I shall never, whether alive or dead, escape the hands of the Almighty. 27 Therefore, by manfully giving up my life now, I will prove myself worthy of my old age, 28 and I will leave to the young a noble example of how to die willingly and generously for the revered and holy laws."

He spoke thus, and went immediately to the instrument of torture. 29 Those who shortly before had been kindly disposed, now became hostile toward him because what he had said seemed to them utter madness. 30 When he was about to die under the blows, he groaned and said: "The Lord in his holy knowledge knows full well that, although I could have escaped death, I am not only enduring terrible pain in my body from this scourging, but also suffering it with joy in my soul because of my devotion to him." 31 This is how he died, leaving

6, 18—7, 42: The stories of Eleazar and of the mother and her seven sons, among the earliest models of "martyrology," were understandably popular among the Christians of the early centuries. Written originally to encourage God's people in times of persecution, they add gruesome details to the record of tortures, and place long speeches in the mouths of the martyrs.

in his death a model of courage and an unforgettable example of virtue not only for the young but for the whole nation.

CHAPTER 7

Martyrdom of a Mother and Her Sons. 1* It also happened that seven brothers with their mother were arrested and tortured with whips and scourges by the king, to force them to eat pork in violation of God's law. 2 One of the brothers, speaking for the others, said: "What do you expect to achieve by questioning us? We are ready to die rather than transgress the laws of our ancestors." 3 At that the king, in a fury, gave orders to have pans and caldrons heated. 4 While they were being quickly heated, he commanded his executioners to cut out the tongue of the one who had spoken for the others, to scalp him and cut off his hands and feet, while the rest of his brothers and his mother looked on. 5 When he was completely maimed but still breathing, the king ordered them to carry him to the fire and fry him. As a cloud of smoke spread from the pan, the brothers and their mother encouraged one another to die bravely, saying such words as these: 6* "The Lord God is looking on, and he truly has compassion on us, as Moses declared in his canticle, when he protested openly with the words, 'And he will have pity on his servants.' "

7 When the first brother had died in this manner, they brought the second to be made sport of. After tearing off the skin and hair of his head, they asked him, "Will you eat the pork rather than have your body tortured limb by limb?" 8 Answering in the language of his forefathers, he said, "Never!" So he too in turn suffered the same tortures as the first. 9*† At the point of death he said: "You accursed fiend, you are depriving us of this present life, but the King of the world will raise us up to live again forever. It is for his laws that we are dying."

10 After him the third suffered their cruel sport. He put out his tongue at once when told to do so, and bravely held out his hands, 11* as he spoke these noble words: "It was from Heaven that I received these; for the sake of his laws I disdain them; from him I hope to receive them again." 12 Even the king and his attendants marveled at the young man's courage, because he regarded his sufferings as nothing.

13 After he had died, they tortured and maltreated the fourth brother in the same way. 14 When he was near death, he said, "It is my choice to die at the hands of men with the God-given hope of being restored to life by him; but for you, there will be no resurrection to life."

15 They next brought forward the fifth brother and maltreated him. Looking at the king, 16* he said: "Since you have power among men, mortal though you are, do what you please. But do not think that our nation is forsaken by God. 17 Only wait, and you will see how his great power will torment you and your descendants."

18 After him they brought the sixth brother. When he was about to die, he said: "Have no vain illusions. We suffer these things on our own account, because we have sinned against our God; that is why such astonishing things have happened to us. 19* Do not think, then, that you will go unpunished for having dared to fight against God."

20 Most admirable and worthy of everlasting remembrance was the mother, who saw her seven sons perish in a single day, yet bore it courageously because of her hope in the Lord. 21 Filled with a noble spirit that stirred her womanly heart with manly courage, she exhorted each of them in the language of their forefathers with these words: 22 "I do not know how you came into existence in my womb; it was not I who gave you the breath of life, nor was it I who set in order the elements of which each of you is composed. 23 Therefore, since it is the Creator of the universe who shapes each man's beginning, as he brings about the origin of everything, he, in his mercy, will give you back both breath and life, because you now disregard yourselves for the sake of his law."

24 Antiochus, suspecting insult in her words, thought he was being ridiculed. As the youngest brother was still alive, the king appealed to him, not with mere words, but with promises on oath, to make him rich and happy if he would abandon his ancestral customs: he would make him his Friend and entrust him with high office. 25 When the youth paid no attention to him at all, the king appealed to the mother, urging her to advise her boy to save his life. 26 After he had urged her for a long time, she went through the motions of persuading her son. 27 In derision of the cruel tyrant, she leaned over close to her son and said in their native language: "Son, have pity on me, who carried you in my womb for nine months, nursed you for three years, brought you up, educated and supported you to your present age. [28]† I beg you, child, to look at the heavens and the earth and see all that is in them; then you will know that God did not make them out of existing things; and in the same way the human race came into existence. [29] Do not be afraid of this executioner, but be worthy of your brothers and accept death, so that in the time of mercy I may receive you again with them."

[30] She had scarcely finished speaking when the youth said: "What are you waiting for? I will not obey the king's command. I obey the command of the law given to our forefathers through Moses. [31] But you, who have contrived every kind of affliction for the Hebrews, will not escape the hands of God. [32]* We, indeed, are suffering because of our sins. [33] Though our living Lord treats us harshly for a little while to correct us with chastisements, he will again be reconciled with his servants. [34] But you, wretch, vilest of all men! do not, in your insolence, concern yourself with unfounded hopes, as you raise your hand against the children of Heaven. [35] You have not yet escaped the judgment of the almighty and all-seeing God. [36] My brothers, after enduring brief pain, have drunk of never-failing life, under God's covenant, but you, by the judgment of God, shall receive just punishments for your arrogance. [37] Like my brothers, I offer up my body and my life for our ancestral laws, imploring God to show mercy soon to our nation, and by afflictions and blows to make you confess that he alone is God. [38] Through me and my brothers, may there be an end to the wrath of the Almighty that has justly fallen on our whole nation." [39] At that, the king became enraged and treated him even worse than the others, since he bitterly resented the boy's contempt. [40]* Thus he too died undefiled, putting all his trust in the Lord. [41] The mother was last to die, after her sons.

[42] Enough has been said about the sacrificial meals and the excessive cruelties.

V: VICTORIES OF JUDAS AND PURIFICATION OF THE TEMPLE

CHAPTER 8

Judas Maccabeus. [1]* Judas Maccabeus and his companions entered the villages, secretly, summoned their kinsmen, and by also enlisting others who remained faithful to Judaism, assembled about six thousand men. [2] They implored the Lord to look kindly upon his people, who were being oppressed on all sides; to have pity on the temple, which was profaned by godless men; [3] to have mercy on the city, which was being destroyed and about to be leveled to the ground; to hearken to the blood that cried out to him; [4] to remember the criminal slaughter of innocent children and the blasphemies uttered against his name; and to manifest his hatred of evil. [5]* Once Maccabeus got his men organized, the Gentiles could not withstand him, for the Lord's wrath had now changed to mercy. [6] Coming unexpectedly upon towns and villages, he would set them on fire. He captured strategic positions, and put to flight a large number of the enemy. [7] He preferred the nights as being especially helpful for such attacks. Soon the fame of his valor spread everywhere.

First Victory over Nicanor. [8]† When Philip saw that Judas was gaining ground little by little and that his successful advances were becoming more frequent, he wrote to Ptolemy, governor of Coelesyria and Phoenicia, to come to the aid of the king's government. [9] Ptolemy promptly selected Nicanor, son of Patroclus, one of the Chief Friends, and sent him at the head of at least twenty thousand armed men of various nations to wipe out the entire Jewish race. With him he associated Gorgias, a professional military commander, well-versed in the art of war. [10] Nicanor planned to raise the two thousand talents of tribute owed by the king to the Romans by selling captured Jews into slavery. [11] So he immediately sent word to the coastal cities, inviting them to buy Jewish slaves and promising to deliver ninety slaves for a talent—little did he dream of the punishment that was to fall upon him from the Almighty.

[12] When Judas learned of Nicanor's advance and informed his companions about the approach of the army, [13] the cowardly and those who lacked faith in God's justice deserted and got away. [14] But the others sold everything they had left, and at the same time besought the Lord to deliver those whom the ungodly Nicanor had sold before even meeting them. [15] They begged the Lord to do this, if not for their sake, at least for the sake of the covenants made with their forefathers, and because they themselves bore his holy, glorious name.

8, 8-29.34ff: This account of the campaign of Nicanor and Gorgias against Judas is paralleled, with certain differences, in 1 Mc 3, 38—4, 24.

16 Maccabeus assembled his men, six thousand strong, and exhorted them not to be panic-stricken before the enemy, nor to fear the large number of the Gentiles attacking them unjustly, but to fight courageously, 17 keeping before their eyes the lawless outrage perpetrated by the Gentiles against the holy Place and the affliction of the humiliated city, as well as the subversion of their ancestral way of life. 18 "They trust in weapons and acts of daring," he said, "but we trust in almighty God, who can by a mere nod destroy not only those who attack us, but the whole world." 19* He went on to tell them of the times when help had been given their ancestors:
both the time of Sennacherib, when a hundred and eighty-five thousand of his men were destroyed, 20 and the time of the battle in Babylonia against the Galatians, when only eight thousand Jews fought along with four thousand Macedonians; yet when the Macedonians were hard pressed, the eight thousand routed one hundred and twenty thousand and took a great quantity of booty, because of the help they received from Heaven. 21 With such words he encouraged them and made them ready to die
for their laws and their country.

Then Judas divided his army into four,
22† placing his brothers, Simon, Joseph, and Jonathan, each over a division, assigning to each fifteen hundred men.
23* (There was also Eleazar.) After reading to them from the holy book and giving them the watchword, "The Help of God," he himself took charge of the first division and joined in battle with Nicanor. 24 With the Almighty as their ally, they killed more than nine thousand of the enemy, wounded and disabled the greater part of Nicanor's
army, and put all of them to flight.
25 They also seized the money of those who had come to buy them as slaves.
When they had pursued the enemy for some time, 26 they were obliged to return
by reason of the late hour, it was the day before the sabbath, and for that reason they could not continue the pursuit.
27 They collected the enemy's arms and stripped them of their spoils, and then observed the sabbath with fervent praise and thanks to the Lord who kept them safe for that day on which he let descend on them the first dew of his mercy.
28 After the sabbath, they gave a share of the booty to the persecuted and to widows and orphans; the rest they divided among themselves and their children. 29 When this was done, they made supplication in common, imploring the merciful Lord to be completely reconciled with his servants.

Timothy and Bacchides Defeated.
30 They also challenged the forces of Timothy and Bacchides, killed more than twenty thousand of them, and captured some very high fortresses. They divided the enormous plunder, allotting half to themselves and the rest to the persecuted, to orphans, widows, and the aged. 31 They collected the enemies' weapons and carefully stored them in suitable places; the rest of the spoils they carried to Jerusalem. 32 They also killed the commander of Timothy's forces, a most wicked man, who had done great harm to the Jews. 33 While celebrating the victory in their ancestral city, they burned both those who had set fire to the sacred gates and Callisthenes, who had taken refuge in a little house; so he received the reward his wicked deeds
deserved.

Humiliation of Nicanor. 34* The accursed Nicanor, who had brought the thousand slave dealers to buy the Jews, 35 after being humbled through the Lord's help by those whom he had thought of no account, laid aside his fine clothes and fled alone across country like a runaway slave, until he reached Antioch. He was eminently successful in destroying his own army. 36 So he who had promised to provide tribute for the Romans by the capture of the people of Jerusalem testified that the Jews had a champion, and that they were invulnerable for the very reason that they followed the laws laid down by him.

CHAPTER 9

Punishment and Death of Antiochus. 1*† About that time Antiochus retreated in disgrace from the region of Persia. 2 He had entered the city called Persepolis and attempted to rob the temple and gain control of the city.
Thereupon the people had swift recourse to arms, and Antiochus' men were routed, so that in the end Antiochus was put to flight by the natives and forced to beat a shameful retreat. 3 On his arrival in Ecbatana, he learned what

8, 22: Joseph: called John in 1 Mc 2, 2; 9, 36.38; this paragraph interrupts the story of Nicanor's defeat, which is resumed in v 34. The purpose of the author apparently is to group together the defeats suffered by the Syrians on various occasions. Battles against Timothy are recounted in 1 Mc 5, 37-44 and 2 Mc 12, 10-25; against Bacchides, in 1 Mc 7, 8-20.

9, 1-28: In order to keep together the various accounts of God's punishment of the persecutors of his people, the author places here the stories of Antiochus' illness and death (in actuality the king died only after the purification of the temple; cf 1 Mc 4, 36-59; 6, 1-16; 2 Mc 10, 1-8); of Judas' campaigns in Idumea and Transjordan; cf 1 Mc 5, 1-51; 2 Mc 10, 14-38; and of the first expedition of Lysias (1 Mc 4, 26-35; 2 Mc 11, 1-15).

had happened to Nicanor and to Timothy's forces. [4] Overcome with anger, he planned to make the Jews suffer for the injury done by those who had put him to flight. Therefore he ordered his charioteer to drive without stopping until he finished the journey.

Yet the condemnation of Heaven rode with him, since he said in his arrogance, "I will make Jerusalem the common graveyard of the Jews as soon as I arrive there." [5]* So the all-seeing Lord, the God of Israel, struck him down with an unseen but incurable blow; for scarcely had he uttered those words when he was seized with excruciating pains in his bowels and sharp internal torment, [6] a fit punishment for him who had tortured the bowels of others with many barbarous torments. [7] Far from giving up his insolence, he was all the more filled with arrogance. Breathing fire in his rage against the Jews, he gave orders to drive even faster. As a result he hurtled from the dashing chariot, and every part of his body was racked by the violent fall. [8]* Thus he who previously, in his superhuman presumption, thought he could command the waves of the sea, and imagined he could weigh the mountaintops in his scales, was now thrown to the ground and had to be carried on a litter, clearly manifesting to all the power of God. [9]* The body of this impious man swarmed with worms, and while he was still alive in hideous torments, his flesh rotted off, so that the entire army was sickened by the stench of his corruption. [10] Shortly before, he had thought that he could reach the stars of heaven, and now, no one could endure to transport the man because of this intolerable stench.

[11] At last, broken in spirit, he began to give up his excessive arrogance, and to gain some understanding, under the scourge of God, for he was racked with pain unceasingly. [12] When he could no longer bear his own stench, he said, "It is right to be subject to God, and not to think one's mortal self divine." [13] Then this vile man vowed to the Lord, who would no longer have mercy on him, [14] that he would set free the holy city, toward which he had been hurrying with the intention of leveling it to the ground and making it a common graveyard; [15] he would put on perfect equality with the Athenians all the Jews, whom he had judged not even worthy of burial, but fit only to be thrown out with their children to be eaten by vultures and wild animals; [16] he would adorn with the finest offerings the holy temple which he had previously despoiled; he would restore all the sacred vessels many times over; and would provide from his own revenues the expenses required for the sacrifices. [17] Besides all this, he would become a Jew himself and visit every inhabited place to proclaim there the power of God. [18] But since God's punishment had justly come upon him, his sufferings were not lessened, so he lost hope for himself and wrote the following letter to the Jews in the form of a supplication. It read thus:

[19]† "To my esteemed Jewish citizens, Antiochus, their king and general, sends hearty greetings and best wishes for their health and happiness. [20] If you and your children are well and your affairs are going as you wish, I thank God very much, for my hopes are in heaven. [21] Now that I am ill, I recall with affection the esteem and good will you bear me. On returning from the regions of Persia, I fell victim to a troublesome illness; so I thought it necessary to form plans for the general welfare of all. [22] Actually, I do not despair about my health, since I have great hopes of recovering from my illness. [23] Nevertheless, I know that my father, whenever he went on campaigns in the hinterland, would name his successor, [24] so that, if anything unexpected happened or any unwelcome news came, the people throughout the realm would know to whom the government had been entrusted, and so not be disturbed. [25]† I am also bearing in mind that the neighboring rulers, especially those on the borders of our kingdom, are on the watch for opportunities and waiting to see what will happen. I have therefore appointed as king my son Antiochus, whom I have often before entrusted and commended to most of you when I made hurried visits to the outlying provinces. I have written to him the letter copied below. [26] Therefore I beg and entreat each of you to remember the general and individual benefits you have received, and to continue to show good will toward me and my son. [27] I am confident that, following my policy, he will treat you with mildness and kindness in his relations with you."

[28] So this murderer and blasphemer after extreme sufferings, such as he had inflicted on others, died a miserable death in the mountains of a foreign land. [29] His foster brother Philip brought the body home; but fearing Antiochus' son

9, 19-27: Despite the statement in v 18, this letter is not really a supplication. It is rather a notification to all the king's subjects of the appointment of his son as his successor and a request that they be loyal to the new king. Apparently the same letter, which has every appearance of being authentic, was sent to the various peoples throughout the kingdom with only a few words of address changed for each group.

he later withdrew into Egypt, to Ptolemy Philometor.

CHAPTER 10

Purification of Temple and City. 1* When Maccabeus and his companions, under the Lord's leadership, had recovered the temple and the city, 2 they destroyed the altars erected by the Gentiles in the marketplace and the sacred enclosures. 3† After purifying the temple, they made a new altar. Then, with fire struck from flint, they offered sacrifice for the first time in two years, burned incense, and lighted lamps. They also set out the showbread. 4 When they had done this, they prostrated themselves and begged the Lord that they might never again fall into such misfortunes, and that if they should sin at any time, he might chastise them with moderation and not hand them over to blasphemous and barbarous Gentiles. 5 On the anniversary of the day on which the temple had been profaned by the Gentiles, that is, the twenty-fifth of the same month Chislev, the purification of the temple took place.

6 The Jews celebrated joyfully for eight days as on the feast of Booths, remembering how, a little while before, they had spent the feast of Booths living like wild animals in caves on the mountains. 7 Carrying rods entwined with leaves, green branches and palms, they sang hymns of grateful praise to him who had brought about the purification of his own Place. 8 By public edict and decree they prescribed that the whole Jewish nation should celebrate these days every year.

Death of Ptolemy. 9* Such was the end of Antiochus surnamed Epiphanes. 10 Now we shall relate what happened under Antiochus Eupator, the son of that godless man, and shall give a summary of the chief evils caused by the wars. 11 When Eupator succeeded to the kingdom, he put a certain Lysias in charge of the government as commander-in-chief of Coelesyria and Phoenicia. 12† Ptolemy, surnamed Macron, had taken the lead in treating the Jews fairly because of the previous injustice that had been done them, and he endeavored to have peaceful relations with them. 13 As a result, he was accused before Eupator by the King's Friends. In fact, on all sides he heard himself called a traitor for having abandoned Cyprus, which Philometor had entrusted to him, and for having gone over to Antiochus Epiphanes. Since he could not command the respect due to his high office, he ended his life by taking poison.

Victory over the Idumeans. 14† When Gorgias became governor of the region, he employed foreign troops and used every opportunity to attack the Jews. 15* At the same time the Idumeans, who held some important strongholds, were harassing the Jews; they welcomed fugitives from Jerusalem and endeavored to continue the war. 16 Maccabeus and his companions, after public prayers asking God to be their ally, moved quickly against the strongholds of the Idumeans. 17 Attacking vigorously, they gained control of the places, drove back all who manned the walls, and cut down those who opposed them, killing as many as twenty thousand men. 18 When at least nine thousand took refuge in two very strong towers, containing everything necessary to sustain a siege, 19 Maccabeus left Simon and Joseph, along with Zacchaeus and his men, in sufficient numbers to besiege them, while he himself went off to places where he was more urgently needed. 20 But some of the men in Simon's force who were money lovers let themselves be bribed by some of the men in the towers; on receiving seventy thousand drachmas, they allowed a number of them to escape. 21 When Maccabeus was told what had happened, he assembled the rulers of the people and accused those men of having sold their kinsmen for money by setting their enemies free to fight against them. 22 So he put them to death as traitors, and without delay captured the two towers. 23 As he was successful at arms in all his undertakings, he destroyed more than twenty thousand men in the two strongholds.

Victory over Timothy. 24† Timothy, who had previously been defeated by the Jews, gathered a tremendous force of foreign troops and collected a large number of cavalry from Asia; then he appeared in Judea, ready to conquer it by force. 25 At his approach, Maccabeus and his men made supplication to God, sprinkling earth upon their heads and girding their loins in sackcloth. 26* Lying prostrate at the foot of the altar, they begged him to be gracious to them, and to be an enemy to their enemies, and a foe to their foes, as the law declares.

27 After the prayer, they took up their arms and advanced a considerable distance from the city, halting when they were close to the enemy. [28†] As soon as dawn broke, the armies joined battle, the one having as pledge of success and victory not only their valor but also their reliance on the Lord, and the other taking fury as their leader in the fight.

[29*] In the midst of the fierce battle, there appeared to the enemy from the heavens five majestic men riding on golden-bridled horses, who led the Jews on. [30] They surrounded Maccabeus, and shielding him with their own armor, kept him from being wounded. They shot arrows and hurled thunderbolts at the enemy, who were bewildered and blinded, thrown into confusion and routed. [31] Twenty-five hundred of their foot soldiers and six hundred of their horsemen were slain. [32*] Timothy, however, fled to a well-fortified stronghold called Gazara, where Chaereas was in command. [33] For four days Maccabeus and his men eagerly besieged the fortress. [34] Those inside, relying on the strength of the place, kept repeating outrageous blasphemies and uttering abominable words. [35] When the fifth day dawned, twenty young men in the army of Maccabeus, angered over such blasphemies, bravely stormed the wall and with savage fury cut down everyone they encountered. [36] Others who climbed up the same way swung around on the defenders, taking the besieged in the rear; they put the towers to the torch, spread the fire and burned the blasphemers alive. Still others broke down the gates and let in the rest of the troops, who took possession of the city. [37†] Timothy had hidden in a cistern, but they killed him, along with his brother Chaereas, and Apollophanes. [38] On completing these exploits, they blessed, with hymns of grateful praise, the Lord who shows great kindness to Israel and grants them victory.

Defeat of Lysias. [1*†] Very soon afterward, Lysias, guardian and kinsman of the king and head of the government, being greatly displeased at what had happened, [2] mustered about eighty thousand infantry and all his cavalry and marched against the Jews. His plan was to make Jerusalem a Greek settlement; [3] to levy tribute on the temple, as he did on the sanctuaries of the other nations; and to put the high priesthood up for sale every year. [4] He did not take God's power into account at all, but felt exultant confidence in his myriads of foot soldiers, his thousands of horsemen, and his eighty elephants.

[5] So he invaded Judea, and when he reached Beth-zur, a fortified place about twenty miles from Jerusalem, launched a strong attack against it. [6*] When Maccabeus and his men learned that Lysias was besieging the strongholds, they and all the people begged the Lord with lamentations and tears to send a good angel to save Israel. [7] Maccabeus himself was the first to take up arms, and he exhorted the others to join him in risking their lives to help their kinsmen. Then they resolutely set out together. [8*] Suddenly, while they were still near Jerusalem, a horseman appeared at their head, clothed in white garments and brandishing gold weapons. [9] Then all of them together thanked God for his mercy, and their hearts were filled with such courage that they were ready to assault not only men, but the most savage beasts, yes, even walls of iron. [10] Now that the Lord had shown his mercy toward them, they advanced in battle order with the aid of their heavenly ally. [11] Hurling themselves upon the enemy like lions, they laid low eleven thousand foot soldiers and sixteen hundred horsemen, and put all the rest to flight. [12] Most of those who got away were wounded and stripped of their arms, while Lysias himself escaped only by shameful flight.

Peace with the Syrians. [13*] But Lysias was not a stupid man. He reflected on the defeat he had suffered, and came to realize that the Hebrews were invincible because the mighty God was their ally. He therefore sent a message [14] persuading them to settle everything on just terms, and promising to persuade the king also, and to induce him to become their friend. [15] Maccabeus, solicitous for the common good, agreed to all that Lysias proposed; and the king, on his part, granted in behalf of the Jews all the written requests of Maccabeus to Lysias.

Official Letters. [16] These are the terms of the letter which Lysias wrote to the Jews: "Lysias sends greetings to the Jewish people. [17] John and Absalom, your envoys, have presented your signed communication and asked about the matters contained in it. [18] Whatever had to be referred to the king I called

The year one hundred and forty-eight, the twenty-fourth of Dioscorinthius.

[22] The king's letter read thus: "King Antiochus sends greetings to his brother Lysias. [23] Now that our father has taken his place among the gods, we wish the subjects of our kingdom to be undisturbed in conducting their own affairs. [24] We understand that the Jews do not agree with our father's policy concerning Greek customs but prefer their own way of life. They are petitioning us to let them retain their own customs. [25] Since we desire that this people too should be undisturbed, our decision is that their temple be restored to them and that they live in keeping with the customs of their ancestors. [26] Accordingly, please send them messengers to give them our assurances of friendship, so that, when they learn of our decision, they may have nothing to worry about but may contentedly go about their own business."

[27] The king's letter to the people was as follows: "King Antiochus sends greetings to the Jewish senate and to the rest of the Jews. [28] If you are well, it is what we desire. We too are in good health. [29] Menelaus has told us of your wish to return home and attend to your own affairs. [30] Therefore, those who return by the thirtieth of Xanthicus will have our assurance of full permission [31] to observe their dietary laws and other laws, just as before, and none of the Jews shall be molested in any way for faults committed through ignorance. [32] I have also sent Menelaus to reassure you. [33]† Farewell." In the year one hundred and forty-eight, the fifteenth of Xanthicus.

[34] The Romans also sent them a letter as follows: "Quintus Memmius and Titus Manius, legates of the Romans, send greetings to the Jewish people. [35] Whatever Lysias, kinsman of the king, has granted you, we also approve. [36] But the matters on which he passed judgment should be submitted to the king. As soon as you have considered them, send someone to us with your decisions so that we may present them to your advantage, for we are on our way to Antioch. [37] Make haste, then, to send us those who can inform us of your intentions. [38]† Farewell." In the year one hundred and forty-eight, the fifteenth of Xanthicus.

Persecution Renewed. [1] After these agreements were made, Lysias returned to the king, and the Jews went about their farming. [2]† But some of the local governors, Timothy and Apollonius, son of Gennaeus, as also Hieronymus and Demophon, to say nothing of Nicanor, the commander of the Cyprians, would not allow them to live in peace.

[3] Some people of Joppa also committed this outrage: they invited the Jews who lived among them, together with their wives and children, to embark on boats which they had provided. There was no hint of enmity toward them; [4] this was done by public vote of the city. When the Jews, not suspecting treachery and wishing to live on friendly terms, accepted the invitation, the people of Joppa took them out to sea and drowned at least two hundred of them.

Activity of Judas. [5] As soon as Judas heard of the barbarous deed perpetrated against his countrymen, he summoned his men; [6] and after calling upon God, the just judge, he marched against the murderers of his kinsmen. In a night attack he set the harbor on fire, burnt the boats, and put to the sword those who had taken refuge there. [7] When the gates of the town were shut, he withdrew, intending to come back later and wipe out the entire population of Joppa.

[8] On hearing that the men of Jamnia planned to give like treatment to the Jews who lived among them, [9] he attacked the Jamnian populace by night, setting fire to the harbor and the fleet, so that the glow of the flames was visible as far as Jerusalem, thirty miles away.

[10]*† When the Jews had gone about a mile from there in the campaign against Timothy, they were attacked by Arabs numbering at least five thousand foot soldiers, and five hundred horsemen. [11] After a hard fight, Judas and his companions, with God's help, were victorious. The defeated nomads begged Judas to make friends with them and promised to supply the Jews with cattle and to help them in every other way. 12 Realizing that they could indeed be useful in many respects, Judas agreed to make peace with them. After the pledge of friendship had been exchanged, the Arabs withdrew to their tents.

13 He also attacked a certain city called Caspin, fortified with earthworks and ramparts and inhabited by a mixed population of Gentiles. 14 Relying on the strength of their walls and their supply of provisions, the besieged treated Judas and his men with contempt, insulting them and even uttering blasphemies and profanity. 15* But Judas and his men invoked the aid of the great Sovereign of the world, who, in the day of Joshua, overthrew Jericho without battering-ram or siege machine; then they furiously stormed the ramparts. 16 Capturing the city by the will of God, they inflicted such indescribable slaughter on it that the adjacent pool, which was about a quarter of a mile wide, seemed to be filled with the blood that flowed into it.

17*† When they had gone on some ninety miles, they reached Charax, where there were certain Jews known as Toubiani. 18 But they did not find Timothy in that region, for he had already departed from there without having done anything except to leave behind in one place a very strong garrison. 19 But Dositheus and Sosipater, two of Maccabeus' captains, marched out and destroyed the force of more than ten thousand men that Timothy had left in the stronghold. 20 Meanwhile, Maccabeus divided his army into cohorts, with a commander over each cohort, and went in pursuit of Timothy, who had a force of a hundred and twenty thousand foot soldiers and twenty-five hundred horsemen. 21 When Timothy learned of the approach of Judas, he sent on ahead of him the women and children, as well as the baggage, to a place called Karnion, which was hard to besiege and even hard to reach because of the difficult terrain of that region. 22 But when Judas' first cohort appeared, the enemy was overwhelmed with fear and terror at the manifestation of the All-seeing. Scattering in every direction, they rushed away in such headlong flight that in many cases they wounded one another, pierced by the swords of their own men. 23 Judas pressed the pursuit vigorously, putting the sinners to the sword and destroying as many as thirty thousand men.

24 Timothy himself fell into the hands of the men under Dositheus and Sosipater; but with great cunning, he asked them to spare his life and let him go, because he had in his power the parents and relatives of many of them, and could make these suffer. 25 When he had fully confirmed his solemn pledge to restore them unharmed, they let him go for the sake of saving their brethren.

Further Successes. 26† Judas then marched to Karnion and the shrine of Atargatis, where he killed twenty-five thousand people. 27* After the defeat and destruction of these, he moved his army to Ephron, a fortified city inhabited by people of many nationalities. Robust young men took up their posts in defense of the walls, from which they fought valiantly; inside were large supplies of machines and missiles. 28 But the Jews, invoking the Sovereign who forcibly shatters the might of his enemies, got possession of the city and slaughtered twenty-five thousand of the people in it. 29† Then they set out from there and hastened on to Scythopolis, seventy-five miles from Jerusalem. 30 But when the Jews who lived there testified to the good will shown by the Scythopolitans and to their kind treatment even in times of adversity, 31 Judas and his men thanked them and exhorted them to be well disposed to their race in the future also. Finally they arrived in Jerusalem, shortly before the feast of Weeks.

32 After this feast called Pentecost, they lost no time in marching against Gorgias, governor of Idumea, 33 who opposed them with three thousand foot soldiers and four hundred horsemen. 34 In the ensuing battle, a few of the Jews were slain. 35† A man called Dositheus, a powerful horseman and one of Bacenor's men, caught hold of Gorgias, grasped his military cloak and dragged him along by main strength, intending to capture the vile wretch alive, when a Thracian horseman attacked Dositheus and cut off his arm at the shoulder. Then Gorgias fled to Marisa. 36 After Esdris and his men had been fighting for a long time and were weary, Judas called upon the Lord to show himself their ally and leader in the battle. 37 Then, raising a battle cry in his ancestral language, and with songs, he charged Gorgias' men when they were not expecting it and put them to flight.

Expiation for the Dead. 38 Judas rallied his army and went to the city of Adullam. As the week was ending, they purified themselves according to custom and kept the sabbath there. [39] On the following day, since the task had now become urgent, Judas and his men went to gather up the bodies of the slain and bury them with their kinsmen in their ancestral tombs. [40*] But under the tunic of each of the dead they found amulets sacred to the idols of Jamnia, which the law forbids the Jews to wear. So it was clear to all that this was why these men had been slain. [41] They all therefore praised the ways of the Lord, the just judge who brings to light the things that are hidden. [42†] Turning to supplication, they prayed that the sinful deed might be fully blotted out. The noble Judas warned the soldiers to keep themselves free from sin, for they had seen with their own eyes what had happened because of the sin of those who had fallen. [43] He then took up a collection among all his soldiers, amounting to two thousand silver drachmas, which he sent to Jerusalem to provide for an expiatory sacrifice. In doing this he acted in a very excellent and noble way, inasmuch as he had the resurrection of the dead in view; [44] for if he were not expecting the fallen to rise again, it would have been useless and foolish to pray for them in death. [45] But if he did this with a view to the splendid reward that awaits those who had gone to rest in godliness, it was a holy and pious thought. [46] Thus he made atonement for the dead that they might be freed from this sin.

The Syrians Invade Judea. [1†] In the year one hundred and forty-nine, Judas and his men learned that Antiochus Eupator was invading Judea with a large force, [2*†] and that with him was Lysias, his guardian, who was in charge of the government. They led a Greek army of one hundred and ten thousand foot soldiers, fifty-three hundred horsemen, twenty-two elephants, and three hundred chariots armed with scythes.

Death of Menelaus. [3] Menelaus also joined them, and with great duplicity kept urging Antiochus on, not for the welfare of his country, but in the hope of being established in office. [4*†] But the King of kings aroused the anger of Antiochus against the scoundrel. When the king was shown by Lysias that Menelaus was to blame for all the trouble, he ordered him to be taken to Beroea and executed there in the customary local method. [5†] There is at that place a tower seventy-five feet high, full of ashes, with a circular rim sloping down steeply on all sides toward the ashes. [6] A man guilty of sacrilege or notorious for certain other crimes is brought up there and then hurled down to destruction. [7] In such a manner was Menelaus, the transgressor of the law, fated to die; he was deprived even of decent burial. [8] It was altogether just that he who had committed so many sins against the altar with its pure fire and ashes should meet his death in ashes.

Skirmish near Modein. [9] The king was advancing, his mind full of savage plans for inflicting on the Jews worse things than those they suffered in his father's time. [10] When Judas learned of this, he urged the people to call upon the LORD night and day, to help them now, if ever, [11] when they were about to be deprived of their law, their country, and their holy temple; and not to allow this nation, which had just begun to revive, to be subjected again to blasphemous Gentiles. [12] When they had all joined in doing this, and had implored the merciful LORD continuously with weeping and fasting and prostrations for three days, Judas encouraged them and told them to stand ready. [13] After a private meeting with the elders, he decided that, before the king's army could invade Judea and take possession of the city, the Jews should march out and settle the matter with God's help. [14] Leaving the outcome to the Creator of the world, and exhorting his followers to fight nobly to death for the laws, the temple, the city, the country, and the government, he pitched his camp near Modein. [15*†] Giving his men the battle cry "God's Victory," he made a night attack on the king's pavilion with a picked force of the bravest young men and killed about two thousand in the camp. They also slew the lead elephant and its rider. [16†] Finally they withdrew in triumph, having filled the camp with terror and 12, 42-46: This is the earliest statement of the doctrine that prayers (v 42) and sacrifices (v 43) for the dead are efficacious. The statement is made here, however, only for the purpose of proving that Judas believed in the resurrection of the just (7, 9.14.23.36). That is, he believed that expiation could be made for certain sins of otherwise good men—soldiers who had given their lives for God's cause. Thus, they could share in the resurrection. His belief was similar to, but not quite the same as, the Catholic doctrine of purgatory.

confusion. [17] Day was just breaking when this was accomplished with the help and protection of the LORD.

Treaty with Antiochus V. [18]* The king, having had a taste of the Jews' daring, tried to take their positions by a stratagem. [19] So he marched against Beth-zur, a strong fortress of the Jews; but he was driven back, checked, and defeated. [20] Judas then sent supplies to the men inside, [21]† but Rhodocus, of the Jewish army, betrayed military secrets to the enemy. He was found out, arrested, and imprisoned. [22] The king made a second attempt by negotiating with the men of Beth-zur. After giving them his pledge and receiving theirs, he withdrew [23] and attacked Judas and his men. But he was defeated. Next he heard that Philip, who was left in charge of the government in Antioch had rebelled. Dismayed, he parleyed with the Jews, submitted to their terms, and swore to observe their rights. Having come to this agreement, he offered a sacrifice, and honored the temple with a generous donation. [24]† He approved of Maccabeus and left him as military and civil governor of the territory from Ptolemais to the region of the Gerrenes. [25] When he came to Ptolemais, the people of that city were angered by the peace treaty; in fact they were so indignant that they wanted to annul its provisions. [26] But Lysias took the platform, defended the treaty as well as he could and won them over by persuasion. After calming them and gaining their good will, he returned to Antioch.

That is how the king's attack and withdrawal went.

CHAPTER 14

Antagonism of Alcimus. [1]*† Three years later, Judas and his men learned that Demetrius, son of Seleucus, had sailed into the port of Tripolis with a powerful army and a fleet, [2] and that he had occupied the country, after doing away with Antiochus and his guardian Lysias.

[3] A certain Alcimus, a former high priest, who had willfully incurred defilement at the time of the revolt, realized that there was no way for him to salvage his position and regain access to the holy altar. [4]* So he went to King Demetrius in the year one hundred and fifty-one and presented him with a gold crown and a palm branch, as well as some of the customary olive branches from the temple. On that occasion he kept quiet. [5] But he found an opportunity to further his mad scheme when he was invited to the council by Demetrius and questioned about the dispositions and intentions of the Jews. He replied: [6] "Those Jews called Hasideans, led by Judas Maccabeus, are warmongers, who stir up sedition and keep the kingdom from enjoying peace and quiet. [7] For this reason, now that I am deprived of my ancestral dignity, that is to say, the high priesthood, I have come here—[8] first, out of my genuine concern for the king's interests, and secondly, out of consideration for my own countrymen, since our entire nation is suffering great affliction from the unreasonable conduct of the people just mentioned. [9] When you have informed yourself in detail on these matters, O king, act in the interest of our country and its hard-pressed people with the same gracious consideration that you show toward all. [10] As long as Judas is around, it is impossible for the state to enjoy peace." [11] When he had said this, the other Friends who were hostile to Judas quickly added fuel to Demetrius' indignation.

Dealings with Nicanor. [12]* The king immediately chose Nicanor, who had been in command of the elephants, and appointed him governor of Judea. He sent him off [13] with orders to put Judas to death, to disperse his followers, and to set up Alcimus as high priest of the great temple. [14]† The Gentiles from Judea, who would have banished Judas, came flocking to Nicanor, thinking that the misfortunes and calamities of the Jews would mean prosperity for themselves. [15]* When the Jews heard of Nicanor's coming, and that the Gentiles were rallying to him, they sprinkled themselves with earth and prayed to him who established his people forever, and who always comes to the aid of his heritage. [16] At their leader's command, they set out at once and came upon the enemy at the village of Adasa. [17] Judas' brother Simon had engaged Nicanor, but because of the sudden appearance of the enemy suffered a slight repulse. [18] However, when Nicanor heard of the valor of Judas and his men, and the great courage with which they fought for their country, he shrank from deciding the issue by bloodshed. [19] So he sent Posidonius, Theodotus and Mattathias to arrange an agreement. [20] After a long discussion of the terms, each leader communicated them to his troops; and when general agreement was expressed, they assented to the treaty. [21] A day was set on which the leaders would meet by themselves. From each side a chariot came forward and thrones were set in place. [22] Judas had posted armed men in readiness at suitable points for fear that the enemy might suddenly carry out some treacherous plan. But the conference was held in the proper way. [23] Nicanor stayed on in Jerusalem, where he did nothing out of place. He got rid of the throngs of ordinary people who gathered around him; [24] but he always kept Judas in his company, for he had a cordial affection for the man. [25] He urged him to marry and have children; so Judas married, settled down, and shared the common life.

Threats against Judas. [26] When Alcimus saw their friendship for each other, he took the treaty that had been made, went to Demetrius, and said that Nicanor was plotting against the state, and that he had appointed Judas, the conspirator against the kingdom, to be his successor. [27] Stirred up by the villain's calumnies, the king became enraged. He wrote to Nicanor, stating that he was displeased with the treaty, and ordering him to send Maccabeus as a prisoner to Antioch without delay. [28] When this message reached Nicanor he was dismayed, for he hated to break his agreement with a man who had done no wrong. [29] However, there was no way of opposing the king, so he watched for an opportunity to carry out this order by a stratagem. [30] But Maccabeus noticed that Nicanor was becoming cool in his dealings with him, and acting with unaccustomed rudeness when they met; he concluded that this coldness betokened no good. So he gathered together a large number of his men, and went into hiding from Nicanor.

[31]* When Nicanor realized that he had been disgracefully outwitted by the man, he went to the great and holy temple, at a time when the priests were offering the customary sacrifices, and ordered them to surrender Judas. [32] As they declared under oath that they did not know where the wanted man was, [33] he raised his right hand toward the temple and swore this oath: "If you do not hand Judas over to me as prisoner, I will level this shrine of God to the ground; I will tear down the altar, and erect here a splendid temple to Dionysus." [34] With these words he went away. The priests stretched out their hands toward heaven, calling upon the unfailing defender of our nation in these words: [35]* "Lord of all, though you are in need of nothing, you have approved of a temple for your dwelling place among us. [36] Therefore, O holy One, Lord of all holiness, preserve forever undefiled this house, which has been so recently purified."

The Story of Razis. [37]† A certain Razis, one of the elders of Jerusalem, was denounced to Nicanor as a patriot. A man highly regarded, he was called a father of the Jews because of his love for them. [38] In the early days of the revolt, he had been convicted of Judaism, and had risked body and life in his ardent zeal for it. [39] Nicanor, to show his detestation of the Jews, sent more than five hundred soldiers to arrest him. [40] He thought that by arresting such a man he would deal the Jews a hard blow. [41] But when these troops, on the point of capturing the tower, were forcing the outer gate and calling for fire to set the door ablaze, Razis, now caught on all sides, turned his sword against himself, [42] preferring to die nobly rather than fall into the hands of vile men and suffer outrages unworthy of his noble birth. [43] In the excitement of the struggle he failed to strike exactly. So while the troops rushed in through the doors, he gallantly ran up to the top of the wall and with manly courage threw himself down into the crowd. [44] But as they quickly drew back and left an opening, he fell into the middle of the empty space. [45] Still breathing, and inflamed with anger, he got up and ran through the crowd, with blood gushing from his frightful wounds. [46]* Then, standing on a steep rock, as he lost the last of his blood, he tore out his entrails and flung them with both hands into the crowd, calling upon the Lord of life and of spirit to give these back to him again. Such was the manner of his death.

Nicanor's Blasphemy. [1] When Nicanor learned that Judas and his companions were in the territory of Samaria, he decided to attack them in all safety on the day of rest. [2] The Jews who were forced to follow him pleaded, "Do not massacre them in that way, like a savage barbarian, but show respect for the day which the All-seeing has exalted with holiness above all other days." [3]* At this the thrice-sinful wretch asked if there was a ruler in heaven who prescribed the keeping of the sabbath day.

† 14, 37–46: The story of Razis belongs to the "martyrology" class of literature; it is similar to the stories in 6, 18—7, 42.

4 When they replied that there was indeed such a ruler in heaven, the living LORD himself, who commanded the observance of the sabbath day, 5 he said, "I, on my part, am ruler on earth, and my orders are that you take up arms and carry out the king's business." Nevertheless he did not succeed in carrying out his cruel plan.

Fresh Hope. 6† In his utter boastfulness and arrogance Nicanor had determined to erect a public monument of victory over Judas and his men. 7 But Maccabeus remained confident, fully convinced that he would receive help from the LORD. 8 He urged his men not to fear the enemy, but mindful of the help they had received from Heaven in the past, to expect that now, too, victory would be given them by the Almighty. 9† By encouraging them with words from the law and the prophets, and by reminding them of the battles they had already won, he filled them with fresh enthusiasm. 10 Having stirred up their courage, he gave his orders and pointed out at the same time the perfidy of the Gentiles and their violation of oaths. 11 When he had armed each of them, not so much with the safety of shield and spear as with the encouragement of noble words, he cheered them all by relating a dream, a kind of vision, worthy of belief.

12*† What he saw was this: Onias, the former high priest, a good and virtuous man, modest in appearance, gentle in manners, distinguished in speech, and trained from childhood in every virtuous practice, was praying with outstretched arms for the whole Jewish community. 13 Then in the same way another man appeared, distinguished by his white hair and dignity, and with an air about him of extraordinary, majestic authority. 14† Onias then said of him, "This is God's prophet Jeremiah, who loves his brethren and fervently prays for his people and their holy city." 15 Stretching out his right hand, Jeremiah presented a gold sword to Judas. As he gave it to him he said, 16 "Accept this holy sword as a gift from God; with it you shall crush your adversaries."

Defeat and Death of Nicanor. 17 Encouraged by Judas' noble words, which had power to instill valor and stir young hearts to courage, the Jews determined not to delay, but to charge gallantly and decide the issue by hand-to-hand combat with the utmost courage, since their city and its temple with the sacred vessels were in danger. 18* They were not so much concerned about their wives and children or their brothers and kinsmen; their first and foremost fear was for the consecrated sanctuary. 19 Those who remained in the city suffered a like agony, anxious as they were about the battle in the open country.

20 Everyone now awaited the decisive moment. The enemy were already drawing near with their troops drawn up in battle line, their elephants placed in strategic positions, and their cavalry stationed on the flanks. 21 Maccabeus, contemplating the hosts before him, their elaborate equipment, and the fierceness of their elephants, stretched out his hands toward heaven and called upon the LORD who works miracles; for he knew that it is not through arms but through the LORD's decision that victory is won by those who deserve it. 22* He prayed to him thus: "You, O LORD, sent your angel in the days of King Hezekiah of Judea, and he slew a hundred and eighty-five thousand men of Sennacherib's army. 23 Sovereign of the heavens, send a good angel now to spread fear and dread before us. 24 By the might of your arm may those be struck down who have blasphemously come against your holy people!" With this he ended his prayer.

25* Nicanor and his men advanced to the sound of trumpets and battle songs. 26 But Judas and his men met the army with supplication and prayers. 27 Fighting with their hands and praying to God with their hearts, they laid low at least thirty-five thousand, and rejoiced greatly over this manifestation of God's power. 28 When the battle was over and they were joyfully departing, they discovered Nicanor lying there in all his armor; 29 so they raised tumultuous shouts in their native tongue in praise of the divine Sovereign.

30 Then Judas, who was ever in body and soul the chief defender of his fellow citizens, and had maintained from youth his affection for his countrymen, ordered Nicanor's head and whole right arm to be cut off and taken to Jerusalem. 31† When he arrived there, he assembled his countrymen, stationed the priests before the altar, and sent for those in the citadel. [32] He showed them the vile Nicanor's head and the wretched blasphemer's arm that had been boastfully stretched out against the holy dwelling of the Almighty. [35]* Judas hung up Nicanor's head on the wall of the citadel, a clear and evident proof to all of the Lord's help. VII: EPILOGUE

Author's Apology. [37] Since Nicanor's doings ended in this way, with the city remaining in possession of the Hebrews from that time on, I will bring my own story to an end here too. [38] If it is well written and to the point, that is what I wanted; if it is poorly done and mediocre, that is the best I could do. [39] Just as it is harmful to drink wine alone or water alone, whereas mixing wine with water makes a more pleasant drink that increases delight, so a skillfully composed story delights the ears of those who read the work. Let this, then, be the end.

THE WISDOM BOOKS

The Books of Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, the Song of Songs, Wisdom, and Sirach, are all versified by the skillful use of parallelism, that is, of the balanced and symmetrical phrases peculiar to Hebrew poetry. With the exception of the Psalms, the majority of which are devotional lyrics, and the Song of Songs, a nuptial hymn, these books belong to the general class of wisdom or didactic literature, strictly so called because their chief purpose is instruction.

The wisdom literature of the Bible is the fruit of a movement among ancient oriental people to gather, preserve and express, usually in aphoristic style, the results of human experience as an aid toward understanding and solving the problems of life. In Israel especially, the movement concerned itself with such basic and vital problems as man's origin and destiny, his quest for happiness, the problem of suffering, of good and evil in human conduct, of death, and the state beyond the grave. Originating with oral tradition, these formulations found their way into the historical books of the Old Testament in the shape of proverbs, odes, chants, epigrams, and also into those psalms intended for instruction.

The developed compositions of this literature form the sapiential books. The Book of Proverbs is a collection of sentences or practical norms for moral conduct. The Book of Job is an artistic dialogue skillfully handling the problem of suffering though only from the standpoint of temporal life. Ecclesiastes examines a wide range of human experience only to conclude that all things are vanity except the fear of the Lord and observance of his commandments, and that God requites man in his own good time. Sirach gathers and presents the fruits of past experience, thus preparing for the Book of Wisdom, which sees for the just man seeking happiness the full hope of immortality (Wis 3, 4).

Those who cultivated wisdom were called sages. Men of letters, scribes, skilled in the affairs of government, and counselors to rulers, they were instructors of the people, especially of youth (Sir 51, 13-30). In times of crisis they guided the people by revaluating tradition, thus helping to preserve unity, peace and good will. The most illustrious of the sages, and the originator of wisdom literature in Israel, was Solomon. Because of his fame, some of the wisdom books of which he was not the author bear his name.

Despite numerous resemblances, sometimes exaggerated, between the sapiential literature of pagan nations and the wisdom books of the Bible, the former are often replete with vagaries and abound in polytheistic conceptions; the latter remained profoundly human, universal, fundamentally moral, and essentially religious and monotheistic. Under the influence of the Law and the Prophets, wisdom became piety and virtue; impiety and vice were folly. The teachers of wisdom were regarded as men of God, and their books were placed beside the Law and the Prophets. The highest wisdom became identified with the spirit of God through which the world was created and preserved (Prv 8, 22-31), and mankind was enlightened.

The limitations of Old Testament wisdom served to crystalize the problems of human life and destiny, thus preparing for their solution through New Testament revelation. Ecclesiastes' vain search for success and happiness on earth ends when the Savior assures these things to his followers, not in this world but in the bliss of heaven. The anxiety in the Book of Job over reconciling God's justice and wisdom with the suffering of the innocent is relieved by the account of the Crucified and Risen Redeemer in the Gospel. By fulfilling all that the Psalms foretold concerning him, Jesus makes the Psalter his prayer book and that of the Church for all time. The love of God for the chosen people which underlies the Song of Songs is perfected in the union of Christ with his Church. The personification of the wisdom of Proverbs, Wisdom and Sirach shines forth in resplendent reality in the Word who was with God, and who was God, and who became incarnate to dwell among us; cf Jn 1, 2.14.

The Book of

JOB

The Book of Job, named after its protagonist, is an exquisite dramatic poem which treats of the problem of the suffering of the innocent, and of retribution. The contents of the book, together with its artistic structure and elegant style, place it among the literary masterpieces of all time.

Job, an oriental chieftain, pious and upright, richly endowed in his own person and in domestic prosperity, suffers a sudden and complete reversal of fortune. He loses his property and his children; a loathsome disease afflicts his body; and sorrow oppresses his soul. Nevertheless, Job does not complain against God. When some friends visit him to condole with him, Job protests his innocence and does not understand why he is afflicted. He curses the day of his birth and longs for death to bring an end to his sufferings. The debate which ensues consists of three cycles of speeches. Job's friends insist that his plight can only be a punishment for personal wrongdoing and an invitation from God to repentance. Job rejects their inadequate explanation and calls for a response from God himself. At this point the speeches of a youth named Elihu (chs 32—37) interrupt the development.

In response to Job's plea that he be allowed to see God and hear from him the cause of his suffering, God answers, not by justifying his action before men, but by referring to his own omniscience and almighty power. Job is content with this. He recovers his attitude of humility and trust in God, which is deepened now and strengthened by his experience of suffering.

The author of the book is not known; it was composed some time between the seventh and fifth centuries B.C. Its literary form, with speeches, prologue and epilogue disposed according to a studied plan, indicates that the purpose of the writing is didactic. The lesson is that even the just may suffer here, and their sufferings are a test of their fidelity. They shall be rewarded in the end. Man's finite mind cannot probe the depths of the divine omniscience that governs the world. The problems we encounter can be solved by a broader and deeper awareness of God's power, presence (42, 5) and wisdom.

The divisions of the Book of Job are as follows:

I: Prologue (1, 1—2, 13)
II: First Cycle of Speeches (3, 1—14, 22)
III: Second Cycle of Speeches (15, 1—21, 34)
IV: Third Cycle of Speeches (22, 1—28, 28)
V: Job's Final Summary of His Cause (29, 1—31, 37)
VI: Elihu's Speeches (32, 1—37, 24)
VII: The Lord's Speech (38, 1—42, 6)
VIII: Epilogue (42, 7—17)

I: PROLOGUE

Job's Wealth and Piety. 1*† In the land of Uz there was a blameless and upright man named Job, who feared God and avoided evil. 2† Seven sons and three daughters were born to him; 3† and he had seven thousand sheep, three thousand camels, five hundred yoke of oxen, five hundred she-asses, and a great number of work animals, so that he was greater than any of the men of the East. 4 His sons used to take turns giving feasts, sending invitations to their three sisters to eat and drink with them. 5 And when each feast had run its course, Job would send for them and sanctify them, rising early and offering holocausts for every one of them. For Job said, "It may be that my sons have sinned and blasphemed God in their hearts." This Job did habitually.

6*† One day, when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, Satan also came among them. 7* And the LORD said to Satan, "Whence do you come?" Then Satan answered the LORD and said, "From roaming the earth and patrolling it." 8 And the LORD said to Satan, "Have you noticed my servant Job, and that there is no one on earth like him, blameless and upright, fearing God and avoiding evil?" 9 But Satan answered the LORD and said, "Is it for nothing that Job is God-fearing? 10 Have you not surrounded him and his family and all that he has with your protection? You have blessed the work of his hands, and his livestock are spread over the land. 11* But now put forth your hand and touch anything that he has, and surely he will blaspheme you to your face." 12 And the LORD said to Satan, "Behold, all that he has is in your power; only do not lay a hand upon his person." So Satan went forth from the presence of the LORD.

The First Trial. 13 And so one day, while his sons and his daughters were eating and drinking wine in the house of their eldest brother, 14 a messenger came to Job and said, "The oxen were plowing and the asses grazing beside them, 15† and the Sabeans carried them off in a raid. They put the herdsmen to the sword, and I alone have escaped to tell you." 16† While he was yet speaking, another came and said, "Lightning has fallen from heaven and struck the sheep and their shepherds and consumed them; and I alone have escaped to tell you." 17 While he was yet speaking, another came and said, "The Chaldeans formed three columns, seized the camels, carried them off, and put those tending them to the sword, and I alone have escaped to tell you." 18 While he was yet speaking, another came and said, "Your sons and daughters were eating and drinking wine in the house of their eldest brother, 19 when suddenly a great wind came across the desert and smote the four corners of the house. It fell upon the young people and they are dead; and I alone have escaped to tell you." 20 Then Job began to tear his cloak and cut off his hair. He cast himself prostrate upon the ground, 21*† and said,

"Naked I came forth from my mother's womb,
and naked shall I go back again.
The LORD gave and the LORD has taken away;
blessed be the name of the LORD!"

22* In all this Job did not sin, nor did he say anything disrespectful of God.

CHAPTER 2

The Second Trial. 1* Once again the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan also came with them. 2 And the LORD said to Satan, "Whence do you come?" And Satan answered the LORD and said, "From roaming the earth and patrolling it." 3* And the LORD said to Satan, "Have you noticed my servant Job, and that there is no one on earth like him, faultless and upright, fearing God and avoiding evil? He still holds fast to his innocence although you incited me against him to ruin him without cause." 4† And Satan answered the LORD and said, "Skin for skin! All that a man has will he give for his life. 5* But now put forth your hand and touch his bone and his flesh, and surely he will blaspheme you to your face." 6 And the LORD said to Satan, "He is in your power; only spare his life." 7 So Satan went forth from the presence of the LORD and smote Job with severe boils from the soles of his feet to the crown of his head. 8 And he took a potsherd to scrape himself, as he sat among the ashes. 9*† Then his wife said to him, "Are you still holding to your innocence? Curse God and die." 10* But he said to her, "Are even you going to speak as senseless women do? We accept good things from God; and should we not accept evil?" Through all this, Job said nothing sinful.

Job's Three Friends. 11† Now when three of Job's friends heard of all the misfortune that had come upon him, they set out each one from his own place: Eliphaz from Teman, Bildad from Shuh, and Zophar from Naamath. They met and journeyed together to give him sympathy and comfort. 12 But when, at a distance, they lifted up their eyes and did not recognize him, they began to weep aloud; they tore their cloaks and threw dust upon their heads. 13 Then they sat down upon the ground with him seven days and seven nights, but none of them spoke a word to him; for they saw how great was his suffering.

II: FIRST CYCLE OF SPEECHES

CHAPTER 3

Job's Plaint

1 After this, Job opened his mouth and cursed his day. 2 Job spoke out and said:

3* Perish the day on which I was born,
the night when they said, "The child is a boy!"
4 May that day be darkness:
let not God above call for it,
nor light shine upon it!
5 May darkness and gloom claim it,
clouds settle upon it,
the blackness of night affright it!
6 May obscurity seize that day;
let it not occur among the days of the year,
nor enter into the count of the months!

7 May that night be barren;
let no joyful outcry greet it!
8† Let them curse it who curse the sea,
the appointed disturbers of Leviathan!
9 May the stars of its twilight be darkened;
may it look for daylight, but have none,
nor gaze on the eyes of the dawn,
10 Because it kept not shut the doors of the womb
to shield my eyes from trouble!

11* Why did I not perish at birth,
come forth from the womb and expire?
16† Or why was I not buried away like an untimely birth, like babes that have never seen the light?
12 Wherefore did the knees receive me?
or why did I suck at the breasts?

13 For then I should have lain down and been tranquil;
had I slept, I should then have been at rest 14 With kings and counselors of the earth who built where now there are ruins 15 Or with princes who had gold and filled their houses with silver.

17† There the wicked cease from troubling,
there the weary are at rest.
18 There the captives are at ease together,
and hear not the voice of the slave driver.
19 Small and great are there the same,
and the servant is free from his master.

20 Why is light given to the toilers,
and life to the bitter in spirit?
21 They wait for death and it comes not;
they search for it rather than for hidden treasures, 22 Rejoice in it exultingly,
and are glad when they reach the grave:
23 Men whose path is hidden from them,
and whom God has hemmed in!

24 For sighing comes more readily to me than food,
and my groans well forth like water.
25 For what I fear overtakes me,
and what I shrink from comes upon me.
26 I have no peace nor ease;
I have no rest, for trouble comes!

CHAPTER 4

Eliphaz's First Speech

1 Then spoke Eliphaz the Temanite, who said:

2 If someone attempts a word with you, will you mind?
For how can anyone refrain from speaking?
3 Behold, you have instructed many,
and have made firm their feeble hands.
4 Your words have upheld the stumbler;
you have strengthened his faltering knees.
5 But now that it comes to you, you are impatient;
when it touches yourself, you are dismayed.
6 Is not your piety a source of confidence,

* 3, 3: Jer 20, 14. 11: 10, 18f.

3, 16: This verse has been placed between vv 11 and 12 where it probably stood originally. There is reason to believe that here, as well as in several other places in Job, the original order of the poetic lines was accidentally disturbed in the early transmission of the text; so in chapters 12-15; 19-21; 24-31; 34; 36; 38-42. The verse numbers given in such cases are always those of the current Hebrew text, though the arrangement may differ. The footnotes will advise the reader of the difficulties and provide him with further indications for following the progress of thought in the book.

and your integrity of life your hope?
7* Reflect now, what innocent person perishes?
Since when are the upright destroyed?
8 As I see it, those who plow for mischief and sow trouble, reap the same.
9* By the breath of God they perish,
and by the blast of his wrath they are consumed.
10† Though the lion roars, though the king of beasts cries out,
yet the teeth of the young lions are broken;
11 The old lion perishes for lack of prey,
and the cubs of the lioness are scattered.

12† For a word was stealthily brought to me,
and my ear caught a whisper of it.
13* In my thoughts during visions of the night,
when deep sleep falls on men, 14 Fear came upon me, and shuddering,
that terrified me to the bones.
15 Then a spirit passed before me,
and the hair of my flesh stood up.
16 It paused, but its likeness I could not discern;
a figure was before my eyes,
and I heard a still voice:

17* "Can a man be righteous as against God?
Can a mortal be blameless against his Maker?
18* Lo, he puts no trust in his servants,
and with his angels he can find fault.
19 How much more with those that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundation is in the dust,
who are crushed more easily than the moth!
20 Morning or evening they may be shattered;
with no heed paid to it, they perish forever.
21 The pegs of their tent are plucked up;
they die without knowing wisdom."

CHAPTER 5

1 Call now! Will anyone respond to you?
To which of the holy ones will you appeal?
2 Nay, impatience kills the fool
and indignation slays the simpleton.
3* I have seen a fool spreading his roots,
but his household suddenly decayed.
4† His children shall be far from safety;
they shall be crushed at the gate without a rescuer.
5 What they have reaped the hungry shall eat up;
[or God shall take it away by blight;]
and the thirsty shall swallow their substance.
6 For mischief comes not out of the earth,
nor does trouble spring out of the ground;
7† But man himself begets mischief,
as sparks fly upward.

8 In your place, I would appeal to God,
and to God I would state my plea.
10† He gives rain upon the earth and sends water upon the fields;
11* He sets up on high the lowly,
and those who mourn he exalts to safety.
12 He frustrates the plans of the cunning,
so that their hands achieve no success;
13* He catches the wise in their own ruses,
and the designs of the crafty are routed.

14 They meet with darkness in the daytime,
and at noonday they grope as though it were night.
15 But the poor from the edge of the sword
and from the hand of the mighty, he saves.
16 Thus the unfortunate have hope,
and iniquity closes her mouth.

17 Happy is the man whom God reproves!
The Almighty's chastening do not reject.
18* For he wounds, but he binds up;

25 You shall know that your descendants are many,
and your offspring as the grass of the earth.
26 You shall approach the grave in full vigor,
as a shock of grain comes in at its season.
27 Lo, this we have searched out; so it is!
This we have heard, and you should know.

CHAPTER 6

Job's First Reply

1 Then Job answered and said:

2 Ah, could my anguish but be measured and my calamity laid with it in the scales,
3 They would now outweigh the sands of the sea!
Because of this I speak without restraint.
4* For the arrows of the Almighty pierce me,
and my spirit drinks in their poison;
the terrors of God are arrayed against me.
5† Does the wild ass bray when he has grass?
Does the ox low over his fodder?
6 Can a thing insipid be eaten without salt?
Is there flavor in the white of an egg?
7 I refuse to touch them;
they are loathsome food to me.
8 Oh, that I might have my request, and that God would grant what I long for:
9 Even that God would decide to crush me, that he would put forth his hand and cut me off!
10 Then I should still have consolation and could exult through unremitting pain, because I have not transgressed the commands of the Holy One.
11 What strength have I that I should endure,
and what is my limit that I should be patient?
12 Have I the strength of stones,
or is my flesh of bronze?
13* Have I no helper,
and has advice deserted me?
14 A friend owes kindness to one in despair,
though he have forsaken the fear of the Almighty.

15 My brethren are undependable as a brook,
as watercourses that run dry in the wadies;
16 Though they may be black with ice,
and with snow heaped upon them, 17 Yet once they flow, they cease to be;
in the heat, they disappear from their place.
18 Caravans turn aside from their routes;
they go into the desert and perish.
19† The caravans of Tema search,
the companies of Sheba have hopes;
20 They are disappointed, though they were confident;
they come there and are frustrated.

21 It is thus that you have now become for me;
you see a terrifying thing and are afraid.
22 Have I asked you to give me anything,
to offer a gift for me from your possessions, 23 Or to deliver me from the enemy,
or to redeem me from oppressors?
24 Teach me, and I will be silent;

* 6, 4: Ps 88, 17. 13: 19, 14f.

† 5, 19: Six . . . the seventh: proverbial expression for any large number; cf Prv 24, 16; Lk 17, 4.

6, 5f: Job would not complain if his life were as pleasant to him as fodder to a hungry animal; but his life is as disagreeable as insipid food. White of an egg: thus the obscure Hebrew has been understood in Jewish tradition; some render it "mallow juice."

6, 19: Tema: in northwest Arabia. Sheba: see note on 1, 15.

prove to me wherein I have erred.
25 How agreeable are honest words;
yet how unconvincing is your argument!
26 Do you consider your words as proof,
but the sayings of a desperate man as wind?
27 You would even cast lots for the orphan,
and would barter away your friend!
28 Come, now, give me your attention;
surely I will not lie to your face.
29 Think it over; let there be no injustice.
Think it over; I still am right.
30 Is there insincerity on my tongue,
or cannot my taste discern falsehood?

CHAPTER 7

1*† Is not man's life on earth a drudgery?
Are not his days those of a hireling?
2 He is a slave who longs for the shade,
a hireling who waits for his wages.
3 So I have been assigned months of misery,
and troubled nights have been told off for me.

4 If in bed I say, "When shall I arise?"
then the night drags on;
I am filled with restlessness until the dawn.
5* My flesh is clothed with worms and scabs;
my skin cracks and festers;
6 My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle;
they come to an end without hope.
7* Remember that my life is like the wind;
I shall not see happiness again.
8 The eye that now sees me shall no more behold me;
as you look at me, I shall be gone.
9* As a cloud dissolves and vanishes,
so he who goes down to the nether world shall come up no more.
10 He shall not again return to his house;
his place shall know him no more.

11 My own utterance I will not restrain;
I will speak in the anguish of my spirit;
I will complain in the bitterness of my soul.
12† Am I the sea, or a monster of the deep,
that you place a watch over me?
Why have you set me up as an object of attack;
or why should I be a target for you?
13 When I say, "My bed shall comfort me,
my couch shall ease my complaint," 14 Then you affright me with dreams and with visions terrify me,
15 So that I should prefer choking and death rather than my pains.

16* I waste away: I cannot live forever;
let me alone, for my days are but a breath.
17 What is man, that you make much of him,
or pay him any heed?
18* You observe him with each new day and try him at every moment!
19 How long will it be before you look away from me,
and let me alone long enough to swallow my spittle?
20 Though I have sinned, what can I do to you,
O watcher of men?
21 Why do you not pardon my offense, or take away my guilt?
For soon I shall lie down in the dust;
and should you seek me I shall then be gone.

CHAPTER 8

Bildad's First Speech

1 Bildad the Shuhite spoke out and said:
2 How long will you utter such things?
The words from your mouth are like a mighty wind!
3* Does God pervert judgment,
and does the Almighty distort justice?
4 If your children have sinned against him and he has left them in the grip of their guilt, 5 Still, if you yourself have recourse to God
and make supplication to the Almighty, 6 Should you be blameless and upright, surely now he will awake for you and restore your rightful domain;

7 Your former state will be of little moment,
for in time to come you will flourish indeed.

8* If you inquire of the former generations,
and give heed to the experience of the fathers 9* (As we are but of yesterday and have no knowledge, because our days on earth are but a shadow),
10 Will they not teach you and tell you and utter their words of understanding?
11† Can the papyrus grow up without mire?
Can the reed grass flourish without water?
12 While it is yet green and uncut,
it withers quicker than any grass.
13 So is the end of everyone who forgets God,
and so shall the hope of the godless man perish.

14 His confidence is but a gossamer thread
and his trust is a spider's web.
15 He shall rely upon his family, but it shall not last;
he shall cling to it, but it shall not endure.
16 He is full of sap before sunrise,
and beyond his garden his shoots go forth;
17 About a heap of stones are his roots entwined;
among the rocks he takes hold.
18 Yet if one tears him from his place, it will disown him: "I have never seen you!"
19 There he lies rotting beside the road, and out of the soil another sprouts.
20 Behold, God will not cast away the upright;
neither will he take the hand of the wicked.
21 Once more will he fill your mouth with laughter,
and your lips with rejoicing.
22 They that hate you shall be clothed with shame,
and the tent of the wicked shall be no more.

CHAPTER 9

Job's Second Reply

1 Then Job answered and said:

2 I know well that it is so;
but how can a man be justified before God?
3 Should one wish to contend with him,
he could not answer him once in a thousand times.
4 God is wise in heart and mighty in strength;
who has withstood him and remained unscathed?

5 He removes the mountains before they know it;
he overturns them in his anger.
6* He shakes the earth out of its place, and the pillars beneath it tremble.
7 He commands the sun, and it rises not;
he seals up the stars.

8* He alone stretches out the heavens and treads upon the crests of the sea.
9 He made the Bear and Orion,
the Pleiades and the constellations of the south;
10 He does great things past finding out,
marvelous things beyond reckoning.

11 Should he come near me, I see him not;
should he pass by, I am not aware of him;
12 Should he seize me forcibly, who can say him nay?
Who can say to him, "What are you doing?"

13† He is God and he does not relent;
the helpers of Rahab bow beneath him.
14 How much less shall I give him any answer,
or choose out arguments against him!
15* Even though I were right, I could not answer him,
but should rather beg for what was due me.

16 If I appealed to him and he answered my call,
I could not believe that he would hearken to my words;
17 With a tempest he might overwhelm me,
and multiply my wounds without cause;
18 He need not suffer me to draw breath,
but might fill me with bitter griefs.

8, 11ff: As marsh plants need water, so man needs God. These verses are taken by some as a quotation from the teaching of the forefathers; cf v 10.
9, 13: Rehab: cf 26, 12. See note on Ps 89, 11.

19 If it be a question of strength, he is mighty;
and if of judgment, who will call him to account?
20* Though I were right, my own mouth might condemn me;
were I innocent, he might put me in the wrong.
21 Though I am innocent, I myself cannot know it;
I despise my life.

22* It is all one! therefore I say:
Both the innocent and the wicked he destroys.
23 When the scourge slays suddenly, he laughs at the despair of the innocent.
24 The earth is given into the hands of the wicked;
he covers the faces of its judges.
If it is not he, who then is it?

25* My days are swifter than a runner,
they flee away; they see no happiness;
26 They shoot by like skiffs of reed,
like an eagle swooping upon its prey.
27 If I say: I will forget my complaining,
I will lay aside my sadness and be of good cheer,
28† Then I am in dread of all my pains;
I know that you will not hold me innocent.

29 If I must be accounted guilty,
why then should I strive in vain?
30 If I should wash myself with snow
and cleanse my hands with lye, 31 Yet you would plunge me in the ditch,
so that my garments would abhor me.

32 For he is not a man like myself, that I should answer him,
that we should come together in judgment.
33 Would that there were an arbiter between us, who could lay his hand upon us both 34 and withdraw his rod from me.
Would that his terrors did not frighten me;
35 that I might speak without being afraid of him.
Since this is not the case with me,

CHAPTER 10

10, 1*† I loathe my life.
I will give myself up to complaint;
I will speak from the bitterness of my soul.
2 I will say to God: Do not put me in the wrong!
Let me know why you oppose me.

3 Is it a pleasure for you to oppress,
to spurn the work of your hands,
and smile on the plan of the wicked?
4 Have you eyes of flesh?
Do you see as man sees?
5* Are your days as the days of a mortal,
and are your years as a man's lifetime,
6 That you seek for guilt in me
and search after my sins,
7* Even though you know that I am not wicked,
and that none can deliver me out of your hand?

8 Your hands have formed me and fashioned me;
will you then turn and destroy me?
9* Oh, remember that you fashioned me from clay!
Will you then bring me down to dust again?
10 Did you not pour me out as milk,
and thicken me like cheese?
11 With skin and flesh you clothed me,
with bones and sinews knit me together.
12 Grace and favor you granted me,
and your providence has preserved my spirit.

13 Yet these things you have hidden in your heart;
I know that they are your purpose:
14 If I should sin, you would keep a watch against me,
and from my guilt you would not absolve me.
15 If I should be wicked, alas for me!
if righteous, I dare not hold up my head,
filled with ignominy and sodden with affliction!
16 Should it lift up, you hunt me like a lion:
repeatedly you show your wondrous power against me, 17 You renew your attack upon me
and multiply your harassment of me;

in waves your troops come against me.

18* Why then did you bring me forth from the womb?
I should have died and no eye have seen me.
19 I should be as though I had never lived;
I should have been taken from the womb to the grave.
20 Are not the days of my life few?
Let me alone, that I may recover a little 21* Before I go whence I shall not return, to the land of darkness and of gloom, 22 The black, disordered land
where darkness is the only light.

CHAPTER 11

Zophar's First Speech

1 And Zophar the Naamathite spoke out and said:

2 Should not the man of many words be answered,
or must the garrulous man necessarily be right?
3 Shall your babblings keep men silent,
and shall you deride and no one give rebuke?
4 Shall you say: "My teaching is pure, and I am clean in your sight"?
5 But oh, that God would speak, and open his lips against you,
6 And tell you that the secrets of wisdom
are twice as effective:
So you might learn that God will make you answer for your guilt.

7* Can you penetrate the designs of God?
Dare you vie with the perfection of the Almighty?
8 It is higher than the heavens; what can you do?
It is deeper than the nether world; what can you know?
9 It is longer than the earth in measure,
and broader than the sea.
10 If he seize and imprison or call to judgment, who then can say him nay?
11 For he knows the worthlessness of men and sees iniquity; will he then ignore it?
12* Will empty man then gain understanding,
and the wild jackass be made docile?
13 If you set your heart aright
and stretch out your hands toward him, 14 If you remove all iniquity from your conduct,
and let not injustice dwell in your tent, 15 Surely then you may lift up your face in innocence;
you may stand firm and unafraid.
16 For then you shall forget your misery,
or recall it like waters that have ebbed away.
17 Then your life shall be brighter than the noonday;
its gloom shall become as the morning,
18* And you shall be secure, because there is hope;
you shall look round you and lie down in safety, 19 and you shall take your rest with none to disturb.

Many shall entreat your favor,
20 but the wicked, looking on, shall be consumed with envy.
Escape shall be cut off from them,
they shall wait to expire.

CHAPTER 12

Job's Third Reply

1 Then Job replied and said:

2 No doubt you are the intelligent folk, and with you wisdom shall die!
3* But I have intelligence as well as you;
for who does not know such things as these?
4*† I have become the sport of my neighbors:
"The one whom God answers when he calls upon him,
the just, the perfect man," is a laughingstock;
5 The undisturbed esteem my downfall a disgrace
such as awaits unsteady feet;
6 Yet the tents of robbers are prosperous,
and those who provoke God are secure.

7 But now ask the beasts to teach you, and the birds of the air to tell you;

18: 3. 3.11. 21: 7, 9f; 16, 22. 11, 7: Rom 11, 33. 12: 39, 5-8.
18: Lv 26, 6; Ps 4, 9. 12, 3: 13, 2; 15, 9. 4: 21, 3; 30, 1.

† 12, 4f: The Hebrew is somewhat obscure, but the general sense is that the wicked mock at the pious when the latter appear to be abandoned by God; cf Ps 22, 7ff; Mt 27, 39-43.

8 Or the reptiles on earth to instruct you,
and the fish of the sea to inform you.
9 Which of all these does not know that the hand of God has done this?
10* In his hand is the soul of every living thing,
and the life breath of all mankind.
11* Does not the ear judge words
as the mouth tastes food?
12* So with old age is wisdom,
and with length of days understanding.

13 With him are wisdom and might;
his are counsel and understanding.
14* If he breaks a thing down, there is no rebuilding;
if he imprisons a man, there is no release.
15* He holds back the waters and there is drought;
he sends them forth and they overwhelm the land.
18† He loosens the bonds imposed by kings and leaves but a waistcloth to bind the king's own loins.
21 He breaks down the barriers of the streams
19 and lets their never-failing waters flow away.

16 With him are strength and prudence;
the misled and the misleaders are his.
17 He sends counselors away barefoot,
and of judges he makes fools.
20 He silences the trusted adviser,
and takes discretion from the aged.
22 The recesses of the darkness he discloses,
and brings the gloom forth to the light.
23 He makes nations great and he destroys them;
he spreads peoples abroad and he abandons them.
24 He takes understanding from the leaders of the land,
25 till they grope in the darkness without light;
he makes them stagger like drunken men.

CHAPTER 13

1 Lo, all this my eye has seen;
my ear has heard and perceived it.
2* What you know, I also know;
I fall not short of you.
3* But I would speak with the Almighty;
I wish to reason with God.
4 You are glossing over falsehoods
and offering vain remedies, every one of you!
5 Oh, that you would be altogether silent!
This for you would be wisdom.

6 Hear now the rebuke I shall utter and listen to the reproof from my lips.
7 Is it for God that you speak falsehood?
Is it for him that you utter deceit?
8 Is it for him that you show partiality?
Do you play advocate on behalf of God?
9 Will it be well when he shall search you out?
Would you impose on him as one does on men?

10 He will openly rebuke you
if even in secret you show partiality.
11 Surely will his majesty affright you and the dread of him fall upon you.

12 Your reminders are ashy maxims,
your fabrications are mounds of clay.
13 Be silent, let me alone! that I may speak and give vent to my feelings.
14† I will carry my flesh between my teeth,
and take my life in my hand.
15* Slay me though he might, I will wait for him;
I will defend my conduct before him.
16 And this shall be my salvation,
that no impious man can come into his presence.

17 Pay careful heed to my speech,
and give my statement a hearing.
18* Behold, I have prepared my case,
I know that I am in the right.

14: Rv 3, 7.
15: Gn 7, 11-24.
13, 2: 12, 3; 15, 9.
3: 23, 4.
15: 27, 5.
18: 33, 9.

12, 18: Waistcloth . . . loins: he reduces kings to the condition of slaves, who wear only a cloth wrapped about the waist.

13, 14: The second half of the verse is a common biblical expression for risking one's life; cf Jgs 12, 3; 1 Sm 19, 5; 28, 21; Ps 119, 109; the first half of the verse must have a similar meaning. Job is so confident of his innocence that he is willing to risk his life by going to judgment with God.

19 If anyone can make a case against me,
then I shall be silent and die.
20† These things only do not use against me,
then from your presence I need not hide:
21 Withdraw your hand far from me,
and let not the terror of you frighten me.
22 Then call me, and I will respond;
or let me speak first, and answer me.

23 What are my faults and my sins?
My misdeeds and my sins make known to me!
24* Why do you hide your face
and consider me your enemy?
25 Will you harass a wind-driven leaf,
or pursue a withered straw?
26 For you draw up bitter indictments against me,
and punish in me the faults of my youth.
27 You put my feet in the stocks;
you watch all my paths
and trace out all my footsteps.

CHAPTER 14

1* Man born of woman
is short-lived and full of trouble,
2* Like a flower that springs up and fades,
swift as a shadow that does not abide.
3 Upon such a one will you cast your eyes
so as to bring him into judgment before you, 13:28† Though he wears out like a leather bottle,
like a garment that the moth has consumed?

14:4* Can a man be found who is clean of defilement?
There is none, 5 however short his days.
You know the number of his months;
you have fixed the limit which he cannot pass.
6 Look away from him and let him be,
while, like a hireling, he completes his day.

7 For a tree there is hope,
if it be cut down, that it will sprout again
and that its tender shoots will not cease.
8 Even though its root grow old in the earth,
and its stump die in the dust,
9 Yet at the first whiff of water it may flourish again
and put forth branches like a young plant.

10* But when a man dies, all vigor leaves him;
when man expires, where then is he?
11 As when the waters of a lake fail,
or a stream grows dry and parches,
12* So men lie down and rise not again.
Till the heavens are no more, they shall not awake,
nor be roused out of their sleep.

13 Oh, that you would hide me in the nether world
and keep me sheltered till your wrath is past;
would fix a time for me, and then remember me!
14* When a man has died, were he to live again,
all the days of my drudgery I would wait,
until my relief should come.
15 You would call, and I would answer you;
you would esteem the work of your hands.
16* Surely then you would count my steps,
and not keep watch for sin in me.
17† My misdeeds would be sealed up in a pouch,
and you would cover over my guilt.

18 But as a mountain falls at last and its rock is moved from its place, 19 As waters wear away the stones
and floods wash away the soil of the land,
so you destroy the hope of man.
20 You prevail once for all against him and he passes on;
with changed appearance you send him away.
21 If his sons are honored, he is not aware of it;
if they are in disgrace, he does not know about them.
22 Only his own flesh pains him, and his soul grieves for him.

13, 20: From here to the end of chapter 14, Job pleads his case, addressing God rather than his three friends.
14, 28: This verse has been transposed from ch 13.
14, 17: Sealed up in a pouch: hidden away and forgotten.

III: SECOND CYCLE OF SPEECHES

CHAPTER 15

Second Speech of Eliphaz

1 Then Eliphaz the Temanite spoke and said:

2 Should a wise man answer with airy opinions,
or puff himself up with wind?
3 Should he argue in speech which does not avail,
and in words which are to no profit?
4 You in fact do away with piety,
and you lessen devotion toward God,
5 Because your wickedness instructs your mouth,
and you choose to speak like the crafty.
6* Your own mouth condemns you, not I;
your own lips refute you.

7 Are you indeed the first-born of mankind,
or were you brought forth before the hills?
8* Are you privy to the counsels of God,
and do you restrict wisdom to yourself?
9* What do you know that we do not know?
What intelligence have you which we have not?
10 There are gray-haired old men among us more advanced in years than your father.
11 Are the consolations of God not enough for you,
and speech that deals gently with you?

12 Why do your notions carry you away,
and why do your eyes blink, 13 So that you turn your anger against God
and let such words escape your mouth!
14* What is a man that he should be blameless,
one born of woman that he should be righteous?
15* If in his holy ones God places no confidence,
and if the heavens are not clean in his sight, 16 How much less so is the abominable, the corrupt:
man, who drinks in iniquity like water!

17 I will show you, if you listen to me;
what I have seen I will tell—18 What wise men relate and have not contradicted since the days of their fathers, 19 To whom alone the land was given,
when no foreigner moved among them.

20 The wicked man is in torment all his days,
and limited years are in store for the tyrant;
21 The sound of terrors is in his ears;
when all is prosperous, the spoiler comes upon him.
22 He despairs of escaping the darkness,
and looks ever for the sword;
23 A wanderer, food for the vultures,
he knows that his destruction is imminent.
24 By day the darkness fills him with dread;
distress and anguish overpower him.

25 Because he has stretched out his hand against God
and bade defiance to the Almighty, 26 One shall rush sternly upon him with the stout bosses of his shield,
like a king prepared for the charge.
27 Because he has blinded himself with his crassness,
padding his loins with fat, 28 He shall dwell in ruinous cities,
in houses that are deserted,
That are crumbling into clay
29 with no shadow to lengthen over the ground.

He shall not be rich, and his possessions shall not endure;
31 for vain shall be his bartering.
30 A flame shall wither him up in his early growth,
and with the wind his blossoms shall disappear.
32 His stalk shall wither before its time,
and his branches shall be green no more.
33 He shall be like a vine that sheds its grapes unripened,
and like an olive tree casting off its bloom.
34* For the breed of the impious shall be sterile,
and fire shall consume the tents of extortioners.

15, 6: 9, 20.
8: 11, 7; Wis 9, 13; Jer 23, 18; Rom 11, 34; 1 Cor 2, 11.16.
9: 12, 3; 13, 2.
14ff: 25, 4ff.
14: 14, 4.
15: 4, 18f.
34: Wis 3, 11.18.

35*† They conceive malice and bring forth emptiness;
they give birth to failure.

CHAPTER 16

Job's Fourth Reply

1 Then Job answered and said:

2* I have heard this sort of thing many times.
Wearisome comforters are you
all!
3 Is there no end to windy words?
Or what sickness have you that you speak on?
4 I also could talk as you do,
were you in my place.
I could declaim over you,
or wag my head at you;
5 I could strengthen you with talk,
or shake my head with silent lips.
6 If I speak, this pain I have will not be checked;
if I leave off, it will not depart from
me.

7 But now that I am exhausted and stunned,
all my company has closed in on
me.
8 As a witness there rises up my traducer, speaking openly
against me;
9 I am the prey his wrath assails,
he gnashes his teeth against me.
My enemies lord it over me;
10 their mouths are agape to bite me.
They smite me on the cheek insult-
ingly;
they are all enlisted against me.
11 God has given me over to the impi-
ous;
into the clutches of the wicked he has cast me.
12 I was in peace, but he dislodged me;
he seized me by the neck and dashed me to pieces.

He has set me up for a target;
13 his arrows strike me from all directions,
He pierces my sides without mercy,
he pours out my gall upon the ground.
14 He pierces me with thrust upon thrust;
he attacks me like a warrior.
15 I have fastened sackcloth over my skin,
and have laid my brow in the dust.
16 My face is inflamed with weeping and there is darkness over my eyes,
17 Although my hands are free from violence,
and my prayer is sincere.

18† O earth, cover not my blood,
nor let my outcry come to rest!
19† Even now, behold, my witness is in heaven,
and my spokesman is on high.
20 My friends it is who wrong me;
before God my eyes drop tears, 21 That he may do justice for a mortal
in his presence and decide between a man and his neighbor.
22 For my years are numbered now,
and I am on a journey from which I shall not return.
17, 1 My spirit is broken, my lamp of life extinguished;
my burial is at hand.
2 I am indeed mocked,
and, as their provocation mounts,
my eyes grow dim.

3† Grant me one to offer you a pledge
on my behalf:
who is there that will give surety
for me?
4 You darken their minds to knowledge;
therefore they do not understand.
5 My lot is described as evil,
6* and I am made a byword of the people;
their object lesson I have become.
7 My eye has grown blind with anguish,
and all my frame is shrunken to a shadow.
8 Upright men are astonished at this,
and the innocent aroused against
the wicked.
9 Yet the righteous shall hold to his
way,
and he who has clean hands increase in strength.

10 But turn now, and come on again;
for I shall not find a wise man
among you!
11 My days are passed away, my plans are at an end,
the cherished purposes of my heart.
12 Such men change the night into day;

35: Ps 7, 15; Is 59, 4.
16, 2: 12, 3.
17, 6: 30, 9.

15, 35: They give birth to failure: their wicked plans yield nothing but futile results. Cf Ps 7, 15; Is 59.4.

16, 18: As the blood of those who were unjustly slain cries to heaven for vengeance (Gn 4, 10; Ez 24, 6-9), so Job's sufferings demand redress.

16, 19: Witness: refers either to God or, more probably, to Job's prayer.

17, 3: Addressed to God; v 10 to Job's friends.

where there is darkness they talk of approaching light.
13 If I look for the nether world as my dwelling,
if I spread my couch in the dark-
ness,
14 If I must call corruption "my father,"
and the maggot "my mother" and
"my sister,"
15 Where then is my hope,
and my prosperity, who shall see?
16 Will they descend with me into the
nether world?
Shall we go down together into the dust?

CHAPTER 18

Bildad's Second Speech

1 Then Bildad the Shuhite replied and
said:

2 When will you put an end to words?
Reflect, and then we can have discussion.
3 Why are we accounted like the beasts,
their equals in your sight?
4† You who tear yourself in your anger, shall the earth be neglected on your account [or the rock be moved out of its place]?

5 Truly, the light of the wicked is extinguished;
no flame brightens his hearth.
6* The light is darkened in his tent;
in spite of him, his lamp goes out.
7 His vigorous steps are hemmed in,
and his own counsel casts him
down.

8 For he rushes headlong into a net,
and he wanders into a pitfall.
9 A trap seizes him by the heel,
and a snare lays hold of him.
10 A noose for him is hid on the ground,
and the toils for him on the way.

11* On every side terrors affright him;
they harry him at each step.
12 Disaster is ready at his side, 13† the first-born of death consumes his limbs.
14† Fiery destruction lodges in his tent,
and marches him off to the king of terrors.

He is plucked from the security of his tent;
15 over his abode brimstone is scattered.
16 Below, his roots dry up,
and above, his branches wither.
17* His memory perishes from the land,
and he has no name on the earth.
18 He is driven from light into dark-
ness,
and banished out of the world.
19 He has neither son nor grandson
among his people,
nor any survivor where once he dwelt.
20 They who come after shall be appalled at his fate;
they who went before are struck with horror.

21 So is it then with the dwelling of the impious man,
and such is the place of him who knows not God!

CHAPTER 19

Job's Fifth Reply

1 Then Job answered and said:

2 How long will you vex my soul,
grind me down with words?
3 These ten times you have reviled
me,
have assailed me without shame!
4 Be it indeed that I am at fault and that my fault remains with
me,
5 Even so, if you would vaunt yourselves against me
and cast up to me any reproach, 6 Know then that God has dealt unfairly with me,
and compassed me round with his net.

7* If I cry out "Injustice!" I am not heard.
I cry for help, but there is no redress.
8 He has barred my way and I cannot
pass;
he has veiled my path in darkness;
9 He has stripped me of my glory,
and taken the diadem from my brow.
10 He breaks me down on every side,
and I am gone;
my hope he has uprooted like a tree.
11* His wrath he has kindled against
me;
he counts me among his enemies

18, 6: 21, 17; Prv 13, 9; 24, 20.
11: 15, 20-24; 27, 20.
17: Ps 34, 17; Prv 2, 22; 10, 7.
19, 7: 30, 20.
11: 13, 24; 33, 10.

† 18, 4: Job himself is portrayed as having the heedless rag of wild beasts, despite which God does not forsake the usual course of Divine Providence.
18, 13: First-born of death: that is, disease, plague.
18, 14: The king of terrors: of the nether world, death; however, the Hebrew is obscure.

12 His troops advance as one man;
they build up their road to attack me,
and they encamp around my tent.

13* My brethren have withdrawn from me,
and my friends are wholly estranged.
14 My kinsfolk and companions neglect me,
and my guests have forgotten me.
15 Even my handmaids treat me as a stranger;
I am an alien in their sight.
16 I call my servant, but he gives no answer, though in my speech I plead with him.
17* My breath is abhorred by my wife;
I am loathsome to the men of my family.

18 The young children, too, despise me;
when I appear, they speak against me.
19* All my intimate friends hold me in horror;
those whom I loved have turned against me!
20† My bones cleave to my skin,
and I have escaped with my flesh between my teeth.
21 Pity me, pity me, O you my friends,
for the hand of God has struck me!
22† Why do you hound me as though you were divine,
and insatiably prey upon me?

23*† Oh, would that my words were written down!
Would that they were inscribed in a record:
24 That with an iron chisel and with lead
they were cut in the rock forever!
25*† But as for me, I know that my Vindicator lives,
and that he will at last stand forth upon the dust;
27 Whom I myself shall see:
my own eyes, not another's, shall behold him, 26 And from my flesh I shall see God;
my inmost being is consumed with longing.

28 But you who say, "How shall we persecute him, seeing that the root of the matter is found in him?"
29 Be afraid of the sword for yourselves,
for these crimes deserve the sword;
that you may know that there is a judgment.

CHAPTER 20

Zophar's Second Speech

1 Then Zophar the Naamathite spoke and said:

3 A rebuke which puts me to shame I hear,
2 and because of this I am disturbed.
So now my thoughts provide me with an answer,
and from my understanding a spirit gives me a reply.

4 Do you not know this from olden time, since man was placed upon the earth,
5* That the triumph of the wicked is short and the joy of the impious but for a moment?
6 Though his pride mount up to the heavens
and his head reach to the clouds, 7* Yet he perishes forever like the fuel of his fire, and the onlookers say, "Where is he?"
8 Like a dream he takes flight and is not found again;
he fades away like a vision of the night.
9 The eye which saw him does so no more;
nor shall his dwelling again behold him.

11 Though his frame is full of youthful vigor,
this shall lie with him in the dust.
12 Though wickedness is sweet in his mouth,
and he hides it under his tongue, 13 Though he retains it and will not let it go
but keeps it still within his mouth,

* 13: 6, 13. 17: 2, 9. 19: Sir 6, 8. 23: 31, 35. 25ff: Phil 3, 20; Ti 2, 13. 20, 5: 21, 13; Ps 37, 35f, 10.36. 7: 14, 10; Ps 37, 10.36.

† 19, 20: With my flesh between my teeth: meaning perhaps that Job has been reduced to such an extremity that he scarcely has thin lips over his teeth. But the current Hebrew text of this line is probably corrupt.

19, 22: Divine: possessing God's attributes of judgment and authority to punish.

19, 23f: Job regards what he is about to say as so important that he wishes it recorded in a permanent manner.

19, 25.27: The meaning of this passage is obscure because the original text has been poorly preserved and the ancient versions do not agree among themselves. It is certain that Job expresses his belief in a future vindication by God (called here in the Hebrew "Goel"), but the time and manner of this vindication are undefined. In the Vulgate Job is made to indicate a belief in physical resurrection after death, but the Hebrew and the other ancient versions are less specific.

14 Yet in his stomach the food shall turn;
it shall be venom of asps inside him.
15 The riches he swallowed he shall disgorge;
God shall compel his belly to disown them.
16 The poison of asps he shall drink in;
the viper's fangs shall slay him.

17† He shall see no streams of oil,
no torrents of honey or milk.
18 Restoring his gains, he shall not enjoy them;
though his wealth increases, he shall not rejoice.
19 Because he has oppressed the poor,
and stolen a patrimony he had not built up,
21 Therefore his prosperity shall not endure,
10* and his hands shall yield up his riches.
20* Though he has known no quiet in his greed,
his treasures shall not save him.
22* When he abounds to overflowing, he shall be brought into straits, and nought shall be left of his goods.

23 God shall send against him the fury of his wrath
and rain down his missiles of war upon him.
24 Should he escape the iron weapon,
the bow of bronze shall pierce him through;
25 The dart shall come out of his back;
terrors shall fall upon him.
26* Complete darkness is in store for him;
the fire which shall consume him needs not to be fanned.
27 The heavens shall reveal his guilt,
and the earth shall rise up against him.
28 The flood shall sweep away his house with the waters that run off in the day of God's anger.

29* This is the portion of a wicked man,
and the heritage appointed him by God.

CHAPTER 21

Job's Sixth Reply

1 Then Job said in reply:

2* At least listen to my words,
and let that be the consolation you offer.
3 Bear with me while I speak;
and after I have spoken, you can mock!
4 Is my complaint toward man?
And why should I not be impatient?
5 Look at me and be astonished,
put your hands over your mouths.
6 When I think of it, I am dismayed,
and horror takes hold on my flesh.

7* Why do the wicked survive,
grow old, become mighty in power?
8 Their progeny is secure in their sight;
they see before them their kinsfolk and their offspring.
9 Their homes are safe and without fear,
nor is the scourge of God upon them.
10 Their bulls gender without fail;
their cows calve and do not miscarry.
11 These folk have infants numerous as lambs,
and their children dance.
12 They sing to the timbrel and harp,
and make merry to the sound of the flute.

13* They live out their days in prosperity,
and tranquilly go down to the nether world.
14* Yet they say to God, "Depart from us,
for we have no wish to learn your ways!
15* What is the Almighty that we should serve him?
And what gain shall we have if we pray to him?"
16* If their happiness is not in their own hands and if the counsel of the wicked is repulsive to God, 17 How often is the lamp of the wicked put out?
How often does destruction come upon them,
the portion he allots in his anger?

18 Let them be like straw before the wind,
and like chaff which the storm snatches away!
19 May God not store up the man's misery for his children;

10: 27, 14.
20: Eccl 5, 9; Lk 12, 20.
22: 15, 20-35.
26: Dt 32, 22.
29: 27, 13.
21, 2: 13, 17.

16: 22, 18.

† 20, 17: Oil: olive oil, one of the main agricultural products of Palestine, a land proverbially rich in honey and milk.

let him requite the man himself
so that he feels it, 20 Let his own eyes see the calamity, and the wrath of the Almighty let him drink!
21 For what interest has he in his family after him,
when the number of his months
is finished?
23 One dies in his full vigor,
wholly at ease and content;
24 His figure is full and nourished,
and his bones are rich in marrow.
25 Another dies in bitterness of soul,
having never tasted happiness.
26 Alike they lie down in the dust,
and worms cover them both.

27 Behold, I know your thoughts, and the arguments you rehearse
against me.
28 For you say, "Where is the house of the magnate,
and where the dwelling place of
the wicked?"
29 Have you not asked the wayfarers and do you not recognize their monuments?

30 Nay, the evil man is spared calamity
when it comes;
32 and on the day he is carried to the grave
31 Who will charge him with his conduct to his face,
and for what he has done who will repay him?
33 Sweet to him are the clods of the valley,
and over him the funeral mound
keeps watch,
While all the line of mankind follows
him,
and the countless others who have gone before.
34 How then can you offer me vain
comfort,
while in your answers perfidy remains?

IV: THIRD CYCLE OF SPEECHES

CHAPTER 22

Eliphaz's Third Speech

1 Then Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said:

2* Can a man be profitable to God?
Though to himself a wise man be profitable!
21:22† Can anyone teach God knowledge, seeing that he judges those on
high?
22:3* Is it of advantage to the Almighty
if you are just?
Or is it a gain to him if you make your ways perfect?
4 Is it because of your piety that he reproves you—
that he enters with you into judgment?
5 Is not your wickedness manifold?
Are not your iniquities endless?
6*† You have unjustly kept your kinsmen's goods in pawn,
left them stripped naked of their clothing.
7 To the thirsty you have given no
water to drink,
and from the hungry you have withheld bread;
8 As if the land belonged to the man of might,
and only the privileged were to
dwell in it.
9* You have sent widows away empty-handed,
and the resources of orphans you have destroyed.
10* Therefore snares are round about
you,
and a sudden terror causes you
dismay,
11 Or darkness, in which you cannot see;
a deluge of waters covers you.

12* Does not God, in the heights of the heavens,
behold the stars, high though they are?
13* Yet you say, "What does God know?
Can he judge through the thick
darkness?
14 Clouds hide him so that he cannot
see;
he walks upon the vault of the
heavens!"

15 Do you indeed keep to the ancient
way
trodden by worthless men, 16 Who were snatched away before their time;
whose foundations a flood swept
away?
17 These men said to God, "Depart from us!"
and, "What can the Almighty do
to us?"
18*† [Yet he had filled their houses with good things!

22, 2: 9, 2.
3: 35, 7.
6: 24, 3; Dt 24, 6.17; Ez 18, 12.16.
9: Dt 24, 17; 27, 19.
10: 18, 8ff.
12: 11, 8.
13f: Pss 10, 11; 73, 11; 94, 7; Is 29, 15; Ez 8, 12; 9, 9.
18: 21, 16.

21, 22: Those on high: the angels.
22, 6ff: This criticism of Job by Eliphaz is altogether untrue, but it is made to dramatize the latter's argument that God always acts justly when he causes someone to suffer. V 8 is misplaced.
22, 18: A gloss, taken partly from 21, 16.

But far be from me the mind of the impious!]
19* The just look on and are gladdened,
and the innocent deride them:
20 "Truly these have been destroyed where they stood,
and such as were left, fire has consumed!"

21 Come to terms with him to be at peace.
In this shall good come to you:
22 Receive instruction from his mouth,
and lay up his words in your heart.
23 If you return to the Almighty, you will be restored;
if you put iniquity far from your tent, 24† And treat raw gold like dust,
and the fine gold of Ophir as pebbles from the brook, 25 Then the Almighty himself shall be your gold and your sparkling silver.

26 For then you shall delight in the Almighty
and you shall lift up your face toward God.
27* You shall entreat him and he will hear you,
and your vows you shall fulfill.
28 When you make a decision, it shall succeed for you,
and upon your ways the light shall shine.
29* For he brings down the pride of the haughty,
but the man of humble mien he saves.
30* God delivers him who is innocent;
you shall be delivered through cleanness of hands.

CHAPTER 23

Job's Seventh Reply

1 Again Job answered and said:

2 Though I know my complaint is bitter,
his hand is heavy upon me in my groanings.
3 Oh, that today I might find him,
that I might come to his judgment seat!
4 I would set out my cause before him,
and fill my mouth with arguments;
5 I would learn the words with which he would answer,
and understand what he would reply to me.
6 Even should he contend against me with his great power,
yet, would that he himself might heed me!
7 There the upright man might reason with him,
and I should once and for all preserve my rights.

8 But if I go to the east, he is not there;
or to the west, I cannot perceive him;
9 Where the north enfolds him, I behold him not;
by the south he is veiled, and I see him not.
10* Yet he knows my way;
if he proved me, I should come forth as gold.
11 My foot has always walked in his steps;
his way I have kept and have not turned aside.
12 From the commands of his lips I have not departed;
the words of his mouth I have treasured in my heart.
13* But he had decided, and who can say him nay?
What he desires, that he does.
14 For he will carry out what is appointed for me;
and many such things may yet be in his mind.

15 Therefore am I dismayed before him;
when I take thought, I fear him.
16 Indeed God has made my courage fail;
the Almighty has put me in dismay.
17 Yes, would that I had vanished in darkness,
and that thick gloom were before me to conceal me.

CHAPTER 24

1† Why are not times set by the Almighty,
and why do his friends not see his days?
2 The wicked remove landmarks;
they steal away herds and pasture them.
3 The asses of orphans they drive away;

19: Ps 107, 42.
27: 33, 26.
29: Ps 138, 6; Prv 29, 23; Mt 23, 12; Lk 1, 52; Jas 4, 10; 1 Pt 5, 5.
30: 17, 9; Ps 18, 21.25.
23, 10: Ps 66, 10; Prv 17, 3; Mal 3, 3; 1 Pt 1, 7.
13: 42, 2; Pss 115, 3; 135, 6.

22, 24: Ophir: cf note to Ps 45, 10.
24, 1: Why does not God favor his friends by the speedy punishment of his enemies? (The text and order of verses in this chapter are not certain; note the omission of v 9 which duplicates words of vv 2-4.)

they take the widow's ox for a pledge.

4 They force the needy off the road;
all the poor of the land are driven into hiding.
5 Like wild asses in the desert, these go forth to their task of seeking food;
The steppe provides food for the young among them;
6 they harvest at night in the untilled land.
7 They pass the night naked, without clothing,
for they have no covering against the cold;
8 They are drenched with the rain of the mountains,
and for want of shelter they cling to the rock.
11 Between the rows they press out the oil;
they glean in the the vineyard of the wicked.
They tread the wine presses, yet suffer thirst,
10 and famished are those who carry the sheaves.

12 From the dust the dying groan,
and the souls of the wounded cry out [yet God does not treat it as unseemly].

13* There are those who are rebels against the light;
they know not its ways;
they abide not in its paths.
14 When there is no light the murderer rises,
to kill the poor and needy.
15* The eye of the adulterer watches for the twilight;
he says, "No eye will see me."
In the night the thief roams about,
and he puts a mask over his face;
16 in the dark he breaks into houses.
By day they shut themselves in;
none of them know the light,
17† for daylight they regard as darkness.

* * *

18 Their portion in the land is accursed,
20 and wickedness is splintered like wood.
19, 21 . . . . . .
22 To him who rises without assurance of his life
23 he gives safety and support.
He sustains the mighty by his strength,
and his eyes are on their ways.
24 They are exalted for a while, and then they are gone;
they are laid low and, like all others, are gathered up;
like ears of grain they shrivel.

* * *

25 If this be not so, who will confute me,
and reduce my argument to nought?

CHAPTER 25

Bildad's Third Speech

1 Then Bildad the Shuhite answered and said:

2 Dominion and awesomeness are his who brings about harmony in his heavens.
3† Is there any numbering of his troops?
Yet to which of them does not his light extend?
4* How can a man be just in God's sight,
or how can any woman's child be innocent?
5 Behold, even the moon is not bright and the stars are not clear in his sight.
6* How much less man, who is but a maggot,
the son of man, who is only a worm?

CHAPTER 26

Job's Reply

1† Then Job spoke again and said:

2 What help you give to the powerless,
what strength to the feeble arm!
3 How you counsel, as though he had no wisdom;
how profuse is the advice you offer!

24, 13: Jn 3, 19f.
15: Prv 7, 9f.
25, 4: 4, 17ff; 9, 2.
6: 4, 19; 15, 16.

24, 17: The asterisks which follow this verse mark off a passage (vv 18-24) which cannot be ascribed to Job with certainty. Vv 17-24 are in general poorly preserved; and much of vv 18-21 has not been translated because these verses are obscure. St. Jerome renders them as follows: (18) "He is light upon the face of the water, cursed be his portion on the earth; let him not walk by the way of vineyards. (19) Let him pass from the snow waters to excessive heat, and his sin even to hell. (20) Let mercy forget him; may worms be his sweetness; let him be remembered no more, but be broken in pieces as an unfruitful tree. (21) For he has fed the barren that bears not, and to the widow he has done no good."

25, 3: His troops: the heavenly hosts, the stars or the angels. His light: compare the wording in 24, 13: those who are rebels against the light.

26, 1-14: Probably to be read as Job's reply to Bildad's short speech. Some, however, would make it the reply to Zophar (27, 13-21); it would thus lead up to the poem of ch 28.

4* With whose help have you uttered those words,
and whose is the breath that comes forth from you?
5*† The shades beneath writhe in terror, the waters, and their inhabitants.
6*† Naked before him is the nether world,
and Abaddon has no covering.

7† He stretches out the North over empty space,
and suspends the earth over nothing at all;
8 He binds up the waters in his clouds, yet the cloud is not rent by their weight;
9 He holds back the appearance of the full moon
by spreading his clouds before it.

10*† He has marked out a circle on the surface of the deep as the boundary of light and darkness.
11* The pillars of the heavens tremble and are stunned at his thunderous rebuke;
12† By his power he stirs up the sea,
and by his might he crushes Rahab;
13*† With his angry breath he scatters the water.
22† and he hurls the lightning against them relentlessly;
His hand pierces the fugitive dragon as from his hand it strives to flee.

14 Lo, these are but the outlines of his ways,
and how faint is the word we hear!

CHAPTER 27

Job's Reply

11 I will teach you the manner of God's dealings, and the way of the Almighty I will not conceal.
2*† As God lives, who withholds my deserts,
the Almighty, who has made bitter my soul,
3 So long as I still have life in me
and the breath of God is in my nostrils,
4 My lips shall not speak falsehood, nor my tongue utter deceit!
5* Far be it from me to account you right;
till I die I will not renounce my innocence.
6 My justice I maintain and I will not relinquish it;
my heart does not reproach me for any of my days.
7 Let my enemy be as the wicked
and my adversary as the unjust!
8 For what can the impious man expect when he is cut off,
when God requires his life?
9 Will God then attend to his cry when calamity comes upon him?
10 Will he then delight in the Almighty and call upon him constantly?
12 Behold, you yourselves have all seen it;
why then do you spend yourselves in idle words!

* * *

13*† This is the portion of a wicked man from God,
the inheritance an oppressor receives from the Almighty:
14 Though his children be many, the sword is their destiny.
His offspring shall not be filled with bread.
15 His survivors, when they die, shall have no burial,
and their widows shall not be mourned.

16 Though he heap up silver like dust and store away mounds of clothing, 17 What he has stored the just man shall wear,
and the innocent shall divide the silver.
18 He builds his house as of cobwebs, or like a booth put up by the vinekeeper.

19* He lies down a rich man, one last time;
he opens his eyes and nothing remains to him.

26, 4: Gn 2, 7.
26, 5: Prv 9, 18.
26, 6: Ps 139, 7-12.
26, 10: 38, 8-11; Prv 8, 29.
26, 11: 9, 6.
26, 13: Is 27, 1.
27, 2: 34, 5.
27, 5: 2, 3.9; 13, 15, 33, 9.
27, 13: 20, 4-29.
27, 19: Pss 49, 18; 76, 6.

26, 5: Shades: the dead in Sheol, the nether world; cf Pss 6, 6; 88, 11.

26, 6: Nether world: cf note to Ps 6, 6. Abaddon: Hebrew for "(place of) destruction," a synonym for nether world; cf 28, 22; Rv 9, 11.

26, 7: The North: used here as a synonym for the firmament, the heavens; cf Is 14, 13.

26, 10: Circle: the horizon of the ocean which serves as the boundary for the activity of light and darkness.

26, 12: Rahab: cf 9, 13; see note on Ps 89, 11.

26, 13: The fugitive dragon: the same term occurs in Is 27, 1 in apposition to Leviathan; see note on 3, 8. This is actually Jb 27, 22.

27, 2-12: This is probably to be read as Job's reply to Zophar's speech of 27, 13-21. In the current Hebrew text the heading for this chapter (27, 1, here omitted) is identical with 29, 1; we should expect rather such a heading as in 21, 1; 23, 1; 26, 1.

27, 13-21: This is probably to be read as Zophar's third speech. The asterisks are present to indicate it is not likely that the sacred writer intended these words to be ascribed to Job.

20 Terrors rush upon him by day;
at night the tempest carries him off.
21† The storm wind seizes him and he disappears;
it sweeps him out of his place.

* * *

CHAPTER 28

The Inaccessibility of Wisdom

1† There is indeed a mine for silver,
and a place for gold which men refine.
2 Iron is taken from the earth,
and copper is melted out of stone.
4 . . . . . .
5 The earth, though out of it comes forth bread,
is in fiery upheaval underneath.
6 Its stones are the source of sapphires,
and there is gold in its dust.

12* But whence can wisdom be obtained,
and where is the place of understanding?
13 Man knows nothing to equal it,
nor is it to be had in the land of the living.
15* Solid gold cannot purchase it,
nor can its price be paid with silver.
16† It cannot be bought with gold of Ophir,
with the precious onyx or the sapphire.
17 Gold or crystal cannot equal it,
nor can golden vessels reach its worth.
18 Neither coral nor jasper should be thought of;
it surpasses pearls and 19 Arabian topaz.
20 Whence, then, comes wisdom,
and where is the place of understanding?
21 It is hid from the eyes of any beast;
from the birds of the air it is concealed.
7 The path to it no bird of prey knows,
nor has the hawk's eye seen that path.
8 The proud beasts have not trodden it,
nor has the lion gone that way.
14 The abyss declares, "It is not in me";
and the sea says, "I have it not."
22† Abaddon and Death say,
"Only by rumor have we heard of it."

23* God knows the way to it;
it is he who is familiar with its place.
24 For he beholds the ends of the earth and sees all that is under the heavens.
3 He has set a boundary for the darkness;
to the farthest confines he penetrates.
9 He sets his hand to the flinty rock,
and overturns the mountains at their foundations.
10 He splits channels in the rocks;
his eyes behold all that is precious.
11 He probes the wellsprings of the streams,
and brings hidden things to light.

25 He has weighed out the wind,
and fixed the scope of the waters;
26* When he made rules for the rain
and a path for the thunderbolts, 27 Then he saw wisdom and appraised it, gave it its setting, knew it through and through.
28* And to man he said:
Behold, the fear of the LORD is wisdom;
and avoiding evil is understanding.

V: JOB'S FINAL SUMMARY OF HIS CAUSE

CHAPTER 29

1 Job took up his theme anew and said;

2* Oh, that I were as in the months past!
as in the days when God watched over me,
3 While he kept his lamp shining above my head,
and by his light I walked through darkness;
4 As I was in my flourishing days,
when God sheltered my tent;

28, 12: Eccl 7, 24f; Bar 3, 14f.29-33.
15: Prv 3, 14; 8, 10f. 19; 16, 16; Wis 7, 7-11.

27, 21: The Hebrew has two more verses: v 22 (read above with 26, 13); and v 23, which is a variant form of v 21.

28, 1-28: Note the changed order of verses; v 4 is uncertain.

This chapter contains a beautifully vivid description of that Wisdom which is beyond the attainment of creatures; known only to God, it is reflected in the order and majesty of his creation. Man, however, can, in a way, participate in this Wisdom by fearing the LORD and avoiding evil. Scholars are not agreed regarding the authorship of this poem, though it is altogether worthy of the author of the Book of Job. Used here as a counterpoise to ch 3 at the beginning of the dialogue, it may have been first conceived as an independent poem.

28, 16: Ophir: cf note to Ps 45, 10.

28, 22: Abaddon: cf note to 26, 6.

5 When the Almighty was yet with me,
and my children were round about me;
6† When my footsteps were bathed in milk,
and the rock flowed with streams of oil;
7 When I went forth to the gate of the city and set up my seat in the square—8 Then the young men saw me and withdrew,
while the elders rose up and stood;
9* The chief men refrained from speaking and covered their mouths with their hands;
10 The voice of the princes was silenced,
and their tongues stuck to the roofs of their mouths.

21 For me they listened and waited;
they were silent for my counsel.
22 Once I spoke, they said no more,
but received my pronouncement drop by drop.
23 They waited for me as for the rain;
they drank in my words like the spring rains.
24 When I smiled on them they were reassured;
25 mourners took comfort from my cheerful glance.
I chose out their way and presided;
I took a king's place in the armed forces.
11 Whoever heard of me blessed me;
those who saw me commended me.
12 For I rescued the poor who cried out for help,
the orphans, and the unassisted;
13 The blessing of those in extremity came upon me,
and the heart of the widow I made joyful.
14 I wore my honesty like a garment;
justice was my robe and my turban.

15 I was eyes to the blind,
and feet to the lame was I; 16 I was a father to the needy;
the rights of the stranger I studied, 17 And I broke the jaws of the wicked man;
from his teeth I forced the prey.
18† Then I said: "In my own nest I shall grow old;
I shall multiply years like the phoenix.
19 My root is spread out to the waters;
the dew rests by night on my branches.
20 My glory is fresh within me,
and my bow is renewed in my hand!"

CHAPTER 30

1* But now they hold me in derision
who are younger in years than I;
Whose fathers I should have disdained
to rank with the dogs of my flock.
2 Such strength as they had, to me meant nought;
they were utterly destitute.

3* In want and hunger was their lot,
they who fled to the parched wastelands:
4† They plucked saltwort and shrubs;
the roots of the broom plant were their food.
5 They were banished from among men,
with an outcry like that against a thief—

6 To dwell on the slopes of the wadies,
in caves of sand and stone;
7 Among the bushes they raised their raucous cry;
under the nettles they huddled together.
8 Irresponsible, nameless men,
they were driven out of the land.

9* Yet now they sing of me in mockery;
I am become a byword among them.
10 They abhor me, they stand aloof from me,
they do not hesitate to spit in my face!
11 Indeed, they have loosed their bonds; they lord it over me,
and have thrown off restraint in my presence.

12 To subvert my paths they rise up;
they build their approaches for my ruin.
13 To destroy me, they attack with none to stay them;
14 as through a wide breach they advance.
Amid the uproar they come on in waves;
15 over me rolls the terror.

29, 6: Hyperbole to express abundance; see note on 24, 17.

29, 18: Phoenix: a legendary bird which, after several centuries of life, consumed itself in fire, then rose from its ashes in youthful freshness. This meaning, originally intended by the Greek, later came to mean "palm tree." Some render the Hebrew as "sand."

30, 4: Saltwort: found in salt marshes and very sour to the taste; eaten by the extremely poor as a cooked vegetable. Broom plant: the juniper or brushwood; cf Ps 120, 4; a figure of bitterness and poverty, because of its bitter-tasting roots which are practically inedible.

My dignity is borne off on the wind,
and my welfare vanishes like a cloud.
16† One with great power lays hold of my clothing;
by the collar of my tunic he seizes me:
19 He has cast me into the mire;
I am leveled with the dust and ashes.

20* I cry to you, but you do not answer me;
you stand off and look at me,
21 Then you turn upon me without mercy
and with your strong hand you buffet me.
22 You raise me up and drive me before the wind;
I am tossed about by the tempest.

23* Indeed I know you will turn me back in death
to the destined place of everyone alive.
24 Yet should not a hand be held out to help a wretched man in his calamity?
25* Or have I not wept for the hardships of others;
was not my soul grieved for the destitute?
26 Yet when I looked for good, then evil came;
when I expected light, then came darkness.

16 My soul ebbs away from me;
27 days of affliction have overtaken me.
17 My frame takes no rest by night;
my inward parts seethe and will not be stilled.
28 I go about in gloom, without the sun;
I rise up in public to voice my grief.

29 I have become the brother of jackals,
companion to the ostrich.
30 My blackened skin falls away from me;
the heat scorches my very frame.
31 My harp is turned to mourning,
and my reed pipe to sounds of weeping.

CHAPTER 31

2 But what is man's lot from God above,
his inheritance from the Almighty on high?
3 Is it not calamity for the unrighteous,
and woe for evildoers?
4* Does he not see my ways,
and number all my steps?
6* Let God weigh me in the scales of justice;
thus will he know my innocence!

5† If I have walked in falsehood
and my foot has hastened to deceit;
7 If my steps have turned out of the way,
and my heart has followed my eyes,
or any stain clings to my hands,
8 Then may I sow, but another eat of it,
or may my planting be rooted up!

38 If my land has cried out against me till its very furrows complained; 39 If I have eaten its produce without payment and grieved the hearts of its tenants;
40 Then let the thistles grow instead of wheat and noxious weeds instead of barley!

1† If I have made an agreement with my eyes
and entertained any thoughts against a maiden; 9 If my heart has been enticed toward a woman,
and I have lain in wait at my neighbor's door;
10 Then may my wife grind for another,
and may others cohabit with her!
11* For that would be heinous,
a crime to be condemned;
12* A fire that should burn down to the abyss
till it consumed all my possessions to the roots.

13 Had I refused justice to my manservant or to my maid, when they had a claim against me, 14 What then should I do when God rose up;
what could I answer when he demanded an account?
15 Did not he who made me in the womb make him?

31, 1.9: Note the gradation: avoidance of sinful glances and thoughts against a maiden; desire for another's wife.

Did not the same One fashion us before our birth?

16* If I have denied anything to the poor,
or allowed the eyes of the widow
to languish
17 While I ate my portion alone, with no share in it for the fatherless,
18 Though like a father God has reared
me from my youth,
guiding me even from my mother's womb—

19 If I have seen a wanderer without
clothing,
or a poor man without covering, 20 Whose limbs have not blessed me when warmed with the fleece of my sheep;
21† If I have raised my hand against the innocent
because I saw that I had supporters at the gate—

22 Then may my arm fall from the shoulder,
my forearm be broken at the elbow!
23 For the dread of God will be upon
me,
and his majesty will overpower
me.
24 Had I put my trust in gold or called fine gold my security; 25 Or had I rejoiced that my wealth was great,
or that my hand had acquired abundance—
26*† Had I looked upon the sun as it shone,
or the moon in the splendor of its progress,
27 And had my heart been secretly enticed
to waft them a kiss with my hand;
28* This too would be a crime for condemnation,
for I should have denied God
above.

29* Had I rejoiced at the destruction of my enemy
or exulted when evil fell upon him, 30 Even though I had not suffered my mouth to sin
by uttering a curse against his life—

31† Had not the men of my tent exclaimed,
"Who has not been fed with his meat!"
32 Because no stranger lodged in the street,
but I opened my door to wayfar-
ers—

33† Had I, out of human weakness, hidden my sins
and buried my guilt in my bosom 34 Because I feared the noisy multitude and the scorn of the tribes terrified
me—
then I should have remained silent, and not come out of doors!

35* Oh, that I had one to hear my case,
and that my accuser would write out his indictment!
36† Surely, I should wear it on my shoulder
or put it on me like a diadem;
37† Of all my steps I should give him
an account;
like a prince I should present myself before him.

This is my final plea; let the Almighty answer me!

The words of Job are ended.

VI: ELIHU'S SPEECHES

CHAPTER 32

1* Then the three men ceased to answer Job, because he was righteous in his own eyes. 2*† But the anger of Elihu, son of Barachel the Buzite, of the family of Ram, was kindled. He was angry with Job for considering himself rather than God to be in the right. 3* He was angry also with the three friends because they had not found a good answer and had not condemned Job. 4 But since these men were older than he, Elihu bided his time before addressing Job. 5 When, however, Elihu saw that there was no reply in the mouths of the three men, his wrath was inflamed. 6 So Elihu, son 31, 26ff: Job never sinned by worshiping the sun or the moon; waft them a kiss: an act of idolatrous worship.

31, 31: The members of his household will testify to his hospitality.

31, 33f: Job's present protest is made, not in spite of hidden sins which he had been unwilling to disclose, but out of genuine innocence.

31, 36: On my shoulder: i.e., boldly, proudly.

31, 37: Like a prince: not as a frightened criminal. Final plea: literally, "tau," the last letter of the Hebrew alphabet; in the current Hebrew text this line is in v 35, while the following one ends v 40.

32, 2: Elihu means "My God is he." This speaker was from Buz, which, according to Jer 25, 23, was near Tema and Dedan. A young man, he impetuously and impatiently upbraids Job for his boldness toward God, and the three friends for not successfully answering Job. He undertakes to defend God's absolute justice and to explain more clearly why there is suffering. While fundamentally his position is the same as that of the three friends, he does locate more definitely, though not perfectly, the place of suffering in the divine plan.

of Barachel the Buzite, spoke out and said:

I am young and you are very old;
therefore I held back and was afraid to declare to you my knowledge.
7* Days should speak, I thought,
and many years teach wisdom!
8* But it is a spirit in man,
the breath of the Almighty, that gives him understanding.
9 It is not those of many days who are wise,
nor the aged who understand the right.
10 Therefore I say, hearken to me;
let me too set forth my knowledge!

11 Behold, I have waited for your discourses,
and have given ear to your arguments.
12 Yes, I followed you attentively
as you searched out what to say;
And behold, there is none who has convicted Job,
not one of you who could refute his statements.
13† Yet do not say, "We have met wisdom.
God may vanquish him but not man!"
14 For had he addressed his words to me,
I should not then have answered him as you have done.

15 They are dismayed, they make no more reply;
words fail them.
16 Must I wait? Now that they speak no more,
and have ceased to make reply,
17 I too will speak my part;
I also will show my knowledge!

18 For I am full of matters to utter;
the spirit within me compels me.
19 Like a new wineskin with wine under pressure,
my bosom is ready to burst.
20 Let me speak and obtain relief;
let me open my lips, and make reply.
21 I would not be partial to anyone,
nor give flattering titles to any.
22 For I know nought of flattery;
if I did, my Maker would soon take me away.

CHAPTER 33

1 Therefore, O Job, hear my discourse, and hearken to all my words.
2 Behold, now I open my mouth;
my tongue and my voice form words.
3 I will state directly what is in my mind,
my lips shall utter knowledge sincerely;
4* For the spirit of God has made me,
the breath of the Almighty keeps me alive.

5 If you are able, refute me;
draw up your arguments and stand forth.
6* Behold I, like yourself, have been taken from the same clay by God.
7 Therefore no fear of me should dismay you,
nor should my presence weigh heavily upon you.

8 But you have said in my hearing,
as I listened to the sound of your words:
9* "I am clean and without transgression;
I am innocent; there is no guilt in me.
10* Yet he invents pretexts against me
and reckons me as his enemy.
11* He puts my feet in the stocks;
he watches all my ways!"

12 In this you are not just, let me tell you;
for God is greater than man.
13* Why, then, do you make complaint against him that he gives no account of his doings?
14 For God does speak, perhaps once, or even twice, though one perceive it not.

15 In a dream, in a vision of the night, [when deep sleep falls upon men]
as they slumber in their beds, 16 It is then he opens the ears of men and as a warning to them, terrifies them;
17 By turning man from evil
and keeping pride away from him, 18 He withholds his soul from the pit
and his life from passing to the grave.

19 Or a man is chastened on his bed by pain
and unceasing suffering within his frame,

11: 13, 27; 31, 4.

† 32, 13: Met wisdom: in Job's arguments.

20* So that to his appetite food becomes repulsive,
and his senses reject the choicest nourishment.
21 His flesh is wasted so that it cannot be seen,
and his bones, once invisible, appear;
22 His soul draws near to the pit,
his life to the place of the dead.

23† If then there be for him an angel,
one out of a thousand, a mediator,
To show him what is right for him
and bring the man back to justice, 24 He will take pity on him and say,
"Deliver him from going down to the pit;
I have found him a ransom."

25 Then his flesh shall become soft as a boy's;
he shall be again as in the days of his youth.
26* He shall pray and God will favor him;
he shall see God's face with rejoicing.
27 He shall sing before men and say,
"I sinned and did wrong,
yet he has not punished me accordingly.
28 He delivered my soul from passing to the pit,
and I behold the light of life."

29 Lo, all these things God does,
twice, or thrice, for a man,
30 Bringing back his soul from the pit to the light, in the land of the living.
31 Be attentive, O Job; listen to me!
Be silent and I will speak.
32 If you have aught to say, then answer me.
Speak out! I should like to see you justified.
33 If not, then do you listen to me;
be silent while I teach you wisdom.

CHAPTER 34

1 Then Elihu continued and said:

2 Hear, O wise men, my discourse,
and you that have knowledge, hear me!
3* For the ear tests words,
as the taste does food.
4 Let us discern for ourselves what is right;
let us learn between us what is good.
5* For Job has said, "I am innocent, but God has taken what is my due.
6* Notwithstanding my right I am set at nought;
in my wound the arrow rankles, sinless though I am."

7 What man is like Job?
He drinks in blasphemies like water,
8 Keeps company with evildoers
and goes along with wicked men, 9* When he says, "It profits a man nought that he is pleasing to God."
10* Therefore, men of understanding, hearken to me:
far be it from God to do wickedness;
far from the Almighty to do wrong!
11* Rather, he requites men for their conduct,
and brings home to a man his way of life.
12* Surely, God cannot act wickedly,
the Almighty cannot violate justice.
13* Who gave him government over the earth,
or who else set all the land in its place?
14 If he were to take back his spirit to himself,
withdraw to himself his breath, 15* All flesh would perish together,
and man would return to the dust.

16 Now, do you, O Job, hear this!
Hearken to the words I speak!
17 Can an enemy of justice indeed be in control,
or will you condemn the supreme Just One, 18 Who says to a king, "You are worthless!"
and to nobles, "You are wicked!"
19* Who neither favors the person of princes,
nor respects the rich more than the poor?
For they are all the work of his hands;
20* in a moment they die, even at midnight.
He brings on nobles, and takes them away,

removing the powerful without lifting a hand;
21 For his eyes are upon the ways of
man,
and he beholds all his steps.
22 There is no darkness so dense that evildoers can hide in it.
25 Therefore he discerns their works;
he turns at night and crushes
them.
23 For he forewarns no man of his time to come before God in judgment.
24* Without a trial he breaks the mighty,
and sets others in their stead, 27 Because they turned away from him
and heeded none of his ways, 28 But caused the cries of the poor to reach him,
so that he heard the plea of the
afflicted.
29† If he remains tranquil, who then can condemn?
If he hides his face, who then can behold him?
30 . . . . . .
31 When anyone says to God,
"I was misguided; I will offend no
more.
32 Teach me wherein I have sinned;
if I have done wrong, I will do so
no more,"
33 Would you then say that God must punish,
since you reject what he is doing?
It is you who must choose, not I;
speak, therefore, what you know.
34 Men of understanding will say to
me,
every wise man who hears my views:
35* "Job speaks without intelligence,
and his words are without sense."
36 Let Job be tried to the limit, since his answers are those of the impious;
37 For he is adding rebellion to his sin
by brushing off our arguments and addressing many words to God.

CHAPTER 35

1 Then Elihu proceeded and said:
2* Do you think it right to say,
"I am just rather than God?"
3* To say, "What does it profit me;
what advantage have I more than if I had sinned?"
4† I have words for a reply to you and your three companions as well.
5 Look up to the skies and behold;
regard the heavens high above
you.
6 If you sin, what injury do you do to
God?
Even if your offenses are many,
how do you hurt him?
7* If you are righteous, what do you give him,
or what does he receive from your hand?
8 Your wickedness can affect only a man like yourself;
and your justice only a fellow human being.
9 In great oppression men cry out;
they call for help because of the power of the mighty, 10 Saying, "Where is God, my Maker,
who has given visions in the night, 11 Taught us rather than the beasts of
the earth,
and made us wise rather than the birds of the heavens?"
12 Though thus they cry out, he answers not against the pride of the wicked.
13 But it is idle to say God does not hear or that the Almighty does not take notice.
14† Even though you say that you see him not,
the case is before him; with trembling should you wait upon him.
15 But now that you have done otherwise, God's anger punishes, nor does he show concern that a man will die.
16* Yet Job to no purpose opens his mouth,
and without knowledge multiplies
words.

CHAPTER 36

1 Elihu proceeded further and said:
2 Wait yet a little and I will instruct
you,
for there are still words to be said
on God's behalf.
3 I will bring my knowledge from afar, and to my Maker I will accord the
right.
4 For indeed, my theme cannot fail
me:
the one perfect in knowledge I set before you.

24: Ps 2, 9.
35: 35, 16; 38, 2; 42, 3.
35, 2: 32, 2.
3: 34, 9.
7: 22, 3; 41, 2; Lk 17, 10; Rom 11, 35.
16: 34, 35; 38, 2; 42, 3.

34, 26.29f: The extant Hebrew text of these verses contains several added phrases which either represent duplication or are very obscure.

35, 4: A reply to you: Elihu refers to Job's statement that the innocent suffer as much as the wicked, and especially to Eliphaz's words in 22, 2f.

35, 14f: The text here is uncertain. It seems to indicate that Job should have realized God's indifference is only apparent, and that, because he has not done so, God will punish him.

5† Behold, God rejects the obstinate in heart;
he preserves not the life of the wicked.
6* He withholds not the just man's rights,
but grants vindication to the oppressed,
7* And with kings upon thrones
he sets them, exalted forever.

8 Or if they are bound with fetters
and held fast by bonds of affliction, 9 Then he makes known to them what they have done
and their sins of boastful pride.
10 He opens their ears to correction
and exhorts them to turn back from evil.
11 If they obey and serve him,
they spend their days in prosperity,
their years in happiness.
12† But if they obey not, they perish;
they die for lack of knowledge.

13 The impious in heart lay up anger for themselves;
they cry not for help when he enchains them;
14† Therefore they expire in youth,
and perish among the reprobate.
15 But he saves the unfortunate through their affliction,
and instructs them through distress.
16—20† . . . . . .
21 Take heed, turn not to evil;
for you have preferred carousal to affliction.

22 Behold, God is sublime in his power.
What teacher is there like him?
23* Who prescribes for him his conduct,
or who can say, "You have done wrong"?
24 Remember, you should extol his work,
which men have praised in song.
25 All men contemplate it;
man beholds it from afar.

26 Lo, God is great beyond our knowledge;
the number of his years is past searching out.
27 He holds in check the waterdrops
that filter in rain through his mists, 28 Till the skies run with them and the showers rain down on mankind.
31† For by these he nourishes the nations,
and gives them food in abundance.
28,30† Lo! he spreads the clouds in layers
as the carpeting of his tent.
32 In his hands he holds the lightning,
and he commands it to strike the mark.
33 His thunder speaks for him
and incites the fury of the storm.

CHAPTER 37

1 At this my heart trembles
and leaps out of its place,
2† To hear his angry voice
as it rumbles forth from his mouth!
3 Everywhere under the heavens he sends it,
with his lightning, to the ends of the earth.
4 Again his voice roars—
the majestic sound of his thunder.

5 He does great things beyond our knowing;
wonders past our searching out.
6 For he says to the snow, "Fall to the earth";
likewise to his heavy, drenching rain.
7 He shuts up all mankind indoors;
8 the wild beasts take to cover
and remain quietly in their dens.
9† Out of its chamber comes forth the tempest;
from the north winds, the cold.
10* With his breath God brings the frost,
and the broad waters become congealed.
11 With hail, also, the clouds are laden,
as they scatter their flashes of light.

36, 6: Ps 72, 4.12f.
7: Ps 113, 7f.
23: 34, 10; Is 40, 13.
37, 10: Ps 148, 17.

36, 5-21: Perhaps this section should be read between vv 6 and 7 of chapter 34.
36, 12: Knowledge: practical wisdom in serving God, which they lack because they refused it when warned (cf v 10).
36, 14: Reprobate: cf Dt 23, 18f.
36, 16-20: The Hebrew text here is in disorder. The Vulgate has: "(16) Therefore he will give you most ample salvation from the narrow mouth which has no foundations beneath it; but the repose of your table will be filled with fatness. (17) Your case has been judged as that of the wicked; case and judgment you will receive. (18) Let no wrath, then, overcome you, that you oppress anyone; nor let numerous gifts mislead you. (19) Lay down your greatness without tribulation, and all who are mighty in strength. (20) Do not draw out the night, that people may go in place of them."
36, 31: These: refers to the showers of v 28, if the verse order indicated above is correct.
36, 29f: Because of the uncertainty of the text, no translation of these verses has received unanimous approval from exegetes.
37, 2: Voice: the thunder.
37, 9: Chamber: where it was popularly believed storms were kept enclosed.

12† He it is who changes their rounds,
according to his plans,
in their task upon the surface of the earth, 13 whether for punishment or mercy, as he commands.

14 Hearken to this, O Job!
Stand and consider the wondrous works of God!
15 Do you know how God lays his commands upon them,
and makes the light shine forth from his clouds?
16 Do you know how the clouds are banked,
the wondrous work of him who is perfect in knowledge?
17 You, whom the streams of water fail when a calm from the south comes over the land, 18† Do you spread out with him the firmament of the skies,
hard as a brazen mirror?
19 Teach us then what we shall say to him;
we cannot, for the darkness, make our plea.
20† Will he be told about it when I speak,
or when a man says he is being destroyed?
21† Nay, rather, it is as the light which men see not while it is obscured among the clouds,
till the wind comes by and sweeps the clouds away.

22† From the North the splendor comes, surrounding God's awesome majesty!
23 The Almighty! we cannot discover him,
pre-eminent in power and judgment;
his great justice owes no one an accounting.
24 Therefore men revere him,
though none can see him, however wise their hearts.

VII: THE LORD'S SPEECH

CHAPTER 38

1† Then the LORD addressed Job out of the storm and said:

2 Who is this that obscures divine plans with words of ignorance?
3*† Gird up your loins now, like a man;
I will question you, and you tell me the answers!
4 Where were you when I founded the earth?
Tell me, if you have understanding.
5 Who determined its size; do you know?
Who stretched out the measuring line for it?
6 Into what were its pedestals sunk,
and who laid the cornerstone,
7† While the morning stars sang in chorus
and all the sons of God shouted for joy?

8* And who shut within doors the sea,
when it burst forth from the womb;
9 When I made the clouds its garment
and thick darkness its swaddling bands?
10 When I set limits for it and fastened the bar of its door, 11 And said: Thus far shall you come but no farther,
and here shall your proud waves be stilled!

12 Have you ever in your lifetime commanded the morning and shown the dawn its place 13 For taking hold of the ends of the earth,
till the wicked are shaken from its surface?
14 The earth is changed as is clay by the seal,
and dyed as though it were a garment;
15 But from the wicked the light is withheld,
and the arm of pride is shattered.

16 Have you entered into the sources of the sea,
or walked about in the depths of the abyss?

38, 3: 40, 2. 8: Gn 1, 9.

37, 12: Their rounds: of rain (36, 27), of clouds (36, 29f), of lightning and thunder (36, 32f), of snow (37, 6), of winds (37, 9).

37, 18: The firmament . . . mirror: the ancients thought of the sky as a ceiling above which were the "upper waters" (cf Gn 1, 6f; 7, 11); when this ceiling became as hard as metal, the usual rain failed to fall on the earth (cf Lv 26, 19; Dt 28, 23).

37, 20: Will an angel bring this to God's attention?

37, 21: Even though God seems not to know our circumstances, he does know them, just as surely as the sun shines, unseen by man, behind the clouds.

37, 22: Now the storms of doubt and ignorance disappear, and from the North, used here as a symbol for God's mysterious abode, comes the splendor of the manifestation of God's majestic ways.

38, 1: Now the LORD enters the debate and addresses two discourses (38—39 and 40—41) to Job, in which he speaks of his wisdom and power, which are altogether beyond the capacity of Job, who therefore should never dare to demand a reason for the divine actions. Out of the storm: frequently the background of the appearances of the LORD in the Old Testament; cf Pss 18; 50; Na 1, 3; Hb 3.

38, 3: Gird up your loins: prepare for combat—figuratively, be ready to defend yourself in debate.

38, 7: Sons of God: angels; cf 1, 6.

17 Have the gates of death been shown to you,
or have you seen the gates of darkness?
18 Have you comprehended the breadth of the earth?
Tell me, if you know all:
19 Which is the way to the dwelling place of light,
and where is the abode of darkness, 20 That you may take them to their boundaries and set them on their homeward paths?
21† You know, because you were born before them,
and the number of your years is great!

22† Have you entered the storehouse of the snow,
and seen the treasury of the hail 23 Which I have reserved for times of stress,
for the days of war and of battle?
24 Which way to the parting of the winds,
whence the east wind spreads over the earth?

25 Who has laid out a channel for the downpour
and for the thunderstorm a path 26 To bring rain to no man's land,
the unpeopled wilderness;
27 To enrich the waste and desolate ground
till the desert blooms with verdure?

28 Has the rain a father;
or who has begotten the drops of dew?
29 Out of whose womb comes the ice,
and who gives the hoarfrost its birth in the skies, 30 When the waters lie covered as though with stone that holds captive the surface of the deep?

31† Have you fitted a curb to the Pleiades,
or loosened the bonds of Orion?
32 Can you bring forth the Mazzaroth in their season,
or guide the Bear with its train?
33 Do you know the ordinances of the heavens;
can you put into effect their plan on the earth?

34† Can you raise your voice among the clouds,
or veil yourself in the waters of the storm?
35† Can you send forth the lightnings on their way,
or will they say to you, "Here we are"?
37 Who counts the clouds in his wisdom?
Or who tilts the water jars of heaven 38 So that the dust of earth is fused into a mass and its clods made solid?

39 Do you hunt the prey for the lioness
or appease the hunger of her cubs, 40 While they crouch in their dens,
or lie in wait in the thicket?
36† Who puts wisdom in the heart,
and gives the cock its understanding?
41* Who provides nourishment for the ravens
when their young ones cry out to God,
and they rove abroad without food?

CHAPTER 39

1 Do you know about the birth of the mountain goats,
watch for the birth pangs of the hinds,
2 Number the months that they must fulfill,
and fix the time of their bringing forth?
3 They crouch down and bear their young;
they deliver their progeny in the desert.
4 When their offspring thrive and grow,
they leave and do not return.

5 Who has given the wild ass his freedom,
and who has loosed him from bonds?
6 I have made the wilderness his home
and the salt flats his dwelling.
7 He scoffs at the uproar of the city,
and hears no shouts of a driver.
8 He ranges the mountains for pasture,
and seeks out every patch of green.

41: Ps 147, 9.

†

38, 21: Divine irony.

38, 22f: Hail . . . of war: thus God used a hailstorm to rout Joshua's foes in the battle of Gibeon; cf Jos 10, 11, Sir 46, 5.

38, 31f: Pleiades . . . Orion . . . Bear: cf 9, 9. Mazzaroth: It is uncertain what astronomical group is meant by this Hebrew word; perhaps a southern constellation (cf 9, 9).

38, 34: Veil yourself . . . storm: wrap yourself in a cloud, as God comes in a theophany; cf Ps 18, 12.

38, 35: Here we are: at your service.

38, 36: Understanding: the reflection of divine Wisdom discernible in the created animal instincts of the cock.

9 Will the wild ox consent to serve you,
and to pass the nights by your manger?
10 Will a rope bind him in the furrow,
and will he harrow the valleys after you?
11 Will you trust him for his great strength and leave to him the fruits of your toil?
12 Can you rely on him to thresh out your grain and gather in the yield of your threshing floor?

13† The wings of the ostrich beat idly;
her plumage is lacking in pinions.
14† When she leaves her eggs on the ground and deposits them in the sand, 15 Unmindful that a foot may crush them,
that the wild beasts may trample them, 16 She cruelly disowns her young and ruthlessly makes nought of her brood; 17 For God has withheld wisdom from her
and has given her no share in understanding.
18 Yet in her swiftness of foot
she makes sport of the horse and his rider.

19† Do you give the horse his strength,
and endow his neck with splendor?
20 Do you make the steed to quiver
while his thunderous snorting spreads terror?
21 He jubilantly paws the plain and rushes in his might against the weapons.
22 He laughs at fear and cannot be deterred;
he turns not back from the sword.
23 Around him rattles the quiver,
flashes the spear and the javelin.
24 Frenzied and trembling he devours the ground;
he holds not back at the sound of the trumpet,
25 but at each blast he cries, "Aha!"
Even from afar he scents the battle,
the roar of the chiefs and the shouting.

26 Is it by your discernment that the hawk soars,
that he spreads his wings toward the south?
27 Does the eagle fly up at your command to build his nest aloft?
28 On the cliff he dwells and spends the night,
on the spur of the cliff or the fortress.
29 From thence he watches for his prey;
his eyes behold it afar off.
30* His young ones greedily drink blood;
where the slain are, there is he.

CHAPTER 40

1 The LORD then said to Job:

2* Will we have arguing with the Almighty by the critic?
Let him who would correct God give answer!

3 Then Job answered the LORD and said:

4 Behold, I am of little account; what can I answer you?
I put my hand over my mouth.
5 Though I have spoken once, I will not do so again;
though twice, I will do so no more.

6 Then the LORD addressed Job out of the storm and said:

7 Gird up your loins now, like a man.
I will question you, and you tell me the answers!
8 Would you refuse to acknowledge my right?
Would you condemn me that you may be justified?

9 Have you an arm like that of God,
or can you thunder with a voice like his?
10 Adorn yourself with grandeur and majesty,
and array yourself with glory and splendor.
11 Let loose the fury of your wrath;
12 tear down the wicked and shatter them.
Bring down the haughty with a glance;
13 bury them in the dust together;
in the hidden world imprison them.
14 Then will I too acknowledge that your own right hand can save you.

15† See, besides you I made Behemoth, that feeds on grass like an ox.
16 Behold the strength in his loins,

* 39, 30: Mt 24, 28; Lk 17, 37. 40, 2: 38, 3.

† 39, 13: The wings of the ostrich cannot raise her from the ground, but they help her to run swiftly.
39, 14ff: It was popularly believed that, because the ostrich laid her eggs on the sand, she was thereby cruelly abandoning them; cf Lam 4, 3.
39, 19-25: The famous description of a war horse.
40, 15: Behemoth: the hippopotamus.

and his vigor in the sinews of his belly.
17 He carries his tail like a cedar;
the sinews of his thighs are like cables.
18 His bones are like tubes of bronze;
his frame is like iron rods.
19 He came at the beginning of God's ways,
and was made the taskmaster of his fellows;
20 For the produce of the mountains is brought to him,
and of all wild animals he makes sport.
21 Under the lotus trees he lies,
in coverts of the reedy swamp.
22 The lotus trees cover him with their shade;
all about him are the poplars on the bank.
23 If the river grows violent, he is not disturbed;
he is tranquil though the torrent surges about his mouth.
24† Who can capture him by his eyes,
or pierce his nose with a trap?

25† Can you lead about Leviathan with a hook, or curb his tongue with a bit?
26 Can you put a rope into his nose,
or pierce through his cheek with a gaff?
27 Will he then plead with you, time after time,
or address you with tender words?
28 Will he make an agreement with you that you may have him as a slave forever?
29 Can you play with him, as with a bird?
Can you put him in leash for your maidens?
30† Will the traders bargain for him?
Will the merchants divide him up?

31 Can you fill his hide with barbs,
or his head with fish spears?
32 Once you but lay a hand upon him,
no need to recall any other conflict!

CHAPTER 41

2† Is he not relentless when aroused;
who then dares stand before him?
1 Whoever might vainly hope to do so need only see him to be overthrown.
3 Who has assailed him and come off safe—
Who under all the heavens?

4 I need hardly mention his limbs,
his strength, and the fitness of his armor.
5 Who can strip off his outer garment,
or penetrate his double corselet?
6 Who can force open the doors of his mouth,
close to his terrible teeth?
7 Rows of scales are on his back,
tightly sealed together;
8 They are fitted each so close to the next
that no space intervenes;
9 So joined one to another
that they hold fast and cannot be parted.

10 When he sneezes, light flashes forth;
his eyes are like those of the dawn.
11 Out of his mouth go forth firebrands;
sparks of fire leap forth.
12 From his nostrils issues steam,
as from a seething pot or bowl.
13 His breath sets coals afire;
a flame pours from his mouth.
14 Strength abides in his neck,
and terror leaps before him.

15.16 His heart is hard as stone;
his flesh, as the lower millstone.
17† When he rises up, the mighty are afraid;
the waves of the sea fall back.
18 Should the sword reach him, it will not avail;
nor will the spear, nor the dart, nor the javelin.
19 He regards iron as straw,
and bronze as rotten wood.
20 The arrow will not put him to flight;
slingstones used against him are but straws.
21 Clubs he esteems as splinters;
he laughs at the crash of the spear.

22 His belly is sharp as pottery fragments;
he spreads like a threshing sledge upon the mire.
23 He makes the depths boil like a pot;
the sea he churns like perfume in a kettle.
24 Behind him he leaves a shining path;
you would think the deep had the hoary head of age.
25 Upon the earth there is not his like,
intrepid he was made.
26 All, however lofty, fear him;
he is king over all proud beasts.

40, 24: Eyes . . . nose: the only exposed parts of the submerged beast.

40, 25: Leviathan here is the crocodile. But cf 3, 8.

40, 30: Merchants: literally, "Canaanites," whose reputation for trading was so widespread that their name came to be used for merchants; cf Prv 31, 24. The meaning of this verse is that the crocodile is too powerful a creature to be sold like a common fish.

41, 2: Before him: some read, "before me," i.e., God; also in v 3.

41, 17: The text here is uncertain.

CHAPTER 42

1 Then Job answered the LORD and said:

2† I know that you can do all things,
and that no purpose of yours can be hindered.
3* I have dealt with great things that I do not understand;
things too wonderful for me, which I cannot know.
5 I had heard of you by word of mouth,
but now my eye has seen you.
6 Therefore I disown what I have said,
and repent in dust and ashes.

VIII: EPILOGUE

Job's Restoration. 7† And it came to pass after the LORD had spoken these words to Job, that the LORD said to Eliphaz the Temanite, "I am angry with you and with your two friends; for you have not spoken rightly concerning me, as has my servant Job. 8† Now, therefore, take seven bullocks and seven rams, and go to my servant Job, and offer up a holocaust for yourselves; and let my servant Job pray for you; for his prayer I will accept, not to punish you severely. For you have not spoken rightly concerning me, as has my servant Job." 9 Then Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite, went and did as the LORD had commanded them. And the LORD accepted the intercession of Job.

10 Also, the LORD restored the prosperity of Job, after he had prayed for his friends; the LORD even gave to Job twice as much as he had before. 11† Then all his brethren and his sisters came to him, and all his former acquaintances, and they dined with him in his house. They condoled with him and comforted him for all the evil which the LORD had brought upon him; and each one gave him a piece of money and a gold ring.

12* Thus the LORD blessed the latter days of Job more than his earlier ones. For he had fourteen thousand sheep, six thousand camels, a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand she-asses. 13 And he had seven sons and three daughters, 14† of whom he called the first Jemimah, the second Keziah, and the third Kerenhappuch. 15† In all the land no other women were as beautiful as the daughters of Job; and their father gave them an inheritance among their brethren. 16*† After this, Job lived a hundred and forty years; and he saw his children, his grandchildren, and even his great-grandchildren. 17 Then Job died, old and full of years.

* 42, 3: 34, 35; 35, 16; 38, 2. 12: 1, 3. 16: 5, 25l.

† 42, 2-6: In the current Hebrew text, this final utterance of Job is interrupted by words ascribed to God (vv 3f) which are in large part a duplication of 38, 2f.

42, 7: The three friends of Job (Elihu is ignored in the Epilogue) are criticized by the LORD because they had (even though in good faith) leveled false charges against him.

42, 8: Job becomes the intercessor for his friends, as were other great Old Testament characters, e.g., Abraham and Moses, and as our Lord would be, whom he prefigured. Seven: a symbolic number.

42, 11: A piece of money: the term is the same as that used in Gn 33, 19; Jos 24, 32. Gold ring: for the nose or ear.

42, 14: Job's daughters had names symbolic of their charms: Jemimah, dove; Keziah, precious perfume (cf Ps 45, 9); Kerenhappuch, cosmetic jar—more precisely, a container for a black powder that was used like modern mascara.

42, 15: Ordinarily daughters did not inherit property unless there were no sons; cf Nm 27, 1-11.

42, 16: As his other rewards were twice as much as he had before (v 10) so Job's hundred and forty years were double the expected span of human life; cf Ps 90, 10.

The Book of

PSALMS

The Book of Psalms, or Psalter, is a collection of religious songs, traditionally listed as 150. This number, however, is only approximately correct, for several psalms contain two or more originally independent songs, while others, which were originally a single unit, have been broken up into two or more psalms. Moreover, certain psalms and parts of psalms occur more than once in this collection.

The present collection is divided into five "books," perhaps in imitation of the five Books of the Pentateuch. But internal evidence shows that there existed at an earlier period more numerous, smaller collections which were gradually gathered together to form the present Psalter.

In form and subject matter the psalms are most varied. Some were composed for liturgical use in the temple, others, for recitation elsewhere. In some psalms the singer is an individual; in others, the community. One of the most common types is that of supplication to God for his help in various spiritual and temporal needs. But hymns of thanksgiving and of praise are also numerous. Less frequent are poems written primarily to discuss some problem or to teach some lesson.

Prefixed to most of the psalms are certain words and phrases which offer traditional information about the psalm, such as the tone in which it is to be sung, the musical instruments which are to accompany its singing, the historical circumstances connected in some way with its composition, the name of its author, and so forth. These "titles," as they are called, were added, at least in most cases, by later writers. It cannot be proved that they were divinely inspired. They have some value, however, as representing ancient tradition. They are printed here in italic type.

About half of the psalms are attributed in these "titles" to David. The Davidic authorship of some of these is taken for granted in the New Testament. Some other psalms are attributed to certain groups of temple singers known as "the sons of Korah" and "the sons of Asaph." One psalm each is ascribed to Moses, Solomon, Heman and Ethan. About a third of the psalms have no author's name prefixed to them. Although some of the psalms appear to have been composed during the early postexilic period (the fifth and fourth centuries B.C.), it cannot be demonstrated that any psalms are as late as the Maccabean age.

I: THE FIRST BOOK—Psalms 1-41

PSALM 1†

True Happiness

1† Happy the man who follows not the counsel of the wicked
Nor walks in the way of sinners,
nor sits in the company of the insolent,
2* But delights in the law of the LORD and meditates on his law day and night.
3* He is like a tree
planted near running water,
That yields its fruit in due season,
and whose leaves never fade.
[Whatever he does, prospers.]

4 Not so the wicked, not so;
they are like chaff which the wind drives away.
5 Therefore in judgment the wicked shall not stand,
nor shall sinners, in the assembly of the just.
6* For the LORD watches over the way of the just,
but the way of the wicked vanishes.

PSALM 2†

The Universal Reign of the Messiah

/

1* Why do the nations rage
and the peoples utter folly?

1, 2: Jos 1, 8.
3: Jer 17, 8.
6: Ps 37, 18.
2, 1f: Acts 4, 25ff.

Ps 1: A preface to the whole Book of Psalms; it outlines the lot of the good and of the wicked.

1, 1: The way: a common biblical term for "manner of living" or moral conduct.

Ps 2: A messianic psalm, i. e., it refers to the Messiah, Christ. The psalmist depicts the revolt of the nations against God and his anointed Son (1-3), God's answer (4-6), the messianic decree (7-9), and the warning given to the rebels (10-12).

2† The kings of the earth rise up, and the princes conspire together against the LORD and against his
anointed:
3 "Let us break their fetters and cast their bonds from us!"

II

4 He who is throned in heaven laughs;
the LORD derides them.
5 Then in anger he speaks to them;
he terrifies them in his wrath:
6 "I myself have set up my king
on Zion, my holy mountain."

III

7* I will proclaim the decree of the
LORD:
The LORD said to me, "You are my
son;
this day I have begotten you.
8 Ask of me and I will give you the nations for an inheritance and the ends of the earth for your possession.
9* You shall rule them with an iron rod;
you shall shatter them like an earthen dish."

IV

10 And now, O kings, give heed;
take warning, you rulers of the earth.
11† Serve the LORD with fear, and rejoice before him;
with trembling 12 pay homage to
him,
Lest he be angry and you perish
from the way,
when his anger blazes suddenly.
Happy are all who take refuge in
him!

PSALM 3†

Trust in God in Time of Danger

1* A psalm of David, when he fled from his son Absalom

I

2 O LORD, how many are my adversaries!
Many rise up against me!
3 Many are saying of me,
"There is no salvation for him in God."
4 But you, O LORD, are my shield;
my glory, you lift up my head!

II

5 When I call out to the LORD,
he answers me from his holy mountain.
6 When I lie down in sleep,
I wake again, for the LORD sustains me.
7 I fear not the myraids of people
arrayed against me on every side.

III

8 Rise up, O LORD!
Save me, my God!
For you strike all my enemies on the cheek;
the teeth of the wicked you break.
9 Salvation is the LORD's!
Upon your people be your blessing!

PSALM 4†

Joyful Confidence in God

1† For the leader; with stringed instruments. A psalm of David.

I

2 When I call, answer me, O my just
God,
you who relieve me when I am in distress;
Have pity on me, and hear my prayer!

II

3 Men of rank, how long will you be dull of heart?
Why do you love what is vain and seek after falsehood?
4 Know that the LORD does wonders
for his faithful one;
the LORD will hear me when I call upon him.
5*† Tremble, and sin not;
reflect, upon your beds, in silence.
6 Offer just sacrifices,
and trust in the LORD.

III

7 Many say, "Oh, that we might see better times!"

7: Acts 13, 33; Heb 1, 5.
9: Rv 2, 27; 12, 5; 19, 15.
3, 1: 2 Sm 15, 13ff.
4, 5: Eph 4, 26.

2, 2: Anointed: in Hebrew, Mashiah (whence the word "Messiah"), which the Greek translated as Christos. Among the Hebrews both the kings (Jgs 9, 8; 1 Sm 9, 16; 16, 12†) and the high priests (Lv 8, 12; Nm 3, 3) received the power of their office by being anointed with oil.

2, 11f: And rejoice before him; with trembling pay homage to him: a shorter reading, "pay homage to him with trembling," may have been the original. Pay homage: literally, "kiss his feet."

Ps 3: The psalmist, surrounded by enemies, implores God's help (2-4), arouses himself to trust in God (5-7), and prays for himself and the people (8f).

Ps 4: The psalmist begs God's aid (2), admonishes the incredulous worldlings to put their trust in God (3-6), and reaffirms his own confidence in him (7-9).

4, 1: For the leader: very many of the psalms have this phrase prefixed to them. It probably signifies that they were copied from a collection which once belonged "to the choirmaster." Cf 1 Chr 15, 21.

4, 5: An admonition not to utter rash words against the Lord, even in distress or affliction; the right conduct, after silent acceptance of trials, is proposed in v 6. Tremble: the Hebrew verb means, "to be deeply moved" with any emotion; in the present context, "with fear or dismay." The Greek understood it as, "to be moved with anger," and thus it is quoted in Eph 4, 26.

O LORD, let the light of your countenance shine upon us!
8 You put gladness into my heart,
more than when grain and wine abound.
9 As soon as I lie down, I fall peacefully asleep,
for you alone, O LORD,
bring security to my dwelling.

PSALM 5†

Prayer for Divine Help

1 For the leader; with wind instruments. A psalm of David.

I

2 Hearken to my words, O LORD, attend to my sighing.
3 Heed my call for help,
my king and my God!
To you I pray, 4 O LORD;
at dawn you hear my voice;
at dawn I bring my plea expectantly before you.

II

5 For you, O God, delight not in wickedness;
no evil man remains with you;
6 the arrogant may not stand in your sight.
You hate all evildoers;
7* you destroy all who speak falsehood;
The bloodthirsty and the deceitful the LORD abhors.

III

8 But I, because of your abundant kindness,
will enter your house;
I will worship at your holy temple in fear of you, 9† O LORD;
Because of my enemies, guide me in your justice;
make straight your way before me.

IV

10† For in their mouth there is no sincerity;
their heart teems with treacheries.
Their throat is an open grave;
they flatter with their tongue.
11* Punish them, O God;
let them fall by their own devices;
For their many sins, cast them out because they have rebelled against you.

V

12 But let all who take refuge in you be glad and exult forever.
Protect them, that you may be the joy
of those who love your name.
13 For you, O LORD, bless the just man;
you surround him with the shield of your good will.

PSALM 6†

Prayer in Time of Distress

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments, "upon the eighth." A psalm of David.

I

2* O LORD, reprove me not in your anger,
nor chastise me in your wrath.
3 Have pity on me, O LORD, for I am languishing;
heal me, O LORD, for my body is in terror;
4† My soul, too, is utterly terrified;
but you, O LORD, how long . . . ?

II

5 Return, O LORD, save my life;
rescue me because of your kindness,
6*† For among the dead no one remembers you;
in the nether world who gives you thanks?

III

7 I am wearied with sighing;
every night I flood my bed with weeping;
I drench my couch with my tears.
8 My eyes are dimmed with sorrow;
they have aged because of all my foes.

5, 7: Wis 14, 9. 11: Rom 3, 13. 6, 2: Ps 38, 2. 6: Pss 30, 10; 88, 11f; 113, 17; Is 38, 18.

Ps 5: At dawn the psalmist calls upon God (2-4), who hates sinners (5-7); trusting in divine guidance for himself (8f), he asks God to punish the wicked (10f) and protect the just (12f).

5, 9: The Greek reads, "Make straight my way before you."

5, 10: An open grave: while they feign words of friendship, their hidden thoughts, the words in their throat, i. e., in their heart, are murderous, ready to swallow up men to death. Cf Jer 5, 16.

Ps 6: The first of the Penitential Psalms. In his affliction the psalmist begs God for mercy (2-4); praying to be saved from death (5f), he describes his misery (7f); then, certain of being heard, he rejects all fellowship with sinners (9-11).

6, 4: How long: an elliptical exclamation for, "How long will it be before you answer my prayer?" Cf Ps 13, 2ff.

6, 6: The ancient concept of the abode of the dead (the nether world, in Hebrew, Sheol) supposed no activity or lofty emotion among the deceased, who were pictured as surrounded by the darkness of oblivion. The Hebrews shared in this common idea almost to the time of Christ, when God revealed a clearer notion of the hereafter. Cf Wis 3.

IV

9* Depart from me, all evildoers,
for the LORD has heard the sound of my weeping;
10 The LORD has heard my plea;
the LORD has accepted my prayer.
11* All my enemies shall be put to shame in utter terror;
they shall fall back in sudden shame.

PSALM 7†

An Appeal to the Divine Judge

1 A plaintive song of David, which he sang to the LORD because of Cush the Benjaminite.

I

2 O LORD, my God, in you I take refuge;
save me from all my pursuers and rescue me,
3 Lest I become like the lion's prey,
to be torn to pieces, with no one to rescue me.

II

4† O LORD, my God, if I am at fault in this,
if there is guilt on my hands,
5† If I have repaid my friend with evil,
I who spared those who without cause were my foes—
6 Let the enemy pursue and overtake me;
let him trample my life to the ground,
and lay my glory in the dust.

III

7 Rise up, O LORD, in your anger;
rise against the fury of my foes;
wake to the judgment you have decreed.
8 Let the assembly of the peoples surround you;
above them on high be enthroned.
9* [The LORD judges the nations.]
Do me justice, O LORD, because I am just,
and because of the innocence that is mine.
10* Let the malice of the wicked come to an end,
but sustain the just,
O searcher of heart and soul, O just God.

IV

11 A shield before me is God,
who saves the upright of heart;
12 A just judge is God,
a God who punishes day by day.
13 Unless they be converted, God will sharpen his sword;
he will bend and aim his bow, 14 Prepare his deadly weapons against them,
and use fiery darts for arrows.

V

15* He who conceived iniquity and was pregnant with mischief, brings forth failure.
16* He has opened a hole, he has dug it deep,
but he falls into the pit which he has made.
17 His mischief shall recoil upon his own head;
upon the crown of his head his violence shall rebound.
18 I will give thanks to the LORD for his justice, and sing praise to the name of the LORD Most High.

PSALM 8†

The Majesty of God and the Dignity of Man

1 For the leader; "upon the gittith." A psalm of David.

I

2 O LORD, our Lord,
how glorious is your name over all the earth!
You have exalted your majesty above the heavens.
3* Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings
you have fashioned praise because of your foes,
to silence the hostile and the vengeful.
4 When I behold your heavens, the work of your fingers,
the moon and the stars which you set in place—
5* What is man that you should be mindful of him,

9: Ps 119, 115; Mt 7, 23; Lk 13, 27.
11: Pss 35, 4; 40, 15.
7, 9: Pss 26, 1; 35, 24; 43, 1.
10: Jer 11, 20; 17, 10; 20, 12.
15: Jb 5, 35; Is 59, 4.
16: Ps 57, 7; Prv 26, 27; Eccl 10, 8; Sir 27, 26.
8, 3: Mt 21, 16.
5: Ps 144, 3.
5ff: Heb 2, 6ff.

Ps 7: Slandered by his enemies, the psalmist prays for help against them (2ff), as he swears that he is innocent (4-6) and calls upon God, the just judge of the world, to defend him (7-10); confident of God's justice (11-14), he foretells the punishment of his calumniators (15-17), and promises a thanksgiving sacrifice (18).

7, 4: At fault in this: in these accusations made against the psalmist.

7, 5: I who spared: cf David's generous treatment of Saul (1 Sm 24, 11; 26, 9).

Ps. 8: After contrasting man's finite nature with God's infinite majesty (2-5), the psalmist extols the dignity and power to which God has raised man (6-10).

or the son of man that you should care for him?

II

6† You have made him little less than the angels,
and crowned him with glory and honor.
7* You have given him rule over the works of your hands,
putting all things under his feet:
8 All sheep and oxen,
yes, and the beasts of the field,
9 The birds of the air, the fishes of the sea,
and whatever swims the paths of the seas.
10† O LORD, our Lord,
how glorious is your name over all the earth!

PSALM 9†

Thanksgiving for the Overthrow of Hostile Nations

1 For the leader; according to Muth labben. A psalm of David.

I

2 I will give thanks to you, O LORD, with all my heart;
I will declare all your wondrous deeds.
3 I will be glad and exult in you;
I will sing praise to your name, Most High,
4 Because my enemies are turned back, overthrown and destroyed before you.

II

5 For you upheld my right and my cause,
seated on your throne, judging justly.
6 You rebuked the nations and destroyed the wicked;
their name you blotted out forever and ever.
7 The enemies are ruined completely forever;
the remembrance of the cities you uprooted has perished.

III

8 But the LORD sits enthroned forever;
he has set up his throne for judgment.
9* He judges the world with justice;
he governs the peoples with equity.
10 The LORD is a stronghold for the oppressed,
a stronghold in times of distress.
11 They trust in you who cherish your name,
for you forsake not those who seek you, O LORD.

IV

12 Sing praise to the LORD enthroned in Zion;
proclaim among the nations his deeds;
13 For the avenger of blood has remembered;
he has not forgotten the cry of the afflicted.

V

14 Have pity on me, O LORD; see how I am afflicted by my foes, you who have raised me up from the gates of death,
15† That I may declare all your praises and, in the gates of the daughter of Zion, rejoice in your salvation.

VI

16 The nations are sunk in the pit they have made;
in the snare they set, their foot is caught;
17† In passing sentence, the LORD is manifest;
the wicked are trapped by the work of their own hands.

VII

18 To the nether world the wicked shall turn back,
all the nations that forget God.
19 For the needy shall not always be forgotten,
nor shall the hope of the afflicted forever perish.

7ff: Gn 1, 26.28; Wis 9, 2. 9, 9: Pss 96, 10; 98. 9.

8, 6: The angels: in Hebrew, elohim, which is the ordinary word for "God" or "the gods"; hence, some translate, "a little less than godlike." Cf Pss 45, 7; 58, 2; 82, 1; 97, 7. But the ancient versions generally understood the term as referring to the heavenly spirits. Cf Ps 138, 1. In Heb 2, 9 this passage is shown to be eminently fulfilled in the God-man Jesus Christ. Cf 1 Cor 15, 27 also, where St. Paul applies to Christ the words, putting all things under his feet.

8, 10: The verse with which this psalm begins is repeated as a refrain at the end.

Ps 9: The Vulgate consists of two parts (A and B), each of which forms a separate psalm (Pss 9 and 10) in the current Hebrew text. In favor of the original unity of this psalm is its acrostic character, now partially lost in the poorly preserved text: the first letter of each stanza (of two couplets apiece) originally followed the order of the Hebrew alphabet consecutively throughout both halves of the psalm. Those who consider the two halves as separate psalms point to their somewhat diverse subject matter, the prayer in the first being mainly against the enemies of Israel, that in the second mainly against the wicked within Israel. However, as in all the alphabetic psalms, there is not much logical sequence between the verses.

9, 15: The daughter of Zion: or, "daughter Zion"; Hebrew idiom for "the city of Zion."

9, 17: God's honor and glory are vindicated when he judges and punishes the wicked.

20 Rise, O LORD, let not man prevail;
let the nations be judged in your presence.
21 Strike them with terror, O LORD;
let the nations know that they are but men.

PSALM 10

Prayer for Help against Oppressors

I

1 Why, O LORD, do you stand aloof?
Why hide in times of distress?
2 Proudly the wicked harass the afflicted,
who are caught in the devices the wicked have contrived.

II

3 For the wicked man glories in his greed,
and the covetous blasphemes, sets the LORD at nought.
4 The wicked man boasts, "He will not avenge it";
"There is no God," sums up his thoughts.
5† His ways are secure at all times;
your judgments are far from his mind;
all his foes he scorns.
6 He says in his heart, "I shall not be disturbed;
from age to age I shall be without misfortune."

7* His mouth is full of cursing, guile and deceit;
under his tongue are mischief and iniquity.
8 He lurks in ambush near the villages;
in hiding he murders the innocent;
his eyes spy upon the unfortunate.
9 He waits in secret like a lion in his lair;
he lies in wait to catch the afflicted;
he catches the afflicted and drags them off in his net.
10 He stoops and lies prone till by his violence fall the unfortunate.
11* He says in his heart, "God has forgotten;
he hides his face, he never sees."

III

12 Rise, O LORD! O God, lift up your hand!
Forget not the afflicted!
13 Why should the wicked man despise God,
saying in his heart, "He will not avenge it"?
14 You do see, for you behold misery and sorrow,
taking them in your hands.
On you the unfortunate man depends;
of the fatherless you are the helper.
15 Break the strength of the wicked and of the evildoer;
punish their wickedness; let them not survive.

IV

16 The LORD is king forever and ever;
the nations have perished out of his land.
17 The desire of the afflicted you hear, O LORD;
strengthening their hearts, you pay heed
18 To the defense of the fatherless and the oppressed, that man, who is of earth, may terrify no more.

PSALM 11†

Unshaken Confidence in God

1 For the leader. Of David.

I

In the LORD I take refuge; how can you say to me,
"Flee to the mountain like a bird!
2 For, see, the wicked bend the bow;
they place the arrow on the string to shoot in the dark at the upright of heart.
3† When the pillars are overthrown, what can the just man do?"

II

4 The LORD is in his holy temple;
the LORD's throne is in heaven.
His eyes behold,
his searching glance is on mankind.
5 The LORD searches the just and the wicked;
the lover of violence he hates.
6*† He rains upon the wicked fiery coals and brimstone;
a burning blast is their alloted cup.
7 For the LORD is just, he loves just deeds;
the upright shall see his face.

10, 7: Rom 3, 14.
11: Pss 73, 11; 94, 7.
11, 6: Gn 19, 24.

10, 5: Are far from his mind: the current Hebrew text may be read, "are lofty beyond him."

Ps 11: While fainthearted friends advise flight in the present peril (1-3), the psalmist reaffirms his confidence in the all-knowing Lord who gives just retribution to both the good and the wicked (4-7).

11, 3: The pillars: usually understood as "the foundations of public order." Cf Ps 82, 5.

11, 6: Allotted cup: the cup which God gives men to drink is a common biblical figure for the destiny he assigns them. Cf Pss 16, 5; 23, 5; 75, 9; Mt 20, 22; 26, 39; Rv 14, 10.

PSALM 12†

Prayer against Evil Tongues

1 For the leader; "upon the eighth." A psalm of David.

I

2 Help, O LORD! for no one now is dutiful;
faithfulness has vanished from among men.
3 Everyone speaks falsehood to his neighbor;
with smooth lips they speak, and double heart.

II

4 May the LORD destroy all smooth lips,
every boastful tongue,
5 Those who say, "We are heroes with our tongues;
our lips are our own; who is lord over us?"

III

6† "Because they rob the afflicted, and the needy sigh, now will I arise," says the LORD;
"I will grant safety to him who longs for it."

IV

7 The promises of the LORD are sure,
like tried silver, freed from dross, sevenfold refined.
8 You, O LORD, will keep us
and preserve us always from this generation, 9 While about us the wicked strut
and in high place are the basest of men.

PSALM 13†

Prayer of One in Sorrow

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

2 How long, O LORD? Will you utterly forget me?
How long will you hide your face from me?
3 How long shall I harbor sorrow in my soul,
grief in my heart day after day?
How long will my enemy triumph over me?
4 Look, answer me, O LORD, my God!

II

Give light to my eyes that I may not sleep in death
5 lest my enemy say, "I have overcome him";
Lest my foes rejoice at my downfall
6 though I trusted in your kindness.
Let my heart rejoice in your salvation;
let me sing of the LORD, "He has been good to me."

PSALM 14†

A Lament over Widespread Corruption

1* For the leader. Of David.

I

The fool says in his heart,
"There is no God."
Such are corrupt; they do abominable deeds;
there is not one who does good.
2 The LORD looks down from heaven upon the children of men,
to see if there be one who is wise and seeks God.
3† All alike have gone astray; they have become perverse;
there is not one who does good, not even one.

II

4 Will all these evildoers never learn,
they who eat up my people just as they eat bread?
They have not called upon the LORD;
5 then they shall be in great fear,
for God is with the just generation.
6 You would confound the plans of the afflicted,
but the LORD is his refuge.

III

7 Oh, that out of Zion would come the salvation of Israel!
When the LORD restores the well-being of his people,
then shall Jacob exult and Israel be glad.

---

* 14, 1-7: Ps 53, 2-7.

† Ps 12: The psalmist prays for help against the deceit (2f) and pride (4f) of the wicked; God's promises (6) fill him with confidence (7-9).

12, 6-9: The Hebrew text is obscure in part, and the versions differ; the above translation follows the revised Latin Psalter.

Ps 13: Oppressed by foes, the psalmist laments his desolation (2-4a) and prays for God's help (4b-6).

Ps 14: Bewailing the widespread corruption of the godless (1-3), the psalmist foretells their punishment (4-6), as he prays for his people (7). This psalm is repeated in almost identical form as Ps 53.

14, 3: Here many Greek and Latin texts insert the Old Testament quotations which were first combined in Rom 3, 13-18.

PSALM 15†

The Guest of God

1 A psalm of David.

I

O LORD, who shall sojourn in your tent?
Who shall dwell on your holy mountain?

II

2 He who walks blamelessly and does justice;
who thinks the truth in his heart
3 and slanders not with his tongue;
Who harms not his fellow man,
nor takes up a reproach against his neighbor;
4 By whom the reprobate is despised,
while he honors those who fear the LORD;
Who, though it be to his loss, changes not his pledged word;
5 who lends not his money at usury and accepts no bribe against the innocent.

III

He who does these things
shall never be disturbed.

PSALM 16†

God the Supreme Good

1 A miktam of David.

I

Keep me, O God, for in you I take refuge;
2 I say to the LORD, "My Lord are you.
Apart from you I have no good."
3 How wonderfully has he made me cherish
the holy ones who are in his land!
4† They multiply their sorrows who court other gods.
Blood libations to them I will not pour out,
nor will I take their names upon my lips.
5† O LORD, my alloted portion and my cup,
you it is who hold fast my lot.
6 For me the measuring lines have fallen on pleasant sites;
fair to me indeed is my inheritance.

II

7 I bless the LORD who counsels me;
even in the night my heart exhorts me.
8* I set the LORD ever before me;
with him at my right hand I shall not be disturbed.
9 Therefore my heart is glad and my soul rejoices,
my body, too, abides in confidence;
10† Because you will not abandon my soul to the nether world,
nor will you suffer your faithful one to undergo corruption.
11 You will show me the path to life,
fullness of joys in your presence,
the delights at your right hand forever.

PSALM 17†

Prayer against Persecutors

1 A prayer of David.

I

Hear, O LORD, a just suit;
attend to my outcry;
hearken to my prayer from lips without deceit.
2 From you let my judgment come;
your eyes behold what is right.
3 Though you test my heart, searching it in the night, though you try me with fire, you shall find no malice in me.
4 My mouth has not transgressed after the manner of man;
according to the words of your lips I have kept the ways of the law.
5 My steps have been steadfast in your paths,
my feet have not faltered.

II

6 I call upon you, for you will answer me, O God;

* 16, 8-11: Acts 2, 25-28.

† Ps 15: Lists the moral qualities which he should possess who would enter the Lord's sanctuary worthily; the social virtues of justice and charity are especially emphasized.

Ps 16: Pledging his loyalty to God, the psalmist proclaims his hostility toward the idolaters and his friendship toward the faithful in Israel (1-6); therefore he is aware of the constant presence of God, who will keep him in this blessed union by granting him bodily resurrection and everlasting life (7-11).

16, 4: Take their names: the pious Israelite not only refrained from praying to false gods and from swearing by them; he would not even mention their names. Cf Hos 2, 18.

16, 5: In the worship of the true God the psalmist finds his best inheritance.

16, 10: To undergo corruption: some commentators render this: "to see the grave," understanding this to mean that God will not let the psalmist die in the present circumstances. But the Hebrew word shahath means not only "the pit," "the grave," but also "corruption." In the latter sense the ancient Greek version rendered this passage, and it was thus quoted by St. Peter (Acts 2, 25-32) and St. Paul (Acts 13, 35-37), both of whom interpret this as referring to Christ's Resurrection.

Ps 17: Certain of his innocence, the psalmist appeals to God's just judgment (1-5), imploring his help against the enemies (6-9) who persecute him (10-12); these worldlings shall be punished, whereas the psalmist shall enjoy God's presence hereafter (13-15).

incline your ear to me; hear my word.
7 Show your wondrous kindness,
O savior of those who flee from their foes to refuge at your right hand.
8 Keep me as the apple of your eye;
hide me in the shadow of your wings
9 from the wicked who use violence
against me.

III

My ravenous enemies beset me;
10 they shut up their cruel hearts,
their mouths speak proudly.
11 Their steps even now surround me;
crouching to the ground, they fix
their gaze,
12 Like lions hungry for prey,
like young lions lurking in hiding.

IV

13 Rise, O LORD, confront them and cast them down;
rescue me by your sword from the
wicked,
14 by your hand, O LORD, from mortal men:
From mortal men whose portion in life is in this world,
where with your treasures you fill their bellies.
Their sons are enriched
and bequeath their abundance to their little ones.
15† But I in justice shall behold your face;
on waking, I shall be content in your presence.

PSALM 18†

Thanksgiving for Help and Victory

1 For the leader. Of David, the servant of the LORD, who sang to the LORD the words of this song when the LORD had rescued him from the grasp of all his enemies and from the hand of Saul.

A

I

2* I love you, O LORD, my strength,
3† O LORD, my rock, my fortress, my deliverer.
My God, my rock of refuge,
my shield, the horn of my salvation, my stronghold!
4 Praised be the LORD, I exclaim,
and I am safe from my enemies.

II

5*† The breakers of death surged round about me,
the destroying floods over-
whelmed me;
6* The cords of the nether world enmeshed me,
the snares of death overtook me.
7† In my distress I called upon the LORD
and cried out to my God;
From his temple he heard my voice,
and my cry to him reached his ears.

III

8† The earth swayed and quaked;
the foundations of the mountains
trembled
and shook when his wrath flared up.
9 Smoke rose from his nostrils, and a devouring fire from his mouth
that kindled coals into flame.
10* And he inclined the heavens and came down,
with dark clouds under his feet.
11† He mounted a cherub and flew,
borne on the wings of the wind.
12* And he made darkness the cloak about him;
dark, misty rain-clouds his wrap.
13 From the brightness of his presence coals were kindled to flame.
14 And the LORD thundered from
heaven,
the Most High gave forth his voice;
15 He sent forth his arrows to put them
to flight,
with frequent lightnings he routed
them.

18, 2-51: 2 Sm 22, 2-51.
5: Ps 116, 3; Jon 2, 3.
6: Jn 2, 3.
10: Ps 144, 5.
12: Ps 97, 2.

17, 15: On waking: to a new life after death. Death is often compared to sleep. Cf Ps 76, 6; Dn 12, 2.

Ps 18: This psalm of thanksgiving is also given, with a few small variants, in 2 Sm 22. In both places it is attributed to David. Two main sections can be distinguished. In the first part, after an introductory stanza of praise to God (2-4), the royal psalmist describes the peril he was in (5-7), and then poetically depicts, under the form of a theophany, God's intervention in his behalf (8-20), concluding with an acknowledgment of God's justice (21-31). In the second part, God is praised for having prepared the psalmist for war (32-35), given him victory over his enemies (36-39), whom he put to flight (40-43), and bestowed on him dominion over many peoples (44-46). The whole psalm ends with a paean of grateful praise (47-51).

18, 3: The horn of my salvation: my strong savior. The horn, the dreadful weapon of an enraged bull, was a symbol of strength. Cf Lk 1, 69.

18, 5f: These verses are to be understood figuratively.

18, 7: His temple: His heavenly abode.

18, 8ff: God's intervention is graphically portrayed under the figures of an earthquake (8, 16), and a thunderstorm (9-15). Cf Jgs 5, 4f; Pss 29; 97, 2-6; Hb 3.

18, 11: He mounted a cherub: since God makes the winds his messengers, or "angels" (Ps 104, 4), he is also spoken of poetically as riding on the storm clouds, or on the angelic creatures called cherubim. His earthly throne on the ark of the covenant was likewise formed by two winged cherubim Cf Ex 37, 7-9. In both senses the Lord is enthroned upon the cherubim. Cf Pss 80, 2; 99, 1.

16 Then the bed of the sea appeared,
and the foundations of the world were laid bare,
At the rebuke of the LORD,
at the blast of the wind of his wrath.
17 He reached out from on high and grasped me;
he drew me out of the deep waters.
18 He rescued me from my mighty enemy
and from my foes, who were too powerful for me.
19 They attacked me in the day of my calamity,
but the LORD came to my support.
20 He set me free in the open,
and rescued me, because he loves me.

IV

21 The LORD rewarded me according to my justice;
according to the cleanness of my hands he requited me;
22 For I kept the ways of the LORD and was not disloyal to my God;
23 For his ordinances were all present to me, and his statutes I put not from me, 24 But I was wholehearted toward him,
and I was on my guard against guilt.
25 And the LORD requited me according to my justice,
according to the cleanness of my hands in his sight.
26† Toward the faithful you are faithful,
toward the wholehearted you are wholehearted, 27 Toward the sincere you are sincere,
but toward the crooked you are astute;
28 For lowly people you save
but haughty eyes you bring low;
29† You indeed, O LORD, give light to my lamp;
O my God, you brighten the darkness about me;
30 For with your aid I run against an armed band,
and by the help of my God I leap over a wall.
31 God's way is unerring,
the promise of the LORD is fire-tried;
he is a shield to all who take refuge in him.

B

I

32 For who is God except the LORD?
Who is a rock, save our God?
33 The God who girded me with strength and kept my way unerring; 34† Who made my feet swift as those of hinds
and set me on the heights;
35• Who trained my hands for war
and my arms to bend a bow of brass.

II

36 You have given me your saving shield;
your right hand has upheld me,
and you have stooped to make me great.
37 You made room for my steps;
unwavering was my stride.
38 I pursued my enemies and overtook them,
nor did I turn again till I made an end of them.
39 I smote them and they could not rise;
they fell beneath my feet.

III

40 And you girded me with strength for war;
you subdued my adversaries beneath me.
41 My enemies you put to flight before me,
and those who hated me you destroyed.
42 They cried for help—but no one saved them;
to the LORD—but he answered them not.
43 I ground them fine as the dust before the wind;
like the mud in the streets I trampled them down.

IV

44 You rescued me from the strife of the people;
you made me head over nations;
A people I had not known became my slaves;
45 as soon as they heard me they obeyed.
The foreigners fawned and cringed before me;
46 they staggered forth from their fortresses.

C

47 The LORD live! And blessed be my Rock!
Extolled be God my savior.
48 O God, who granted me vengeance, who made peoples subject to me

•35: Ps 144, 1.

†18, 26f: Men are treated by God in the same way they treat him and their fellow men.
18, 29: Light to my lamp: a figure of life and happiness. Cf 1 Kgs 11, 36.
18, 34: The heights: a natural stronghold, safe from attack. Cf Ps 61, 3; Hb 3, 19.

40 and preserved me from my enemies,
Truly above my adversaries you exalt me
and from the violent man you have rescued me.
50* Therefore will I proclaim you, O LORD, among the nations,
and I will sing praise to your name, 51 You who gave great victories to your king
and showed kindness to your anointed,
to David and his posterity forever.

PSALM 19†

God's Glory in the Heavens and in the Law

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

A

I

2 The heavens declare the glory of God,
and the firmament proclaims his handiwork.
3† Day pours out the word to day,
and night to night imparts knowledge;
4† Not a word nor a discourse
whose voice is not heard;
5*† Through all the earth their voice resounds,
and to the ends of the world, their message.

II

He has pitched a tent there for the sun,
6† which comes forth like the groom from his bridal chamber and, like a giant, joyfully runs its course.
7 At one end of the heavens it comes forth,
and its course is to their other end;
nothing escapes its heat.

B

I

8† The law of the LORD is perfect, refreshing the soul;
The decree of the LORD is trustworthy,
giving wisdom to the simple.
9 The precepts of the LORD are right, rejoicing the heart;
The command of the LORD is clear, enlightening the eye;
10 The fear of the LORD is pure, enduring forever;
The ordinances of the LORD are true, all of them just;
11 They are more precious than gold, than a heap of purest gold;
Sweeter also than syrup or honey from the comb.

II

12 Though your servant is careful of them,
very diligent in keeping them,
13 Yet who can detect failings?
Cleanse me from my unknown faults!
14 From wanton sin especially, restrain your servant;
let it not rule over me.
Then shall I be blameless and innocent of serious sin.
15 Let the words of my mouth and the thought of my heart
find favor before you,
O LORD, my rock and my redeemer.

PSALM 20†

Prayer for the King in Time of War

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

2 The LORD answer you in time of distress;
the name of the God of Jacob defend you!
3 May he send you help from the sanctuary,
from Zion may he sustain you.
4 May he remember all your offerings

50: Rom 15, 9. 19, 5: Rom 10, 18.

Ps 19: Consists of two distinct parts, perhaps originally two independent psalms. The first section presents the heavenly firmament, especially the sun, as singing the glories of the Creator (2-7). In the second section the psalmist praises God's moral law (8-11) and prays for grace to keep it (12-15).

19, 3: Day pours out the word: as if under divine inspiration each day proclaims to the next the message of God's grandeur.

19, 4: Not a word: this message is so clear that the hearts and minds of all men cannot help but hear it. However, some commentators interpret the passage to mean, "Although no physical sound is heard, yet the heavens have a language of their own that is understood throughout the world."

19, 5: Through all the earth: these two lines are applied in Rom 10, 18 to the preachers of the Gospel. There in the heavens, below the horizon.

19, 6: A giant: literally, "a powerful man"; used also in the sense of "a champion," "a hero," and here perhaps "an athlete."

19, 8-10: Six synonyms are used for the same idea, divine law. Cf Ps 119.

Ps 20: Psalms 20 and 21 are complementary, having a similar structure. The former, sung before the battle, expresses good wishes for the king (2-6), with assurance of victory (7-9). The latter, sung after the battle, thanks God for the victory (2-8) and again invokes God's blessing on the king (9-13). Both psalms end with a refrain sung by the people.

and graciously accept your holocaust.
5 May he grant you what is in your heart and fulfill your every plan.
6 May we shout for joy at your victory
and raise the standards in the name of our God.
The LORD grant all your requests!

II

7 Now I know that the LORD has given victory to his anointed, that he has answered him from his holy heaven
with the strength of his victorious right hand.
8† Some are strong in chariots; some, in horses;
but we are strong in the name of the LORD, our God.
9 Though they bow down and fall,
yet we stand erect and firm.

10 O LORD, grant victory to the king,
and answer us when we call upon you.

PSALM 21

Thanksgiving and Prayers for the King

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

2 O Lord, in your strength the king is glad;
in your victory how greatly he rejoices!
3 You have granted him his heart's desire;
you refused not the wish of his lips.
4 For you welcomed him with goodly blessings,
you placed on his head a crown of pure gold.
5 He asked life of you: you gave him length of days forever and ever.
6 Great is his glory in your victory;
majesty and splendor you conferred upon him.
7 For you made him a blessing forever;
you gladdened him with the joy of your presence.
8 For the king trusts in the LORD, and through the kindness of the Most High he stands unshaken.

II

9† May your hand reach all your enemies,
may your right hand reach your foes!
10 Make them burn as though in a fiery furnace,
when you appear.
May the LORD consume them in his anger;
let fire devour them.
11 Destroy their fruit from the earth and their posterity from among men.
12 Though they intend evil against you,
devising plots, they cannot succeed, 13 For you shall put them to flight;
you shall aim your shafts against them.
14 Be extolled, O LORD, in your strength!
We will sing, chant the praise of your might.

PSALM 22†

Passion and Triumph of the Messiah

1 For the leader; according to "The hind of the dawn." A psalm of David.

A

I

2*† My God, my God, why have you forsaken me, far from my prayer, from the words of my cry?
3† O my God, I cry out by day, and you answer not;
by night, and there is no relief for me.
4 Yet you are enthroned in the holy place,
O glory of Israel!
5 In you our fathers trusted;
they trusted, and you delivered them.
6 To you they cried, and they escaped;
in you they trusted, and they were not put to shame.

22, 2: Mt 27, 46; Mk 15, 34.

20, 8: The pious place their trust, not in material means, but in the help of God whom they invoke. Cf 1 Sm 17, 45; Is 31, 1; 36, 9.

21, 9ff: These words are addressed to the king.

Ps 22: Psalm 22 is one of the most important of the messianic psalms. Our Lord himself on the cross repeated its first line, and several other verses are directly quoted, or at least alluded to, in the New Testament as pertaining to his Passion. Of no other person is this touching description of spiritual and physical suffering so eminently true as it is of Jesus Christ. Hence, the entire psalm has been traditionally interpreted in the Catholic Church as referring to him. The psalmist, therefore, speaks in Christ's name when in the first section (2-22) he describes the Messiah's dereliction (2-6), opprobrium (7-9) and physical sufferings (13-19), together with his unshaken confidence in the heavenly Father (10-12.20-22) and in the second part the fruits of his redemption: the grateful praise of the redeemed (23-27), the conversion of the Gentiles (28-30d), and the glory of God and his beloved Son (30e-32).

22, 2: Far from my prayer: when he prays, God seems too distant to hear his cry.

22, 3: There is no relief for me: the Hebrew phrase here is obscure; the revised Latin Psalter renders it, "You heed me not."

7 But I am a worm, not a man;
the scorn of men, despised by the people.
8*† All who see me scoff at me;
they mock me with parted lips,
they wag their heads:
9*† "He relied on the LORD; let him deliver him,
let him rescue him, if he loves him."
10† You have been my guide since I was first formed,
my security at my mother's breast.
11† To you I was committed at birth,
From my mother's womb you are my God.

12 Be not far from me, for I am in distress;
be near, for I have no one to help me.

(II)

13† Many bullocks surround me;
the strong bulls of Bashan encircle me.
14 They open their mouths against me like ravening and roaring lions.

15 I am like water poured out;
all my bones are racked.
My heart has become like wax melting away within my bosom.
16 My throat is dried up like baked clay,
my tongue cleaves to my jaws;
to the dust of death you have brought me down.

17† Indeed, many dogs surround me,
a pack of evildoers closes in upon me;
They have pierced my hands and my feet;
18 I can count all my bones.
They look on and gloat over me;
19*† they divide my garments among them,
and for my vesture they cast lots.

III

20 But you, O LORD, be not far from me;
O my help, hasten to aid me.
21† Rescue my soul from the sword,
my loneliness from the grip of the dog.
22 Save me from the lion's mouth;
from the horns of the wild bulls,
my wretched life.

B

I

23*†I will proclaim your name to my brethren;
in the midst of the assembly I will praise you:
24 "You who fear the Lord, praise him;
all you descendants of Jacob, give glory to him;
revere him, all you descendants of Israel!
25 For he has not spurned nor disdained
the wretched man in his misery,
Nor did he turn his face away from him,
but when he cried out to him, he heard him."
26 So by your gift will I utter praise in the vast assembly;
I will fulfill my vows before those who fear him.
27† The lowly shall eat their fill;
they who seek the LORD shall praise him:
"May your hearts be ever merry!"

II

28 All the ends of the earth shall remember and turn to the LORD;
All the families of the nations shall bow down before him.
29 For dominion is the LORD's,
and he rules the nations.
30† To him alone shall bow down
all who sleep in the earth;

8: Mt 27, 39; Mk 15, 29.
9: Mt 27, 43.
19: Jn 19, 24.
23: Heb 2, 12.

22, 8: Parted lips: a sign of scorn. They wag their heads: another gesture of derision; it was indulged in by Christ's enemies on Calvary.

22, 9: These words were spoken, in unwitting fulfillment of the prophecy, by the Jews at our Lord's crucifixion. Cf Mt 27, 42. If he loves him: the natural sense seems to be, "If God loves the sufferer"; but some understand it as, "Since he (the sufferer) has loved him (the Lord)."

22, 10: My guide: so in the revised Latin Psalter, but the meaning of the Hebrew is uncertain.

22, 11: To you I was committed: literally, "upon you I was thrown." Some see in this a reference to the ancient custom of placing a newborn baby upon its father's lap, so that he might acknowledge its paternity. But more probably the meaning is simply, "I was given to your care."

22, 13: Bashan: a fertile grazing land east of the Jordan, famous for its strong cattle. Cf Dt 32, 14; Ez 39, 18; Am 4, 1. The various beasts mentioned here are, of course, to be understood figuratively, as signifying cruel persecutors.

22, 17: They have pierced my hands: so in the ancient versions. The current Hebrew text reads, "Like the lion my hands," which hardly makes good sense. This passage finds its complete fulfillment in the nailing of Christ's hands and feet to the cross.

22, 19: Explicitly cited in Jn 19, 24 as a prophecy fulfilled in the dividing of our Lord's garments by the soldiers on Calvary.

22, 21: My loneliness: his desolate soul. Cf Ps 35, 17.

22, 23: The transition from deepest sorrow to the great joy of the risen Savior. The language of vv 23-27 is based on the custom whereby a person who offered a thanksgiving sacrifice in the temple would recount to his fellow worshipers the favor received from God and then invite them to share in his sacrificial banquet.

22, 27: May your hearts be ever merry: addressed to the lowly. Cf Ps 69, 33.

22, 30f: The Hebrew text is poorly preserved here. The translation given above follows the revised Latin Psalter in restoring the text to accord with the ancient versions.

Before him shall bend
all who go down into the dust. (III)
And to him my soul shall live;
31 my descendants shall serve him.
Let the coming generation be told of the LORD 32 that they may proclaim to a people yet to be born
the justice he has shown.

PSALM 23†

The Lord, Shepherd and Host

1† A psalm of David.

I

The LORD is my shepherd; I shall not want.
2 In verdant pastures he gives me repose;
Beside restful waters he leads me;
3 he refreshes my soul.
He guides me in right paths for his name's sake.
4† Even though I walk in the dark valley
I fear no evil; for you are at my side
With your rod and your staff that give me courage.

II

5† You spread the table before me in the sight of my foes;
You anoint my head with oil; my cup overflows.
6 Only goodness and kindness follow me
all the days of my life;
And I shall dwell in the house of the LORD
for years to come.

PSALM 24†

The Lord's Solemn Entry Into Zion

1* A psalm of David.

I

The LORD's are the earth and its fullness;
the world and those who dwell in it.
2† For he founded it upon the seas
and established it upon the rivers.

II

3*† Who can ascend the mountain of the LORD?
or who may stand in his holy place?
4 He whose hands are sinless, whose heart is clean,
who desires not what is vain,
nor swears deceitfully to his neighbor.
5 He shall receive a blessing from the LORD,
a reward from God his savior.
6 Such is the race that seeks for him,
that seeks the face of the God of Jacob.

III

7† Lift up, O gates, your lintels;
reach up, you ancient portals,
that the king of glory may come in!
8 Who is this king of glory?
The LORD, strong and mighty,
the LORD, mighty in battle.
9 Lift up, O gates, your lintels;
reach up, you ancient portals,
that the king of glory may come in!
10 Who is this king of glory?
The LORD of hosts; he is the king of glory.

PSALM 25†

Prayer for Guidance and Help

1* Of David.

I

To you I lift up my soul,
O LORD, 2 my God.
In you I trust; let me not be put to shame,
let not my enemies exult over me.

24;1: Ps 50, 12; 1 Cor 10, 26.
3-5: Ps 15, 1-5.
25, 1: Pss 86, 4; 143, 8.

†

Ps 23: God's loving care for his devoted servant is here portrayed under the figures of a shepherd's solicitude for his sheep (1-4) and a host's generosity toward his guest (5f).

23, 1: The idea of God as the good shepherd of his flock is common in both the Old and the New Testament. Cf especially Jn 10, 11-18.

23, 4: Your rod and your staff: to guide and defend the sheep.

23, 5: Oil: a perfumed ointment, used especially at banquets. Cf Mt 26, 7; Lk 7, 37.46; Jn 12, 3.

Ps 24: After a strophe in praise of God's universal dominion (1f), the psalm lays down the moral requirements for assisting at divine worship (3-6), and then gives the words which were sung when the ark, representing God's presence, was carried to Zion or into the temple (7-10). From the dialogue structure it seems probable that this psalm was composed for liturgical use, to be sung by alternating choirs. Cf 2 Sm 6, 12ff.

24, 2: According to the ancient notion of the world, the earth was regarded as a flat disk resting on a vast underground sea, "the deep." Cf Ps 33, 7.

24, 3-6: Ps 15 is similar in structure and content: a question, an answer giving the conditions, and a conclusion.

24, 7.9: Your lintels: literally, "your heads." The doorway is pictured as too low for the great God to enter. The gates and portals are either those of the temple or of the ancient citadel of the Jebusites.

Ps 25: An alphabetic psalm. Cf Ps 9. The thoughts are rather loosely connected, but the first part (1-7) is principally a prayer for guidance and pardon; the second (8-15), a meditation on God's goodness toward the just; the third (16-22), a prayer for protection and consolation.

3 No one who waits for you shall be put to shame;
those shall be put to shame who heedlessly break faith.

4* Your ways, O LORD, make known to
me;
teach me your paths,
5† Guide me in your truth and teach
me,
for you are God my savior,
and for you I wait all the day.
6 Remember that your compassion, O
LORD,
and your kindness are from of old.
7 The sins of my youth and my frailties remember not;
in your kindness remember me,
because of your goodness, O
LORD.

II

8 Good and upright is the LORD;
thus he shows sinners the way.
9 He guides the humble to justice,
he teaches the humble his way.
10 All the paths of the LORD are kindness and constancy
toward those who keep his covenant and his decrees.
11 For your name's sake, O LORD, you will pardon my guilt, great as it is.

12 When a man fears the LORD,
he shows him the way he should choose.
13 He abides in prosperity, and his descendants inherit the
land.
14 The friendship of the LORD is with
those who fear him,
and his covenant, for their instruction.
15 My eyes are ever toward the LORD, for he will free my feet from the snare.

III

16 Look toward me, and have pity on
me,
for I am alone and afflicted.
17 Relieve the troubles of my heart,
and bring me out of my distress.
18† Put an end to my affliction and my suffering,
and take away all my sins.
19 Behold, my enemies are many,
and they hate me violently.
20 Preserve my life, and rescue me;
let me not be put to shame, for I take refuge in you.
21 Let integrity and uprightness preserve me,
because I wait for you, O LORD.

22† Redeem Israel, O God,
from all its distress!

PSALM 26†
Prayer of an Innocent Man

1 Of David.

I

Do me justice, O LORD! for I have walked in integrity, and in the LORD I trust without wavering.
2 Search me, O LORD, and try me;
test my soul and my heart.

II

3 For your kindness is before my
eyes,
and I walk in your truth.
4 I stay not with worthless men,
nor do I consort with hypocrites.
5 I hate the assembly of evildoers, and with the wicked I will not stay.
6*† I wash my hands in innocence,
and I go around your altar, O
LORD,
7 Giving voice to my thanks,
and recounting all your wondrous
deeds.
8 O LORD, I love the house in which you dwell,
the tenting-place of your glory.

III

9 Gather not my soul with those of sinners,
nor with men of blood my life.
10 On their hands are crimes, and their right hands are full of bribes.
11 But I walk in integrity;
redeem me, and have pity on
me.
12† My foot stands on level ground;
in the assemblies I will bless the
LORD.

4f: Ps 86, 11. 26, 6: Ps 73, 13.

25, 5: And for you I wait all day: perhaps the third line of v 7 should be inserted immediately after these words. Elsewhere in this psalm there are two lines apiece for each letter of the Hebrew alphabet.

25, 18f: The wording and the order of these verses are not wholly free from doubt.

25, 22: This final verse is an addition to the original psalm.

Ps 26: Protesting his innocence (11), the psalmist enumerates his virtues (3-8), that God may not condemn him with the wicked (9-12).

26, 6: I wash my hands: although the washing of hands was a liturgical act (Ex 30, 19.21; 40, 31), here it is probably to be understood figuratively, as in Is 1, 16. The words from here to the end of the psalm were long recited in the Roman rite mass, at the washing of hands. Cf Ps 73, 13.

26, 12: On level ground: in safety, where there is no danger of tripping and falling; here used figuratively. Some join the two lines of this verse to read, "When my feet stand on level ground; . . . I will bless the LORD." In the assemblies: in the temple, where the psalmist will offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving.

PSALM 27†
Trust in God

1 Of David.

/
The LORD is my light and my salvation;
whom should I fear?
The LORD is my life's refuge;
of whom should I be afraid?
2† When evildoers come at me
to devour my flesh,
My foes and my enemies
themselves stumble and fall.
3 Though an army encamp against me,
my heart will not fear;
Though war be waged upon me,
even then will I trust.

//
4*† One thing I ask of the LORD;
this I seek:
To dwell in the house of the LORD
all the days of my life,
That I may gaze on the loveliness
of the LORD
and contemplate his temple.
5 For he will hide me in his abode
in the day of trouble;
He will conceal me in the shelter of his tent,
he will set me high upon a rock.
6 Even now my head is held high above my enemies on every side.
And I will offer in his tent
sacrifices with shouts of gladness;
I will sing and chant praise to the LORD.

7 Hear, O LORD, the sound of my call;
have pity on me, and answer me.
8 Of you my heart speaks; you my glance seeks;
your presence, O LORD, I seek.
9 Hide not your face from me;
do not in anger repel your servant.
You are my helper: cast me not off;
forsake me not, O God my savior.
10 Though my father and mother forsake me,
yet will the LORD receive me.

11† Show me, O LORD, your way, and lead me on a level path,
because of my adversaries.
12 Give me not up to the wishes of my foes;
for false witnesses have risen up against me,
and such as breathe out violence.
13† I believe that I shall see the bounty
of the LORD
in the land of the living.
14 Wait for the LORD with courage;
be stouthearted, and wait for the LORD.

PSALM 28†
Petition and Thanksgiving

1* Of David.

/
To you, O LORD, I call;
O my Rock be not deaf to me,
Lest, if you heed me not,
I become one of those going down into the pit.
2† Hear the sound of my pleading,
when I cry to you,
lifting up my hands toward your holy shrine.
3 Drag me not away with the wicked,
with those who do wrong,
Who speak civilly to their neighbors
though evil is in their hearts.
4† Repay them for their deeds,
for the evil of their doings.
For the work of their hands repay them;
give them their deserts.
5 Because they consider not the deeds of the LORD nor the work of his hands,
may he tear them down and not build them up.

* 27, 4: Pss 23, 6; 61, 5; 65, 5. 28, 1: Pss 30, 4; 88, 5; 143, 7; Prv 1, 12.

† Ps 27: Asserting his boundless confidence that God will rescue him (1-3), the psalmist longs for the shelter of the temple where, united with the Lord, he will be safe from his enemies (4-6). The second half seems originally to have been an independent psalm. Here the psalmist prays that he may not be abandoned by God (7-10), asks for guidance and protection (11f), and ends on a note of confidence (13f).

27, 2: To devour my flesh: to destroy me completely. Cf Ps 14, 4; Mi 3, 3.

27, 4: Contemplate his temple: the meaning of the Hebrew is not quite certain. Some render it as, "visit his temple at dawn."

27, 11: A level path: see note on Ps 26, 12.

27, 13: In the land of the living: the meaning is, "while I am still living here on earth." But these words may also be used in an accommodated sense, as the Church uses them in the Office of the Dead, to mean, "In heaven, where there is true life."

Ps 28: Consists of a prayer asking that the psalmist may not be punished with the wicked (1-5), followed by anticipated thanksgiving to God for having heard him (6f), and ending with an intercession for the king and the nation (8f).

28, 2: Your holy shrine: the innermost part of the temple, the holy of holies, containing the ark of the Lord.

28, 4f: Since the wicked have no care for God, he will have no care for them.

II

6 Blessed be the LORD,
for he has heard the sound of my pleading;
7 the LORD is my strength and my shield.
In him my heart trusts, and I find help;
then my heart exults, and with my song I give him thanks.

III

8 The LORD is the strength of his people,
the saving refuge of his anointed.
9 Save your people, and bless your inheritance;
feed them, and carry them forever!

PSALM 29†

God's Majesty in the Storm

1*† A psalm of David.

I

Give to the LORD, you sons of God,
give to the LORD glory and praise,
2 Give to the LORD the glory due his name;
adore the LORD in holy attire.

II

3† The voice of the LORD is over the waters,
the God of glory thunders,
the LORD, over vast waters.
4 The voice of the LORD is mighty;
the voice of the LORD is majestic.
5 The voice of the LORD breaks the cedars,
the LORD breaks the cedars of Lebanon.
6† He makes Lebanon leap like a calf and Sirion like a young bull.
7 The voice of the LORD strikes fiery flames;
8† the voice of the LORD shakes the desert,
the LORD shakes the wilderness of Kadesh.
9 The voice of the LORD twists the oaks
and strips the forests,
and in his temple all say, "Glory!"

III

10 The LORD is enthroned above the flood;
the LORD is enthroned as king forever.
11 May the LORD give strength to his people;
may the LORD bless his people with peace!

PSALM 30†

Thanksgiving for Deliverance from Death

1† A psalm. A song for the dedication of the temple. Of David.

2 I will extol you, O LORD, for you drew me clear and did not let my enemies rejoice over me.

A

3 O LORD, my God,
I cried out to you and you healed me.
4* O LORD, you brought me up from the nether world;
you preserved me from among those going down into the pit.
5 Sing praise to the LORD, you his faithful ones,
and give thanks to his holy name.
6 For his anger lasts but a moment;
a lifetime, his good will.
At nightfall, weeping enters in,
but with the dawn, rejoicing.

B

I

7 Once, in my security, I said,
"I shall never be disturbed."
8 O LORD, in your good will you had endowed me with majesty and strength:
but when you hid your face I was terrified.

29 1f: Ps 96, 7-9. 30, 4: Ps 28, 1.

Ps 29: After an invocation to praise the Lord (1f), this striking psalm describes a magnificent theophany, the revelation of God's majesty in a tremendous thunderstorm (3-10), and ends with a prayer for the people (11).

29, 1: Sons of God: although this phrase regularly refers to the angels, as in Jb 1, 6; 2, 1; 38, 7, here it may be understood of "godly, virtuous men"; in Ps 96, 7ff, a very similar invocation is addressed to the families of nations. Cf Ps 89, 7.

29, 3: The voice of the Lord: the thunder and the thunderbolt, the sound of which is here attributed directly to God.

29, 6: He makes Lebanon leap: the mountains are pictured as trembling with fear; perhaps an earthquake is meant. Cf Ps 114, 4.6f. Sirion: the Phoenician name for Mount Hermon. Cf Dt 3, 9. Several expressions in this psalm are also found in the Canaanite texts written in the fifteenth century B.C. at Ugarit, in the north of Phoenicia.

29, 8: The wilderness of Kadesh: formerly identified with the oasis of Kadesh in the northern part of the Sinai peninsula. Cf Nm 20, 1. More probably, however, it was north of Palestine, for it is also mentioned in one of the Ugaritic texts, and in the present context seems to be in the neighborhood of Lebanon and Hermon.

Ps 30: The psalmist, after announcing his theme (2), thanks God for having restored him to health when sickness was about to bring him to the grave (3-6). He then gives the details of what had occurred: confident of robust health, he was suddenly stricken with some disease (7f), but he cried to the Lord for help (9-11), and his prayer was heard (12f).

30, 1: For the dedication of the temple: a later adaptation of this psalm.

II

9 To you, O LORD, I cried out;
with the LORD I pleaded:
10*† "What gain would there be from my lifeblood,
from my going down into the grave?
Would dust give you thanks
or proclaim your faithfulness?
11 Hear, O LORD, and have pity on me;
O LORD, be my helper."

III

12† You changed my mourning into dancing;
you took off my sackcloth and clothed me with gladness,
13 That my soul might sing praise to you without ceasing;
O LORD, my God, forever will I give you thanks.

PSALM 31†

Prayer in Distress and Thanksgiving for Escape

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

2* In you, O LORD, I take refuge;
let me never be put to shame.
In your justice rescue me,
3 incline your ear to me,
make haste to deliver me!
Be my rock of refuge,
a stronghold to give me safety.
4 You are my rock and my fortress;
for your name's sake you will lead and guide me.
5 You will free me from the snare they set for me,
for you are my refuge.
6*† Into your hands I commend my spirit;
you will redeem me, O LORD, O faithful God.
7 You hate those who worship vain idols,
but my trust is in the LORD.
8 I will rejoice and be glad of your kindness,
when you have seen my affliction
and watched over me in my distress, 9 Not shutting me up in the grip of the enemy
but enabling me to move about at large.

II

10 Have pity on me, O LORD, for I am in distress;
with sorrow my eye is consumed;
my soul also, and my body.
11 For my life is spent with grief
and my years with sighing;
My strength has failed through affliction,
and my bones are consumed.
12 For all my foes I am an object of reproach,
a laughingstock to my neighbors,
and a dread to my friends;
they who see me abroad flee from me.
13† I am forgotten like the unremembered dead;
I am like a dish that is broken.
14*† I hear the whispers of the crowd,
that frighten me from every side,
as they consult together against me, plotting to take my life.
15 But my trust is in you, O LORD;
I say, "You are my God."
16 In your hands is my destiny; rescue me from the clutches of my enemies and my persecutors.
17 Let your face shine upon your servant;
save me in your kindness.
18 O LORD, let me not be put to shame,
for I call upon you;
let the wicked be put to shame; let them be reduced to silence in the nether world.
19 Let dumbness strike their lying lips that speak insolence against the just in pride and scorn.

III

20 How great is the goodness, O LORD,
which you have in store for those who fear you,
And which, toward those who take refuge in you,
you show in the sight of men.
21 You hide them in the shelter of your presence
from the plottings of men;
You screen them within your abode

10: Ps 6, 6.
31, 2-4: Ps 71, 1-3.
6: Lk 23, 46.
14: Jer 20, 10.

†

30, 10: See note on Ps 6, 6.

30, 12: Sackcloth: worn in times of mourning and penance. Cf 2 Sm 3, 31; 1 Kgs 21, 27; Pss 35, 13; 69, 12.

Ps 31: In the first two sections (2-19) the psalmist describes in pathetic words his extreme misery and affliction, while with unshaken confidence in God's goodness he prays for heavenly aid. The third section (20-25) is a typical hymn of thanksgiving. If it was originally joined to the preceding verses and not an independent psalm, it must be considered as an anticipated acknowledgement of favors the psalmist hopes to receive.

31, 6: Into your hands I commend my spirit: our Lord made these words his own as he died on the cross. Cf Lk 23, 46. Hence the whole psalm may be fittingly considered as an expression of Christ's feelings of anguish, joined with filial confidence in his heavenly Father, during his bitter Passion.

31, 13: Like a dish that is broken: a common comparison for something ruined and useless. Cf Is 30, 14; Jer 19, 11; 22, 28.

31, 14: That frighten me from every side: literally, "terror from round about." This phrase occurs several times also in Jeremiah. Cf Jer 6, 25; 20, 3.10; 46, 5; 49, 29. There are certain other marks of similarity between this psalm and the writings of that prophet.

from the strife of tongues.
22 Blessed be the LORD whose wondrous kindness
he has shown me in a fortified city.
23 Once I said in my anguish,
"I am cut off from your sight";
Yet you heard the sound of my pleading
when I cried out to you.
24 Love the LORD, all you his faithful ones!
The LORD keeps those who are constant,
but more than requites those who act proudly.
25 Take courage and be stouthearted, all you who hope in the LORD.

PSALM 32†
Remission of Sin

1* Of David. A maskil.

I

Happy is he whose fault is taken away,
whose sin is covered.
2† Happy the man to whom the LORD imputes not guilt,
in whose spirit there is no guile.

II

3† As long as I would not speak, my bones wasted away with my groaning all the day, 4 For day and night your hand was heavy upon me;
my strength was dried up as by the heat of summer.
5† Then I acknowledged my sin to you, my guilt I covered not.
I said, "I confess my faults to the LORD,"
and you took away the guilt of my sin.
6 For this shall every faithful man pray to you in time of stress.
Though deep waters overflow, they shall not reach him.
7 You are my shelter; from distress you will preserve me;
with glad cries of freedom you will ring me round.

III

8 I will instruct you and show you the way you should walk;
I will counsel you, keeping my eye on you.
9† Be not senseless like horses or mules:
with bit and bridle their temper must be curbed,
else they will not come near you.

IV

10 Many are the sorrows of the wicked, but kindness surrounds him who trusts in the LORD.
11 Be glad in the LORD and rejoice, you just;
exult, all you upright of heart.

PSALM 33†
Praise of the Lord's Power and Providence

I

1 Exult, you just, in the LORD;
praise from the upright is fitting.
2 Give thanks to the LORD on the harp;
with the ten-stringed lyre chant his praises.
3 Sing to him a new song;
pluck the strings skillfully, with shouts of gladness.
4 For upright is the word of the LORD, and all his works are trustworthy.
5 He loves justice and right;
of the kindness of the LORD the earth is full.

II

6† By the word of the LORD the heavens were made;
by the breath of his mouth all their host.
7† He gathers the waters of the sea as in a flask;
in cellars he confines the deep.

* 32, 1f: Rom 4, 7f.

† Ps 32: The second of the Penitential Psalms, and a favorite of St. Augustine's. The psalmist describes the blessedness of having one's sins forgiven by God (1f), as well as his own spiritual consolation when he confessed his sins (3-7); he then exhorts others to be submissive to God's will (8f), and to confide with joy in his goodness (10f).

32, 2: No guile: no hypocrisy in acknowledging his sins.

32, 3: I would not speak: I refused at first to confess my sins.

32, 5: St. Augustine's comment is that, even before the sin is acknowledged by the penitent's lips, God hears the cry of his heart. Pardon at once follows sincere contrition. Cf 2 Sm 12, 13.

32, 9: The Hebrew text of this verse is obscure, and is variously interpreted.

Ps 33: A hymn of praise in which the just are invited to chant the glories of God (1-3), because he is ever faithful to his promises (4f), the all-powerful Creator (6f), and the wise and mighty Ruler of the world (8-12), who sees and knows all things (13-15) and who alone is the source of victory and salvation (16-19). The hymn concludes with an expression of confidence in God's goodness (20-22).

33, 6: All their host: by a common figure, the countless stars of the sky are viewed as a vast army. Cf Neh 9, 6; Is 40, 26; 45, 12; Jer 33, 22.

33, 7: The ancients marveled at the power which kept the mighty seas from overwhelming the dry land. According to pagan mythology, this was achieved by a fierce battle in which the heavenly gods triumphed over the gods of the deep. For the Lord, however, this is as simple as putting water into a bottle; he can store away the immense subterranean ocean as easily as a man stores wine in his cellar.

III

8 Let all the earth fear the LORD;
let all who dwell in the world revere him.
9 For he spoke, and it was made;
he commanded, and it stood forth.
10 The LORD brings to nought the plans of nations;
he foils the designs of peoples.
11 But the plan of the LORD stands forever;
the design of his heart, through all generations.
12* Happy the nation whose God is the LORD,
the people he has chosen for his own inheritance.

IV

13 From heaven the LORD looks down;
he sees all mankind.
14 From his fixed throne he beholds
all who dwell on the earth, 15 He who fashioned the heart of each,
he who knows all their works.

V

16 A king is not saved by a mighty army,
nor is a warrior delivered by great strength.
17 Useless is the horse for safety;
great though its strength, it cannot provide escape.
18 But see, the eyes of the LORD are upon those who fear him,
upon those who hope for his kindness, 19 To deliver them from death
and preserve them in spite of famine.

VI

20 Our soul waits for the LORD,
who is our help and our shield, 21 For in him our hearts rejoice;
in his holy name we trust.
22 May your kindness, O LORD, be upon us who have put our hope in you.

PSALM 34†

Praise of God, the Protector of the Just

1* †Of David, when he feigned madness before Abimelech, who forced him to depart.

I

2 I will bless the LORD at all times;
his praise shall be ever in my mouth.
3 Let my soul glory in the LORD;
the lowly will hear me and be glad.
4 Glorify the LORD with me,
let us together extol his name.

II

5 I sought the LORD, and he answered me
and delivered me from all my fears.
6 Look to him that you may be radiant with joy,
and your faces may not blush with shame.
7† When the afflicted man called out, the LORD heard,
and from all his distress he saved him.
8 The angel of the LORD encamps around those who fear him, and delivers them.
9† Taste and see how good the LORD is;
happy the man who takes refuge in him.
10 Fear the LORD, you his holy ones,
for nought is lacking to those who fear him.
11* The great grow poor and hungry;
but those who seek the LORD want for no good thing.

III

12† Come, children, hear me;
I will teach you the fear of the LORD.
13* Which of you desires life,
and takes delight in prosperous days?
14 Keep your tongue from evil
and your lips from speaking guile;
15 Turn from evil, and do good;
seek peace, and follow after it.
16* The LORD has eyes for the just,
and ears for their cry.
17 The LORD confronts the evildoers,
to destroy remembrance of them from the earth.
18 When the just cry out, the LORD hears them,
and from all their distress he rescues them.

11: Lk 1, 53.
13–17: 1 Pt 3, 10–12.
16: Sir 15, 19.

Ps 34: An alphabetic psalm having no apparent connection with the events mentioned in v 1. After an exhortation to glorify the Lord (2-4), the psalmist sings his grateful praise to God for having rescued him from danger (5-11), and concludes with an admonition to fear the Lord and keep his commandments (12-23).

34, 1: It was at the court of the Philistine King Achish that David feigned insanity after he had departed from the priest Abimelech. Some early scribe appears to have confused these two names here.

34, 7: When the afflicted man called out, the LORD heard: some render the passage, "Here is an afflicted man who called out, and the LORD heard him." The psalmist himself would then be this afflicted man.

34, 9: Taste and see: figurative language for, "know by experience."

34, 12: Children: in Hebrew wisdom literature a rabbi or teacher customarily addresses his disciples in this way.

19 The LORD is close to the broken-hearted;
and those who are crushed in spirit he saves.
20 Many are the troubles of the just man,
but out of them all the LORD delivers him;
21 He watches over all his bones;
not one of them shall be broken.
22 Vice slays the wicked,
and the enemies of the just pay for their guilt.

23 But the LORD redeems the lives of his servants;
no one incurs guilt who takes refuge in him.

PSALM 35†

Prayer for Help against Unjust Enemies

1† Of David.

I

Fight, O LORD, against those who fight me;
war against those who make war upon me.
2 Take up the shield and buckler,
and rise up in my defense.
3 Brandish the lance, and block the way
in the face of my pursuers;
Say to my soul,
"I am your salvation."
4 Let those be put to shame and disgraced
who seek my life;
Let those be turned back and confounded
who plot evil against me.
5 Let them be like chaff before the wind,
with the angel of the LORD driving them on.
6 Let their way be dark and slippery,
with the angel of the LORD pursuing them.

II

7 For without cause they set their snare for me,
without cause they dug a pit against my life.
8 Let ruin come upon them unawares,
and let the snare they have set catch them;
into the pit they have dug let them fall.
9 But I will rejoice in the LORD,
I will be joyful because of his salvation.
10* All my being shall say,
"O LORD, who is like you,
The rescuer of the afflicted man from those too strong for him,
of the afflicted and the needy from their despoilers?"
11 Unjust witnesses have risen up;
things I knew not of, they lay to my charge.
12 They have repaid me evil for good,
bringing bereavement to my soul.

III

13† But I, when they were ill, put on sackcloth;
I afflicted myself with fasting
and poured forth prayers within my bosom.
14 As though it were a friend of mine, or a brother, I went about;
like one bewailing a mother, I was bowed down in mourning.
15 Yet when I stumbled they were glad and gathered together;
they gathered together striking me unawares.
They tore at me without ceasing;
16 they put me to the test; they mocked me,
gnashing their teeth at me.

IV

17 O LORD, how long will you look on?
Save me from the roaring beasts;
from the lions, my only life.
18 I will give you thanks in the vast assembly,
in the mighty throng I will praise you.
19† Let not my unprovoked enemies rejoice over me;
let not my undeserved foes wink knowingly.
20 For civil words they speak not,
but against the peaceful in the land
they fashion treacherous speech.
21 And they open wide their mouths against me, saying, "Aha, aha! We saw him with our own eyes!"

35, 10: Ex 15, 11; Pss 71, 19; 89, 7.9; 113, 5.

Ps 35: Calling upon God to defend him (1-6), the psalmist describes the wickedness (7-12) and ingratitude (13-16) of his enemies, and then reiterates his plea for divine assistance (17-28).

35, 1-3: The martial language is purely figurative; the psalmist's enemies are not actually armed against him, but rather are those who have falsely accused him of serious crimes. Cf vv 11.21.

35, 13.15-17: In several places the Hebrew text of these verses is obscure and their translation somewhat uncertain.

35, 13: And poured forth prayers within my bosom: literally, "my prayers returned upon my bosom." Some take this to mean that he prayed with deeply bowed head so that his voice reverberated against his chest; but more probably it refers to the saying of silent prayers which remained within his heart.

35, 19: Unprovoked . . . undeserved: he has never given them a just reason for hating and persecuting him.

22 You, O LORD, have seen; be not silent;
LORD, be not far from me!
23 Awake, and be vigilant in my defense;
in my cause, my God and my Lord.
24 Do me justice, because you are just, O LORD;
my God, let them not rejoice over me.
25 Let them not say in their hearts, "Aha! This is what we wanted!"
Let them not say, "We have swallowed him up!"

26 Let all be put to shame and confounded who are glad at my misfortune.
Let those be clothed with shame and disgrace
who glory over me.
27 But let those shout for joy and be glad who favor my just cause;
And may they ever say, "The LORD be glorified;
he wills the prosperity of his servant!"
28 Then my tongue shall recount your justice,
your praise, all the day.

PSALM 36†

Human Wickedness and Divine Providence

1 For the leader. Of David, the servant of the LORD.

I

2*† Sin speaks to the wicked man in his heart;
there is no dread of God before his eyes,
3† For he beguiles himself with the thought that his guilt will not be found out or hated.
4 The words of his mouth are empty and false;
he has ceased to understand how to do good.
5 He plans wickedness in his bed;
he sets out on a way that is not good, with no repugnance for evil.

II

6 O LORD, your kindness reaches to heaven;
your faithfulness, to the clouds.
7† Your justice is like the mountains of God;
your judgments, like the mighty deep;
man and beast you save, O LORD.
8 How precious is your kindness, O God!
The children of men take refuge in the shadow of your wings.
9 They have their fill of the prime gifts of your house;
from your delightful stream you give them to drink.
10*† For with you is the fountain of life, and in your light we see light.

III

11 Keep up your kindness toward your friends,
your just defense of the upright of heart.
12 Let not the foot of the proud overtake me
nor the hand of the wicked disquiet me.
13 See how the evildoers have fallen; they are thrust down and cannot rise.

PSALM 37†

The Fate of Sinners and the Reward of the Just

1 Of David.

Be not vexed over evildoers,
nor jealous of those who do wrong;
2 For like grass they quickly wither, and like green herbs they wilt.

3† Trust in the LORD and do good,
that you may dwell in the land and enjoy security.
4 Take delight in the LORD,
and he will grant you your heart's requests.

36, 2: Rom 3, 18. 10: Jn 4, 14.

Ps 36: The thought of man's wickedness, which leads him to forget or ignore the just punishments due to his sins (2-5), is here contrasted with God's loving care for mankind (6-10). Hence, the psalmist prays to be delivered from wicked men (11-13).

36, 2: Speaks: the Hebrew word used here is used elsewhere only of the Lord speaking to his inspired prophets. Hence the sense here is, "It is the sinfulness in man's heart that inspires, or instigates, him to wickedness."

36, 3: Hated: punished by God.

36, 7: Like the mountains of God: as immense as the loftiest mountains.

36, 10: In your light we see light: light is the symbol of goodness and happiness; hence, "Through your goodness we enjoy true happiness."

Ps 37: Psalm 37 treats of the problem of evil: why the wicked seem to prosper while the good suffer. The answer of the psalmist is that this seeming injustice is short-lived. God will reward the good and punish the wicked even here on earth. Since this is an alphabetic psalm, these thoughts are repealed without much logical sequence throughout the whole psalm.

37, 3-9.11.22.29.34: The land: the Promised Land, Palestine, which however is a type or figure of heaven. Cf Heb 11, 9f. 13-16. Therefore, when our Lord in the Beatitudes (Mt 5, 4) quoted v 11 of this psalm, he meant it in the sense of, "The meek shall possess the kingdom of heaven."

5 Commit to the LORD your way;
trust in him, and he will act.
6 He will make justice dawn for you like the light;
bright as the noonday shall be your vindication.

7 Leave it to the LORD,
and wait for him;
Be not vexed at the successful path
of the man who does malicious
deeds.

8 Give up your anger, and forsake
wrath;
be not vexed, it will only harm
you.
9 For evildoers shall be cut off,
but those who wait for the LORD
shall possess the land.

10 Yet a little while, and the wicked man shall be no more;
though you mark his place he will not be there.
11* But the meek shall possess the land,
they shall delight in abounding
peace.

12 The wicked man plots against the just
and gnashes his teeth at them;
13 But the LORD laughs at him,
for he sees that his day is coming.

14 A sword the wicked draw; they bend their bow
to bring down the afflicted and the
poor,
to slaughter those whose path is
right.
15 But their swords shall pierce their own hearts,
and their bows shall be broken.

16 Better is the scanty store of the just than the great wealth of the wicked,
17 For the power of the wicked shall be broken,
but the LORD supports the just.

18 The LORD watches over the lives of the wholehearted;
their inheritance lasts forever.
19 They are not put to shame in an evil
time;
in days of famine they have plenty.

20 But the wicked perish,
and the enemies of the LORD, like
the beauty of the meadows,
vanish; like smoke they vanish.

21 The wicked man borrows and does not repay;
the just man is kindly and gives,

22 But those whom he blesses shall possess the land,
while those he curses shall be cut off.

23 By the LORD are the steps of a man
made firm,
and he approves his way.
24 Though he fall, he does not lie prostrate,
for the hand of the LORD sustains
him.

25 Neither in my youth, nor now that I am old,
have I seen a just man forsaken nor his descendants begging bread.
26 All the day he is kindly and lends,
and his descendants shall be blessed.

27 Turn from evil and do good,
that you may abide forever;
28 For the LORD loves what is right,
and forsakes not his faithful ones.

Criminals are destroyed,
and the posterity of the wicked is
cut off.
29 The just shall possess the land
and dwell in it forever.

30 The mouth of the just man tells of wisdom
and his tongue utters what is right.
31* The law of his God is in his heart,
and his steps do not falter.

32 The wicked man spies on the just,
and seeks to slay him.
33 The LORD will not leave him in his power
nor let him be condemned when he is on trial.

34 Wait for the LORD,
and keep his way;
He will promote you to ownership of the land;
when the wicked are destroyed,
you shall look on.

35 I saw a wicked man, fierce,
and stalwart as a flourishing, age-
old tree.
36 Yet as I passed by, lo! he was no
more;
I sought him, but he could not be found.

37† Watch the wholehearted man, and mark the upright;

37, 11: Mt 5, 4. 31: Is 51, 7.

† 37, 37f: A future for the man of peace . . . the future of the wicked: in his own life and in his offspring.

for there is a future for the man of peace.
38 Sinners shall all alike be destroyed;
the future of the wicked shall be
cut off.

39 The salvation of the just is from the LORD;
he is their refuge in time of distress.
40 And the LORD helps them and delivers them;
he delivers them from the wicked
and saves them,
because they take refuge in him.

PSALM 38†

Prayer of an Afflicted Sinner

1*† A psalm of David. For remembrance.

I

2* O LORD, in your anger punish me
not,
in your wrath chastise me not;
3 For your arrows have sunk deep in
me,
and your hand has come down
upon me.
4 There is no health in my flesh because of your indignation;
there is no wholeness in my bones
because of my sin,
5 For my iniquities have over-
whelmed me;
they are like a heavy burden, beyond my strength.

II

6 Noisome and festering are my sores
because of my folly,
7 I am stooped and bowed down profoundly;
all the day I go in mourning,
8 For my loins are filled with burning pains;
there is no health in my flesh.
9 I am numbed and severely crushed;
I roar with anguish of heart.

10 O LORD, all my desire is before you;
from you my groaning is not hid.
11 My heart throbs; my strength forsakes me;
the very light of my eyes has failed me.
12 My friends and my companions stand back because of my affliction;
my neighbors stand afar off.
13 Men lay snares for me seeking my
life;
they look to my misfortune, they speak of ruin,
treachery they talk of all the day.

III

14 But I am like a deaf man, hearing
not,
like a dumb man who opens not his mouth.
15 I am become like a man who neither hears
nor has in his mouth a retort.
16 Because for you, O LORD, I wait;
you, O LORD my God, will answer
17 When I say, "Let them not be glad on my account
who, when my foot slips, glory
over me."

IV

18 For I am very near to falling,
and my grief is with me always.
19 Indeed, I acknowledge my guilt;
I grieve over my sin.
20 But my undeserved enemies are strong;
many are my foes without cause.
21† Those who repay evil for good harass me for pursuing good.
22 Forsake me not, O LORD;
my God, be not far from me!
23 Make haste to help me,
O Lord my salvation!

PSALM 39†

The Brevity and Vanity of Life

1* For the leader, for Jeduthun. A psalm of David.

I

2 I said, "I will watch my ways,
so as not to sin with my tongue;
I will set a curb on my mouth."
While the wicked man was before
me
3 I kept dumb and silent;
I refrained from rash speech.
But my grief was stirred up;
4 hot grew my heart within me;
in my thoughts, a fire blazed forth.
I spoke out with my tongue:

38, 1: Ps 70, 1.
2: Ps 6, 2.

39, 1: 1 Chr 16, 41; Pss 62, 1; 77, 1.

† Ps 38: The third of the Penitential Psalms. Acknowledging that his sickness is a punishment for his sins (2-5), the psalmist describes his misery (6-13), which he is patiently bearing with trust in God (14-17), whose pardon and help he implores (18-23).

38, 1: For remembrance: or, "For the memorial sacrifice." Cf Lv 2, 2.9.16; 5, 12; Is 66, 3.

38, 21: Harass: the Hebrew expression, from which the word "Satan" is derived, signifies either "to harass" or "to slander." Cf Ps 109, 4.

Ps 39: Although he had resolved not to complain (2-4), the psalmist, like Ecclesiastes, laments the brevity and vanity of life (5-7); yet his hope is in the Lord (8f), to whom he prays for pardon and health (10-14).

II

5 Let me know, O LORD, my end
and what is the number of my days,
that I may learn how frail I am.
6 A short span you have made my days,
and my life is as nought before you;
only a breath is any human existence.
7 A phantom only, man goes his ways;
like vapor only are his restless pursuits;
he heaps up stores, and knows not who will use them.

III

8 And now, for what do I wait, O LORD?
In you is my hope.
9 From all my sins deliver me;
a fool's taunt let me not suffer.

IV

10 I was speechless and opened not my mouth,
because it was your doing;
11 Take away your scourge from me;
at the blow of your hand I wasted away.
12 With rebukes for guilt you chasten man;
you dissolve like a cobweb all that is dear to him;
only a breath is any man.
13 Hear my prayer, O LORD;
to my cry give ear;
to my weeping be not deaf!
For I am but a wayfarer before you,
a pilgrim like all my fathers.
14† Turn your gaze from me, that I may find respite ere I depart and be no more.

PSALM 40†

Gratitude and Prayer for Help

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

A

I

2 I have waited, waited for the LORD,
and he stooped toward me and heard my cry.
3 He drew me out of the pit of destruction,
out of the mud of the swamp;
He set my feet upon a crag;
he made firm my steps.
4† And he put a new song into my mouth,
a hymn to our God.
Many shall look on in awe
and trust in the LORD.

II

5 Happy the man who makes the LORD his trust;
who turns not to idolatry
or to those who stray after falsehood.
6 How numerous have you made,
O LORD, my God, your wondrous deeds!
And in your plans for us
there is none to equal you;
Should I wish to declare or to tell them,
they would be too many to recount.

III

7*† Sacrifice or oblation you wished not,
but ears open to obedience you gave me.
Holocausts or sin-offerings you sought not;
8 then said I, "Behold I come;
in the written scroll it is prescribed for me, 9 To do your will, O my God, is my delight,
and your law is within my heart!"
10 I announced your justice in the vast assembly;
I did not restrain my lips, as you, O LORD, know.
11 Your justice I kept not hid within my heart;
your faithfulness and your salvation I have spoken of;
I have made no secret of your kindness and your truth
in the vast assembly.

* 40, 7-9: Heb 10, 5-7.

† 39, 14: And be no more: here on earth. The psalmist naturally shared the common belief in a certain kind of life in the nether world after death. Job also complained in a similar strain of the brevity of life and the finality of death, while asserting at the same time his faith in a future life. Cf Jb 3, 13-19.

Ps 40: Psalm 40 consists of two distinct parts, probably once independent psalms. In the first section (2-11) the psalmist thanks God for having rescued him from the danger of death (2-4), and praises the Lord for his goodness toward all who trust in him (5f); to do God's will is the best sacrifice, he says (7-9), as he offers up this hymn of thanksgiving among the worshipers in the temple (10f). The second section (12-18), which is the same as Ps 70, is a typical supplication of one afflicted and persecuted.

40, 4: A new song: the hymn of thanksgiving in vv 5-11. Many hymns of praise and thanksgiving are thus described because they represent a complete change from the attitude of lamentation.

40, 7-9: Obedience is better than sacrifice. Cf 1 Sm 15, 22; Is 1, 10-20; Mi 6, 6-8. In Heb 10, 5-7 this passage, according to the somewhat different form of the ancient Greek version, is quoted and most fittingly applied to Christ, whose sacrifice of perfect obedience immeasurably surpasses the liturgical sacrifices of the old law.

B

I

12 Withhold not, O LORD, your compassion from me;
may your kindness and your truth ever preserve me.
13 For all about me are evils beyond reckoning;
my sins so overcome me that I cannot see;
They are more numerous than the hairs of my head,
and my heart fails me.

II

14* Deign, O LORD, to rescue me;
O LORD, make haste to help me.
15 Let all be put to shame and confusion
who seek to snatch away my life.
Let them be turned back in disgrace
who desire my ruin.
16 Let them be dismayed in their shame
who say to me, "Aha, aha!"
17 But may all who seek you
exult and be glad in you,
And may those who love your salvation
say ever, "The LORD be glorified." 18 Though I am afflicted and poor,
yet the LORD thinks of me.
You are my help and my deliverer;
O my God, hold not back!

PSALM 41†

Thanksgiving after Sickness

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

2 Happy is he who has regard for the lowly and the poor;
in the day of misfortune the LORD will deliver him.
3† The LORD will keep and preserve him;
he will make him happy on the earth,
and not give him over to the will of his enemies.
4 The LORD will help him on his sickbed,
he will take away all his ailment when he is ill.

II

5 Once I said, "O LORD, have pity on me;
heal me, though I have sinned against you.
6 My enemies say the worst of me:
'When will he die and his name perish?'
7 When one comes to see me, he speaks without sincerity;
his heart stores up malice;
when he leaves he gives voice to it outside.
8 All my foes whisper together against me;
against me they imagine the worst:
9 'A malignant disease fills his frame';
and 'Now that he lies ill, he will not rise again.'
10*†Even my friend who had my trust and partook of my bread, has raised his heel against me. (III) 11 But you, O LORD, have pity on me,
and raise me up,
that I may repay them."
12 That you love me I know by this,
that my enemy does not triumph over me, 13 But because of my integrity you sustain me
and let me stand before you forever.

* * *

14† Blessed be the LORD, the God of Israel,
from all eternity and forever.
Amen. Amen.

II: THE SECOND BOOK—Psalms 42-72

PSALM 42†

Desire for God and His Temple

1 For the leader. A maskil of the sons of Korah.

I

2† As the hind longs for the running waters,
so my soul longs for you, O God.

*
14-18: Ps 70, 2-6. 13, 18.
41, 10: Ps 55, 14f; Jn 13, 18.

Ps 41: After speaking in general terms about the merciful man obtaining God's mercy (2-4), the psalmist recounts how he had once prayed for that mercy when, in his sickness, he was reviled and persecuted even by his friends (5-11); therefore he now acknowledges with gratitude that God had heard his prayer (12-13).

41, 3: In the form of a prayer, "May the LORD keep," etc., this verse is employed in the liturgy of the Church as an invocation for the pope.

41, 10: These words were cited by our Lord at the Last Supper in regard to Judas, the perfect fulfillment of this type of treacherous friend. Cf Jn 13, 18.

41, 14: Doxology closing the First Book of the Psalter. It is not part of the psalm to which it is appended.

Psalms 42—43 represent respectively two thirds and one third of what was originally a single psalm. Each of the three parts ends an identical refrain (42, 6.12; 43, 5). The psalmist is in exile north of Palestine, far from Jerusalem. Homesick for the solemn services of the temple, he keeps up his courage by an ardent hope and an unshaken trust in God. The high lyrical style of this psalm makes it one of the finest poems in the Bible.

42, 2: O God: in the Second Book of the Psalms the proper name of God, Yahweh, "The LORD," was changed in almost all places by some early scribe to read, Elohim, "God." Thus we have the strange phrase, "O God, my God," instead of the original, "O LORD, my God," e.g., in Ps. 43, 4.

3† Athirst is my soul for God, the living God.
When shall I go and behold the face of God?
4† My tears are my food day and night,
as they say to me day after day,
"Where is your God?"
5 Those times I recall,
now that I pour out my soul within me,
When I went with the throng
and led them in procession to the house of God, Amid loud cries of joy and thanksgiving,
with the multitude keeping festival.
6 Why are you so downcast, O my soul?
Why do you sigh within me?
Hope in God! For I shall again be thanking him,
in the presence of my savior and my God.

II

7† Within me my soul is downcast;
so will I remember you
From the land of the Jordan and of Hermon, from Mount Mizar.
8† Deep calls unto deep
in the roar of your cataracts;
All your breakers and your billows pass over me.
9† By day the LORD bestows his grace,
and at night I have his song,
a prayer to my living God.
10 I sing to God, my rock:
"Why do you forget me?
Why must I go about in mourning,
with the enemy oppressing me?"
11 It crushes my bones that my foes mock me,
as they say to me day after day,
"Where is your God?"
12 Why are you so downcast, O my soul?
Why do you sigh within me?
Hope in God! For I shall again be thanking him,
in the presence of my savior and my God.

PSALM 43†

III

1 Do me justice, O God, and fight my fight against a faithless people;
from the deceitful and impious man rescue me.
2 For you, O God, are my strength.
Why do you keep me so far away?
Why must I go about in mourning,
with the enemy oppressing me?
3 Send forth your light and your fidelity;
they shall lead me on
And bring me to your holy mountain,
to your dwelling-place.
4† Then will I go in to the altar of God,
the God of my gladness and joy;
Then will I give you thanks upon the harp,
O God, my God!
5 Why are you so downcast, O my soul?
Why do you sigh within me?
Hope in God! For I shall again be thanking him,
in the presence of my savior and my God.

PSALM 44†

Israel's Past Glory and Present Need

1 For the leader. A maskil of the sons of Korah.

I

2* O God, our ears have heard,
our fathers have declared to us,
The deeds you did in their days,
in days of old:
3* How with your own hand you rooted out the nations and planted them;
you smashed the peoples, but for them you made room.
4 For not with their own sword did they conquer the land,
nor did their own arm make them victorious,

44, 2: Ps 78, 3. 3: Ps 80, 9.

42, 3: Go and behold the face of God: a Hebrew idiom meaning, "Visit the temple." Cf Ex 23, 17.

42, 4: Where is your God?: God gives no evidence of coming to his aid.

42, 7: The land of the Jordan: the region at the source of the Jordan, at the foot of Mount Hermon. Mount Mizar probably means, "the small mountain," presumably one of Hermon's foothills.

42, 8: Deep calls unto deep: the re-echoing roar of storm waters. The figure of affliction as a raging sea is common. Cf Pss 18, 5; 69, 2ff.15f; Jn 2, 3-6. Here, however, the thought may also have been suggested by the cataracts of the upper Jordan.

42, 9: My living God: literally "the God of my life"; hence some understand it as, "the God who gives me life." Perhaps Ps 42, 3 also was originally, "the God of my life." Cf Ps 43, 4.

43, 4: The Church frequently uses this as a responsorial psalm following the first scriptural reading at Mass.

Ps 44: A supplication of the community, reminding God of his past favors to Israel (2-9) in contrast to the present sad state of affairs, when the nation suffers from military defeat (10-17) and seems abandoned by him (18-23); therefore the people cry out to him to come to their aid (24-27). The historical circumstances of the psalm cannot be determined with certainty. The occasion may have been the invasion of the Assyrians under Sennacherib at the time of King Hezekiah (2 Kgs 18-19) or the calamities which followed on the defeat of King Josiah and the invasion of the Babylonians (2 Kings 23, 29—25, 26), or the time of national degradation during the Persian period, the fifth to the fourth century B.C. But there are no compelling reasons to put this psalm as late as the Maccabean times.

But it was your arm and your right hand and the light of your countenance,
in your love for them.
5 You are my king and my God,
who bestowed victories on Jacob.
6 Our foes through you we struck down;
through your name we trampled down our adversaries.
7 For not in my bow did I trust,
nor did my sword save me;
8 But you saved us from our foes,
and those who hated us you put to shame.
9 In God we gloried day by day;
your name we praised always.

II

10 Yet now you have cast us off and put us in disgrace,
and you go not forth with our armies.
11 You have let us be driven back by our foes;
those who hated us plundered us at will,
12* You marked us out as sheep to be slaughtered;
among the nations you scattered us.
13 You sold your people for no great price;
you made no profit from the sale of them.
14* You made us the reproach of our neighbors,
the mockery and the scorn of those around us.
15 You made us a byword among the nations,
a laughingstock among the peoples.
16 All the day my disgrace is before me,
and shame covers my face
17 At the voice of him who mocks and blasphemes,
and in the presence of the enemy and the avenger.

III

18 All this has come upon us, though we have not forgotten you,
nor have we been disloyal to your covenant;
19 Our hearts have not shrunk back,
nor our steps turned aside from your path, 20 Though you thrust us down into a place of misery
and covered us over with darkness.
21 If we had forgotten the name of our God
and stretched out our hands to a strange god, 22 Would not God have discovered this?
For he knows the secrets of the heart.
23* Yet for your sake we are being slain all the day;
we are looked upon as sheep to be slaughtered.

IV

24 Awake! Why are you asleep, O LORD?
Arise! Cast us not off forever!
25 Why do you hide your face,
forgetting our woe and our oppression?
26 For our souls are bowed down to the dust,
our bodies are pressed to the earth.
27 Arise, help us!
Redeem us for your kindness' sake.

PSALM 45†

Nuptial Ode for the Messianic King

1 For the leader; according to "Lilies." A maskil of the sons of Korah. A love song.

I

2 My heart overflows with a goodly theme;
as I sing my ode to the king,
my tongue is nimble as the pen of a skillful scribe.

II

3† Fairer in beauty are you than the sons of men;
grace is poured out upon your lips;
thus God has blessed you forever.
4 Gird your sword upon your thigh, O mighty one!
In your splendor and your majesty ride on triumphant 5 In the cause of truth and for the sake of justice;
and may your right hand show you wondrous deeds.

12: Lv 26, 33; Dt 4, 27. 14: Pss 79, 4; 80, 7. 23: Rom 8, 36.

Ps 45: After a dedicatory prologue (2), the psalmist sings the praises of the royal bridegroom (3-10) and his bride (11f), he then describes the wedding procession (13-16) and wishes the king illustrious offspring (17f). The occasion of this epithalamium may have been the marriage of some prince of the Davidic dynasty, perhaps Solomon, with a foreign princess who was apparently from Tyre. But Catholic tradition, in keeping with the inspired interpretation given in Heb 1, 8f, has always understood this psalm as referring, at least in a typical sense, to Christ and his bride, the Church. Cf Eph 5, 25ff.

45, 3: Fairer . . . than the sons of men: i.e., than other men; or, "Fairest among the sons of men."

6 Your arrows are sharp; peoples are subject to you;
the king's enemies lose heart.
7*† Your throne, O God, stands forever
and ever;
a tempered rod is your royal scepter.
8 You love justice and hate wickedness;
therefore God, your God, has anointed you with the oil of gladness above your fellow kings.
9 With myrrh and aloes and cassia
your robes are fragrant;
from ivory palaces string music
brings you joy.
10† The daughters of kings come to meet
you;
the queen takes her place at your right hand in gold of Ophir.

III

11 Hear, O daughter, and see; turn your ear,
forget your people and your father's house.
12† So shall the king desire your beauty;
for he is your lord, and you must worship him.
13† And the city of Tyre is here with gifts;
the rich among the people seek
your favor.
14 All glorious is the king's daughter
as she enters;
her raiment is threaded with spun
gold.
15 In embroidered apparel she is borne in to the king;
behind her the virgins of her train
are brought to you.
16 They are borne in with gladness and
joy;
they enter the palace of the king.

IV

17 The place of your fathers your sons shall have;
you shall make them princes
through all the land.
18 I will make your name memorable
through all generations;
therefore shall nations praise you
forever and ever.

PSALM 46†

God the Refuge of Israel

1 For the leader. A song of the sons of Korah; according to "Virgins."

I

2 God is our refuge and our strength,
an ever-present help in distress.
3† Therefore we fear not, though the earth be shaken
and mountains plunge into the depths of the sea;
4 Though its waters rage and foam and the mountains quake at its surging.
The LORD of hosts is with us;
our stronghold is the God of Jacob.

II

5† There is a stream whose runlets
gladden the city of God,
the holy dwelling of the Most High.
6 God is in its midst; it shall not be distrubed;
God will help it at the break of
dawn.
7 Though nations are in turmoil, kingdoms totter,
his voice resounds, the earth melts
away,
8 The LORD of hosts is with us;
our stronghold is the God of Jacob.

III

9 Come! behold the deeds of the LORD,
the astounding things he has wrought on earth:
10 He has stopped wars to the end of
the earth:
the bow he breaks; he splinters the spears;
he burns the shields with fire.
11 Desist! and confess that I am God,
exalted among the nations, exalted upon the earth.
12 The LORD of hosts is with us;
our stronghold is the God of Jacob.

45, 7f: Heb 1, 8f.

45, 7: Your throne, O God: the Hebrew king was called Elohim, "God," not in the polytheistic sense common among the ancient pagans, but as meaning "godlike," or, "taking the place of God." Cf Pss 58, 2; 82, 1.6. Of Christ alone can this passage be understood in its full literal sense. Some, however, amend the text to read, "Your throne is the throne of God." Cf 1 Chr 29, 23, where Solomon's throne is referred to as "the throne of the LORD."

45, 10: Ophir: a region on the coast of southern Arabia or eastern Africa, famous for its gold. Cf 1 Kgs 9, 28; 10, 11.22; Jb 22, 24.

45, 12: Worship him; pay him homage and be submissive to him.

45, 13: Your favor: in the current Hebrew text this is read as addressed to the bride, but it should probably be understood as referring to the king. The you in v 15 certainly signifies the king.

Ps 46: A hymn of victory whose dominant note is the refrain, The LORD of hosts is with us. The first strophe (2-4) sings of Israel's unshaken trust in the Lord; the second (5-8), of God's protection over Zion; the third (9-12), of his victory over war itself.

46, 3f: Figurative language for social and political upheavals.

46, 5: There is a stream: merely a symbol of divine favors. Jerusalem is not situated on a river, and its natural water supply is very meager.

PSALM 47†

The Lord the King of All Nations

1 For the leader. A psalm of the sons of Korah.

I

2 All you peoples, clap your hands,
shout to God with cries of gladness,
3 For the LORD, the Most High, the awesome,
is the great king over all the earth.
4 He brings peoples under us;
nations under our feet.
5 He chooses for us our inheritance,
the glory of Jacob, whom he loves.

II

6 God mounts his throne amid shouts of joy;
the LORD, amid trumpet blasts.
7 Sing praise to God, sing praise;
sing praise to our king, sing praise.

III

8 For the king of all the earth is God;
sing hymns of praise.
9 God reigns over the nations,
God sits upon his holy throne.
10† The princes of the peoples are gathered together with the people of the God of Abraham.
For God's are the guardians of the earth;
he is supreme.

PSALM 48†

Thanksgiving for Jerusalem's Deliverance

1 A psalm of the sons of Korah; a song.

I

2 Great is the LORD and wholly to be praised
in the city of our God.
His holy mountain, 3† fairest of heights,
is the joy of all the earth;
Mount Zion, "the recesses of the North,"
is the city of the great King.
4 God is with her castles;
renowned is he as a stronghold.

II

5 For lo! the kings assemble,
they come on together;
6 They also see, and at once are stunned,
terrified, routed;
7 Quaking seizes them there;
anguish, like a woman's in labor,
8† As though a wind from the east were shattering ships of Tarshish.

III

9† As we had heard, so have we seen in the city of the LORD of hosts,
In the city of our God;
God makes it firm forever.
10 O God, we ponder your kindness within your temple.
11 As your name, O God, so also your praise reaches to the ends of the earth.
Of justice your right hand is full;
12 let Mount Zion be glad,
Let the cities of Judah rejoice,
because of your judgments.

IV

13 Go about Zion, make the round;
count her towers.
14 Consider her ramparts,
examine her castles,
That you may tell a future generation
15† that such is God,
Our God forever and ever;
he will guide us.

PSALM 49†

The Vanity of Worldly Riches

1 For the leader. A psalm of the sons of Korah.

Ps 47: A hymn calling on all the nations of the earth to acknowledge the God of Israel as the only true God (2-5); when the Lord manifests himself as King of all (6f), the whole earth will proclaim his dominion (8-10). This prophecy finds its fulfillment only in the universal kingship of Christ.

47, 10: With the people of the God of Abraham: perhaps, with the ancient versions, to be read simply, "With the God of Abraham." By the princes of the peoples and the guardians of the earth are probably meant the angelic spirits who watch over the various nations. Cf Dt 32, 8-9; Dn 10, 13.

Ps 48: A hymn of thanksgiving, sung in the temple after Jerusalem had successfully withstood an attack launched by a league of hostile kings. It is uncertain which of the many attacks on Jerusalem is referred to here. This magnificent paean of triumph first praises God as Israel's true bulwark (2-4); then, briefly recounting how the enemies' attack was repulsed (5-8), the psalmist proclaims the Lord as the author of this great victory (9-12); finally, the people are invited to gaze with wonder on the strong fortifications of the city (13-15).

48, 3: "The recesses of the North": in Palestine and Syria, a traditional name for the earthly abode of God. Cf Is 14, 13.

48, 8: Ships of Tarshish: large ocean-going vessels, named after the distant land or port of Tarshish, probably ancient Tartessus in southern Spain, although other identifications have been proposed. Cf Is 2, 16; 60, 9; Jon 1, 3. Here the phrase is merely part of the figure and does not imply that the hostile kings came by boat.

48, 9: As we had heard of the wonders that God did in the days of our forefathers, so have we seen similar wonders now with our own eyes.

48, 15: He will guide us: "through the ages" should perhaps be added, with some ancient sources.

Ps 49: A sapiential psalm, treating of the problem as to why the wicked prosper. Here the answer is that wealth cannot save anyone from death, but for the good there is the hope of blessedness after death. Cf Pss 37; 73. After inviting all to listen to his wise words (2-5), the psalmist teaches that we should not envy the unjust rich, who must all die and leave their wealth behind (6-13. 17-21); they shall be brought to nought, but God will save the just (14-16).

2 Hear this, all you peoples;
hearken, all who dwell in the world,
3 Of lowly birth or high degree,
rich and poor alike.
4 My mouth shall speak wisdom;
prudence shall be the utterance of my heart.
5*† My ear is intent upon a proverb;
I will set forth my riddle to the music of the harp.

I

6 Why should I fear in evil days
when my wicked ensnarers ring me round?
7 They trust in their wealth;
the abundance of their riches is their boast.
8† Yet in no way can a man redeem himself,
or pay his own ransom to God;
9 Too high is the price to redeem one's life; he would never have enough
10 to remain alive always and not see destruction.
11* For he can see that wise men die,
and likewise the senseless and the stupid pass away,
leaving to others their wealth.
12 Tombs are their home forever,
their dwellings through all generations,
though they have called lands by their names.
13 Thus man, for all his splendor, does not abide;
he resembles the beasts that perish.

II

14 This is the way of those whose trust is folly,
the end of those contented with their lot:
15 Like sheep they are herded into the nether world;
death is their shepherd, and the upright rule over them.
Quickly their form is consumed;
the nether world is their palace.
16* But God will redeem me
from the power of the nether world by receiving me.

III

17 Fear not when a man grows rich,
when the wealth of his house becomes great, 18* For when he dies, he shall take none of it;
his wealth shall not follow him down.
19 Though in his lifetime he counted himself blessed,
"They will praise you for doing well for yourself," 20 He shall join the circle of his forebears who shall never more see light.
21 Man, for all his splendor, if he have not prudence, resembles the beasts that perish.

PSALM 50†

The Acceptable Sacrifice

1† A psalm of Asaph.

I

God the LORD has spoken and summoned the earth,
from the rising of the sun to its setting.
2 From Zion, perfect in beauty,
God shines forth.
3* May our God come and not be deaf to us!
Before him is a devouring fire;
around him is a raging storm.
4* He summons the heavens from above,
and the earth, to the trial of his people:
5 "Gather my faithful ones before me,
those who have made a covenant with me by sacrifice."
6 And for the heavens proclaim his justice;
for God himself is the judge.

II

7* "Hear, my people, and I will speak;
Israel, I will testify against you;
God, your God, am I.
8 Not for your sacrifices do I rebuke you,
for your holocausts are before me always.
9 I take from your house no bullock,
no goats out of your fold.
10 For mine are all the animals of the forests,
beasts by the thousand on my mountains.
11 I know all the birds of the air,

49, 5: Ps 78, 2; Mt 13, 35.
11: Ecci 2, 14. 16.
16: Pss 86, 13; 103, 4; 116, 8.
18: Eccl 5, 15f; Sir 11, 19f.
50, 3: Ex 19, 16-18, Dt 5, 22f.
4: Dt 4, 26; 31, 28; 32, 1.
7: Ex 20, 2.

†

49, 5: My riddle: this enigma, the problem of evil.
49, 8f: No man is rich enough to buy God off in order to save himself from death.
Ps 50: Like the prophets of old, the psalmist shows the worthlessness of external worship when it is divorced from true morality. God calls a solemn assembly (1-6), in which he tells his people he does not need their liturgical sacrifices but wants of them the true sacrifice of prayer (7-15); he then rebukes the hypocritical sinner (16-21), for without true worship, joined with true morality, there can be no salvation (22f).
50, 1: God the Lord: the Hebrew text has two synonyms for God (El and Elohim) before the word Yahweh (the Lord). A translation cannot adequately render this.

and whatever stirs in the plains,
belongs to me.
12* If I were hungry, I should not tell you,
for mine are the world and its fullness.
13 Do I eat the flesh of strong bulls,
or is the blood of goats my drink?
14 Offer to God praise as your sacrifice and fulfill your vows to the Most High;
15 Then call upon me in time of distress;
I will rescue you, and you shall glorify me."

III

16 But to the wicked man God says:
"Why do you recite my statutes,
and profess my covenant with your mouth, 17 Though you hate discipline
and cast my words behind you?
18 When you see a thief, you keep pace with him,
and with adulterers you throw in your lot.
19 To your mouth you give free rein for evil,
you harness your tongue to deceit.
20 You sit speaking against your brother;
against your mother's son you spread rumors.
21† When you do these things, shall I be deaf to it?
Or do you think that I am like yourself?
I will correct you by drawing them up before your eyes.

IV

22 "Consider this, you who forget God, lest I rend you and there be no one to rescue you.
23 He that offers praise as a sacrifice glorifies me;
and to him that goes the right way I will show the salvation of God."

PSALM 51†

The Miserere: Prayer of Repentance

1* For the leader. A Psalm of David,
2 when Nathan the prophet came to him after his sin with Bathsheba.

A

3 Have mercy on me, O God, in your goodness;
in the greatness of your compassion wipe out my offense.
4 Thoroughly wash me from my guilt and of my sin cleanse me.

B

I

5 For I acknowledge my offense,
and my sin is before me always:
6*† "Against you only have I sinned,
and done what is evil in your sight"—
That you may be justified in your sentence, vindicated when you condemn.
7*† Indeed, in guilt was I born,
and in sin my mother conceived me;
8 Behold, you are pleased with sincerity of heart,
and in my inmost being you teach me wisdom.

II

9† Cleanse me of sin with hyssop, that I may be purified;
wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.
10 Let me hear the sounds of joy and gladness;
the bones you have crushed shall rejoice.
11 Turn away your face from my sins,
and blot out all my guilt.

III

12 A clean heart create for me, O God,
and a steadfast spirit renew within me.
13 Cast me not out from your presence,
and your holy spirit take not from me.
14 Give me back the joy of your salvation,
and a willing spirit sustain in me.

---

* 12: Ps 24, 1. 51, 1: 2 Sm 12, 1. 6: Rom 3, 4. 7: Jb 14, 4; 15, 14.

Ps 51: The fourth and most famous of the Penitential Psalms. The psalmist begs pardon for his sins (3f), which he sincerely confesses (5-8); he prays to be restored to grace and purity (9-14); in return, he will make God's mercy known to others and will offer him the sacrifice of a contrite heart (15-19). An added strophe asks for the restoration of Jerusalem (20f).

51, 6: Against you only have I sinned: although sin may also be an injustice against a fellow man, yet the very essence of sin consists in its being an offense against God. That you may be justified: this refers to v 5 and gives the reason why the psalmist confesses his sins: when men see God punishing him, they will know that he is receiving his deserts.

51, 7: The penitent offers the fact of his innate sinfulness partly as a mitigating circumstance and partly as a humble acknowledgment of his profound corruption. Catholic tradition sees in this passage a foreshadowing of the basic Christian doctrine of original sin, which was not clearly revealed before the time of Christ. Cf Rom 5, 12-19; Eph 2, 3.

51, 9: Hyssop: a small bush whose many woody twigs made a natural sprinkler. It was prescribed in the Mosaic law as an instrument for scattering sacrificial blood or lustral water on persons to be ritually cleansed. Cf Ex 12, 22; Lv 14, 4; Nm 19, 18. These ceremonies were mere symbols of purification; here the psalmist prays that God may effectively "unsin" him, as the Hebrew literally means.

IV

15 I will teach transgressors your ways,
and sinners shall return to you.
16† Free me from blood guilt, O God, my saving God;
then my tongue shall revel in your justice.
17 O Lord, open my lips,
and my mouth shall proclaim your praise.
18*† For you are not pleased with sacrifices;
should I offer a holocaust, you would not accept it.
19 My sacrifice, O God, is a contrite spirit;
a heart contrite and humbled, O God, you will not spurn.

C

20† Be bountiful, O LORD, to Zion in your kindness
by rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem;
21 Then shall you be pleased with due sacrifices,
burnt offerings and holocausts;
then shall they offer up bullocks on your altar.

PSALM 52†

The Deceitful Tongue

1 For the leader. A maskil of David,
2 when Doeg the Edomite went and told Saul, "David went to the house of Ahimelech."

I

3 Why do you glory in evil,
you champion of infamy?
All the day 4 you plot harm;
your tongue is like a sharpened razor, you practiced deceiver!
5 You love evil rather than good,
falsehood rather than honest speech.
6 You love all that means ruin,
you of the deceitful tongue!

II

7 God himself shall demolish you;
forever he shall break you;
He shall pluck you from your tent,
and uproot you from the land of the living.

III

8 The just shall look on with awe;
then they shall laugh at him:
9 "This is the man who made not God the source of his strength,
But put his trust in his great wealth,
and his strength in harmful plots."
10† But I, like a green olive tree
in the house of God, Trust in the kindness of God
forever and ever.
11 I will thank you always for what you have done,
and proclaim the goodness of your name
before your faithful ones.

PSALM 53†

Lament over Widespread Corruption

1 For the leader; according to Mahalath. A maskil of David.

I

2* The fool says in his heart,
"There is no God."
Such are corrupt; they do abominable deeds;
there is not one who does good.
3 God looks down from heaven upon the children of men
to see if there be one who is wise and seeks God.
4* All alike have gone astray; they have become perverse;
there is not one who does good, not even one.

II

5 Will all these evildoers never learn,
they who eat up my people just as they eat bread,
who call not upon God?
6† There they were in great fear, where no fear was,
For God has scattered the bones of your besiegers;
they are put to shame, because God has rejected them.

III

7 Oh, that out of Zion would come the salvation of Israel!

18: Pss 40, 7; 50, 8-13. 53, 2-6: Ps 14, 1-5.
4: Rom 3, 12.

51, 16: Blood guilt: the guilt of murder. This is in keeping with the traditional ascription of this psalm to David. Cf 2 Sm 11, 6f; 12, 9.

51, 18: Not pleased with sacrifices: the mere offering of ritual sacrifice apart from good dispositions is not acceptable to God. Cf Ps 50. Others explain that the Mosaic law prescribes no sacrifice to expiate sins of adultery and murder, such as David was guilty of.

51, 20f: These two verses were added to the psalm some time after the destruction of Jerusalem by the Babylonians.

Ps 52: The psalmist inveighs against his deceitful enemy (3-6), foretelling the divine punishment in store for him (7) when God avenges the just (8-11).

52, 10: The just will flourish as unshaken in the house of God as a green olive tree which is well rooted in the soil. The words do not imply that olive trees grew in the courts of the temple. Cf Pss 92, 14; 128, 3.

Ps 53: With a few slight differences this is the same as Ps 14.

53, 6: God has scattered the bones of your besiegers: a reference, perhaps to the annihilation of Sennacherib's army before the walls of Jerusalem. Cf 2 Kgs 19, 35.

When God restores the well-being of his people,
then shall Jacob exult and Israel
be glad.

PSALM 54†

Confident Prayer in Great Peril

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments. A maskil of David,
2* when the Ziphites went and said to Saul, "David is hiding among us."

I

3† O God, by your name save me, and by your might defend my cause.
4 O God, hear my prayer;
hearken to the words of my
mouth.
5 For haughty men have risen up
against me,
and fierce men seek my life;
they set not God before their eyes.

II

6 Behold, God is my helper;
the Lord sustains my life.
7 Turn back the evil upon my foes;
in your faithfulness destroy them.
8 Freely will I offer you sacrifice:
I will praise your name, O LORD,
for its goodness,
9 Because from all distress you have rescued me,
and my eyes look down upon my enemies.

PSALM 55†

Complaint against Enemies and a Disloyal Companion

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments. A maskil of David.

I

2 Hearken, O God, to my prayer;
turn not away from my pleading;
3 give heed to me, and answer me.
I rock with grief, and am troubled 4 at the voice of the enemy and the clamor of the wicked.
For they bring down evil upon me,
and with fury they persecute me.
5 My heart quakes within me;
the terror of death has fallen upon
me.
6 Fear and trembling come upon me,
and horror overwhelms me,
7 And I say, "Had I but wings like a dove,
I would fly away and be at rest.
8 Far away I would flee;
I would lodge in the wilderness.
9 I would hasten to find shelter from the violent storm and the tempest."

II

10† Engulf them, O Lord; divide their counsels,
for in the city I see violence and strife;
11 day and night they prowl about
upon its walls.
Evil and mischief are in its midst;
12† [treachery is in its midst;]
oppression and fraud never depart from its streets.
13 If an enemy had reviled me,
I could have borne it;
If he who hates me had vaunted
himself against me,
I might have hidden from him.
14 But you, my other self,
my companion and my bosom
friend!
15 You, whose comradeship I enjoyed;
at whose side I walked in procession in the house of God!

III

16† Let death surprise them;
let them go down alive to the
nether world,
for evil is in their dwellings, in their very midst.
17 But I will call upon God,
and the LORD will save me.
18 In the evening, and at dawn, and at noon,
I will grieve and moan,
and he will hear my voice.
19 He will give me freedom and peace
from those who war against me,
for many there are who oppose
me.
20 God will hear me and will humble
them
from his eternal throne;
For improvement is not in them,
nor do they fear God.
21 Each one lays hands on his associates,
and violates his pact.

54, 2: 1 Sm 23, 19f; 26, 1.

† Ps 54: The psalmist implores God's assistance against foes that seek his life (3-5) and, confident of this aid, promises a sacrifice of thanksgiving (6-9).

54, 3: By your name: through the power of the Lord. God's name is his nature as revealed to man; hence this term is frequently used as practically synonymous with God himself, his majesty, power, etc.

Ps 55: Vividly describing his fear and his longing to flee (2-9), the psalmist bewails the disorders about him, especially the treachery of a former friend (10-15); full of confidence in God, he prays for the overthrow of the wicked and his own deliverance (16-24).

55, 10: Divide their counsels: some see here an allusion to the story of the tower of Babel. Cf Gn 11, 1-9.

55, 12: Treachery is in its midst: apparently this is merely a variant reading of the preceding line.

55, 16: Go down alive to the nether world: die a sudden death. Perhaps there is an allusion here to the death of Korah and his fellow rebels. Cf Nm 16, 31ff.

22 Softer than butter is his speech,
but war is in his heart;
His words are smoother than oil,
but they are drawn swords.
23* Cast your care upon the LORD,
and he will support you;
never will he permit the just man
to be disturbed.
24 And you, O God, will bring them
down
into the pit of destruction;
Men of blood and deceit shall not live out half their days.
But I trust in you, O LORD.

PSALM 56†

Trust in God, the Helper in Need

1* For the leader; according to Jonath . . . rehokim. A miktam of David, when the Philistines held him in Gath.

I

2 Have pity on me, O God, for men
trample upon me;
all the day they press their attack
against me.
3 My adversaries trample upon me all
the day;
yes, many fight against me.
O Most High, 4 when I begin to fear,
in you will I trust.
5 In God, in whose promise I
glory,
in God I trust without fear;
what can flesh do against
me?

II

6 All the day they molest me in my efforts;
their every thought is of evil
against me.
7 They gather together in hiding,
they watch my steps.
As they have waited for my life,
8 because of their wickedness keep them in view:
in your wrath bring down the peoples, O God.
9† My wanderings you have counted;
my tears are stored in your flask;
are they not recorded in your book?
10 Then do my enemies turn back,
when I call upon you;
now I know that God is with me.
11 In God, in whose promise I
glory,
12 in God I trust without fear;
what can flesh do against
me?

III

13* I am bound, O God, by vows to you;
your thank offerings I will fulfill.
14 For you have rescued me from
death,
my feet, too, from stumbling;
that I may walk before God in the light of the living.

PSALM 57†

Confident Prayer for Deliverance

1*† For the leader. (Do not destroy!) A miktam of David, when he fled away from Saul into the cave.

I

2 Have pity on me, O God; have pity
on me,
for in you I take refuge.
In the shadow of your wings I take refuge,
till harm pass by.
3 I call to God the Most High,
to God, my benefactor.
4 May he send from heaven and save
me;
may he make those a reproach
who trample upon me;
may God send his kindness and his faithfulness.
5 I lie prostrate in the midst of lions which devour men;
Their teeth are spears and arrows,
their tongue is a sharp sword.
6 Be exalted above the heavens,
O God;
above all the earth be your glory!

II

7 They have prepared a net for my feet;
they have bowed me down;
They have dug a pit before me,
but they fall into it.
8† My heart is steadfast, O God; my heart is steadfast;
I will sing and chant praise.
9† Awake, O my soul; awake, lyre and harp!
I will wake the dawn.

55, 23: 1 Pt 5, 7.
56, 1: 1 Sm 21, 10.
13: Ps 49, 16.
57, 1: 1 Sm 22, 1; 24, 1-3; Ps 142, 1

Ps 56: The psalmist prays for help against his enemies (2-4) and bewails their machinations (6-10); in a twice repeated refrain (5.11) he expresses his confidence in God, to whom he vows a thanksgiving sacrifice (13).

56, 9: My tears are stored in your flask: a quaint figure to express that God knows the psalmist's weeping and will requite it, for he is carefully collecting all his tears in a bottle.

Ps 57: Each of the two equal strophes contains a prayer for help, accompanied by joyful trust in God (2-5.7-11), and each strophe ends with the same refrain to God's glory (6.12).

57, 1: Do not destroy: here and in the next two psalms as well as in Ps 75, this is probably a mere annotation by some early scribe who wished to keep his copy from being discarded.

57, 8-12: With a few small variations these verses appear again at the beginning of Ps 108.

57, 9: I will wake the dawn: by a bold figure of speech the psalmist imagines that the sound he makes at night with his singing and music will arouse a new day to life.

10 I will give thanks to you among the peoples, O Lord.
I will chant your praise among the nations,
11 For your kindness towers to the heavens,
and your faithfulness to the skies.
12 Be exalted above the heavens, O God;
above all the earth be your glory!

PSALM 58†

Against Unjust Judges

1 For the leader. (Do not destroy!) A miktam of David.

I

2† Do you indeed like gods pronounce justice and judge fairly, you men of rank?
3 Nay, you willingly commit crimes;
on earth you look to the fruits of extortion.
4 From the womb the wicked are perverted;
astray from birth have the liars gone.
5† Theirs is poison like a serpent's,
like that of a stubborn snake that stops its ears,
6 That it may not hear the voice of enchanters
casting cunning spells.

II

7 O God, smash their teeth in their mouths;
the jaw-teeth of the lions, break, O Lord!
8 Let them vanish like water flowing off;
when they draw the bow, let their arrows be headless shafts.
9† Let them dissolve like a melting snail,
like an untimely birth that never sees the sun.
10† Unexpectedly, like a thorn-bush,
or like thistles, let the whirlwind carry them away.
11† The just man shall be glad when he sees vengeance;
he shall bathe his feet in the blood of the wicked.
12 And men shall say, "Truly there is a reward for the just;
truly there is a God who is judge on earth!"

PSALM 59†

Against Bloodthirsty Enemies

1* For the leader. (Do not destroy!) A miktam of David when Saul sent men to watch his house and put him to death.

I

2 Rescue me from my enemies, O my God;
from my adversaries defend me.
3 Rescue me from evildoers;
from bloodthirsty men save me.
4 For behold, they lie in wait for my life;
mighty men come together against me.
Not for any offense or sin of mine, O Lord;
5 for no guilt of mine they hurry to take up arms.
Rouse yourself to see it, and aid me,
6 for you are the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel.
Arise; punish all the nations;
have no pity on any worthless traitors.
7 Each evening they return,
they snarl like dogs
and prowl about the city.
8† Though they bay with their mouths,
and blasphemies are on their lips—
"Who is there to listen?"— 9 You, O Lord, laugh at them;
you deride all the nations.
10 O my strength! for you I watch;
for you, O God, are my stronghold,
11 my gracious God!

II

May God come to my aid;
may he show me the fall of my foes.
12 O God, slay them, lest they beguile my people;

* 59, 1: 1 Sm 19, 11.

† Ps 58: The psalmist rebukes certain unjust judges (2-6), and invokes God's punishment upon them (7-12).

58, 2: Like gods: literally, "O gods!" Here, as also in Ps 82, judges are called "gods" in the sense of "possessing godlike power," or of "taking God's place in pronouncing judgment." See note on Ps 45, 7.

58, 5f: Two figures derived from snake life are here skillfully combined: the harm done by these wicked judges is a deadly as a serpent's venom, and these men are as unresponsive to God's teachings as certain stubborn snakes are to the music of the snake charmer.

58, 9: Like a melting snail: the Hebrew is not entirely certain, but if the text is correct, it would seem that the ancients thought a snail "melted" or gradually wasted away to nothing—an idea derived, perhaps, from the sight of the trail of slime a snail leaves behind as it moves along and from the fact that dead snails are soon but empty shells.

58, 10: The Hebrew text of this verse is obscure and is variously reconstructed.

58, 11: He shall bathe his feet in the blood: by the figure of hyperbole, victorious soldiers may be said to wade through the blood of the vanquished. Cf Ps 68, 24; Is 63, 1-6.

Ps 59: In each of the two similar strophes (2-6.11b-14) the psalmist beseeches God to defend him against his wicked enemies. In the two similar refrains (7-11a.15-18) he compares the wicked to ravenous dogs.

59, 8: Who is there to listen?: this is their blasphemy, that they say, "God does not even hear of our wickedness."

shake them by your power, and bring them down,
O Lord our shield!
13 By the sin of their mouths and the word of their lips
let them be caught in their arrogance,
for the lies they have told under oath.
14 Consume them in wrath; consume,
till they are no more;
that men may know that God is the ruler of Jacob,
yes, to the ends of the earth.

15 Each evening they return,
they snarl like dogs
and prowl about the city;
16 They wander about as scavengers;
if they are not filled, they howl.
17 But I will sing of your strength and revel at dawn in your kind-
ness;
You have been my stronghold,
my refuge in the day of distress.
18 O my strength! your praise will I sing;
for you, O God, are my stronghold,
my gracious God!

PSALM 60†

Prayer after Defeat in Battle

1 For the leader; according to "The Lily of. . . ." A miktam of David (for teaching) 2* when he fought against Aram-naharaim and Aram-zobah; and Joab, coming back, killed twelve thousand Edomites in the "valley of salt."

I

3 O God, you have rejected us and broken our defenses;
you have been angry; rally us!
4 You have rocked the country and split it open;
repair the cracks in it, for it is tottering.
5 You have made your people feel hardships;
you have given us stupefying
wine.
6 You have raised for those who fear
you a banner
to which they may flee out of bow-shot
7*† That your loved ones may escape;
help us by your right hand, and answer us!

II

8† God promised in his sanctuary:
"Exultantly I will apportion Shechem,
and measure off the valley of Suc-
coth.
9† Mine is Gilead, and mine Manasseh; Ephraim is the helmet for my head; Judah, my scepter;
10† Moab shall serve as my washbowl;
upon Edom I will set my shoe;
I will triumph over Philistia."

III

11† Who will bring me into the fortified
city?
Who will lead me into Edom?
12 Have not you, O God, rejected us,
so that you go not forth, O God,
with our armies?
13 Give us aid against the foe,
for worthless is the help of men.
14 Under God we shall do valiantly;
it is he who will tread down our foes.

PSALM 61†

Prayer of the King in Exile

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments. Of David.

I

2 Hear, O God, my cry;
listen to my prayer!
3 From the earth's end I call to you
as my heart grows faint.
You will set me high upon a rock;
you will give me rest,
4 for you are my refuge,
a tower of strength against the enemy.
5 Oh, that I might lodge in your tent
forever,
take refuge in the shelter of your wings!

60, 2: 2 Sm 8, 3ff.8; 10, 6ff; 1 Chr 18, 12f. 7-14: Ps 108, 7-14.

Ps 60: Bewailing a military disaster, the psalmist first thanks God for having saved at least a part of the army (3-7); then, recalling God's promise to subjugate the neighboring nations (8-10), he puts his trust in the Lord's strong assistance (11-14).

60, 7-14: These verses occur again as the second half of Ps 108.

60, 8: I will apportion . . . and measure off: God will claim these places as his own. The valley of Succoth: probably the lower stretch of the Jabbok valley. Cf Gn 32, 23. 33, 17.

60, 9: Judah, my scepter: an allusion to the Blessing of Jacob. Cf Gn 49, 10.

60, 10: Moab shall serve as my washbowl: the Moabites shall perform menial service for Israel; possible there is also an allusion to the "basin" of the Dead Sea, which formed the western border of Moab. Upon Edom I will set my shoe: God will use Edom as his footstool; thus the ancient kings treated their conquered enemies. Cf Ps 110, 1. Some render, "Upon Edom I will throw my shoe," and understand this casting of a shoe on conquered territory as a sign of possession.

60, 11: The fortified city: perhaps Bozrah, the impregnable capital of Edom. Cf Is 34, 6; 63, 1; Am 1, 12.

Ps 61: Far away from Jerusalem, the psalmist longs for God's help and the shelter of his abode (2-5); confident of being heard, he prays for the king (6-9). This may be interpreted as a prayer of David when he had to flee from Jerusalem during the rebellion of Absalom. Cf 2 Sm 15-19.

6 You indeed, O God, have accepted my vows;
you granted me the heritage of those who fear your name.
7 Add to the days of the king's life;
let his years be many generations;
8 Let him sit enthroned before God forever;
bid kindness and faithfulness preserve him.
9 So will I sing the praises of your name forever,
fulfilling my vows day by day.

PSALM 62†

Trust in God Alone

1 For the leader; 'al Jeduthun. A psalm of David.

/

2 Only in God is my soul at rest;
from him comes my salvation.
3 He only is my rock and my salvation,
my stronghold; I shall not be disturbed at all.
4 How long will you set upon a man and all together beat him down
as though he were a sagging fence, a battered wall?
5† Truly from my place on high they plan to dislodge me;
they delight in lies;
They bless with their mouths,
but inwardly they curse.

6 Only in God be at rest, my soul,
for from him comes my hope.
7 He only is my rock and my salvation,
my stronghold; I shall not be disturbed.
8 With God is my safety and my glory,
he is the rock of my strength; my refuge is in God.
9 Trust in him at all times, O my people!
Pour out your hearts before him;
God is our refuge!

///

10 Only a breath are mortal men;
an illusion are men of rank;
In a balance they prove lighter,
all together, than a breath.
11 Trust not in extortion; in plunder take no empty pride;
though wealth abound, set not your heart upon it.
12† One thing God said; these two things which I heard:
that power belongs to God, 13* and yours, O Lord, is kindness;
and that you render to everyone according to his deeds.

PSALM 63†

Ardent Longing for God

1* A psalm of David, when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

2 O God, you are my God whom I seek;
for you my flesh pines and my soul thirsts
like the earth, parched, lifeless and without water.
3 Thus have I gazed toward you in the sanctuary
to see your power and your glory, 4 For your kindness is a greater good than life;
my lips shall glorify you.

5 Thus will I bless you while I live;
lifting up my hands, I will call upon your name.
6 As with the riches of a banquet shall my soul be satisfied,
and with exultant lips my mouth shall praise you.
7 I will remember you upon my couch,
and through the night watches I will meditate on you:
8 That you are my help,
and in the shadow of your wings I shout for joy.
9 My soul clings fast to you;
your right hand upholds me.

10 But they shall be destroyed who seek my life,
they shall go into the depths of the earth;
11† They shall be delivered over to the sword,
and shall be the prey of jackals.
12 The king, however, shall rejoice in God;
everyone who swears by him shall glory,
but the mouths of those who speak falsely shall be stopped.

* 62, 13: Mt 16, 27; Rom 2, 6. 63, 1: 1 Sm 24.

† Ps 62: The keynote of trust in God is struck in the twice-repeated refrain (2f.6f); though attacked by his enemies (4f), the psalmist asserts his unshaken confidence in the Lord (8f), for true strength comes not from earthly power but from God's grace (10-13).

62, 5: My place on high: a place of safety such as a fortress set on a cliff.

62, 12: One thing . . . two things: such use of progressive numbers is a device of Hebrew poetry. Cf Am 1, 3; Prv 6, 16-19; 30, 15.18.21.

Ps 63: Homesick for God's sanctuary (2-4), the psalmist holds fast to the Lord in spirit (5-9), confident that his enemies will be destroyed while the king and his loyal followers will triumph (10-12).

63, 11: The prey of jackals: their dead bodies shall be devoured by wild animals. Lack of proper burial was dreaded by the ancients.

PSALM 64†

Treacherous Conspirators Punished by God

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

2 Hear, O God, my voice in my lament;
from the dread enemy preserve my life.
3 Shelter me against the council of malefactors,
against the tumult of evildoers,
4 Who sharpen their tongues like swords,
who aim like arrows their bitter words,
5 Shooting from ambush at the innocent man,
suddenly shooting at him without fear.
6 They resolve on their wicked plan;
they conspire to set snares,
saying, "Who will see us?"
7 They devise a wicked scheme,
and conceal the scheme they have devised;
deep are the thoughts of each heart.

II

8 But God shoots his arrows at them;
suddenly they are struck.
9† He brings them down by their own tongues;
all who see them nod their heads.
10 And all men fear and proclaim the work of God,
and ponder what he has done.
11 The just man is glad in the LORD and takes refuge in him;
in him glory all the upright of heart.

PSALM 65†

Thanksgiving for God's Blessings

1 For the leader. A psalm of David. A song.

I

2† To you we owe our hymn of praise, O God, in Zion;
To you must vows be fulfilled, you who hear prayers.
3† To you all flesh must come
4 because of wicked deeds.
We are overcome by our sins;
it is you who pardon them.
5 Happy the man you choose, and bring to dwell in your courts.
May we be filled with the good things of your house,
the holy things of your temple!

II

6 With awe-inspiring deeds of justice you answer us,
O God our savior,
The hope of all the ends of the earth and of the distant seas.
7 You set the mountains in place by your power,
you who are girt with might;
8 You still the roaring of the seas,
the roaring of their waves and the tumult of the peoples.
9 And the dwellers at the earth's ends are in fear at your marvels;
the farthest east and west you make resound with joy.

III

10 You have visited the land and watered it;
greatly have you enriched it.
God's watercourses are filled;
you have prepared the grain.
11 Thus have you prepared the land:
drenching its furrows,
breaking up its clods,
Softening it with showers,
blessing its yield.
12† You have crowned the year with your bounty,
and your paths overflow with a rich harvest;
13 The untilled meadows overflow with it,
and rejoicing clothes the hills.
14 The fields are garmented with flocks
and the valleys blanketed with grain.
They shout and sing for joy.

PSALM 66†

Praise of God, Israel's Deliverer

1 For the leader. A psalm; a song.

Shout joyfully to God, all you on earth,

†

Ps 64: The psalmist prays for God's help against deceitful foes who secretly plot against him (2-7); God will repay them with exemplary punishment (8-11).

64, 9: Nod their heads: a gesture of derision. Cf Pss 22, 8; 44, 15; 109, 25.

Ps 65: A hymn of thanksgiving, sung by the community for a bountiful harvest. Humbly acknowledging that they are unworthy of God's favors (2-5), the people praise him for his power over all the earth (6-9), and thank him for the rains which produced such abundant crops (10-14).

65, 2: Vows: the Israelites were accustomed to promise sacrifices in the temple if their prayers were heard.

65, 3: To you all flesh must come: all men must have recourse to God's mercy.

65, 12: Your paths overflow with a rich harvest: literally, "Your wagon-wheel tracks drip with oil."

Ps 66: There are two distinct parts here, which perhaps originally were two independent psalms. The first part (1-12) is a hymn of the community praising God's omnipotence as revealed throughout history, especially at the Exodus (5-7), and now in the recent restoration of the nation from some calamity (8-12). The second part (13-20) is the thanksgiving hymn of an individual fulfilling his vows in the temple (13-15) and recounting how the Lord had heard his prayer (16-20).

sing praise to the glory of his name;
proclaim his glorious praise.
3† Say to God, "How tremendous are your deeds!
for your great strength your enemies fawn upon you.
4 Let all on earth worship and sing praise to you,
sing praise to your name!"

I

5 Come and see the works of God,
his tremendous deeds among men.
6* He has changed the sea into dry land;
through the river they passed on foot;
therefore let us rejoice in him.
7 He rules by his might forever;
his eyes watch the nations;
rebels may not exalt themselves.
8 Bless our God, you peoples,
loudly sound his praise;
9 He has given life to our souls,
and has not let our feet slip.
10 For you have tested us, O God!
You have tried us as silver is tried by fire;
11 You have brought us into a snare;
you laid a heavy burden on our backs.
12 You let men ride over our heads;
we went through fire and water,
but you have led us out to refreshment.

II

13 I will bring holocausts to your house;
to you I will fulfill the vows 14 Which my lips uttered
and my words promised in my distress.
15 Holocausts of fatlings I will offer you,
with burnt offerings of rams;
I will sacrifice oxen and goats.
16 Hear now, all you who fear God, while I declare
what he has done for me.
17† When I appealed to him in words,
praise was on the tip of my tongue.
18 Were I to cherish wickedness in my heart,
the LORD would not hear;
19 But God has heard;
he has hearkened to the sound of my prayer.
20 Blessed be God who refused me not my prayer or his kindness!

PSALM 67†

Harvest Prayer That All Men May Worship God

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments. A psalm; a song.

I

2*† May God have pity on us and bless us;
may he let his face shine upon us.
3 So may your way be known upon earth;
among all nations, your salvation.
4† May the peoples praise you, O God;
may all the peoples praise you!

II

5 May the nations be glad and exult
because you rule the peoples in equity;
the nations on the earth you guide.
6 May the peoples praise you, O God;
may all the peoples praise you!

III

7 The earth has yielded its fruits;
God, our God, has blessed us.
8 May God bless us,
and may all the ends of the earth fear him!

PSALM 68†

God's Triumphal Procession

1 For the leader. A psalm of David; a song.

66, 6: Ex 14, 21f. 67, 2: Nm 6, 24f.

66, 3: Fawn upon you: pay an unwilling tribute of praise. Cf Pss 18, 45; 81, 16.

66, 17: Praise was on the tip of my tongue: literally, "praise was under my tongue." Even while the psalmist was praying aloud for help, he was already thanking God silently for having heard his prayer.

Ps 67: The refrain (4.6 and perhaps originally after 8) calls on all the nations of the earth to praise the Lord, because he blesses Israel (2f), governs all peoples wisely (5), and bestows an abundant harvest (7). Israel's hope of seeing the Lord acknowledged as the only God by all the nations was based on, and found its sole fulfillment in, the promise of the Messiah. Cf Gn 12, 2f.

67, 2: These words are similar to the priestly blessing of Nm 6, 22-27.

67, 4.6: Praise: the Hebrew means more exactly, "give grateful praise"; hence, according to the context, it is often translated, "give thanks."

Ps 68: One of the most magnificent but, at the same time, one of the most difficult hymns of the Psalter. In several places the Hebrew text is poorly preserved. It was written to be sung as the ark of the covenant was carried in solemn procession into the temple. Beginning with the ancient war cry of Israel, which was used when the ark was carried into battle (2), the opening strophe proclaims the defeat of the wicked and the triumph of the just (3f). After general praise of God's goodness (5-7), the Lord's victorious march from Egypt to Sinai (8-11) and the conquest of the Promised Land (12-15) are briefly and poetically recounted; reference is then made to God's choice of Zion for his dwelling (16-19), as well as to all his victories (20-24); finally, with a description of the present procession serving as an interlude (25-28), God is implored to spread his mighty rule (29-32) until all the earth sings his glory (33-36).

I

2*† God arises; his enemies are scattered,
and those who hate him flee before him.
3 As smoke is driven away, so are they driven;
as wax melts before the fire,
so the wicked perish before God.
4 But the just rejoice and exult before God;
they are glad and rejoice.

II

5*† Sing to God, chant praise to his name,
extol him who rides upon the clouds,
Whose name is the LORD;
exult before him.
6 The father of orphans and the defender of widows is God in his holy dwelling.
7 God gives a home to the forsaken;
he leads forth prisoners to prosperity;
only rebels remain in the parched land.

III

8* O God, when you went forth at the head of your people,
when you marched through the wilderness, 9 The earth quaked; it rained from heaven at the presence of God,
at the presence of God, the God of Israel, the One of Sinai.
10 A bountiful rain you showered down, O God, upon your inheritance;
you restored the land when it languished;
11 Your flock settled in it;
in your goodness, O God, you provided it for the needy.

IV

12† The Lord gives the word;
women bear the glad tidings, a vast army:
13 "Kings and their hosts are fleeing, fleeing,
and the household shall divide the spoils.
14† Though you rested among the sheepfolds,
the wings of the dove shone with silver,
and her pinions with a golden hue.
15 While the Almighty dispersed the kings there, snow fell on Zalmon."

V

16 High the mountains of Bashan;
rugged the mountains of Bashan.
17† Why look you jealously, you rugged mountains,
at the mountain God has chosen for his throne,
where the LORD himself will dwell forever?
18 The chariots of God are myriad, thousands on thousands;
the Lord advances from Sinai to the sanctuary.
19*† You have ascended on high, taken captives, received men as gifts—
even rebels; the LORD God enters his dwelling.

VI

20 Blessed day by day be the Lord,
who bears our burdens; God, who is our salvation.
21 God is a saving God for us;
the LORD, my Lord, controls the passageways of death.
22 Surely God crushes the heads of his enemies,
the hairy crowns of those who stalk about in their guilt.
23 The Lord said: "I will fetch them back from Bashan;
I will fetch them back from the depths of the sea,
24 So that you will bathe your feet in blood;
the tongues of your dogs will have their share of your enemies."

VII

25 They view your progress, O God,
the progress of my God, my King, into the sanctuary;
26 The singers lead, the minstrels follow,

68, 2: Nm 10, 35.
5: Ex 15, 3.
8f: Jgs 5, 4f.
19: Eph 4, 8.

68, 2: What is here stated as a fact is given in the form of a prayer in Nm 10, 35.

68, 5: Extol him who rides upon the clouds: the meaning of the Hebrew is not entirely certain. The revised Latin Psalter has, "Lay a road for him who rides through the desert." However, the expression "The Rider of the Clouds" as a divine epithet is very ancient, since it occurs in Canaanite literature even before the time of Moses, and it is not uncommon in the Old Testament. Cf Dt 33, 26; Pss 18, 10ff; 68, 34; Is 19, 1; Hb 3, 8.

68, 12: The Israelite women took an active part in celebrating a victory. Cf Ex 15, 20; 1 Sm 18, 6f.

68, 14f: The Hebrew text of these verses is very obscure. The translation given above follows the revised Latin Psalter. The dove: perhaps a figure of the victorious army of Israel. Cf Ps 74, 19. Snow fell: either literally, or figuratively of the fallen enemy lying as thick as snowflakes on the battlefield. Zalmon: probably a mountain in the Hauran or in Bashan. The historical event referred to is uncertain. Cf Nm 21, 33ff; Dt 3, 1-10.

68, 17: the mountain God has chosen: Mount Zion.

68, 19: Ascended on high: to the divine throne, either on Zion or in heaven. Received men as gifts: St. Paul quotes this somewhat freely according to the Greek version as, "He gave gifts to men," and then applies it to Christ bestowing his charismatic graces on the Church after his ascension into heaven. Cf Eph 4, 8.

in their midst the maidens play on timbrels.
27 In your choirs bless God;
bless the Lord, you of Israel's wellspring!
28 There is Benjamin, the youngest, leading them;
the princes of Judah in a body,
the princes of Zebulun, the princes of Naphtall.

VIII
29 Show forth, O God, your power.
the power, O God, with which you took our part;
30 For your temple in Jerusalem
let the kings bring you gifts.
31† Rebuke the wild beast of the reeds,
the herd of strong bulls and the bullocks, the nations.
Let them prostrate themselves with bars of silver;
scatter the peoples who delight in war.
32 Let nobles come from Egypt;
let Ethiopia extend its hands to God.

IX
33 You kingdoms of the earth, sing to God, chant praise to the Lord
34† who rides on the heights of the ancient heavens.
Behold, his voice resounds, the voice of power:
35 "Confess the power of God!"
Over Israel in his majesty;
his power is in the skies.
36 Awesome in his sanctuary is God, the God of Israel;
he gives power and strength to his people.
Blessed be God!

PSALM 69†

A Cry of Anguish in Great Distress

1 For the leader; according to "Lilies." Of David.

I
2† Save me, O God,
for the waters threaten my life;
3 I am sunk in the abysmal swamp
where there is no foothold;
I have reached the watery depths;
the flood overwhelms me.
4 I am wearied with calling,
my throat is parched;
My eyes have failed
with looking for my God.
5*† Those outnumber the hairs of my head
who hate me without cause.
Too many for my strength
are they who wrongfully are my enemies.
Must I restore what I did not steal?

II
6† O God, you know my folly,
and my faults are not hid from you.
7 Let not those who wait for you be put to shame through me,
O Lord, GOD of hosts.
Let not those who seek you blush for me,
O God of Israel,
8 Since for your sake I bear insult,
and shame covers my face.
9 I have become an outcast to my brothers,
a stranger to my mother's sons,
10*† Because zeal for your house consumes me,
and the insults of those who blaspheme you fall upon me.
11 I humbled myself with fasting,
and this was made a reproach to me.
12 I made sackcloth my garment,
and I became a byword for them.
13 They who sit at the gate gossip about me,
and drunkards make me the butt of their songs.

III
14 But I pray to you, O LORD,
for the time of your favor, O God!
In your great kindness answer me
with your constant help.
15 Rescue me out of the mire; may I not sink!
may I be rescued from my foes,
and from the watery depths.
16 Let not the flood-waters overwhelm me,
nor the abyss swallow me up,

* 69, 5: Jn 15, 25. 15, 3.
10: Jn 2, 17; Rom

† 68, 31: The wild beast of the reeds: most probably Egypt. Cf Ez 29, 2ff. Bars of silver: tribute from the foreign nations brought to Zion.

68, 34: Who rides: see note on v 5.

Ps 69: A lamentation similar to Ps 22. The psalmist describes his extreme misery (2-5) and unmerited disgrace (6-13), imploring God to vindicate him (14-22) and punish his enemies (23-29); in return he will offer God a sacrifice of praise (30-35). As in Ps 51, two verses were added at the end foretelling the restoration of Israel from exile in Babylon (36f). Since several passages are quoted in the New Testament in reference to Christ, Catholic traditon has always considered this psalm as at least indirectly messianic.

69, 2: The waters: a common metaphor for affliction. Cf Pss 18, 5; 42, 8; 88, 8.

69, 5: Who hate me without cause: according to our Lord's own statement these words were fully verified in the hatred his enemies bore him. Cf Jn 15, 25.

69, 6: My folly, and my faults: the psalmist is guilty, he admits, of certain sins, but not of the grave crimes his enemies charge him with. This verse cannot be interpreted in a messianic sense except in so far as Christ took upon himself the sins of the world.

69, 10: Zeal for your house consumes me: eminently fulfilled in Christ's cleansing of the temple. Cf Jn 2, 17. The insults of those who blaspheme you fall upon me: cited by St. Paul as an example of our Lord's unselfishness. Cf Rom 15, 3.

nor the pit close its mouth over me.
17 Answer me, O LORD, for bounteous is your kindness;
in your great mercy turn toward me.
18 Hide not your face from your servant;
in my distress, make haste to answer me.
19 Come and ransom my life;
as an answer for my enemies, redeem me.
20 You know my reproach, my shame and my ignominy;
before you are all my foes.
21 Insult has broken my heart, and I am weak,
I looked for sympathy, but there was none;
for comforters, and I found none.
22*† Rather they put gall in my food,
and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink.

IV

23*† Let their own table be a snare before them,
and a net for their friends.
24 Let their eyes grow dim so that they cannot see,
and keep their backs always feeble.
25 Pour out your wrath upon them;
let the fury of your anger overtake them.
26*† Let their encampment become desolate;
in their tents let there be no one to dwell.
27 For they kept after him whom you smote,
and added to the pain of him you wounded.
28 Heap guilt upon their guilt,
and let them not attain to your reward.
29 May they be erased from the book of the living,
and not be recorded with the just!

V

30 But I am afflicted and in pain;
let your saving help, O God, protect me.
31 I will praise the name of God in song,
and I will glorify him with thanksgiving;
32 This will please the LORD more than oxen or bullocks with horns and divided hooves:
33 "See, you lowly ones, and be glad;
you who seek God, may your hearts be merry!
34 For the LORD hears the poor, and his own who are in bonds he spurns not.
35 Let the heavens and the earth praise him,
the seas and whatever moves in them!"
36 For God will save Zion
and rebuild the cities of Judah.
They shall dwell in the land and own it, 37 and the descendants of his servants shall inherit it,
and those who love his name shall inhabit it.

PSALM 70†

Prayer for Divine Help

1 For the leader; of David. For remembrance.

2* Deign, O God, to rescue me;
O LORD, make haste to help me.
3 Let them be put to shame and confounded
who seek my life.
Let them be turned back in disgrace
who desire my ruin.
4 Let them retire in their shame
who say to me, "Aha, aha!"
5 But may all who seek you
exult and be glad in you,
And may those who love your salvation
say ever, "God be glorified!"
6 But I am afflicted and poor;
O God, hasten to me!
You are my help and my deliverer;
O LORD, hold not back!

PSALM 71†

Humble Prayer in Time of Old Age

I

1 In you, O LORD, I take refuge;
let me never be put to shame.
2 In your justice rescue me, and deliver me;
incline your ear to me, and save me.

22: Mt 27, 34.48; Mk 15, 23. 23f: Rom 11, 9f. 26: Acts 1, 20. 70, 2-6: Ps 40, 14-18.

69, 22: A prophecy fulfilled in the bitter drink given to Christ on the cross. Cf Jn 19, 28. Gall: the Hebrew word probably signifies the juice of some bitter and poisonous plant.

69, 23: Table: a mere tablecloth spread on the ground, on which one might trip.

69, 26: Applied to Judas in Acts 1, 20.

Ps 70: Almost identical with Ps 40, 14-18.

Ps 71: The aged psalmist, who has always put his trust in the Lord, implores his aid (1-7) now that he is afflicted and persecuted (9-13); each of these two sections ends with a promise of grateful praise (8.14-16); almost all of the third section (17-24) likewise describes the same confident expectation of being heard by God.

3 Be my rock of refuge,
a stronghold to give me safety,
for you are my rock and my fortress.
4 O my God, rescue me from the hand of the wicked,
from the grasp of the criminal and the violent.
5 For you are my hope, O Lord;
my trust, O God, from my youth.
6† On you I depend from birth;
from my mother's womb you are my strength;
constant has been my hope in you.
7† A portent am I to many,
but you are my strong refuge!
8 My mouth shall be filled with your praise,
with your glory day by day.

II

9 Cast me not off in my old age;
as my strength fails, forsake me not,
10 For my enemies speak against me,
and they who keep watch against my life take counsel together.
11 They say, "God has forsaken him;
pursue and seize him,
for there is no one to rescue him." 12 O God, be not far from me;
my God, make haste to help me.
13 Let them be put to shame and consumed who attack my life;
let them be wrapped in ignominy and disgrace who seek to harm me.
14 But I will always hope and praise you ever more and more.
15† My mouth shall declare your justice,
day by day your salvation,
though I know not their extent.
16 I will treat of the mighty works of the LORD;
O God, I will tell of your singular justice.

III

17 O God, you have taught me from my youth,
and till the present I proclaim your wondrous deeds;
18 And now that I am old and gray,
O God, forsake me not Till I proclaim your strength to every generation that is to come.
19 Your power and your justice,
O God, reach to heaven.
You have done great things;
O God, who is like you?
20 Though you have made me feel many bitter afflictions,
you will again revive me;
from the depths of the earth you will once more raise me.
21 Renew your benefits toward me,
and comfort me over and over.
22 So will I give you thanks with music on the lyre,
for your faithfulness, O my God!
I will sing your praises with the harp,
O Holy One of Israel!
23 My lips shall shout for joy
as I sing your praises;
My soul also, which you have redeemed,
24 and my tongue day by day shall discourse on your justice.
How shamed and how disgraced are those who sought to harm me!

PSALM 72†

The Kingdom of the Messiah

1† Of Solomon.

I

O God, with your judgment endow the king,
and with your justice, the king's son;
2† He shall govern your people with justice
and your afflicted ones with judgment.
3 The mountains shall yield peace for the people,
and the hills justice.
4 He shall defend the afflicted among the people,
save the children of the poor,
and crush the oppressor.

71, 6: My strength: the exact meaning of the Hebrew is uncertain. The revised Latin Psalter still retains "my protector" of the older Latin version.

71, 7: A portent: many marvel that the psalmist is so afflicted, looking on him as cursed by God. Cf Dt 28, 46. Some commentators, however, understand this as, "Many marvel at my invincible confidence in God and at the great graces he bestows on me."

71, 15: Though I know not their extent: the psalmist admits that God's acts of kindness toward him are more numerous than he himself realizes.

Ps 72: A song of good wishes for the king, perhaps composed originally for the coronation ceremonies of one of David's successors. But some of the expressions cannot be understood of any earthly monarch except as pure hyperbole. They find their complete fulfillment only in Christ. Hence the traditional interpretation rightly treats the psalm as messianic, at least in a typical sense. The early king is here a type or figure of Christ the King. The Hebrew verbs seem to vary between the future and the jussive. Some commentators render them all in the future. The thoughts here expressed concern the king's just rule (1-4), his long and glorious reign (5-7), his universal dominion (8-11), his defense of the poor and oppressed (12-14), and the prosperity of his kingdom (15-17).

72, 1: The king . . . the king's son: the same individual is meant; his father was also a king.

72, 2: With judgment: he shall procure their rights for them.

II

5 May he endure as long as the sun,
and like the moon through all generations.
6 He shall be like rain coming down on the meadow,
like showers watering the earth.
7 Justice shall flower in his days,
and profound peace, till the moon be no more.

III

8† May he rule from sea to sea,
and from the River to the ends of the earth.
9 His foes shall bow before him,
and his enemies shall lick the dust.
10*† The kings of Tarshish and the Isles shall offer gifts;
the kings of Arabia and Seba shall bring tribute.
11 All kings shall pay him homage,
all nations shall serve him.

IV

12 For he shall rescue the poor man when he cries out, and the afflicted when he has no one to help him.
13 He shall have pity for the lowly and the poor;
the lives of the poor he shall save.
14 From fraud and violence he shall redeem them,
and precious shall their blood be in his sight.

V

15 May he live to be given the gold of Arabia,
and to be prayed for continually;
day by day shall they bless him.
16 May there be an abundance of grain upon the earth;
on the tops of the mountains the crops shall rustle like Lebanon;
the city dwellers shall flourish like the verdure of the fields.
17† May his name be blessed forever;
as long as the sun his name shall remain.
In him shall all the tribes of the earth be blessed;
all the nations shall proclaim his happiness.

18*† Blessed be the LORD, the God of Israel,
who alone does wondrous deeds.
19 And blessed forever be his glorious name;
may the whole earth be filled with his glory.
Amen. Amen.

20† The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended.

III: THE THIRD BOOK—Psalms 73-89

PSALM 73†

The False Happiness of the Wicked

1 A psalm of Asaph.

How good God is to the upright;
the LORD, to those who are clean of heart!
2 But, as for me, I almost lost my balance;
my feet all but slipped,
3 Because I was envious of the arrogant
when I saw them prosper though they were wicked.

I

4 For they are in no pain;
their bodies are sound and sleek;
5 They are free from the burdens of mortals,
and are not afflicted like the rest of men.
6 So pride adorns them as a necklace;
as a robe violence enwraps them.
7 Out of their crassness comes iniquity;
their fancies overflow their hearts.
8 They scoff and speak evil;
outrage from on high they threaten.
9† They set their mouthings in place of heaven,
and their pronouncements roam the earth:

72, 10: Ps 68, 30. 53; 106, 48.
18f: Pss 41, 14; 89,

72, 8: Indicates the boundaries of the civilized world at that time: from the Mediterranean Sea to the Persian Gulf (the "Eastern Sea"), and from the Euphrates (the River) to the islands and lands of southwestern Europe, then considered the ends of the earth.

72, 10: Tarshish and the Isles: the far west. Cf Ps 48, 8. Arabia and Seba: the far south. Cf 1 Kgs 10, 1.

72, 17: In him . . . be blessed: either, "Because of him all men shall receive God's blessings," or, "All men shall use his name in giving a blessing, saying, 'May you be as blessed as this king.'" Cf Gn 48, 20.

72, 18f: The doxology at the end of the Second Book of the Psalms; a later addition. Cf 41, 14.

72, 20: This note shows that Ps 72 once constituted the end of a certain collection of Davidic psalms. It does not exclude the possibility of some other Davidic psalms being incorporated in the following collections.

Ps 73: Like Pss 37 and 49, this sapiential psalm is concerned with the problem of why the wicked seem to prosper. After showing how dangerous the thought of such apparent injustice may be (1-3), the psalmist sets forth the difficulty in clear terms by describing the earthly happiness of the wicked who blaspheme God with seeming impunity (4-12), whereas the good apparently suffer in vain (13-16); the only solution, as he has learned from God himself, lies in the hereafter (17), where the fortunes of the prosperous sinner will suddenly be reversed (18-22) while the good will enjoy God's presence forever (23-28).

73, 9: They set their mouthings in place of heaven: literally, "They set their mouths in heaven," which seems to mean, "They speak as if they were God." The revised Latin Psalter renders it, "They attack heaven with their mouths."

10† "So he brings his people to such a pass that they have not even water!"
11 And they say, "How does God know?"
And, "Is there any knowledge in the Most High?"
12 Such, then, are the wicked;
always carefree, while they increase in wealth.

II

13* Is it but in vain I have kept my heart clean and washed my hands as an innocent man?
14 For I suffer affliction day after day
and chastisement with each new dawn.
15 Had I thought, "I will speak as they do,"
I had been false to the fellowship of your children.
16 Though I tried to understand this it seemed to me too difficult, 17† Till I entered the sanctuary of God and considered their final destiny.

III

18 You set them, indeed, on a slippery road;
you hurl them down to ruin.
19 How suddenly they are made desolate!
They are completely wasted away amid horrors.
20† As though they were the dream of one who had awakened, O Lord, so will you, when you arise, set at nought these phantoms.
21† Because my heart was embittered
and my soul was pierced, 22 I was stupid and understood not;
I was like a brute beast in your presence.

IV

23 Yet with you I shall always be;
you have hold of my right hand;
24 With your counsel you guide me,
and in the end you will receive me in glory.
25 Whom else have I in heaven?
And when I am with you, the earth delights me not.
26 Though my flesh and my heart waste away,
God is the rock of my heart and my portion forever.
27 For indeed, they who withdraw from you perish;
you destroy everyone who is unfaithful to you.
28 But for me, to be near God is my good;
to make the Lord GOD my refuge.
I shall declare all your works
in the gates of the daughter of Zion.

PSALM 74†

Prayer in Time of National Calamity

1† A maskil of Asaph.

I

Why, O God, have you cast us off forever?
Why does your anger smolder against the sheep of your pasture?
2* Remember your flock which you built up of old,
the tribe you redeemed as your inheritance,
Mount Zion, where you took up your abode.
3 Turn your steps toward the utter ruins;
toward all the damage the enemy has done in the sanctuary.

4 Your foes roar triumphantly in your shrine;
they have set up their tokens of victory.
5† They are like men coming up with axes to a clump of trees;
6 and now with chisel and hammer they hack at all its paneling.
7* They set your sanctuary on fire;
the place where your name abides they have razed and profaned.
8 They said in their hearts, "Let us destroy them;
burn all the shrines of God in the land."

---

* 73, 13: Ps 26, 6. 74, 2: Pss 68, 17; 132, 13. 7: 2 Kgs 25, 8f; Ps 79, 1.

† 73, 10: This verse is defective in the current Hebrew text. The translation given above understands it as one of the blasphemies uttered by the wicked, ridiculing God's justice. The revised Latin Psalter understands it as said by the psalmist himself, "So my people turn to them, and they suck up water in abundance."

73, 17: I entered the sanctuary of God: in spirit the psalmist penetrated God's heavenly sanctuary.

73, 20: When you arise: in judgment. The Lord seems to act as if he were asleep. Cf Ps 78, 65. The temporary injustice will prove to be but a bad dream.

73, 21f: The psalmist reverts to the time when he was scandalized by the prosperity of the wicked.

Ps 74: A lamentation over the destruction of the temple. The event referred to is probably the taking of Jerusalem by the Babylonians in 587 B.C. The psalmist graphically describes the frightful havoc and desolation in the temple as he implores God to be mindful of his people (1-11); then, recalling the glorious deeds the Lord has done of old (12-17), he humbly reminds God that his own honor is at stake in the fate of his chosen people (18-23).

74, 1: Forever: this word seems to imply that the disaster is already of long duration.

74, 5: The Hebrew text of this verse is rather obscure.

9*† Deeds on our behalf we do not see;
there is no prophet now,
and no one of us knows how long. . . .
10 How long, O God, shall the foe blaspheme?
Shall the enemy revile your name
forever?
11 Why draw back your hand
and keep your right hand idle beneath your cloak?

//
12 Yet, O God, my king from of old,
you doer of saving deeds on earth, 13† You stirred up the sea by your might;
you smashed the heads of the dragons in the waters.
14 You crushed the heads of Leviathan,
and made food of him for the dolphins.
15 You released the springs and torrents;
you brought dry land out of the primeval waters.
16* Yours is the day, and yours the night;
you fashioned the moon and the sun.
17 You fixed all the limits of the land;
summer and winter you made.

18 Remember how the enemy has blasphemed you, O LORD,
and how a stupid people has reviled your name.
19† Give not to the vulture the life of your dove;
be not forever unmindful of the lives of your afflicted ones.
20 Look to your covenant,
for the hiding places in the land and the plains are full of violence.
21 May the humble not retire in confusion;
may the afflicted and the poor praise your name.
22 Arise, O God: defend your cause;
remember how the fool blasphemes you day after day.
23 Be not unmindful of the voice of your foes;
the uproar of those who rebel against you is unceasing.

PSALM 75†

God the Just Judge of the Wicked

1 For the leader. (Do not destroy!) A psalm of Asaph; a song.

2 We give you thanks, O God, we give thanks,
and we invoke your name; we declare your wondrous deeds.

//
3 "When I seize the appointed time,
I will judge with equity.
4 Though the earth and all who dwell in it quake,
I have set firm its pillars.
5† I say to the boastful: Boast not;
and to the wicked: Lift not up your horns."

6 Lift not up your horns against the Most High;
speak not haughtily against the Rock.
7† For neither from the east nor from the west,
neither from the desert nor from the mountains—
8 But God is the judge;
one he brings low; another he lifts up.
9*† For a cup is in the LORD's hand,
full of spiced and foaming wine,
And he pours out from it; even to the dregs they shall drain it;
all the wicked of the earth shall drink.

10 But as for me, I will exult forever;
I will sing praise to the God of Jacob.
11 And I will break off the horns of all the wicked;
the horns of the just shall be lifted up.

9: Lam 2, 9. 75, 9: Jer 25, 15-29.
16: Gn 1, 14-19.

74, 9: Deeds on our behalf: literally, "our signs," which probably means, "signs done for us," wonderful exploits such as God performed for the Israelites during the Exodus. There is no prophet now: Jeremiah and Ezekiel may have been dead, or at least may not have been in Jerusalem. There is no need, because of these words, to fix the date of this psalm as late as Maccabean times. Cf Lam 2, 9.

74, 13-17: These verses were probably borrowed from some much older hymn. The imagery used here to describe God's creative power at the beginning of the world may have been taken over in part from the ancient Canaanite literature. The dragons . . . Leviathan: mythological monsters. Cf Is 27, 1. Here they are the personification of the watery chaos at the beginning of creation. Cf Ps 89, 11.

74, 19: The vulture: the ferocious foes. Your dove: Israel. Cf Ps 68, 14.

Ps 75: After an introductory verse of praise sung by the community (2), the word of the Lord is heard, foretelling the condemnation of the proud (3-5); the psalmist then repeats and develops the same thought (6-9), praising God for this victory over the sinners (10f).

75, 5f. 11: Horns: the symbol of power. See note on Ps 18, 3.

75, 7: The sentence is intentionally left incomplete; for the sense, add, "does justice come." The desert: the south. The mountains: the north.

75, 9: A cup: see note on Ps 11, 6. Here it is "the cup of God's wrath," the punishment he inflicts on sinners. Cf Is 51, 17; Jer 25, 15-29; 49, 12; Ez 23, 31ff. Spiced: literally, "a mixed drink"; spices or drugs were put into wine to make it more intoxicating. Cf Is 5, 22; Prv 9, 2.5.

PSALM 76†

Thanksgiving for the Overthrow of Israel's Foes

1 For the leader; a psalm with stringed instruments. A song of Asaph.

I

2 God is renowned in Judah,
in Israel great is his name.
3† In Salem is his abode;
his dwelling is in Zion.
4 There he shattered the flashing shafts of the bow,
shield and sword, and weapons of war.

II

5† Resplendent you came, O powerful One,
from the everlasting mountains.
6† Despoiled are the stouthearted;
they sleep their sleep;
the hands of all the mighty ones have failed.
7 At your rebuke, O God of Jacob, chariots and steeds lay stilled.

III

8 You are terrible; and who can withstand you for the fury of your anger?
9 From heaven you made your intervention heard;
the earth feared and was silent
10 When God arose for judgment, to save all the afflicted of the earth.

IV

11† For wrathful Edom shall glorify you,
and the survivors of Hamath shall keep your festivals.
12 Make vows to the LORD, your God, and fulfill them;
let all round about him bring gifts to the terrible Lord 13† Who checks the pride of princes, who is terrible to the kings of the earth.

PSALM 77†

Lament and Comfort in Time of Distress

1 For the leader; 'al Jeduthun. A psalm of Asaph.

I

2 Aloud to God I cry;
aloud to God, to hear me;
3 on the day of my distress I seek the Lord.
By night my hands are stretched out without flagging;
my soul refuses comfort.
4 When I remember God, I moan;
when I ponder, my spirit grows faint.
5 You keep my eyes watchful;
I am troubled and cannot speak.
6* I consider the days of old;
the years long past I remember.
In the night I meditate in my heart;
I ponder, and my spirit broods:
8 "Will the Lord reject forever
and nevermore be favorable?
9 Will his kindness utterly cease,
his promise fail for all generations?
10 Has God forgotten pity?
Does he in anger withhold his compassion?"
11† And I say, "This is my sorrow, that the right hand of the Most High is changed."
12 I remember the deeds of the LORD;
yes, I remember your wonders of old.
13 And I meditate on your works;
your exploits I ponder.

II

14* O God, your way is holy;
what great god is there like our God?
15 You are the God who works wonders;
among the peoples you have made known your power.
16 With your strong arm you redeemed your people,
the sons of Jacob and Joseph.

77, 6: Dt 32, 7; Ps 143, 5. 14f: Ex 15, 11; Ps 86, 10.

Ps 76: A hymn of triumph in which Jerusalem's victory is attributed primarily to God (2-4). He has overwhelmed the enemy (5-7) and avenged the oppressed (8-10); to him, therefore, sacrifices of thanksgiving are due (11-13).

76, 3: Salem: Jerusalem. Perhaps on account of its allusion to the Hebrew word for peace, this ancient form of the city's name was chosen here. Cf Gn 14, 18; Heb 7, 1f.

76, 5: From the everlasting mountains: from the temple on Mount Zion, the "ancient," age-old fortress of the Jebusites. Cf Ps 24, 7.9.

76, 6: Their sleep: of death.

76, 11: Edom . . . Hamath: the words are not certain. The reference would be to Israel's pagan neighbors south and north. The current Hebrew text may perhaps be rendered, "For the wrath of man must be turned to your praise, and the survivors of fury shall keep your festivals."

76, 13: Checks the pride: or perhaps, "Cuts short the courage"; literally, "Shortens (or cuts off) the spirit." The Syriac version renders this as, "Humbles the pride"; the Greek version as, "Cuts off the life."

Ps 77: The first section (2-13) is a lamentation in which the psalmist bewails, probably not his own misfortune, but rather the seeming abandonment of his nation by God; the second section (14-21) is in the tones of a typical hymn of praise, which the psalmist perhaps borrowed from an older hymn, in order to contrast the present situation with God's glorious deeds in the past, particularly in the Exodus.

77, 11: The right hand of the Most High: God's strong guidance and protection. Cf Pss 17, 7; 18, 36; Is 41, 10.

17 The waters saw you, O God;
the waters saw you and shuddered;
the very depths were troubled.
18 The clouds poured down water;
the skies gave forth their voice;
your arrows also sped abroad.
19 Your thunder resounded in the whirlwind;
your lightning illumined the world;
the earth quivered and quaked.
20 Through the sea was your way,
and your path through the deep waters,
though your footsteps were not seen.
21* You led your people like a flock
under the care of Moses and Aaron.

PSALM 78†

God's Goodness despite Israel's Ingratitude

1 A maskil of Asaph.

Hearken, my people, to my teaching;
incline your ears to the words of my mouth.
2*†I will open my mouth in a parable,
I will utter mysteries from of old.
3* What we have heard and know,
and what our fathers have declared to us,
4 We will not hide from their sons;
we will declare to the generation to come The glorious deeds of the LORD and his strength and the wonders that he wrought.
5 He set it up as a decree in Jacob,
and established it as a law in Israel,
That what he commanded our fathers
they should make known to their sons;
6 So that the generation to come might know,
their sons yet to be born,
That they too may rise and declare to their sons
7 that they should put their hope in God,
And not forget the deeds of God
but keep his commands,
8 And not be like their fathers,
a generation wayward and rebellious,
A generation that kept not its heart steadfast
nor its spirit faithful toward God.

I

9† The sons of Ephraim, ordered ranks of bowmen, retreated in the day of battle.
10 They kept not the covenant with God;
according to his law they would not walk;
11 And they forgot his deeds,
the wonders he had shown them.
12† Before their fathers he did wondrous things,
in the land of Egypt, in the plain of Zoan.
13* He cleft the sea and brought them through,
and he made the waters stand as in a mound.
14* He led them with a cloud by day,
and all night with a glow of fire.
15* He cleft the rocks in the desert and gave them water in copious floods.
16 He made streams flow from the crag
and brought the waters forth in rivers.

II

17* But they sinned yet more against him,
rebelling against the Most High in the wasteland, 18* And they tempted God in their hearts
by demanding the food they craved.
19 Yes, they spoke against God, saying,
"Can God spread a table in the desert?
20 For when he struck the rock, waters gushed forth,

Ps 78: A didactic psalm, drawing salutary lessons from Israel's history. Cf Pss 106; 107. After an elaborate introduction on the importance of handing down the tradition of God's dealings with his people (1-8), the psalmist teaches that the Northern Kingdom of Israel became disloyal to God (9-11), just as did their forefathers for whom God had worked wonders in the Exodus (12-16) and in the journey through the wilderness (17-31); these ancestors were punished for giving mere lip service to God (32-39) although they had witnessed his power in the plagues of Egypt (40-51) and in the journey to the Promised Land (52-55); so also God rejected their descendants, the Israelites of the Northern Kingdom (56-64) and chose Judah and the house of David (65-72).

78, 2: This verse is applied by St. Matthew to our Lord's teaching in parables (Mt 13, 35). A parable: the Hebrew word mashal signifies properly, "a comparison," then any saying in which some deeper meaning lies, to be understood by means of the hidden comparison; here the entire psalm is a mashal. Mysteries from of old: the meanings which the psalmist sees hidden in the ancient history of his ancestors.

78, 9: Ephraim: the most important of the northern tribes of Israel; hence here, as often, the northern kingdom in general.

78, 12.43: Zoan: a city in the delta of the Nile, the capital of Egypt at the time of the Exodus.

and the streams overflowed;
Can he also give bread
and provide meat for his people?"
21* Then the LORD heard and was enraged;
and fire blazed up against Jacob,
and anger rose against Israel, 22 Because they believed not God
nor trusted in his help.
23 Yet he commanded the skies above and the doors of heaven he opened; 24* He rained manna upon them for food and gave them heavenly bread.
25† The bread of the mighty was eaten by men;
even a surfeit of provisions he sent them.
26* He stirred up the east wind in the heavens,
and by his power brought on the south wind.
27 And he rained meat upon them like dust,
and, like the sand of the sea, winged fowl, 28 Which fell in the midst of their camp round about their tents.
29 So they ate and were wholly surfeited;
he had brought them what they craved.
30 They had not given over their craving,
and their food was still in their mouths, 31 When the anger of God rose against them
and slew their best men,
and laid low the young men of Israel.

III

32 Yet for all this they sinned still more and believed not in his wonders.
33 Therefore he quickly ended their days
and their years with sudden destruction.
34 While he slew them they sought him
and inquired after God again, 35 Remembering that God was their rock and the Most High God, their redeemer.
36 But they flattered him with their mouths
and lied to him with their tongues, 37 Though their hearts were not steadfast toward him,
nor were they faithful to his covenant.
38 Yet he, being merciful, forgave their sin
and destroyed them not;
Often he turned back his anger
and let none of his wrath be roused.
39 He remembered that they were flesh,
a passing breath that returns not.

IV

40 How often they rebelled against him in the desert
and grieved him in the wilderness!
41 Again and again they tempted God
and provoked the Holy One of Israel.
42 They remembered not his hand
nor the day he delivered them from the foe, 43* When he wrought his signs in Egypt and his marvels in the plain of Zoan, 44 And changed into blood their streams—
their running water, so that they could not drink;
45 He sent among them flies that devoured them
and frogs that destroyed them.
46 He gave their harvest to the caterpillar,
the fruits of their toil to the locust.
47 He killed their vines with hail and their sycamores with frost.
48 He gave over to the hail their beasts
and their flocks to the lightning.
49 He loosed against them his fierce anger,
wrath and fury and strife,
a detachment of messengers of doom.
50† When he measured the course of his anger
he spared them not from death,
and delivered their beasts to the plague.
51 He smote every first-born in Egypt,
the first fruits of manhood in the tents of Ham;
52* But his people he led forth like sheep
and guided them like a herd in the desert.
53 He led them on secure and unafraid,
while he covered their enemies with the sea.
54* And he brought them to his holy land,
to the mountains his right hand had won.
55 And he drove out nations before them;
he distributed their inheritance by lot,

21: Nm 11, 1.
24: Ex 16, 4. 14f; Wis 16, 20; Jn 6, 31.
26-31: Nm 11, 31ff.
43-51: Ex 7-12; Ps 105, 27-36.
52: Ps 77, 21.
54: Ex 15, 17.

78, 50: Measured: with his eye, surveyed.

and settled the tribes of Israel in their tents.

V

58 But they tempted and rebelled against God the Most High,
and kept not his decrees.
57 They turned back and were faithless
like their fathers;
they recoiled like a treacherous
bow.
58* They angered him with their high places
and with their idols roused his jealousy.
59 God heard and was enraged
and utterly rejected Israel.
60* And he forsook the tabernacle in Shiloh,
the tent where he dwelt among
men.
61 And he surrendered his strength
into captivity,
his glory into the hands of the foe.
62 He abandoned his people to the sword
and was enraged against his inheritance.
63 Fire consumed their young men, and their maidens were not betrothed.
64 Their priests fell by the sword,
and their widows sang no dirges.

VI

65 Then the Lord awoke, as wakes from sleep
a champion overcome with wine;
66† And he put his foes to flight and cast them into everlasting disgrace.
67 And he rejected the tent of Joseph,
and the tribe of Ephraim he chose
not;
68 But he chose the tribe of Judah,
Mount Zion which he loved.
69 And he built his shrine like heaven,
like the earth which he founded
forever.
70* And he chose David, his servant,
and took him from the sheepfolds;
71 From following the ewes he brought
him
to shepherd Jacob, his people,
and Israel, his inheritance.
72 And he tended them with a sincere
heart,
and with skillful hands he guided
them.

PSALM 79†

The Destruction of Jerusalem and Its Temple

1 A psalm of Asaph.

I

O God, the nations have come into your inheritance;
they have defiled your holy temple,
they have laid Jerusalem in ruins.
2*† They have given the corpses of your servants
as food to the birds of heaven,
the flesh of your faithful ones to the beasts of the earth.
3 They have poured out their blood like water
round about Jerusalem,
and there is no one to bury them.
4* We have become the reproach of our neighbors,
the scorn and derision of those around us.

II

5 O LORD, how long? Will you be angry
forever?
Will your jealousy burn like fire?
6* Pour out your wrath upon the nations that acknowledge you not,
upon the kingdoms that call not
upon your name;
7 For they have devoured Jacob
and laid waste his dwelling.
8 Remember not against us the iniquities of the past;
may your compassion quickly
come to us,
for we are brought very low.

III

9 Help us, O God our savior,
because of the glory of your name;
Deliver us and pardon our sins
for your name's sake.
10 Why should the nations say,
"Where is their God?"
Let it be known among the nations
in our sight
that you avenge the shedding of your servants' blood.

IV

11 Let the prisoners' sighing come before you;

58: Lv 26, 30.
60: 1 Sm 4, 3-11; Jer 7, 12-15; 26, 6-9.
70f: 1 Sm 16, 10-13; 2 Sm 7, 8; 2 Chr 6, 6.
79, 2f: 1 Mc 7, 17.
4: Ps 44, 14.
6f: Jer 10, 25.

78, 66: He put his foes to flight: literally, "He struck his foes back," or, "in the back"; some commentators see in this an allusion to 1 Sm 5, 6.9.

Ps 79: A lamentation of the people over the havoc wrought by the enemy in Jerusalem. The situation may well have been the capture of the city by the Babylonians in 587 B.C. Cf Ps 74. Here the people bewail the destruction and slaughter in the city (1-4), and pray God to avenge them and pardon their sins (5-8) for the sake of his own honor and glory (9f); if he frees the captive Jews and punishes their enemies, they will offer him eternal thanks (11-13).

79, 2f: The flesh . . . to bury them: these four lines are quoted somewhat freely in 1 Mc 7, 17 as describing the treacherous slaughter of sixty pious Jews in Jerusalem during the Maccabean wars. But this does not prove that the psalm was written at such a late period.

with your great power free those doomed to death.
12† And repay our neighbors sevenfold
into their bosoms
the disgrace they have inflicted on you, O Lord.
13 Then we, your people and the sheep
of your pasture,
will give thanks to you forever;
through all generations we will declare your praise.

PSALM 80†

Prayer for the Restoration of the Lord's Vineyard

1 For the leader; according to "Lilies." Eduth. A psalm of Asaph.

I

2* O shepherd of Israel, hearken,
O guide of the flock of Joseph!
From your throne upon the cherubim, shine forth
3 before Ephraim, Benjamin and Manasseh.
Rouse your power,
and come to save us.
4† O LORD of hosts, restore us;
if your face shine upon us,
then we shall be safe.

II

5 O LORD of hosts, how long will you burn with anger
while your people pray?
6 You have fed them with the bread of tears
and given them tears to drink in ample measure.
7* You have left us to be fought over
by our neighbors,
and our enemies mock us.
8 O LORD of hosts, restore us;
if your face shine upon us,
then we shall be safe.

III

9† A vine from Egypt you transplanted;
you drove away the nations and planted it.
10 You cleared the ground for it,
and it took root and filled the land.
11† The mountains were hidden in its shadow;
by its branches, the cedars of God.
12† It put forth its foliage to the Sea,
its shoots as far as the River.

IV

13 Why have you broken down its walls,
so that every passer-by plucks its
fruit,
14 The boar from the forest lays it waste,
and the beasts of the field feed
upon it?
15 Once again, O LORD of hosts,
look down from heaven, and see;
Take care of this vine,
16† and protect what your right hand
has planted
[the son of man whom you yourself made strong].

V

17† Let those who would burn it with fire or cut it down
perish before you at your rebuke.
18 May your help be with the man of your right hand,
with the son of man whom you yourself made strong.
19 Then we will no more withdraw from
you;
give us new life, and we will call
upon your name.
20 O LORD of hosts, restore us;
if your face shine upon us,
then we shall be safe.

PSALM 81†

Festive Song with an Admonition to Fidelity

1 For the leader; "upon the gittith." Of Asaph.

A

2 Sing joyfully to God our strength;
acclaim the God of Jacob.

80, 2: Ex 25, 22; 1 Sm 4, 4; 2 Sm 6, 2. 7: Ps 44, 14.

79, 12: Into their bosoms: the ample folds at the front of full-length garments were used in accepting gifts or rewards of grain. Cf Lk 6, 38. The same figure is used here for full (sevenfold) punishment.

Ps 80: The Lord's help is besought for Israel, especially for the northern tribes (2f), for they are sorely oppressed by their enemies (5-7); they were once God's well-tended vine (9-12), but now this vineyard is devastated (13-16); therefore his saving help is implored (17-19). The refrain after the first, second and fifth stanzas (4.8.20) perhaps stood originally after the third and fourth stanzas also.

80, 4: If your face shine upon us: if God brighten their lives with his gracious smile.

80, 9: A vine: a frequent metaphor for Israel. Cf Is 5, 1-7; 27, 2f; Jer 2, 21; Hos 10, 1; Mt 21, 33.

80, 11: The cedars of God: the giant cedars of Lebanon, considered as especially planted by God. Cf Nm 24, 6.

80, 12: The Sea: the Mediterranean. The River: the Euphrates. Cf Ps 72, 8.

80, 16: The son of man: this line is presumably an accidental duplication of the similar line in v 18.

80, 17: Let those who would burn it: this line, as here translated, is a reconstruction; but the two halves of the Hebrew line do not properly belong together.

Ps 81: Two distinct sections. The first section (2-6a) is a short song sung on the feast of Booths. The second section (6b-17) is a divine oracle in which the Lord reminds the people that it was he who led them out of Egypt and commanded them at that time to worship no other God but him (7-11); he has punished them for their disobedience, but will now give them victory and prosperity if they obey him (12-17).

3 Take up a melody, and sound the timbrel,
the pleasant harp and the lyre.
4*† Blow the trumpet at the new moon,
at the full moon, on our solemn feast;
5 For it is a statute in Israel,
an ordinance of the God of Jacob,
6† Who made it a decree for Joseph when he came forth from the land of Egypt.

B

I

An unfamiliar speech I hear:
7† "I relieved his shoulder of the burden;
his hands were freed from the basket.
8* In distress you called, and I rescued you;
Unseen, I answered you in thunder;
I tested you at the waters of Meribah.
9 Hear, my people, and I will admonish you;
O Israel, will you not hear me?
10* There shall be no strange god among you nor shall you worship any alien god.
11† I, the LORD, am your God who led you forth from the land of Egypt;
open wide your mouth, and I will fill it.

II

12 "But my people heard not my voice,
and Israel obeyed me not;
13 So I gave them up to the hardness of their hearts;
they walked according to their own counsels.
14 If only my people would hear me,
and Israel walk in my ways, 15 Quickly would I humble their enemies;
against their foes I would turn my hand.
16 Those who hated the LORD would seek to flatter me,
but their fate would endure forever,
17*† While Israel I would feed with the best of wheat, and with honey from the rock I would fill them."

PSALM 82†

Judgment against Wicked Judges

1† A psalm of Asaph.

God arises in the divine assembly;
he judges in the midst of the gods.

I

2 "How long will you judge unjustly and favor the cause of the wicked?
3 Defend the lowly and the fatherless;
render justice to the afflicted and the destitute.
4 Rescue the lowly and the poor;
from the hand of the wicked deliver them.

II

5† "They know not, neither do they understand;
they go about in darkness;
all the foundations of the earth are shaken.
6*† I said: You are gods,
all of you sons of the Most High;
7† Yet like men you shall die,
and fall like any prince."
8† Rise, O God; judge the earth,
for yours are all the nations.

PSALM 83†

Prayer against a Hostile Alliance

1 A song; a psalm of Asaph.

I

2 O God, do not remain unmoved;
be not silent, O God, and be not still!

81, 4: Lv 23, 24.34ff; Nm 29, 1.
8: Ex 2, 23f; 19, 16; Nm 20, 13.
10f: Ex 20, 2f; Dt 5, 6f.
17: Dt 32, 13f.
82, 6: Jn 10, 34.

81, 4: Blow the trumpet: to assemble the people for the feast. This custom was observed on various feasts, but it was especially prescribed for the first day of each month, that is, for the feast of the new moon, and in particular for the first day of the seventh month, during which month the feast of Booths, a very solemn feast, was celebrated on the fifteenth day, the full moon. Cf Lv 23, 24.34-43; Nm 10, 10; 29, 1.12.

81, 6: An unfamiliar speech I hear: these words are uttered by a prophet, who then continues to speak in God's name.

81, 7: A reference to the liberation of Israel from slavery in Egypt. The basket: for carrying clay to make bricks. Cf Ex 1, 14.

81, 11: Open wide your mouth, and I will fill it: God tells the people that, no matter how great their desires, he will fulfill them.

81, 17: Honey . . . rock: extreme abundance. Cf Jl 4, 18.

Ps 82: The psalmist presents God himself (1) rebuking the unjust judges (2-4) and passing sentences on them (5-7). A short prayer for universal justice concludes the psalm (8). Cf Is 3, 13ff for a similar judgment scene.

82, 1: The gods: human judges, who are "godlike" in their prerogative of establishing justice on earth. Cf Ps 58, 2.

82, 5: The foundations of the earth: the very basis of law and order. Cf Ps 11, 3.

82, 6: I said: You are gods: our Lord's own comment on these words is, "It [the law] calls them gods to whom the word of God came." Cf Jn 10, 34-35.

82, 7: Like men: like the rest of men.

82, 8: This verse can be fittingly understood as addressed to Christ, to whom all judgment has been given. Cf Jn 5, 22.

Ps 83: The psalmist prays for divine aid against a powerful league of hostile nations (2-5), which he enumerates (6-9), asking God to overcome them as he did Israel's enemies of old (10-13), and to destroy them completely (14-19).

3 For behold, your enemies raise a tumult,
and they who hate you lift up their heads.
4 Against your people they plot craftily;
they conspire against those whom you protect.
5 They say, "Come, let us destroy their nation;
let the name of Israel be remembered no more!"

6 Yes, they consult together with one mind,
and against you they are allied:
7† The tents of Edom and the Ishmaelites,
Moab and the people of Hagar,
8 Gebal and Ammon and Amalek,
Philistia with the inhabitants of Tyre;
9 The Assyrians, too, are leagued with them;
they are the forces of the sons of Lot.

10† Deal with them as with Midian;
as with Sisera and Jabin at the torrent Kishon, 11 Who perished at Endor;
they became dung on the ground.
12 Make their nobles like Oreb and Zeeb;
all their chiefs like Zebah and Zalmunna,
13 Who said, "Let us take for ourselves the dwelling place of God."

14 O my God, make them like leaves in a whirlwind, like chaff before the wind.
15 As a fire raging in a forest,
as a flame setting the mountains ablaze,
16 So pursue them with your tempest and rout them with your storm.
17 Darken their faces with disgrace,
that men may seek your name, O LORD.
18 Let them be shamed and put to rout forever;
let them be confounded and perish,
19 Knowing that you alone are the LORD,
the Most High over all the earth.

PSALM 84†

Desire for the Sanctuary

1 For the leader; "upon the gittith." A psalm of the sons of Korah.

2 How lovely is your dwelling place,
O LORD of hosts!
3 My soul yearns and pines for the courts of the LORD.
My heart and my flesh
cry out for the living God.
4† Even the sparrow finds a home,
and the swallow a nest
in which she puts her young—
Your altars, O LORD of hosts,
my king and my God!

//

5 Happy they who dwell in your house!
continually they praise you.
6† Happy the men whose strength you are!
their hearts are set upon the pilgrimage:
7 When they pass through the valley of the mastic trees
they make a spring of it;
the early rain clothes it with generous growth.
8 They go from strength to strength;
they shall see the God of gods in Zion.

9 O LORD of hosts, hear my prayer;
hearken, O God of Jacob!
10† O God, behold our shield,
and look upon the face of your anointed.
11 I had rather one day in your courts
than a thousand elsewhere;
I had rather lie at the threshold of the house of my God
than dwell in the tents of the wicked.
12 For a sun and a shield is the LORD God;
grace and glory he bestows;
The LORD withholds no good thing from those who walk in sincerity.
13 O LORD of hosts,
happy the men who trust in you!

83, 7ff: Apart from the Assyrians, all the nations listed here were neighbors of Israel. The people of Hagar: a semi-nomadic tribe of the desert regions east of Ammon and Moab; cf 1 Chr 5, 10.19f. Gebal was a mountain region south of the Dead Sea. History knows of no occasion when all these peoples were leagued together against Israel. Perhaps their names are used here poetically as figures of the hostile Gentiles in general.

83, 10ff: For the historical events here referred to, see Jgs 4—8.

Ps 84: Although similar in style and general content to Pss 42—43, this seems to be one of the "Pilgrim Songs" sung on the journeys to the temple for the annual feasts. The psalmist expresses his ardent longing to visit the house of the Lord (2-4), describing the happiness of those who dwell there at all times or who at least have the privilege of going there as pilgrims (5-8); hence he prays that this privilege may be his (9-13).

84, 4: Since in God's providence even "birds of the sky have nests" (Mt 8, 20), all the more will the Lord welcome his pious pilgrims to the shelter of his sanctuary and the refuge of his altars.

84, 6ff: The Hebrew text of these two verses is obscure in several places.

84, 10: Our shield: the king. Cf Ps 89, 19.

PSALM 85†

Prayer for Complete Restoration

1 For the leader. A psalm of the sons of Korah.

I

2 You have favored, O LORD, your land;
you have restored the well-being of Jacob.
3 You have forgiven the guilt of your people;
you have covered all their sins.
4* You have withdrawn all your wrath;
you have revoked your burning anger.

II

5 Restore us, O God our savior,
and abandon your displeasure against us.
6 Will you be ever angry with us,
prolonging your anger to all generations?
7 Will you not instead give us life;
and shall not your people rejoice in you?
8 Show us, O LORD, your kindness, and grant us your salvation.

III

9† I will hear what God proclaims;
the LORD—for he proclaims peace.
To his people, and to his faithful ones,
and to those who put in him their hope.
10† Near indeed is his salvation to those who fear him,
glory dwelling in our land.
11† Kindness and truth shall meet;
justice and peace shall kiss.
12 Truth shall spring out of the earth,
and justice shall look down from heaven.
13 The LORD himself will give his benefits;
our land shall yield its increase.
14 Justice shall walk before him,
and salvation, along the way of his steps.

PSALM 86†

Prayer in Time of Distress

1 A prayer of David.

I

Incline your ear, O LORD; answer me,
for I am afflicted and poor.
2 Keep my life, for I am devoted to you;
save your servant who trusts in you.
3 You are my God; have pity on me, O Lord,
for to you I call all the day.
4 Gladden the soul of your servant,
for to you, O Lord, I lift up my soul;
5* For you, O Lord, are good and forgiving,
abounding in kindness to all who call upon you.
6 Hearken, O LORD, to my prayer and attend to the sound of my pleading.
7 In the day of my distress I call upon you,
for you will answer me.

II

8*† There is none like you among the gods, O Lord,
and there are no works like yours.
9* All the nations you have made shall come and worship you, O Lord,
and glorify your name.
10 For you are great, and you do wondrous deeds;
you alone are God.

III

11 Teach me, O LORD, your way that I may walk in your truth;
direct my heart that it may fear your name.
12 I will give thanks to you, O Lord my God,
with all my heart,
and I will glorify your name forever.
13* Great has been your kindness toward me;
you have rescued me from the depths of the nether world.
14 O God, the haughty have risen up against me,

85, 4: Ps 14, 7.
86, 5: Jl 2, 13.
8: Ex 15, 11; Ps 89, 7.
9: Zec 14, 16.
13: Ps 30, 4.

†

Ps 85: After thanking God for the blessings so far received (2-4), the people beseech him to remove the hardships which they still suffer (5-8); then a prophet tells them of the coming happiness which the Lord has revealed to him (9-14). The situation suggests the conditions in Judea during the early postexilic period, fifth century B.C.; the thoughts are likewise similar to those expressed by the post-exilic prophets. Cf Hg 1, 5-11; 2, 6-9; Mal 3, 13-21.

85, 9: The prophet listens for God's revelation. Cf Hb 2, 1.

85, 10: Glory: the glory of the Lord which departed from Jerusalem when the temple was destroyed. Cf Ez 11, 23. Now it returns to the Holy Land. Cf Hg 2, 9.

85, 11-14: The social virtues are here poetically personified as courtiers of the returning king.

Ps 86: A supplication for help (1-7.11-17), divided in the middle by a short hymn of praise (8-10). Several of the verses occur in similar form in various other psalms, and they are here joined together with no close logical sequence.

86, 8: The gods: those whom the pagans call "gods." In v 10 the psalmist clearly denies their reality. Cf Ex 15, 11; Dt 4, 7. Some translate the word elohim here not as "gods" but as "angels."

and the company of fierce men
seeks my life,
nor do they set you before their
eyes.
15 But you, O Lord, are a God merciful
and gracious,
slow to anger, abounding in kindness and fidelity.
16 Turn toward me, and have pity on
me;
give your strength to your servant,
and save the son of your hand-
maid.
17 Grant me a proof of your favor, that my enemies may see, to their confusion,
that you, O Lord, have helped and comforted me.

PSALM 87†

Zion the Home of All Nations

1 A psalm of the sons of Korah. A song.

His foundation upon the holy mountains
2† the Lord loves:
The gates of Zion,
more than any dwelling of Jacob.
3 Glorious things are said of you,
O city of God!
4† I tell of Egypt and Babylon
among those that know the Lord;
Of Philistia, Tyre, Ethiopia:
"This man was born there."
5† And of Zion they shall say:
"One and all were born in her;
And he who has established her
is the Most High Lord."
6 They shall note, when the peoples are enrolled:
"This man was born there."
7 And all shall sing, in their festive
dance:
"My home is within you."

PSALM 88†

Lament and Prayer in Affliction

1 A song; a psalm of the sons of Korah. For the leader; according to Mahalath. For singing; a maskil of Heman the Ezrahite.

I

2 O Lord, my God, by day I cry out;
at night I clamor in your presence.
3 Let my prayer come before you;
incline your ear to my call for help,
4 For my soul is surfeited with troubles
and my life draws near to the
nether world.
5* I am numbered with those who go down into the pit;
I am a man without strength.
6† My couch is among the dead,
like the slain who lie in the grave,
Whom you remember no longer
and who are cut off from your care.
7 You have plunged me into the bottom of the pit,
into the dark abyss.
8 Upon me your wrath lies heavy,
and with all your billows you overwhelm me.
9 You have taken my friends away
from me;
you have made me an abomina-
tion to them;
I am imprisoned, and I cannot escape.

II

10 My eyes have grown dim through affliction;
daily I call upon you, O Lord;
to you I stretch out my hands.
11*† Will you work wonders for the dead?
Will the shades arise to give you
thanks?
12 Do they declare your kindness in the grave,
your faithfulness among those who have perished?
13 Are your wonders made known in the darkness,
or your justice in the land of oblivion?

III

14 But I, O Lord, cry out to you;
with my morning prayer I wait
upon you.
15 Why, O Lord, do you reject me;
why hide from me your face?
16 I am afflicted and in agony from my youth;

11-13: Ps 6, 6; Is 38,

†

Ps 87: A song of Zion, extolling the holy city as the spiritual home of all the nations of the earth.

87, 2: The gates: the city itself, a common Hebrew idiom.

87, 4: Egypt: literally, "Rahab," the name of an ocean monster; here used poetically for Egypt. Cf Ps 89, 11; Is 30, 7.

87, 5: Of Zion they shall say: most manuscripts of the Greek version read, "'Mother Zion,' they shall say." St. Paul is probably alluding to this reading when in Gal 4, 26 he speaks of "Jerusalem . . . our mother."

Ps 88: The supplication of a desolate man in mortal illness. The psalmist complains that God seems to have abandoned him (2-9); he reminds the Lord that, if he dies, he can no longer praise him (10-13), and bitterly bewails his misery (14-19).

88, 6: My couch: the meaning of the Hebrew is uncertain. Who lie in the grave: Hebrew thought would lead us to expect, "who are deprived of any grave," and this may have been the original reading. Cf Ps 63, 11.

88, 11ff: See note on Ps 6, 6.

I am dazed with the burden of your dread.
17 Your furies have swept over me;
your terrors have cut me off.
18 They encompass me like water all
the day;
on all sides they close in upon me.
19 Companion and neighbor you have taken away from me;
my only friend is darkness.

PSALM 89†

Prayer for the Fulfillment of God's Promises to David

1 A maskil of Ethan the Ezrahite.

I

2† The favors of the LORD I will sing
forever;
through all generations my mouth shall proclaim your faithful-
ness.
3 For you have said, "My kindness is established forever";
in heaven you have confirmed
your faithfulness:
4 "I have made a covenant with my chosen one,
I have sworn to David my servant:
5* Forever will I confirm your posterity and establish your throne for all generations."

II

6† The heavens proclaim your wonders, O LORD,
and your faithfulness, in the assembly of the holy ones.
7* For who in the skies can rank with
the LORD?
Who is like the LORD among the sons of God?
8 God is terrible in the council of the holy ones;
he is great and awesome beyond
all round about him.
9 O LORD, God of hosts, who is like
you?
Mighty are you, O LORD, and your faithfulness surrounds you.

10 You rule over the surging of the sea;
you still the swelling of its waves.
11† You have crushed Rahab with a mortal blow;
with your strong arm you have scattered your enemies.
12 Yours are the heavens, and yours is
the earth;
the world and its fullness you have founded;
13† North and south you created;
Tabor and Hermon rejoice at your name.
14 Yours is a mighty arm; strong is your hand, exalted your
right hand.
15 Justice and judgment are the foundation of your throne;
kindness and truth go before you.

16† Happy the people who know the joyful shout;
in the light of your countenance,
O LORD, they walk.
17 At your name they rejoice all the day,
and through your justice they are exalted.
18† For you are the splendor of their strength,
and by your favor our horn is exalted.
19 For to the LORD belongs our shield, and to the Holy One of Israel, our king.

III

20*† Once you spoke in a vision,
and to your faithful ones you said:
"On a champion I have placed a crown;
over the people I have set a youth.
21* I have found David, my servant;
with my holy oil I have anointed
him,
22 That my hand may be always with
him,
and that my arm may make him
strong.
23 "No enemy shall deceive him,
nor shall the wicked afflict him.

89, 5: 2 Sm 7, 16; Ps 132, 11.
7ff: Ex 15, 11; Ps 86, 8.
20-38: 2 Sm 7, 4.8-16; 1 Chr 17, 3.7-14.
21: Acts 13, 22.

Ps 89: An exilic or postexilic psalm, but composed in part from older sources. Having announced his theme—God's covenant with David—(2-5), the psalmist first sings the praise of the Lord in phrases reminiscent of much older hymns (6-19). The divine promises to David, as narrated in 2 Sm 7, 8-16, are then retold here at considerable length (20-38), in order to contrast these with the present sad state of affairs (39-46), when God seems to have forgotten his promises (47-52).

89, 2: The favors of the LORD: the promise of an everlasting dynasty which God made to David through the prophet Nathan. Cf v 50.

89, 6. 8: The holy ones: the heavenly spirits, called the sons of God in v 7.

89, 11: Rahab: a mythological sea monster whose name is used in the Bible merely as a poetical personification of the primeval chaos of Gn 1, 2.6f. Here it is a symbol of God's dominion over the sea and over all rebellious creatures. Cf Jb 9, 13; 26, 12; Ps 74, 13f; Is 51, 9.

89, 13: North and south: in Hebrew, saphon and yamin, which some retain here as proper nouns, the names of mountains sacred to the ancients, in order to have a better parallelism with the two mountains Tabor and Hermon, in the second half of the verse. "Saphon" is indeed mentioned elsewhere in a similar sense. Cf Ps 48, 3; Is 14, 13. However, no "Mount Yamin" is known; perhaps it may be taken here as a synonym for Sinai.

89, 16: The joyful shout: one of the charactenstic features of Israelite public worship of God.

89, 18.25: Horn: a symbol of strength. See note on Ps 18, 3.

89, 20: Your faithful ones: Nathan and David.

24 But I will crush his foes before him and those who hate him I will smite.
25 My faithfulness and my kindness shall be with him,
and through my name shall his horn be exalted.
26† I will set his hand upon the sea,
his right hand upon the rivers.

27 "He shall say of me, 'You are my father,
my God, the rock, my savior.'
28 And I will make him the first-born, highest of the kings of the earth.
29 Forever I will maintain my kindness toward him,
and my covenant with him stands firm.
30 I will make his posterity endure forever
and his throne as the days of heaven.

31*†"If his sons forsake my law
and walk not according to my ordinances, 32 If they violate my statutes
and keep not my commands, 33 I will punish their crime with a rod
and their guilt with stripes.
34 Yet my kindness I will not take from him,
nor will I belie my faithfulness.

35 "I will not violate my covenant;
the promise of my lips I will not alter.
36 Once, by my holiness, have I sworn;
I will not be false to David.
37 His posterity shall continue forever,
and his throne shall be like the sun before me;
38 Like the moon, which remains forever—
a faithful witness in the sky."

IV

39* Yet you have rejected and spurned
and been enraged at your anointed.
40 You have renounced the covenant with your servant,
and defiled his crown in the dust.
41 You have broken down all his walls;
you have laid his strongholds in ruins.
42 All who pass by the way have plundered him;
he is made the reproach of his neighbors.

43 You have exalted the right hands of his foes,
you have gladdened all his enemies.
44 You have turned back his sharp sword
and have not sustained him in battle.
45† You have deprived him of his luster
and hurled his throne to the ground.
46 You have shortened the days of his youth;
you have covered him with shame.

V

47 How long, O LORD? Will you hide yourself forever?
Will your wrath burn like fire?
48 Remember how short my life is;
how frail you created all the children of men!
49 What man shall live, and not see death,
but deliver himself from the power of the nether world?
50 Where are your ancient favors, O Lord,
which you pledged to David by your faithfulness?
51 Remember, O Lord, the insults to your servants:
I bear in my bosom all the accusations of the nations
52 With which your enemies have reviled, O LORD, with which they have reviled your anointed on his way!

* * *

53*†Blessed be the LORD forever.
Amen, and amen!

IV: THE FOURTH BOOK—Psalms 90-106

PSALM 90†

God's Eternity and Man's Frailty

1 A prayer of Moses, the man of God.

I

O Lord, you have been our refuge through all generations.

31-33: Lv 26, 14-33. 39-46: Ps 44, 10-25. 53: Pss 41, 14; 72, 18f; 106, 48.

89, 26: The sea: the Mediterranean to the west. The rivers: the Euphrates and its tributaries to the east.

89, 30: As the days of heaven: as steadfast as the sun in the sky. Cf Ps 72, 5.17 and vv 37f of this psalm.

89, 31-38: Note that God's promises are in part provisional and in part absolute. In as much as David's descendants failed to carry out the conditions of the covenant, God did not fulfill his promises to them. But as absolute promises they find complete fulfillment in the Son of God who is also the Son of David.

89, 45: The Hebrew text of this verse is somewhat obscure.

89, 53: The doxology at the end of the Third Book of the Psalms; it is not a part of the preceding psalm.

Ps 90: A meditation on the brevity and misery of life. The psalmist contrasts God's eternity with man's short span of life on earth (1-6), and sees in suffering and death the punishment for sin (7-11); he prays God to grant him some respite of happiness before death (12-17).

2* Before the mountains were begotten and the earth and the world were brought forth, from everlasting to everlasting you are God.
3† You turn man back to dust,
saying, "Return, O children of men."
4† For a thousand years in your sight are as yesterday, now that it is past, or as a watch of the night.
5† You make an end of them in their sleep;
the next morning they are like the changing grass, 6† Which at dawn springs up anew,
but by evening wilts and fades.

II

7 Truly we are consumed by your anger,
and by your wrath we are put to rout.
8 You have kept our iniquities before you,
our hidden sins in the light of your scrutiny.
9 All our days have passed away in your indignation;
we have spent our years like a sigh.
10* Seventy is the sum of our years,
or eighty, if we are strong,
And most of them are fruitless toil,
for they pass quickly and we drift away.
11 Who knows the fury of your anger
or your indignation toward those who should fear you?

III

12 Teach us to number our days aright,
that we may gain wisdom of heart.
13 Return, O LORD! How long?
Have pity on your servants!
14 Fill us at daybreak with your kindness, that we may shout for joy and gladness all our days.
15† Make us glad, for the days when you afflicted us,
for the years when we saw evil.
16 Let your work be seen by your servants
and your glory by their children;
17† And may the gracious care of the Lord our God be ours;
prosper the work of our hands for us!
[Prosper the work of our hands!]

PSALM 91†

Security under God's Protection

I

1 You who dwell in the shelter of the Most High,
who abide in the shadow of the Almighty,
2* Say to the LORD, "My refuge and my fortress,
my God, in whom I trust."
3 For he will rescue you from the snare of the fowler, from the destroying pestilence.
4 With his pinions he will cover you,
and under his wings you shall take refuge;
his faithfulness is a buckler and a shield.
5 You shall not fear the terror of the night
nor the arrow that flies by day;
6 Not the pestilence that roams in darkness
nor the devastating plague at noon.
7 Though a thousand fall at your side,
ten thousand at your right side,
near you it shall not come.
8† Rather with your eyes shall you behold
and see the requital of the wicked, 9 Because you have the LORD for your refuge;
you have made the Most High your stronghold.
10 No evil shall befall you,
nor shall affliction come near your tent, 11*† For to his angels he has given command about you,
that they guard you in all your ways.
12 Upon their hands they shall bear you up,

90, 2: Ps 93, 2; Hb 1, 12.
10: Sir 18, 8; Is 65, 20
91, 2: 2 Sm 22, 3; Ps 18, 3.
11: Mt 4, 6; Lk 4, 10f.

90, 3: Saying, "Return . . .": one word of God is enough to reduce man to the dust from which he was created. There is an allusion here to the sentence passed on Adam after the fall. Cf Gn 2, 7; 3, 19.

90, 4: A watch of the night: the Hebrews divided the night into three sentry periods or "watches." Cf Jgs 7, 19.

90, 5: The Hebrew text is obscure and variously translated. The revised Latin Psalter renders it, "You make an end of them; they become like sleep at dawn."

90, 6: The transitory nature of grass under the scorching sun of the Orient was proverbial. Cf Pss 103, 15f; 129, 6; Is 40, 6ff.

90, 15: For the days when: either, "as a recompense for the days when," or, "for as many days as."

90, 17: Prosper the work of our hands: the second occurrence of these words is probably an accidental repetition.

Ps 91: By means of various metaphors the psalmist indicates the benefits of trusting in God (1-13); in the epilogue God himself speaks, confirming the psalmist's words (14-16).

91, 8: Rather with your eyes: the pious man will be a spectator of these plagues and afflictions without being struck himself.

91, 11f: These words were quoted by Satan when he tempted Christ to presumption against God's providence. The promise would not be true if we should put ourselves unnecessarily into danger. His angels: the doctrine of guardian angels is common in the Old Testament. Cf Gn 24, 7; Ex 23, 20; Ps 34, 8.

lest you dash your foot against a stone.
13 You shall tread upon the asp and the viper;
you shall trample down the lion and the dragon.

II
14 Because he clings to me, I will deliver him;
I will set him on high because he acknowledges my name.
15 He shall call upon me, and I will answer him;
I will be with him in distress;
I will deliver him and glorify him;
16 with length of days I will gratify him
and will show him my salvation.

PSALM 92†

Praise of God's Just Government of Mankind

1 A psalm; a song for the sabbath day.

I
2 It is good to give thanks to the LORD,
to sing praise to your name, Most High,
3 To proclaim your kindness at dawn and your faithfulness throughout the night,
4 With ten-stringed instrument and lyre,
with melody upon the harp.
5 For you make me glad, O LORD, by your deeds;
at the works of your hands I rejoice.

II
6* How great are your works, O LORD!
How very deep are your thoughts!
7 A senseless man knows not,
nor does a fool understand this.
8 Though the wicked flourish like grass
and all evildoers thrive, 9 They are destined for eternal destruction;
while you, O LORD, are the Most High forever.

III
10 For behold, your enemies, O LORD,
for behold, your enemies shall perish;
all evildoers shall be scattered.
11† You have exalted my horn like the wild bull's;
you have anointed me with rich oil.
12 And my eye has looked down upon my foes,
and my ears have heard of the fall of my wicked adversaries.

IV
13 The just man shall flourish like the palm tree,
like a cedar of Lebanon shall he grow.
14† They that are planted in the house of the LORD shall flourish in the courts of our God.
15 They shall bear fruit even in old age;
vigorous and sturdy shall they be,
16 Declaring how just is the LORD,
my Rock, in whom there is no wrong.

PSALM 93†

The Glory of the Lord's Kingdom

1† The LORD is king, in splendor robed;
robed is the LORD and girt about with strength;
And he has made the world firm,
not to be moved.
2* Your throne stands firm from of old;
from everlasting you are, O LORD.

3† The floods lift up, O LORD,
the floods lift up their voice;
the floods lift up their tumult.
4 More powerful than the roar of many waters,
more powerful than the breakers of the sea—
powerful on high is the LORD.

5 Your decrees are worthy of trust indeed:
holiness befits your house,
O LORD, for length of days.

92, 6: Ps 104, 24.

93, 2: Ps 90, 2; Hb 1, 12.

Ps 92: A hymn extolling God's just deeds (2-5); the wicked fail to understand them (6-9), but they will receive their due punishment (10-12), whereas the just will be rewarded with blessedness (13-16).

92, 11: My horn like the wild bull's: see note on Ps 18, 3. The horns of the wild bull, the bos primigenius, were especially formidable. Cf Ps 22, 22; Dt 33, 17.

92, 14: Planted: the pious are so steadfast in their attendance in the temple that they can figuratively be said to be rooted there. These words do not imply that cedars and palm trees actually grew in the temple. Cf Pss 52, 10; 128, 3.

Ps 93: A hymn in praise of the eternal kingship of the Lord (1f), who triumphs over the stormy forces of rebellion (3f); hence he is always to be obeyed and worshiped (5).

93, 1: Is king: literally, "has become king." This is the cry with which the people acclaimed a new king at his coronation. Therefore this psalm as well as Pss 96, 97 and 99 can be understood as enthronement psalms of the Messiah celebrating the inauguration of his reign.

93, 3: The raging storm is here a figure of chaos and rebellion.

PSALM 94†

A Warning to Israel's Oppressors

/

1 God of vengeance, LORD,
God of vengeance, show yourself.
2 Rise up, judge of the earth;
render their deserts to the proud.
3 How long, O LORD, shall the wicked,
how long shall the wicked glory,
4 Mouthing insolent speeches,
boasting, all the evildoers?

//

5 Your people, O LORD, they trample down,
your inheritance they afflict.
6 Widow and stranger they slay,
the fatherless they murder,
7* And they say, "The LORD sees not;
the God of Jacob perceives not."

///

8 Understand, you senseless ones among the people;
and, you fools, when will you be wise?
9 Shall he who shaped the ear not hear?
or he who formed the eye not see?
10 Shall he who instructs nations not chastise,
he who teaches men knowledge?
11 The LORD knows the thoughts of men,
and that they are vain.

/

12 Happy the man whom you instruct, O LORD,
whom by your law you teach, 13 Giving him rest from evil days,
till the pit be dug for the wicked.
14 For the LORD will not cast off his people,
nor abandon his inheritance;
15† But judgment shall again be with justice,
and all the upright of heart shall follow it.

//

16 Who will rise up for me against the wicked?
Who will stand by me against the evildoers?
17 Were not the LORD my help,
I would soon dwell in the silent grave.
18 When I say, "My foot is slipping,"
your kindness, O LORD, sustains me; 19 When cares abound within me,
your comfort gladdens my soul.

///

20 How could the tribunal of wickedness be leagued with you,
which creates burdens in the guise of law?
21 Though they attack the life of the just
and condemn innocent blood, 22 Yet the LORD is my stronghold,
and my God the rock of my refuge.
23 And he will requite them for their evildoing,
and for their wickedness he will destroy them;
the LORD, our God, will destroy them.

PSALM 95†

A Call to Praise and Obedience

/

1 Come, let us sing joyfully to the LORD;
let us acclaim the Rock of our salvation.
2 Let us greet him with thanksgiving;
let us joyfully sing psalms to him.
3 For the LORD is a great God,
and a great king above all gods;
4 In his hands are the depths of the earth,
and the tops of the mountains are his.
5 His is the sea, for he has made it,
and the dry land, which his hands have formed.

//

6 Come, let us bow down in worship;
let us kneel before the LORD who made us.
7* For he is our God,
and we are the people he shepherds, the flock he guides.

94, 7: Jb 22, 13; Pss 10, 11; 73, 11. 95, 7c-11: Heb 3, 7-11.15; 4, 3.5.7.

† Ps 94: A fervent prayer to God together with an indictment of wicked tyrants and unjust judges. Calling down divine vengeance upon these (1-4), as he sets forth their crimes and blasphemies (5-7), the psalmist directly rebukes them for their folly (8-11); then in a calmer tone he speaks of the blessedness of justice and fidelity to God's law (12-15). Confident of the Lord's assistance (16-19), he affirms his unwavering faith in the triumph of righteousness (20-23).

94, 15: The decisions of the judges will again be just.

Ps 95: The Venite Exultemus, the psalm which daily opens the Divine Office of the Church. Twice the psalmist invites the people to praise and worship the Lord (1f.6), for he is king of all his creatures (3-5) and shepherd of his flock (7a-b). In the last strophe the psalmist, speaking in God's name, warns the people to be more faithful to him than were their forefathers in the journey to the Promised Land (7c-11).

Oh, that today you would hear his voice:
8† "Harden not your hearts as at Meribah,
as in the day of Massah in the desert, 9* Where your fathers tempted me;
they tested me though they had seen my works.
10 Forty years I loathed that generation,
and I said: They are a people of erring heart,
and they know not my ways.
11† Therefore I swore in my anger:
They shall not enter into my rest."

PSALM 96†

The Glories of the Lord, the King of the Universe

I

1* Sing to the LORD a new song;
sing to the LORD, all you lands.
2 Sing to the LORD; bless his name;
announce his salvation, day after day.
3 Tell his glory among the nations;
among all peoples, his wondrous deeds.

II

4 For great is the LORD and highly to be praised;
awesome is he, beyond all gods.
5* For all the gods of the nations are things of nought,
but the LORD made the heavens.
6 Splendor and majesty go before him;
praise and grandeur are in his sanctuary.

III

7* Give to the LORD, you families of nations,
give to the LORD glory and praise;
8 give to the LORD the glory due his name!
Bring gifts, and enter his courts;
9 worship the LORD in holy attire.
Tremble before him, all the earth;
10 say among the nations: The LORD is king.
He has made the world firm, not to be moved;
he governs the peoples with equity.

IV

11 Let the heavens be glad and the earth rejoice;
let the sea and what fills it resound;
12 let the plains be joyful and all that is in them!
Then shall all the trees of the forest exult 13 before the LORD, for he comes;
for he comes to rule the earth.
He shall rule the world with justice and the peoples with his constancy.

PSALM 97†

The Divine King, the Just Judge of All

I

1 The LORD is king; let the earth rejoice;
let the many isles be glad.
2* Clouds and darkness are round about him, justice and judgment are the foundation of his throne.
3 Fire goes before him
and consumes his foes round about.
4 His lightnings illumine the world;
the earth sees and trembles.
5 The mountains melt like wax before the LORD,
before the Lord of all the earth.
6 The heavens proclaim his justice,
and all peoples see his glory.

II

7† All who worship graven things are put to shame,
who glory in the things of nought;
all gods are prostrate before him.
8 Zion hears and is glad,
and the cities of Judah rejoice
because of your judgments, O LORD.
9 Because you, O LORD, are the Most High over all the earth, exalted far above all gods.

10 The LORD loves those that hate evil;
he guards the lives of his faithful ones;
from the hand of the wicked he delivers them.

9: Nm 14, 22.
96, 1-13: 1 Chr 16, 23-33.
5: 1 Cor 8, 4.
7ff: Ps 29, 2.
97, 2: Ex 19, 16; Dt 4, 11; 5, 22; 1 Kgs 8, 12.

95, 8: Meribah: literally, "contention"; the place where the Israelites quarreled with the Lord. Massah: the place of "testing," where they put him to the trial. Cf Ex 17, 7; Nm 20, 13.

95, 11: My rest: in Heb 4 this is applied to the eternal rest of heaven; here it refers directly to the Promised Land.

Ps 96: A hymn inviting all mankind to praise the glories of the Lord (1-3), for he alone is God (4-6); to the just king of all men belongs adoration (7-10); even inanimate creation should praise him (11ff). This psalm somewhat altered occurs in 1 Chr 16, 23-33.

Ps 97: The first stanza of this hymn is a theophany portraying the coming of the Lord as judge (1-6); Israel rejoices to behold the overthrow of paganism (7-9) and the rewarding of the true worshipers of God (10-12).

97, 7: All gods: some render, with the Greek, "All the angels." Cf Heb 1, 6.

11 Light dawns for the just;
and gladness, for the upright of heart.
12 Be glad in the LORD, you just,
and give thanks to his holy name.

PSALM 98†

The Lord, the Victorious King and Just Judge

1† A psalm.

I

Sing to the LORD a new song,
for he has done wondrous deeds;
His right hand has won victory for him,
his holy arm.
2 The LORD has made his salvation known:
in the sight of the nations he has revealed his justice.
3 He has remembered his kindness and his faithfulness toward the house of Israel.
All the ends of the earth have seen the salvation by our God.

II

4 Sing joyfully to the LORD, all you lands;
break into song; sing praise.
5 Sing praise to the LORD with the harp,
with the harp and melodious song.
6 With trumpets and the sound of the horn
sing joyfully before the King, the LORD.

III

7 Let the sea and what fills it resound,
the world and those who dwell in it;
8 Let the rivers clap their hands,
the mountains shout with them for joy
9 Before the LORD, for he comes,
for he comes to rule the earth;
He will rule the world with justice and the peoples with equity.

PSALM 99†

The Lord the Holy King

I

1† The LORD is king; the peoples tremble;
he is throned upon the cherubim; the earth quakes.
2 The LORD in Zion is great,
he is high above all the peoples.
3 Let them praise your great and awesome name;
holy is he!

II

4 The King in his might loves justice;
you have established equity;
justice and judgment in Jacob you have wrought.
5† Extol the LORD, our God,
and worship at his footstool;
holy is he!

III

6 Moses and Aaron were among his priests,
and Samuel, among those who called upon his name;
they called upon the LORD, and he answered them.
7* From the pillar of cloud he spoke to them;
they heard his decrees and the law he gave them.
8 O LORD, our God, you answered them;
a forgiving God you were to them,
though requiting their misdeeds.
9 Extol the LORD, our God,
and worship at his holy mountain;
for holy is the LORD, our God.

PSALM 100†

Processional Hymn

1 A psalm of thanksgiving.
Sing joyfully to the LORD, all you lands;
2 serve the LORD with gladness;
come before him with joyful song.
3† Know that the LORD is God;
he made us, his we are;
his people, the flock he tends.
4 Enter his gates with thanksgiving,
his courts with praise;
Give thanks to him; bless his name,
5 for he is good:

99, 7: Ex 33, 9; Nm 12, 5.

†

Ps 98: A hymn of praise, very similar to Ps 96, extolling the Lord for the victory he has given to Israel (1-3); all the nations of the earth and even inanimate creation should welcome the just Savior with joy (4-9).

98, 1: His right hand . . . his holy arm: concrete expressions for God's infinite power.

Ps 99: Another hymn in praise of the Lord as king, but here with special emphasis on his holiness. Each of the three strophes ends in a varying refrain (3b.5.9). The people extol the Lord's majesty (1-3a) and just rule (4), as well as his dealings with their great leaders of old (6-8).

99, 1: The cherubim: the figures of angels with outspread wings on the ark of the covenant. Cf Ex 25, 22; 1 Sm 4, 4; 2 Sm 6, 2; Ps 80, 2.

99, 5: His footstool: the ark itself. Cf 1 Chr 28, 2; Ps 132, 7.

Ps 100: A short hymn, sung at the solemn entry into the temple, probably in connection with the offering up of a thanksgiving sacrifice.

100, 3: Although the people call on all the nations of the earth to join them in their hymn, they are conscious of being the chosen people of the one true God.

the LORD, whose kindness endures forever,
and his faithfulness, to all generations.

PSALM 101†

Norm of Life for Rulers

1 A psalm of David.

Of kindness and judgment I will sing;
to you, O LORD, I will sing praise.
2† I will persevere in the way of integrity;
when will you come to me?

I will walk in the integrity of my heart,
within my house;
3 I will not set before my eyes
any base thing.
I hate him who does perversely;
he shall not remain with me.
4 A crooked heart shall be far from me;
evil I will not know.
5 Whoever slanders his neighbor in secret,
him will I destroy.
The man of haughty eyes and puffed-up heart
I will not endure.
6 My eyes are upon the faithful of the land,
that they may dwell with me.
He who walks in the way of integrity
shall be in my service.
7 He shall not dwell within my house
who practices deceit.
He who speaks falsehood shall not stand before my eyes.
8† Each morning I will destroy
all the wicked of the land,
And uproot from the city of the LORD
all evildoers.

PSALM 102†

Prayer in Time of Distress

1 The prayer of an afflicted one when he is faint and pours out his anguish before the LORD.

I

2 O LORD, hear my prayer,
and let my cry come to you.
3 Hide not your face from me
in the day of my distress.
Incline your ear to me;
in the day when I call, answer me speedily.
4 For my days vanish like smoke,
and my bones burn like fire.
5 Withered and dried up like grass is my heart;
I forget to eat my bread.
6 Because of my insistent sighing
I am reduced to skin and bone.
7† I am like a desert owl;
I have become like an owl among the ruins.
8 I am sleepless, and I moan;
I am like a sparrow alone on the housetop.
9† All the day my enemies revile me;
in their rage against me they make a curse of me.
10 For I eat ashes like bread and mingle my drink with tears, 11 Because of your fury and your wrath;
for you lifted me up only to cast me down.
12*†My days are like a lengthening shadow,
and I wither like grass.

II

13 But you, O LORD, abide forever,
and your name through all generations.
14 You will arise and have mercy on Zion,
for it is time to pity her,
for the appointed time has come.
15 For her stones are dear to your servants,
and her dust moves them to pity.
16* And the nations shall revere your name, O LORD,
and all the kings of the earth your glory, 17 When the LORD has rebuilt Zion
and appeared in his glory;

102, 12: Jb 8, 9; 14, 2; Pss 109, 23; 144, 4; Wis 2, 5. 16: Is 59, 19.

Ps 101: After an introductory strophe setting forth his theme (1-2b), the psalmist pronounces several good resolutions concerning the exercise of his authority, both in his own conduct (2c-4) and in his suppression of evil in others (5-8).

101, 2: When will you come to me?: as a reward for his virtue, the psalmist desires union with God. With a slight emendation of the Hebrew text some render, "I will attend to the affairs of the wholehearted man whenever he comes to me."

101, 8: Each morning: the normal time for administering justice. Cf 2 Sm 15, 2; Jer 21, 12.

Ps 102: A composite psalm of three distinct parts. In the first section (2-12), the psalmist prays as a man who is very ill and abandoned by all; in the second, he prays for the restoration of Zion (13-18) and for her exiled children (19-23); the third section is a meditation on the brevity of human life compared to God's unchanging eternity (24-29). The psalm in its present form is perhaps a compilation made from parts of older psalms. This is the fifth of the Penitential Psalms.

102, 7: A desert owl: what exact species of birds the Hebrew words signify is uncertain, but evidently the solitary life of these birds as well as their desolate surroundings forms the point of comparison. Cf v 8b.

102, 9: They make a curse of me: the enemies of the psalmist use his name when they curse, saying to others, "May you be as miserable as this man."

102, 12: A lengthening shadow: life's day draws to a close.

18 When he has regarded the prayer
of the destitute,
and not despised their prayer.

19 Let this be written for the generation to come,
and let his future creatures praise
the LORD:
20 "The LORD looked down from his holy height,
from heaven he beheld the earth,
21 To hear the groaning of the prisoners,
to release those doomed to die"— 22 That the name of the LORD may be declared in Zion;
and his praise, in Jerusalem, 23* When the peoples gather together,
and the kingdoms, to serve the LORD.

III

24 He has broken down my strength in the way;
he has cut short my days.
25† I say: O my God, Take me not hence in the midst of my days;
through all generations your years endure.
26* Of old you established the earth, and the heavens are the work of your hands.
27 They shall perish, but you remain though all of them grow old like a garment.
Like clothing you change them, and they are changed, 28 but you are the same, and your years have no end.
29 The children of your servants shall abide,
and their posterity shall continue
in your presence.

PSALM 103†

Praise of Divine Goodness

1 Of David.

I

Bless the LORD, O my soul;
and all my being, bless his holy
name.
2 Bless the LORD, O my soul,
and forget not all his benefits;
3 He pardons all your iniquities,
he heals all your ills.
4 He redeems your life from destruction,
he crowns you with kindness and compassion,
5† He fills your lifetime with good;
your youth is renewed like the eagle's.

II

6 The LORD secures justice
and the rights of all the oppressed.
7 He has made known his ways to Moses,
and his deeds to the children of Israel.
8* Merciful and gracious is the LORD, slow to anger and abounding in kindness.
9 He will not always chide, nor does he keep his wrath for-
ever.
10 Not according to our sins does he deal with us,
nor does he requite us according to our crimes.

III

11 For as the heavens are high above
the earth,
so surpassing is his kindness toward those who fear him.
12 As far as the east is from the west,
so far has he put our transgressions from us.
13 As a father has compassion on his children,
so the LORD has compassion on
those who fear him,
14 For he knows how we are formed;
he remembers that we are dust.
15 Man's days are like those of grass;
like a flower of the field he blooms;
16 The wind sweeps over him and he is gone,
and his place knows him no more.
17 But the kindness of the LORD is from eternity
to eternity toward those who fear
him,
And his justice toward children's
children
18 among those who keep his covenant
and remember to fulfill his precepts.

IV

19 The LORD has established his throne
in heaven,
and his kingdom rules over all.
20* Bless the LORD, all you his angels, you mighty in strength, who do his bidding,
obeying his spoken word.

23: Zec 2, 15; 8, 22.
26ff: Heb 1, 10ff.
103, 8: Ex 34, 6; Nm 14, 18.
20f: Ps 148, 2.

102, 25: In the midst of my days: when the normal span of life is but half completed. Cf Is 38, 10; Jer 17, 11.

Ps 103: A hymn of thanksgiving, remarkable for its tender piety, in praise of the Lord's generosity to the psalmist himself (1-5) as well as to his nation (6-10). God's mercy is so great because he knows man's frailty (11-18); therefore the psalmist calls upon the heavenly spirits and all creation to join him in his hymn of grateful praise (19-22).

103, 5: Your youth is renewed like the eagle's: because of its long life—sometimes covering the span of a hundred years—the eagle was a symbol of perennial youth and vigor. Cf Is 40, 31. It is doubtful whether there is any allusion here to the fabled phoenix.

21 Bless the LORD, all you his hosts, his ministers, who do his will.
22 Bless the LORD, all his works, everywhere in his domain.
Bless the LORD, O my soul!

PSALM 104†

Praise of God the Creator

I

1 Bless the LORD, O my soul!
O LORD, my God, you are great indeed!
You are clothed with majesty and glory,
2† robed in light as with a cloak.
You have spread out the heavens like a tent-cloth;
3† you have constructed your palace upon the waters.
You make the clouds your chariot; you travel on the wings of the wind.
4*† You make the winds your messengers,
and flaming fire your ministers.

II

5† You fixed the earth upon its foundation,
not to be moved forever;
6† With the ocean, as with a garment, you covered it;
above the mountains the waters stood.
7 At your rebuke they fled,
at the sound of your thunder they took to flight;
8 As the mountains rose, they went down the valleys
to the place you had fixed for them.
9 You set a limit they may not pass, nor shall they cover the earth again.

III

10 You sent forth springs into the watercourses that wind among the mountains, 11 And give drink to every beast of the field,
till the wild asses quench their thirst.
12 Beside them the birds of heaven dwell;
from among the branches they send forth their song.
13† You water the mountains from your palace;
the earth is replete with the fruit of your works.
14 You raise grass for the cattle,
and vegetation for men's use,
Producing bread from the earth,
15 and wine to gladden men's hearts,
So that their faces gleam with oil,
and bread fortifies the hearts of men.
16 Well watered are the trees of the LORD,
the cedars of Lebanon, which he planted;
17 In them the birds build their nests;
fir trees are the home of the stork.
18† The high mountains are for wild goats;
the cliffs are a refuge for rock-badgers.

IV

19* You made the moon to mark the seasons;
the sun knows the hour of its setting.
20 You bring darkness, and it is night;
then all the beasts of the forest roam about;
21 Young lions roar for the prey
and seek their food from God.
22 When the sun rises, they withdraw and couch in their dens.
23 Man goes forth to his work and to his tillage till the evening.

V

24* How manifold are your works, O LORD!
In wisdom you have wrought them all—
the earth is full of your creatures;
25 The sea also, great and wide,

* 104, 4: Heb 1, 7. 19: Sir 43, 6ff. 24: Ps 92, 6.

† Ps 104: A magnificent hymn praising God's creative wisdom and power. Filled with wonder at the glorious works of the Creator, the psalmist depicts in vivid colors the marvels of the atmosphere and sky (1-4); of the dry land and the ocean (5-9); of the streams and fields that give drink and food to man and beast and bird (10-18); of the sun and moon, with the activities of day and night (19-23); and of the manifold life in the mighty sea (24-26). Acknowledging that it is the Lord who governs and sustains all his creatures (27-30), the psalmist proclaims his omnipotence and sanctity (31-35).

104, 2: Light: created on the first day. In general the psalmist follows the order of creation as given in Gn 1.

104, 3: Your palace upon the waters: God's heavenly dwelling above the upper waters of the sky. Cf Gn 1, 6f; Ps 29, 9f.

104, 4: Flaming fire: lightning. In Heb 1, 7 this verse is cited as an argument for the superiority of Christ over the angels: if God uses mere wind and lightning as his messengers and ministers, then the ministering spirits in heaven whom God also uses as his messengers must be immeasurably lower than the eternal Son of God. In Greek the argument is more striking because the word pneuma means both "wind" and "spirit," while the word angelos means both "messenger" and "angel."

104, 5: The ancients compared the earth to a large building set upon firm foundations.

104, 6-9: According to Gn 1, 9f the whole earth was once covered with water; by elevating a part of the earth, God made the dry land appear.

104, 13: God is pictured as sending down the rain from the reservoir of the upper waters referred to in v 3. Cf Gn 7, 11; Jb 38, 22; Sir 43, 14.

104, 18: Rock-badgers: the hyrax syriacus, a small harelike, ungulate mammal. Cf Lv 11, 5; Dt 14, 7; Prv 30, 26.

in which are schools without number of living things both small and great, 26† And where ships move about with Leviathan, which you formed to make sport of it.

VI

27† They all look to you to give them food in due time.
28 When you give it to them, they gather it;
when you open your hand, they are filled with good things.
29 If you hide your face, they are dismayed;
if you take away their breath, they perish
and return to their dust.
30† When you send forth your spirit, they are created,
and you renew the face of the earth.

VII

31† May the glory of the LORD endure forever;
may the LORD be glad in his works!
32 He who looks upon the earth, and it trembles;
who touches the mountains, and they smoke!
33* I will sing to the LORD all my life;
I will sing praise to my God while I live.
34 Pleasing to him be my theme;
I will be glad in the LORD.
35 May sinners cease from the earth,
and may the wicked be no more.
Bless the LORD, O my soul! Alleluia.

PSALM 105†

God's Fidelity to His Promise

I

1* Give thanks to the LORD, invoke his name;
make known among the nations his deeds.
2 Sing to him, sing his praise,
proclaim all his wondrous deeds.
3 Glory in his holy name;
rejoice, O hearts that seek the LORD!
4 Look to the LORD in his strength;
seek to serve him constantly.
5 Recall the wondrous deeds that he has wrought,
his portents, and the judgments he has uttered, 6 You descendants of Abraham, his servants,
sons of Jacob, his chosen ones!
7 He, the LORD, is our God;
throughout the earth his judgments prevail.

(II)

8 He remembers forever his covenant which he made binding for a thousand generations—9 Which he entered into with Abraham and by his oath to Isaac;
10 Which he established for Jacob by statute,
for Israel as an everlasting covenant, 11* Saying, "To you will I give the land of Canaan as your allotted inheritance."

III

12* When they were few in number,
a handful, and strangers there, 13 Wandering from nation to nation
and from one kingdom to another people, 14† He let no man oppress them,
and for their sake he rebuked kings:
15† "Touch not my anointed,
and to my prophets do no harm."

IV

16*† When he called down a famine on the land and ruined the crop that sustained them, 17* He sent a man before them,
Joseph, sold as a slave;
18* They had weighed him down with fetters,
and he was bound with chains,

11: Gn 12, 7; 15, 18.
12f: Dt 26, 5.
16: Gn 41, 57.
17: Gn 37, 28.36
18: Gn 39, 20.

†

104, 26: Ships: some emend the Hebrew text to read, "sea dragons," for the sake of the parallelism with Leviathan. The latter was the name of a mythological sea monster personifying primeval chaos. Cf Ps 74, 14; Is 27, 1. However, in Jt 40, 25 it stands for the crocodile, and here it may well signify the dolphin or some other large marine creature.

104, 27: They all: all the creatures, man included, mentioned in vv 10-26.

104, 30: Your spirit: the "breath" or spirit of God is the divine creative power, the source of all life in nature. Cf Gn 1, 2; 2, 7. So also the Holy Spirit of God is the source of all supernatural life. Hence, this verse is applied by the church to the Third Person of the Blessed Trinity.

104, 31: Glad in his works: Cf Gn 1, 31, "God saw that all he had made was very good."

Ps 105: A hymn in praise of God's goodness as shown in Israel's history. Cf Pss 78; 106; 136. After the introductory invocation (1-7), the psalmist recounts the Lord's promises to the patriarchs (8-11), their early wanderings in Canaan (12-15), the story of Joseph (16-22) and of the Israelites in Egypt (23-27), the Egyptian plagues (28-38), the journey through the desert (39-43), and the occupation of the Promised Land (44f).

105, 14: Kings: Pharaoh, and Abimelech of Gerar. Cf Gn 12, 17; 20, 6f.

105, 15: My anointed . . . my prophets: the patriarchs Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, who were in a certain sense "anointed," that is, consecrated to God, and were the recipients of his revelations.

105, 16b: Literally, "And broke every staff of bread."

19* Till his prediction came to pass and the word of the LORD proved him true.
20* The king sent and released him,
the ruler of the peoples set him free.
21* He made him lord of his house and ruler of all his possessions, 22 That he might train his princes to be like him
and teach his elders wisdom.

V

23*† Then Israel came to Egypt,
and Jacob sojourned in the land of Ham.
24* He greatly increased his people and made them stronger than their foes, (VI)
25* Whose hearts he changed, so that they hated his people, and dealt deceitfully with his servants.
26 He sent Moses his servant;
Aaron, whom he had chosen.
27* They wrought his signs among them,
and wonders in the land of Ham.

VII

28† He sent the darkness; it grew dark,
but they rebelled against his words.
29 He turned their waters into blood and killed their fish.
30 Their land swarmed with frogs,
even in the chambers of their kings.
31 He spoke, and there came swarms of flies;
gnats, throughout all their borders.
32 For rain he gave them hail,
with flashing fires throughout their land.
33 He struck down their vines and their fig trees
and shattered the trees throughout their borders.
34 He spoke, and there came locusts
and grasshoppers without number;
35 And they devoured every plant throughout the land;
they devoured the fruit of their soil.
36 Then he struck every first-born throughout their land,
the first fruits of all their manhood.
37* And he led them forth laden with silver and gold,
with not a weakling among their tribes.
38 Egypt rejoiced at their going,
for the dread of them had fallen upon it.

VIII

39* He spread a cloud to cover them
and fire to give them light by night.
40* They asked, and he brought them quail,
and with bread from heaven he satisfied them.
41* He cleft the rock, and the water gushed forth;
it flowed through the dry lands like a stream, 42 For he remembered his holy word
to his servant Abraham.
43 And he led forth his people with joy;
with shouts of joy, his chosen ones.

IX

44 And he gave them the lands of the nations, and they took what the peoples had toiled for,
45 That they might keep his statutes and observe his laws. Alleluia.

PSALM 106†

Israel's Confession of Sin

1 Alleluia.

A

Give thanks to the LORD, for he is good,
for his kindness endures forever.
2 Who can tell the mighty deeds of the LORD,
or proclaim all his praises?
3 Happy are they who observe what is right,
who do always what is just.

105, 23.27: The land of Ham: a synonym for Egypt. Cf Gn 10, 6, where Mizraim is the Hebrew name for Egypt.

105, 28-38: Here, as also in Ps 78, 43-51, the plagues of Egypt are retold with some poetic license, so that the order of the plagues is not quite the same as in Ex 7, 14—12, 30.

Ps 106: Like the preceding psalm, this hymn reviews Israel's history, but here the salient thought is the rebellious spirit of the chosen people despite God's goodness to them. After an introductory prayer for God's mercy on himself and on his nation (1-5), the psalmist recounts the lack of faith shown by the Israelites at the Exodus (6-12), their craving for meat in the desert (13-15), the rebellions of Korah, Dathan and Abiram (16-18), the worship of the golden calf at Sinai (19-23), the cowardice and foolhardiness of the Israelites at their first contact with the Canaanites (24-27), their paganism at Peor (28-31), their causing Moses to sin at Meribah (32f), and their mingling with the Canaanites (34-39); confessing that it was their wickedness which made God punish them with repeated calamities and defeats (40-46), the psalmist prays for the return and restoration of scattered Israel (47).

4 Remember me, O LORD, as you favor your people;
visit me with your saving help,
5 That I may see the prosperity of your chosen ones,
rejoice in the joy of your people,
and glory with your inheritance.

B

I

6 We have sinned, we and our fathers;
we have committed crimes; we have done wrong.
7* Our fathers in Egypt considered not your wonders;
They remembered not your abundant kindness,
but rebelled against the Most High at the Red Sea.
8 Yet he saved them for his name's sake,
to make known his power.
9* He rebuked the Red Sea, and it was dried up,
and he led them through the deep as through a desert.
10 He saved them from hostile hands
and freed them from the hands of the enemy.
11 The waters covered their foes;
not one of them was left.
12* Then they believed his words and sang his praises.

II

13* But soon they forgot his works;
they waited not for his counsel.
14 They gave way to craving in the desert and tempted God in the wilderness.
15 He gave them what they asked but sent a wasting disease against them.

III

16* They envied Moses in the camp,
and Aaron, the holy one of the LORD.
17 The earth opened and swallowed up Dathan,
and covered the faction of Abiram.
18 Fire broke out against their faction;
a flame consumed the wicked.

IV

19* They made a calf in Horeb
and adored a molten image;
20 They exchanged their glory
for the image of a grass-eating bullock.
21 They forgot the God who had saved them,
who had done great deeds in Egypt,
22 Wondrous deeds in the land of Ham,
terrible things at the Red Sea.
23 Then he spoke of exterminating them,
but Moses, his chosen one, Withstood him in the breach
to turn back his destructive wrath.

V

24* Yet they despised the desirable land;
they believed not his word.
25 They murmured in their tents,
and obeyed not the voice of the LORD.
26 Then with raised hand he swore against them
to let them perish in the desert, 27 To scatter their descendants among the nations,
and to disperse them over the lands.

VI

28* And they submitted to the rites of Baal of Peor
and ate the sacrifices of dead gods.
29 They provoked him by their deeds,
and a plague attacked them.
30 Then Phinehas stood forth in judgment
and the plague was checked;
31 And it was imputed to him for merit
through all generations forever.

VII

32† They angered him at the waters of Meribah,
and Moses fared ill on their account, 33 For they embittered his spirit,
and the rash utterance passed his lips.

VIII

34* They did not exterminate the peoples,
as the LORD had commanded them, 35* But mingled with the nations
and learned their works.
36* They served their idols,
which became a snare for them.
37* They sacrificed their sons and their daughters to demons.
38 And they shed innocent blood,

the blood of their sons and their daughters,
Whom they sacrificed to the idols of Canaan,
desecrating the land with bloodshed;
39 They became defiled by their works,
and wanton in their crimes.

C

40 And the LORD grew angry with his people,
and abhorred his inheritance;
41 He gave them over into the hands of the nations,
and their foes ruled over them.
42 Their enemies oppressed them,
and they were humbled under their power.
43 Many times did he rescue them,
but they embittered him with their counsels
and were brought low by their guilt.
44 Yet he had regard for their affliction
when he heard their cry;
45 And for their sake he was mindful of his covenant
and relented, in his abundant kindness, 46 And he won for them compassion
from all who held them captive.

47* Save us, O LORD, our God,
and gather us from among the nations,
That we may give thanks to your holy name
and glory in praising you.

* * *

48† Blessed be the LORD, the God of Israel, through all eternity!
Let all the people say, Amen! Alleluia.

V: THE FIFTH BOOK—Psalms 107-150

PSALM 107†

God the Savior of Men in Distress

1† "Give thanks to the LORD, for he is good,
for his kindness endures forever!"
2 Thus let the redeemed of the LORD say, those whom he has redeemed from the hand of the foe
3 And gathered from the lands, from the east and the west, from the north and the south.

A

I

4 They went astray in the desert wilderness;
the way to an inhabited city they did not find.
5 Hungry and thirsty,
their life was wasting away within them.
6 They cried to the LORD in their distress;
from their straits he rescued them.
7 And he led them by a direct way
to reach an inhabited city.
8 Let them give thanks to the LORD for his kindness
and his wondrous deeds to the children of men, 9 Because he satisfied the longing soul
and filled the hungry soul with good things.

II

10* They dwelt in darkness and gloom,
bondsmen in want and in chains,
11 Because they had rebelled against the words of God and scorned the counsel of the Most High.
12 And he humbled their hearts with trouble;
when they stumbled, there was no one to help them.
13 They cried to the LORD in their distress;
from their straits he rescued them.
14 And he led them forth from darkness and gloom
and broke their bonds asunder.
15 Let them give thanks to the LORD for his kindness
and his wondrous deeds to the children of men, 16 Because he shattered the gates of brass
and burst the bars of iron.

III

17 Stricken because of their wicked ways
and afflicted because of their sins,

* 47f: 1 Chr 16, 35f; Ps 107, 10: Is 42, 7. 41, 14.

† 106, 48: The doxology at the end of the Fourth Book of the Psalms; a later addition.

Ps 107: Besides the prologue (1-3), in which the people thank the Lord for their return from exile, this psalm consists of two parts. In the first (4-32), where each of the four stanzas has the same divided refrain, God is praised as the helper and rescuer of wanderers lost in the wilderness (4-9), of the imprisoned (10-16), of the sick (17-22), and of storm-tossed seafarers (23-32). The second part (33-43) describes how God's beneficent providence changed deserts into fertile fields (33-35) where the needy found prosperity (36-38); and how, when bad rulers brought hard times upon them, God restored the fortunes of the poor (39-41). All this, therefore, should be recognized as coming from him (42f).

107, 1: A standard cry of praise in the liturgy of the temple, and frequently cited in the Bible. Cf 1 Chr 16, 34; Pss 118, 1; 136, 1; Jer 33, 11; Dn 3, 89; 1 Mc 4, 24.

18 They loathed all manner of food,
so that they were near the gates of death.
19 They cried to the LORD in their distress;
from their straits he rescued them.
20 He sent forth his word to heal them
and to snatch them from destruction.
21 Let them give thanks to the LORD for his kindness
and his wondrous deeds to the children of men.
22 Let them make thank offerings and declare his works with shouts of joy.

IV

23 They who sailed the sea in ships,
trading on the deep waters,
24 These saw the works of the LORD
and his wonders in the abyss.
25 His command raised up a storm wind which tossed its waves on high.
26 They mounted up to heaven; they sank to the depths;
their hearts melted away in their plight.
27 They reeled and staggered like drunken men,
and all their skill was swallowed up.
28 They cried to the LORD in their distress;
from their straits he rescued them.
29 He hushed the storm to a gentle breeze,
and the billows of the sea were stilled;
30 They rejoiced that they were calmed,
and he brought them to their desired haven.
31 Let them give thanks to the LORD for his kindness
and his wondrous deeds to the children of men.
32 Let them extol him in the assembly of the people and praise him in the council of the elders.

B

33* He changed rivers into desert,
water springs into thirsty ground, 34 Fruitful land into salt marsh,
because of the wickedness of its inhabitants.
35 He changed the desert into pools of water,
waterless land into water springs.
36† And there he settled the hungry,
and they built a city to dwell in.
37 They sowed fields and planted vineyards,
And they obtained a fruitful yield.
38 He blessed them, and they became very many;
nor did he suffer their cattle to decrease.
39 And they dwindled and were brought low through oppression, affliction and sorrow.
40* But he who pours out contempt upon princes,
and sends them astray through a trackless waste, 41 Lifted up the needy out of misery
and made the families numerous like flocks.

42 The upright see this and rejoice,
and all wickedness closes its mouth.
43* Who is wise enough to observe these things and to understand the favors of the LORD?

PSALM 108†
Prayer for Victory

1 A song; a psalm of David.

I

2* My heart is steadfast, O God; my heart is steadfast;
I will sing and chant praise.
3 Awake, O my soul; awake, lyre and harp;
I will wake the dawn.
4 I will give thanks to you among the peoples, O LORD;
I will chant your praise among the nations,
5 For your kindness towers to the heavens,
and your faithfulness to the skies.
6 Be exalted above the heavens, O God;
over all the earth be your glory!
7* That your loved ones may escape,
help us by your right hand, and answer us.

33f: Is 35, 7; 41, 18; 42, 15. 40: Jb 12, 21.24. 43: Hos 14, 10.

† 108, 2-6: Ps 57, 8-12. 7-14: Ps 60, 7-14.

107, 36-41: Although his words seem to refer to God's providence in general, the psalmist probably has in mind the settlement and development of the Promised Land (36ff), the hard times caused by the Assyrian and Babylonian invasions (39), the humiliation and exile of the last kings of Judah (40), and the restoration of Zion after the exile (41).

Ps 108: A compilation of parts from two other psalms: 2-6 are the same as Ps 57, 8-12; 7-14 are the same as Ps 60, 7-14.

8 God promised in his sanctuary:
"Exultantly I will apportion Shechem,
and measure off the valley of Succoth;
9 Mine is Gilead, and mine Manasseh,
Ephraim is the helmet for my head; Judah, my scepter;
10 Moab shall serve as my washbowl;
upon Edom I will set my shoe;
I will triumph over Philistia."

11 Who will bring me into the fortified city?
Who will lead me into Edom?
12 Have not you, O God, rejected us,
So that you go not forth, O God, with our armies?
13 Give us aid against the foe,
for worthless is the help of men.
14 Under God we shall do valiantly;
it is he who will tread down our foes.

PSALM 109†

Prayer against a Slanderous Enemy

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

/

O God, whom I praise, be not silent,
2 for they have opened wicked and treacherous mouths against me.
They have spoken to me with lying tongues,
3 and with words of hatred they have encompassed me
and attacked me without cause.
4 In return for my love they slandered me,
but I prayed.
5 They repaid me evil for good and hatred for my love.

//

6† Raise up a wicked man against him,
and let the accuser stand at his right hand.
7 When he is judged, let him go forth condemned,
and may his plea be in vain.
8* May his days be few;
may another take his office.
9 May his children be fatherless,
and his wife a widow.
10 May his children be roaming vagrants and beggars;
may they be cast out of the ruins of their homes.
11 May the usurer ensnare all his belongings,
and strangers plunder the fruit of his labors.
12 May there be no one to do him a kindness,
nor anyone to pity his orphans.
13 May his posterity meet with destruction;
in the next generation may their name be blotted out.
14 May the guilt of his fathers be remembered by the LORD;
let not his mother's sin be blotted out;
15 May they be continually before the LORD,
till he banish the memory of these parents from the earth, 16 Because he remembered not to show kindness, but persecuted the wretched and poor
and the brokenhearted, to do them to death.
17 He loved cursing; may it come upon him;
he took no delight in blessing; may it be far from him.
18 And may he be clothed with cursing as with a robe;
may it penetrate into his entrails like water
and like oil into his bones;
19 May it be for him like a garment which covers him,
like a girdle which is always about him.

///

20† May this be the recompense from the LORD upon my accusers and upon those who speak evil against me.
21 But do you, O GOD, my Lord, deal kindly with me for your name's sake;
in your generous kindness rescue me;
22 For I am wretched and poor,
and my heart is pierced within me.

* 109, 8: Acts 1, 20.

† Ps 109: The first and the third sections are prayers of supplication from one who is cursed and calumniated by numerous enemies (1-5.20-31). The middle section is a series of strong curses against a certain individual (6-19). Whether the imprecations of this section were uttered by the psalmist himself against one of his foes, or by these foes against him, is a disputed question; the answer depends principally on the interpretation of v 20. See note on this verse.

109, 6: The accuser: the Hebrew word is satan. Cf Zec 3, 1, where Satan stands at the right hand of the high priest to bring accusations against him before the Lord. But here a human accuser is meant, unless the phrase, a wicked man, is rendered, "the wicked one," that is, the devil.

109, 20: Recompense: the Hebrew word means either "work done" or "wages for work done." The above translation takes it in the latter sense. Accordingly, the preceding dire curses may be understood either as directly spoken by the psalmist against his chief enemy, or as spoken first by his enemies against him and then willed by him to recoil on them. The other possible translation would be, "This is the work of those who would bring harm upon me from the LORD." In this case the only imprecations of the psalmist himself would be those in v 29, which are comparatively mild.

23† Like a lengthening shadow I pass
away;
I am swept away like the locust.
24 My knees totter from my fasting,
and my flesh is wasted of its substance.
25 And I am become a mockery to
them;
when they see me, they shake
their heads.
26 Help me, O LORD, my God;
save me, in your kindness,
27† And let them know that this is your
hand;
that you, O LORD, have done this.
28† Let them curse, but do you bless;
may my adversaries be put to shame,
but let your servant rejoice.
29 Let my accusers be clothed with disgrace and let them wear their shame
like a mantle.
30 I will speak my thanks earnestly to
the LORD,
and in the midst of the throng I will praise him, 31 For he stood at the right hand of the poor man,
to save him from those who would condemn him.

PSALM 110†

The Messiah: King, Priest and Conqueror

1*† A psalm of David.

I

The LORD said to my Lord: "Sit at my right hand
till I make your enemies your footstool."
2 The scepter of your power the LORD will stretch forth from Zion:
"Rule in the midst of your enemies.
3† Yours is princely power in the day
of your birth, in holy splendor;
before the daystar, like the dew,
I have begotten you."

II

4*† The LORD has sworn, and he will not repent:
"You are a priest forever, according to the order of Melchizedek."

III

5 The LORD is at your right hand;
he will crush kings on the day of his wrath.
6 He will do judgment on the nations,
heaping up corpses;
he will crush heads over the wide
earth.
7† From the brook by the wayside he will drink;
therefore will he lift up his head.

PSALM 111†

Praise of God for His Goodness

1*† Alleluia.

I will give thanks to the LORD with all my heart
in the company and assembly of the just.
2 Great are the works of the LORD,
exquisite in all their delights.
3 Majesty and glory are his work,
and his justice endures forever.

110, 1: Mt 22, 44; Acts 2, 34f; 1 Cor 15, 25; Heb 1, 13; 10, 13. 4: Heb 5, 6; 7, 21. 111, 1: Ps 138, 1.

109, 23: Swept away: a strong wind sometimes ends a plague of locusts by blowing them out into the sea. Cf Ex 10, 19; Jl 2, 20. Some render, "Shaken off," and understand this of the custom of knocking locusts off the plants in order to kill them on the ground.

109, 27: This: both the misery suffered and the deliverance expected from the Lord.

109, 28: Let them curse: this gives some probability to the view that the imprecations in vv 6-19 were uttered by the enemies of the psalmist.

Ps 110: One of the most important of the messianic psalms. Following the teaching of our Lord and the Apostles, Catholic tradition has constantly and unanimously interpreted this psalm as referring to Christ. However, in some verses the Hebrew text is obscure and the interpretation uncertain. Here are set forth the dignity of the Messiah as the king appointed by God (1-3), as the royal priest (4), and as victor over his foes (5-7).

110, 1: The LORD said to my Lord: literally, "The oracle of the LORD (Yahweh) for my Lord." My Lord: a Hebrew phrase of polite address, equivalent to "you," and used when a subject addresses his superior. Cf 1 Sm 25, 25ff; 2 Sm 1, 10. The force of our Lord's argument from this passage is as follows: David was universally recognized as the author of this psalm, which was acknowledged by all as referring to the Messiah; but the psalmist addresses the Messiah here as his superior; therefore the Messiah must be David's superior and not merely his "son" or descendant. Cf Mt 22, 41-45 and parallels. At my right hand: the place of honor next to the royal throne. Cf 1 Kgs 2, 19. Your footstool: in ancient times vanquished enemies had to suffer the victor's putting his feet on their prostrate bodies as a sign of their submission.

110, 3: The current Hebrew text is obscure and seems corrupt. The translation here follows the reading of the revised Latin Psalter, which is based on the ancient versions. Before the daystar: when the sun had not yet been created, that is, from all eternity. Like the dew: in a secret, mysterious manner.

110, 4: According to the order of Melchizedek: in the same way as Melchizedek was a priest. There are three main points of resemblance between Melchizedek, the prophetic type, and Christ who fulfilled this prophecy: both are kings as well as priests, both offer bread and wine to God, and both have their priesthood directly from God and not through Aaron, since neither belongs to the tribe of Levi. Cf Gn 14, 18; Heb 7.

110, 7: Figurative language of uncertain significance. The sense, according to some, is: The messianic King will bow down in humility to drink of the waters of divine assistance, and then go on to new victories. Cf Is 8, 6; Jer 2, 13.17f.

Ps 111: An alphabetic hymn in praise of God's law and of his merciful deeds for Israel. As is customary in such psalms, the thoughts here are rather loosely strung together.

111, 1: In the company and assembly of the just: in the temple. Cf Ps 149, 1.

4 He has won renown for his wondrous deeds;
gracious and merciful is the LORD.
5† He has given food to those who fear him;
he will forever be mindful of his covenant.
6 He has made known to his people the power of his works,
giving them the inheritance of the nations.
7 The works of his hands are faithful and just;
sure are all his precepts,
8 Reliable forever and ever,
wrought in truth and equity.
9 He has sent deliverance to his people;
he has ratified his covenant forever;
holy and awesome is his name.
10*† The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom;
prudent are all who live by it.
His praise endures forever.

PSALM 112†

The Blessings of the Just Man

1 Alleluia.

Happy the man who fears the LORD,
who greatly delights in his commands.
2 His posterity shall be mighty upon the earth;
the upright generation shall be blessed.
3† Wealth and riches shall be in his house;
his generosity shall endure forever.
4† He dawns through the darkness, a light for the upright;
he is gracious and merciful and just.
5 Well for the man who is gracious and lends,
who conducts his affairs with justice;
6 He shall never be moved;
the just man shall be in everlasting remembrance.
7 An evil report he shall not fear;
his heart is firm, trusting in the LORD.
8 His heart is steadfast; he shall not fear
till he looks down upon his foes.
9*† Lavishly he gives to the poor;
his generosity shall endure forever;
his horn shall be exalted in glory.
10 The wicked man shall see it and be vexed;
he shall gnash his teeth and pine away;
the desire of the wicked shall perish.

PSALM 113†

Praise of the Lord for His Care of the Lowly

1† Alleluia.

I

Praise, you servants of the LORD,
praise the name of the LORD.
2 Blessed be the name of the LORD
both now and forever.
3† From the rising to the setting of the sun is the name of the LORD to be praised.

II

4 High above all nations is the LORD;
above the heavens is his glory.
5 Who is like the LORD, our God, who is enthroned on high
6 and looks upon the heavens and the earth below?

III

7* He raises up the lowly from the dust;
from the dunghill he lifts up the poor 8 To seat them with princes, with the princes of his own people.
9† He establishes in her home the barren wife
as the joyful mother of children.

10: Jb 28, 28; Prv 1, 7; 9, 10; Sir 1, 16.
112, 9: 2 Cor 9, 9.
113, 7f: 1 Sm 2, 8.

111, 5: Food to those who fear him: the manna in the desert. In the liturgy of the Church these words are applied to the Blessed Eucharist, of which the manna was the type or figure. Cf Jn 6, 31ff.49ff.

111, 10: The fear of the LORD: reverence for God; the Hebrew term for "religion."

Ps 112: An alphabetic psalm of didactic character, lauding the virtues of the God-fearing man. In style and diction this is very similar to the preceding psalm; both may well have had the same author.

112, 3: Generosity: the original meaning of the Hebrew word is "justice," but in a later period of the language it also acquired the meaning of "liberality, almsgiving." Cf Sir 3, 30; 7, 10; also Mt 6, 1.

112, 4: Some interpret this verse as said of God. Cf Ps 111, 4b. But more probably the subject of this sentence is the same as the subject of all the preceding and following sentences, that is, the just man. He acts in the same way as God does.

112, 9: His horn: his power, dignity and authority. Cf note on Ps 18, 3.

Ps 113: A hymn praying that God may be glorified at all times and in all places (1-3), because he who is supreme over all (4-6) stoops down to raise up the lowly and the barren (7-9).

113, 1: Servants of the LORD: devout worshipers; in particular, the Levites. Cf Pss 134, 1; 135, 1; Dn 3, 85.

113, 3: From the rising to the setting of the sun: either temporally, "from morning to evening," or spatially, "from the east to the west." Cf Mal 1, 11.

113, 9: Because of the importance in Israel of large families, the barren wife was considered disgraced and cursed by God. Cf Gn 16, 4f; 1 Sm 1, 5f.11; 2, 5; Lk 1, 25.

PSALM 114†

The Lord's Wonders at the Exodus

1 Alleluia.

When Israel came forth from Egypt,
the house of Jacob from a people of alien tongue,
2 Judah became his sanctuary,
Israel his domain.

3* The sea beheld and fled;
Jordan turned back.
4† The mountains skipped like rams,
the hills like the lambs of the flock.

5 Why is it, O sea, that you flee?
O Jordan, that you turn back?
6 You mountains, that you skip like rams?
You hills, like the lambs of the flock?

7 Before the face of the Lord, tremble, O earth,
before the face of the God of Jacob,
8* Who turned the rock into pools of water,
the flint into flowing springs.

PSALM 115†

The Greatness and Goodness of the True God

I

1 Not to us, O LORD, not to us
but to your name give glory
because of your kindness, because of your truth.
2† Why should the pagans say,
"Where is their God?"
3 Our God is in heaven;
whatever he wills, he does.

II

4* Their idols are silver and gold,
the handiwork of men.
5 They have mouths but speak not;
they have eyes but see not;
6 They have ears but hear not;
they have noses but smell not;
7 They have hands but feel not;
they have feet but walk not;
they utter no sound from their throat.
8 Their makers shall be like them,
everyone that trusts in them.

III

9† The house of Israel trusts in the LORD;
he is their help and their shield.
10 The house of Aaron trusts in the LORD;
he is their help and their shield.
11 Those who fear the LORD trust in the LORD;
he is their help and their shield.
12 The LORD remembers us and will bless us:
he will bless the house of Israel;
he will bless the house of Aaron;
13 He will bless those who fear the LORD,
both the small and the great.
14 May the LORD bless you more and more,
both you and your children.
15 May you be blessed by the LORD,
who made heaven and earth.
16 Heaven is the heaven of the LORD,
but the earth he has given to the children of men.
17*† It is not the dead who praise the LORD,
nor those who go down into silence;
18 But we bless the LORD,
both now and forever.

PSALM 116†

Thanksgiving to God for Help in Need

A

1 Alleluia.

I

I love the LORD because he has heard

114, 3: Ex 14, 21f; Jos 3, 14ff.
8: Ex 17, 6; Nm 20, 11.
115, 4-10: Ps 135, 15-19.
17: Pss 6, 6; 88, 11ff; Sir 17, 27f(25f); Is 38, 18.

Ps 114: A song commemorating Israel's deliverance from Egypt. When the Lord chose Israel as his own special people (1f), marvelous things took place in nature (3f) of which he was the cause (5-8). In the Greek and Latin versions, this song is joined to the following one to form a single psalm, but originally they were probably distinct.

114, 4: A poetic description of the earthquake that took place when God appeared on Mount Sinai. Cf Ex 19, 16ff.

Ps 115: A song in praise of the living God (1-3) and in derision of the lifeless idols of the pagans (4-8). To this are added a brief "liturgy," consisting of a litany in which the various classes of the people express their confidence in God (9-11); a blessing given by the priests (12-15); and a short hymn of praise (16-18). In Ps 135, 15-18 a very similar song in mockery of the pagan gods occurs, and there also it is followed by a similar litany and hymn (vv 19ff).

115, 2: Where is their God?: implying that God does not help them.

115, 9ff: The house of Israel . . . the house of Aaron . . . those who fear the LORD: the laity of Israelite birth, the priests, and the converts to Judaism. Cf Pss 118, 2ff; 135, 19f. In the New Testament likewise, the word "God-fearing" is used for the proselytes or converts to Judaism. Cf Acts 10, 2.22; 13, 16.26.

115, 17: See note on Ps 6, 6.

Ps 116: The Greek and Latin versions divide this psalm into two parts: Ps 114 (vv 1-9), Ps 115 (vv 10-19). This is a hymn of thanksgiving sung in the temple by an individual who, when mortally ill, had been cured by the Lord. Recalling how he prayed when he was at death's door (1-4), the psalmist now praises God for having heard his prayer (5-9). Referring again to his former period of need (10f), he offers up his sacrifice and hymn of grateful praise (12-19).

my voice in supplication,
2 Because he has inclined his ear to me
the day I called.
3*† The cords of death encompassed me;
the snares of the nether world seized upon me;
I fell into distress and sorrow,
4 And I called upon the name of the LORD,
"O LORD, save my life!"

II

5 Gracious is the LORD and just;
yes, our God is merciful.
6 The LORD keeps the little ones;
I was brought low, and he saved me.
7 Return, O my soul, to your tranquillity,
for the LORD has been good to you.
8 For he has freed my soul from death,
my eyes from tears, my feet from stumbling.
9 I shall walk before the LORD
in the lands of the living.

B

10*† I believed, even when I said,
"I am greatly afflicted";
11* I said in my alarm,
"No man is dependable."

12 How shall I make a return to the LORD for all the good he has done for me?
13† The cup of salvation I will take up,
and I will call upon the name of the LORD;
14 My vows to the LORD I will pay
in the presence of all his people.
15† Precious in the eyes of the LORD is the death of his faithful ones.

16 O LORD, I am your servant;
I am your servant, the son of your handmaid;
you have loosed my bonds.
17 To you will I offer sacrifice of thanksgiving,
and I will call upon the name of the LORD.
18 My vows to the LORD I will pay
in the presence of all his people, 19 In the courts of the house of the LORD,
in your midst, O Jerusalem.

PSALM 117†

Doxology of All the Nations

1* Alleluia.

Praise the LORD, all you nations;
glorify him, all you peoples!
2 For steadfast is his kindness toward us,
and the fidelity of the LORD endures forever.

PSALM 118†

Hymn of Thanksgiving to the Savior of Israel

1 Alleluia.

A

Give thanks to the LORD, for he is good,
for his mercy endures forever.
2† Let the house of Israel say,
"His mercy endures forever."
3 Let the house of Aaron say,
"His mercy endures forever."
4 Let those who fear the LORD say,
"His mercy endures forever."

B

I

5† In my straits I called upon the LORD;
the LORD answered me and set me free.

116, 3: Ps 18, 5; Jon 2, 3.
116, 10: 2 Cor 4, 13.
116, 11: Rom 3, 4.
117, 1: Rm 15, 11.

116, 3: Death is pictured as a trapper catching his prey. Cf Ps 18, 6.

116, 10: I believed: the psalmist did not doubt that God would be faithful to his promise of help.

116, 13: The cup of salvation: the libation of wine poured out in gratitude for having been saved. Cf Ex 25, 29; Nm 15, 1-10. This verse was very appropriately chosen as the prayer which the priest says before drinking the Precious Blood at Holy Mass.

116, 15: Humanly speaking, the Lord looks upon the death of his faithful servants and the consequent loss of their praise as too costly for him to allow. The sentiment of the psalmist is naturally connected with his ideas of the nether world. Cf Ps 6, 6. In the liturgy this verse was used, after the reading of the Martyrology at Prime, in an applied sense: In the eyes of God the death of his holy martyrs is as precious as gold which has been proved in a furnace. Cf Wis 3, 4-7.

Ps 117: The shortest of all the psalms; a brief hymn of praise calling on all mankind to glorify the Lord for his kindness and fidelity to his promises. This invitation to all the nations finds its fulfillment in Christ's universal kingdom. Cf Rom 15, 11.

Ps 118: A dramatic "liturgy" of thanksgiving. After an invocation in the form of a litany (1-4), the psalmist, who very likely is speaking here in the name of the whole community, describes how the nation confidently implored the Lord's help (5-9) when hostile peoples threatened its life (10-14); in vivid words he recounts how God came to the rescue (15-18). Then follows a dialogue between the priests at the temple gates and the psalmist as he enters to offer the thanksgiving sacrifice (19-25); finally the priests impart their blessing (26f), and the psalmist sings his hymn of grateful praise (28f).

118, 2ff: See note on Ps 115, 9ff.

118, 5-18: Although many of the phrases in this section resemble those used in the supplications of individuals, other phrases make it probable that the psalmist is speaking here in the name of the whole nation. The occasion may have been such as described in Neh 12, 27-43.

6* The LORD is with me; I fear not;
what can man do against me?
7 The LORD is with me to help me,
and I shall look down upon my foes.
8* It is better to take refuge in the LORD
than to trust in man.
9 It is better to take refuge in the LORD
than to trust in princes.

//

10 All the nations encompassed me;
in the name of the LORD I crushed them.
11 They encompassed me on every side;
in the name of the LORD I crushed them.
12 They encompassed me like bees,
they flared up like fire among thorns;
in the name of the LORD I crushed them.
13 I was hard pressed and was falling,
but the LORD helped me.
14* My strength and my courage is the LORD,
and he has been my savior.

15 The joyful shout of victory
in the tents of the just:
"The right hand of the LORD has struck with power:
16 the right hand of the LORD is exalted;
the right hand of the LORD has struck with power."
17 I shall not die, but live,
and declare the works of the LORD.
18 Though the LORD has indeed chastised me,
yet he has not delivered me to death.

19† Open to me the gates of justice;
I will enter them and give thanks to the LORD.

20 This gate is the LORD'S;
the just shall enter it.

21 I will give thanks to you, for you have answered me
and have been my savior.

22*† The stone which the builders rejected
has become the cornerstone.
23 By the LORD has this been done;
it is wonderful in our eyes.

24 This is the day the LORD has made;
let us be glad and rejoice in it.

25† O LORD, grant salvation!
O LORD, grant prosperity!

26*† Blessed is he who comes in the name of the LORD;
we bless you from the house of the LORD.
27† The LORD is God, and he has given us light.
Join in procession with leafy boughs up to the horns of the altar.

28 You are my God, and I give thanks to you;
O my God, I extol you.
29 Give thanks to the LORD, for he is good;
for his kindness endures forever.

PSALM 119†

Praise of God's Law

Aleph

1 Happy are they whose way is blameless,
who walk in the law of the LORD.

---

* 118, 6: Heb 13, 6.
8f: Ps 146, 3.
14: Ex 15, 2; Is 12, 2.
22: Mt 21, 42; Lk 20, 17; Acts 4, 11; Rom 9, 33; 1 Pt 2, 7.
26: Mt 21, 9; 23, 39.

† 118, 19-29: In this dramatic dialogue the words of the representative of the people seem to be limited to vv 19.21ff.28f. Probably vv 20.24-27 are spoken by the priests.

118, 22: The stone which the builders rejected: directly, Israel, which the empire-builders thought unworthy of a place in their worldly plans. But Israel is here a type of Christ, in whom this prophecy has been most eminently fulfilled; hence these words are often cited in the New Testament as referring to our Lord's rejection by the Jews.

118, 25: Grant salvation: the Hebrew for this cry, as far as English letters can represent it, is "Hosanna." This word and the words in the next line were used as a welcome to Christ when he entered the temple on Palm Sunday. Cf Mk 11, 10f.

118, 26: The sense is, "May he who now comes into the temple be blessed by having the LORD's name invoked upon him."

118, 27: The horns of the altar: the four corners of the altar of holocausts. Cf Ex 27, 2; 38, 2; Lv 4, 25.30.34.

Ps 119: An alphabetic psalm of didactic nature; in the form of prayer it inculcates the excellence of keeping the divinely revealed law. Some of the strophes show a certain logical development of thought, but on the whole there is merely a constant repetition of the main theme with numerous disconnected variations of it. The external form is based on an elaborately constructed scheme. The psalmist chose eight synonyms—law, statutes, commands, ordinances, decrees, precepts, words and promise—and in his strophes of eight verses apiece planned perhaps to use a different synonym in each verse. In the present form of the text, however, this plan is not perfectly carried out, nor is it certain whether these departures are due to mistakes of later copyists or to the original author himself. This psalm is the longest by far of any in the Psalter. Each of the eight verses of the first strophe begins with the first letter of the Hebrew alphabet, each verse of the second strophe with the second letter, and so on for all the twenty-two letters. Hence, the whole consists of 176 verses.

2 Happy are they who observe his decrees,
who seek him with all their heart,
3 And do no wrong,
but walk in his ways.
4 You have commanded that your precepts be deligently kept.
5 Oh, that I might be firm in the ways of keeping your statutes!
6 Then should I not be put to shame when I beheld all your commands.
7 I will give you thanks with an upright heart,
when I have learned your just ordinances.
8 I will keep your statutes;
do not utterly forsake me.

Beth

9 How shall a young man be faultless in his way?
By keeping to your words.
10 With all my heart I seek you;
let me not stray from your commands.
11 Within my heart I treasure your promise,
that I may not sin against you.
12 Blessed are you, O LORD;
teach me your statutes.
13 With my lips I declare
all the ordinances of your mouth.
14 In the way of your decrees I rejoice,
as much as in all riches.
15 I will meditate on your precepts
and consider your ways.
16 In your statutes I will delight;
I will not forget your words.

Gimel

17 Be good to your servant, that I may live and keep your words.
18 Open my eyes, that I may consider the wonders of your law.
19† I am a wayfarer of earth;
hide not your commands from me.
20 My soul is consumed with longing for your ordinances at all times.
21 You rebuke the accursed proud,
who turn away from your commands.
22 Take away from me reproach and contempt,
for I observe your decrees.
23 Though princes meet and talk against me,
your servant meditates on your statutes.
24 Yes, your decrees are my delight;
they are my counselors.

Daleth

25 I lie prostrate in the dust;
give me life according to your word.
26 I declared my ways, and you answered me;
teach me your statutes.
27 Make me understand the way of your precepts,
and I will meditate on your wondrous deeds.
28 My soul weeps for sorrow;
strengthen me according to your words.
29 Remove from me the way of falsehood,
and favor me with your law.
30 The way of truth I have chosen;
I have set your ordinances before me.
31 I cling to your decrees;
O LORD, let me not be put to shame.
32 I will run the way of your commands
when you give me a docile heart.

He

33 Instruct me, O LORD, in the way of your statutes, that I may exactly observe them.
34 Give me discernment, that I may observe your law
and keep it with all my heart.
35 Lead me in the path of your commands,
for in it I delight.
36 Incline my heart to your decrees
and not to gain.
37 Turn away my eyes from seeing what is vain;
by your way give me life.
38 Fulfill for your servant
your promise to those who fear you.
39 Turn away from me the reproach which I dread,
for your ordinances are good.
40 Behold, I long for your precepts;
in your justice give me life.

Waw

41 Let your kindness come to me, O LORD,
your salvation according to your promise.
42 So shall I have an answer for those who reproach me,
for I trust in your words.
43 Take not the word of truth from my mouth,
for in your ordinances is my hope;
44 And I will keep your law continually,
forever and ever.
45 And I will walk at liberty,
because I seek your precepts.

119, 19: A wayfarer of earth: the psalmist realizes that he has but a short life here below. Cf Ps 39, 13. Some render, "I am a stranger in the land"; the desire of the psalmist would then be that he might learn all the laws and customs of the land that God has chosen for his people.

46 I will speak of your decrees before kings
without being ashamed.
47 And I will delight in your commands,
which I love.
48† And I will lift up my hands to your commands and meditate on your statutes.

Zayin

49 Remember your word to your servant
since you have given me hope.
50 My comfort in my affliction is that your promise gives me life.
51 Though the proud scoff bitterly at me,
I turn not away from your law.
52 I remember your ordinances of old, O LORD,
and I am comforted.
53 Indignation seizes me because of the wicked
who forsake your law.
54 Your statutes are the theme of my song
in the place of my exile.
55 By night I remember your name, O LORD,
and I will keep your law.
56 This I have had,
that I have observed your precepts.

Heth

57 I have said, O LORD, that my part is to keep your words.
58 I entreat you with all my heart,
have pity on me according to your promise.
59 I considered my ways
and turned my feet to your decrees.
60 I was prompt and did not hesitate
in keeping your commands.
61 Though the snares of the wicked are twined about me your law I have not forgotten.
62 At midnight I rise to give you thanks
because of your just ordinances.
63 I am the companion of all who fear you and keep your precepts.
64 Of your kindness, O LORD, the earth is full;
teach me your statutes.

Teth

65 You have done good to your servant,
O LORD, according to your word.
66 Teach me wisdom and knowledge,
for in your commands I trust.
67 Before I was afflicted I went astray,
but now I hold to your promise.
68 You are good and bountiful;
teach me your statutes.
69 Though the proud forge lies against me,
with all my heart I will observe your precepts.
70† Their heart has become gross and fat;
as for me, your law is my delight.
71 It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I may learn your statutes.
72 The law of your mouth is to me more precious than thousands of gold and silver pieces.

Yodh

73* Your hands have made me and fashioned me;
give me discernment that I may learn your commands.
74 Those who fear you shall see me and be glad,
because I hope in your word.
75 I know, O LORD, that your ordinances are just,
and in your faithfulness you have afflicted me.
76 Let your kindness comfort me
according to your promise to your servants.
77 Let your compassion come to me that I may live,
for your law is my delight.
78 Let the proud be put to shame for oppressing me unjustly;
I will meditate on your precepts.
79 Let those turn to me who fear you and acknowledge your decrees.
80 Let my heart be perfect in your statutes,
that I be not put to shame.

Kaph

81 My soul pines for your salvation;
I hope in your word.
82 My eyes strain after your promise;
when will you comfort me?
83† Though I am shriveled like a leathern flask in the smoke,
I have not forgotten your statutes.
84 How many are the days of your servant?
When will you do judgment on my persecutors?

* 119, 73: Jb 10, 8.

† 119, 48: I will lift up my hands: an ancient and natural gesture of supplication. Some render, "I will put my hand to (the task of keeping) your commands."

119, 70: Their heart has become gross and fat: a Hebrew idiom for, "Their mind has become dull and insensitive." But it may also be understood to signify a "cruel heart." Cf Ps 17, 10.

119, 83: A leathern flask: tanned hides were used for holding water or wine; such containers, if kept in the dry heat near the fireplace, gradually became brittle and useless.

85† The proud have dug pits for me;
this is against your law.
86 All your commands are steadfast;
they persecute me wrongfully;
help me!
87 They have all but put an end to me
on the earth,
but I have not forsaken your precepts.
88 In your kindness give me life,
that I may keep the decrees of your mouth.

Lamedh

89 Your word, O LORD, endures forever;
it is firm as the heavens.
90 Through all generations your truth
endures;
you have established the earth,
and it stands firm.
91 According to your ordinances they still stand firm:
all things serve you.
92 Had not your law been my delight,
I should have perished in my affliction.
93 Never will I forget your precepts,
for through them you give me life.
94 I am yours; save me,
for I have sought your precepts.
95 Sinners wait to destroy me,
but I pay heed to your decrees.
96 I see that all fulfillment has its limits;
broad indeed is your command.

Mem

97 How I love your law, O LORD!
It is my meditation all the day.
98 Your command has made me wiser than my enemies,
for it is ever with me.
99 I have more understanding than all my teachers
when your decrees are my meditation.
100 I have more discernment than the elders,
because I observe your precepts.
101 From every evil way I withhold my
feet,
that I may keep your words.
102 From your ordinances I turn not
away,
for you have instructed me.
103 How sweet to my palate are your promises,
sweeter than honey to my mouth!
104 Through your precepts I gain discernment;
therefore I hate every false way.

Nun

105 A lamp to my feet is your word,
a light to my path.
106 I resolve and swear
to keep your just ordinances.
107 I am very much afflicted;
O LORD, give me life according to your word.
108 Accept, O LORD, the free homage of my mouth,
and teach me your decrees.
109† Though constantly I take my life in my hands,
yet I forget not your law.
110 The wicked have laid a snare for me,
but from your precepts I have not strayed.
111 Your decrees are my inheritance
forever;
the joy of my heart they are.
112 I intend in my heart to fulfill your statutes
always, to the letter.

Samekh

113† I hate men of divided heart,
but I love your law.
114 You are my refuge and my shield;
in your word I hope.
115 Depart from me, you wrongdoers, and I will observe the commands
of my God.
116 Sustain me as you have promised,
that I may live;
disappoint me not in my hope.
117 Help me, that I may be safe and ever delight in your statutes.
118 You despise all who stray from your
statutes,
for their deceitfulness is in vain.
119 You account all the wicked of the earth as dross;
therefore I love your decrees.
120 My flesh shudders with dread of you,
and I fear your ordinances.

Ayin

121 I have fulfilled just ordinances;
leave me not to my oppressors.
122 Be surety for the welfare of your servant;
let not the proud oppress me.
123 My eyes strain after your salvation
and your just promise.
124 Deal with your servant according to your kindness,
and teach me your statutes.
125 I am your servant; give me discernment that I may know your decrees.
126 It is time for the LORD to act:
they have broken your law.
127 For I love your command
more than gold, however fine.
128 For in all your precepts I go forward;
every false way I hate.

119, 85: This is against your law: or perhaps the sense may be, "that is, to make me act against your law."
119, 109f: The psalmist's life is always threatened by the wicked who persecute him for keeping God's law.
119, 113: Men of divided heart: those who hesitate between fidelity and infidelity to God. Cf 1 Kgs 18, 21.

Peh

129 Wonderful are your decrees;
therefore I observe them.
130 The revelation of your words sheds light,
giving understanding to the simple.
131 I gasp with open mouth
in my yearning for your commands.
132 Turn to me in pity
as you turn to those who love your name.
133 Steady my footsteps according to your promise,
and let no iniquity rule over me.
134 Redeem me from the oppression of men,
that I may keep your precepts.
135† Let your countenance shine upon your servant,
and teach me your statutes.
136 My eyes shed streams of tears
because your law has not been kept.

Sadhe

137 You are just, O LORD,
and your ordinance is right.
138 You have pronounced your decrees in justice and in perfect faithfulness.
139 My zeal consumes me,
because my foes forget your words.
140† Your promise is very sure,
and your servant loves it.
141 I am mean and contemptible,
but your precepts I have not forgotten.
142 Your justice is everlasting justice,
and your law is permanent.
143 Though distress and anguish have come upon me,
your commands are my delight.
144 Your decrees are forever just;
give me discernment that I may live.

Qoph

145 I call out with all my heart; answer me, O LORD;
I will observe your statutes.
146 I call upon you; save me,
and I will keep your decrees.
147 Before dawn I come and cry out;
I hope in your words.
148† My eyes greet the night watches in meditation on your promise.
149 Hear my voice according to your kindness, O LORD;
according to your ordinance give me life.
150 I am attacked by malicious persecutors who are far from your law.
151 You, O LORD, are near,
and all your commands are permanent.
152 Of old I know from your decrees,
that you have established them forever.

Resh

153 Behold my affliction, and rescue me,
for I have not forgotten your law.
154 Plead my cause, and redeem me;
for the sake of your promise give me life.
155 Far from sinners is salvation,
because they seek not your statutes.
156 Your compassion is great, O LORD;
according to your ordinances give me life.
157 Though my persecutors and my foes are many,
I turn not away from your decrees.
158 I beheld the apostates with loathing,
because they kept not to your promise.
159 See how I love your precepts, O LORD;
in your kindness give me life.
160 Permanence is your word's chief trait;
each of your just ordinances is everlasting.

Shin

161 Princes persecute me without cause
but my heart stands in awe of your word.
162 I rejoice at your promise,
as one who has found rich spoil.
163 Falsehood I hate and abhor;
your law I love.
164† Seven times a day I praise you for your just ordinances.
165 Those who love your law have great peace,
and for them there is no stumbling block.
166 I wait for your salvation, O LORD,
and your commands I fulfill.
167 I keep your decrees
and love them deeply.
168 I keep your precepts and your decrees,
for all my ways are before you.

Taw

169 Let my cry come before you, O LORD;
in keeping with your word, give me discernment.

119, 135: Let your countenance shine: the psalmist asks God to smile on him with favor. Cf Nm 6, 25; Pss 67, 2; 80, 4.

119, 140: Very sure: literally, "fire-tried," said of purified metals that are genuine and reliable. Cf Ps 12, 7.

119, 148: The night watches: even at the time when people are usually asleep, the psalmist meditates on God's word. Cf v 62 and Ps 77, 3.5.

119, 164: Seven times: a Hebrew idiom for "many times." Cf Gn 4, 24; Ps 12, 7; Prv 24, 16; Mt 18, 21f; Lk 17, 4.

170 Let my supplication reach you;
rescue me according to your promise.
171 My lips pour forth your praise,
because you teach me your statutes.
172 May my tongue sing of your promise,
for all your commands are just.
173 Let your hand be ready to help me,
for I have chosen your precepts.
174 I long for your salvation, O LORD,
and your law is my delight.
175 Let my soul live to praise you,
and may your ordinances help me.
176 I have gone astray [like a lost sheep]; seek your servant,
because your commands I do not forget.

PSALM 120†

A Complaint against Treacherous Tongues

1† A song of ascents.

I

In my distress I called to the LORD,
and he answered me.
2 O LORD, deliver me from lying lip,
from treacherous tongue.

II

3† What will he inflict on you, with more besides,
O treacherous tongue?
4† Sharp arrows of a warrior with fiery coals of brushwood.

III

5† Woe is me that I sojourn in Meshech, that I dwell amid the tents of Kedar!
6 All too long have I dwelt with those who hate peace.
7 When I speak of peace,
they are ready for war.

PSALM 121†

The Lord Our Guardian

1† A song of ascents.

I

I lift up my eyes toward the mountains;
whence shall help come to me?
2 My help is from the LORD,
who made heaven and earth.

II

3 May he not suffer your foot to slip;
may he slumber not who guards you:
4 Indeed he neither slumbers nor sleeps,
the guardian of Israel.

III

5 The LORD is your guardian; the LORD is your shade;
he is beside you at your right hand.
6† The sun shall not harm you by day,
nor the moon by night.

IV

7 The LORD will guard you from all evil;
he will guard your life.
8*† The LORD will guard your coming and your going,
both now and forever.

PSALM 122†

The Pilgrim's Greetings to Jerusalem

1 A song of ascents. Of David.

I

I rejoiced because they said to me,
"We will go up to the house of the LORD."

121, 8: Dt 28, 6.

Ps 120: The psalmist implores God's help against his deceitful foe (1f); he asks the Lord to punish this enemy (3f) as he bewails his long exile among hostile strangers (5-7).

120, 1: A song of ascents: this title also occurs in each of the next fourteen psalms. The most probable explanation is that these fifteen psalms from a little collection of "Pilgrim Psalms," that is, songs which were sung by the pilgrims when they "went up" to Jerusalem for the great annual feasts. Cf Ex 23, 17; Dt 16, 16; 1 Kgs 12, 28; Mt 20, 17; Lk 2, 41f. Less probable explanations are that these psalms were sung by the returning exiles when they "went up" to Jerusalem from Babylon (Ezr 7, 9), or that they were sung by the Levites on the fifteen steps by which they ascended from the Court of the Women to the Court of the Israelites in the temple. Hence, these psalms are also known as the "Gradual Psalms," or "Psalms of the Steps."

120, 3: With more besides: the common formula of a curse in Hebrew was, "May the LORD do such and such evils to you (the evils being specified), and add still more to them." Cf 1 Sm 3, 17; 14, 44; 25, 22. Here the psalmist is at a loss for a suitable malediction.

120, 4: The punishment which the psalmist finally decides to wish on his enemy is that the latter may be shot in battle or overwhelmed with glowing charcoal. Brushwood: more exactly, the broom plant; charcoal made of this wood burns with an intense heat.

120, 5: Meshech: an ancient people dwelling in northeastern Asia Minor. Cf Gn 10, 2. Kedar: a tribe of the north Arabian desert. Cf Gn 25, 13. Probably these names are used here merely in a metaphorical sense for barbarians in general.

Ps 121: Since he himself is full of confidence in the Lord's help (1f), the psalmist also reassures his companion of God's protection (3-8).

121, 1: The mountains: the ridge on which Mount Zion with its temple was situated. Cf Pss 87, 1; 125, 2.

121, 6: The harm caused by sunstroke was known to the ancients. Cf 2 Kgs 4, 18ff. The Orientals even today think that the moon also may have harmful effects. Some amend the Hebrew text to read, "Nor the cold by night." Cf Gn 31, 40.

121, 8: Your coming and your going: by a common idiom, the Hebrew uses the expression "To come in and to go out" to signify all ordinary human activity. Cf Dt 28, 6; 31, 2; Jos 14, 11; 2 Sm 3, 25.

Ps 122: A song of Zion. Full of joy at his arrival in the Holy City (1-3), the psalmist lauds Jerusalem as the goal of pilgrims and the seat of government (4f); he asks God's blessings upon it (6-9).

2 And now we have set foot within your gates, O Jerusalem—3 Jerusalem, built as a city with compact unity.

//

4 To it the tribes go up,
the tribes of the LORD,
According to the decree for Israel,
to give thanks to the name of the
LORD.
5 In it are set up judgment seats,
seats for the house of David.

6† Pray for the peace of Jerusalem!
May those who love you prosper!
7 May peace be within your walls, prosperity in your buildings.
8 Because of my relatives and friends
I will say, "Peace be within you!"
9 Because of the house of the LORD,
our God,
I will pray for your good.

PSALM 123†

Israel's Prayer in Persecution

1 A song of ascents.

/

To you I lift up my eyes
who are enthroned in heaven.
2 Behold, as the eyes of servants are on the hands of their masters,
As the eyes of a maid
are on the hands of her mistress,
So are our eyes on the LORD, our
God,
till he have pity on us.

//

3 Have pity on us, O LORD, have pity
on us,
for we are more than sated with contempt;
4 Our souls are more than sated
with the mockery of the arrogant,
with the contempt of the proud.

PSALM 124†

The Lord the Rescuer of His People

1† A song of ascents. Of David.

/

Had not the LORD been with us,
let Israel say,
2 had not the LORD been with us—
When men rose up against us,
3 then would they have swallowed us alive.
When their fury was inflamed
against us,
4† then would the waters have overwhelmed us;
The torrent would have swept over
us;
5 over us then would have swept the raging waters.

//

6 Blessed be the LORD, who did not leave us
a prey to their teeth.
7 We were rescued like a bird
from the fowlers' snare;
Broken was the snare,
and we were freed.
8 Our help is in the name of the LORD,
who made heaven and earth.

PSALM 125†

The Lord the Protector of Israel

1† A song of ascents.

/

They who trust in the LORD are like Mount Zion,
which is immovable; which forever stands.
2 Mountains are round about Jerusalem;
so the LORD is round about his
people,
both now and forever.

//

3 For the scepter of the wicked shall not remain
upon the territory of the just,
Lest the just put forth
to wickedness their hands.

///

4 Do good, O LORD, to the good
and to the upright of heart.
5 But such as turn aside to crooked
ways
may the LORD lead away with the evildoers!
Peace be upon Israel!

122, 6ff: Peace: shalom, the regular greeting in Hebrew. it is wider in meaning than the English word peace, and in cludes the idea of happiness, prosperity.

Ps 123: A supplication of the people. Protesting their loyal obedience to the Lord (1f), they beg him to have mercy on them in their humiliation (3f).

Ps 124: A hymn of thanksgiving in which the people acknowledge that without the Lord's help they would have been utterly destroyed (1-5); they praise him, therefore, for having rescued them from their enemies (6-8).

124, 1: Of David: missing in some ancient sources.

124, 4f: The waters: a figure of affliction. Cf Pss 18, 5.17; 69, 2f.

Ps 125: A supplication is which the people, affirming their confidence in the Lord's protection (1f), pray that the reign of wickedness may end (3) and that the good may enjoy God's blessings (4f).

125, 1ff: Although Jerusalem itself is situated on a high hill, a rampart of still higher mountains surrounds it.

PSALM 126†

The People's Prayer for Full Restoration

1† A song of ascents.

I

When the LORD brought back the captives of Zion,
we were like men dreaming.
2 Then our mouth was filled with laughter,
and our tongue with rejoicing.
Then they said among the nations,
"The LORD has done great things for them."
3 The LORD has done great things for us;
we are glad indeed.

II

4† Restore our fortunes, O LORD,
like the torrents in the southern desert.
5 Those that sow in tears
shall reap rejoicing.
6 Although they go forth weeping,
carrying the seed to be sown,
They shall come back rejoicing,
carrying their sheaves.

PSALM 127†

The Need of God's Blessing: His Gift of Sons

1 A song of ascents. Of Solomon.

I

Unless the LORD build the house,
they labor in vain who build it.
Unless the LORD guard the city,
in vain does the guard keep vigil.
2† It is vain for you to rise early,
or put off your rest,
You that eat hard-earned bread,
for he gives to his beloved in sleep.

II

3† Behold, sons are a gift from the LORD;
the fruit of the womb is a reward.
4 Like arrows in the hand of a warrior
are the sons of one's youth.
5† Happy the man whose quiver is filled with them;
they shall not be put to shame
when they contend
with enemies at the gate.

PSALM 128†

The Happy Home of the Just Man

1 A song of ascents.

I

Happy are you who fear the LORD,
who walk in his ways!
2 For you shall eat the fruit of your handiwork;
happy shall you be, and favored.
3† Your wife shall be like a fruitful vine
in the recesses of your home;
Your children like olive plants
around your table.
4 Behold, thus is the man blessed who fears the LORD.

II

5 The LORD bless you from Zion:
may you see the prosperity of Jerusalem
all the days of your life;
6 May you see your children's children.
Peace be upon Israel!

PSALM 129†

Prayer for the Overthrow of Israel's Foes

1 A song of ascents.

I

Much have they oppressed me from my youth,
let Israel say,
2 Much have they oppressed me from my youth;
yet they have not prevailed against me.
3† Upon my back the plowers plowed;
long did they make their furrows.

Ps 126: Grateful for their happy return from exile (1-3), the people beseech the Lord that he will prosper their present struggle to rebuild their homeland (4-6). Cf Ps 85.

126, 1: Like men dreaming: the change from exile to their own country was almost too good to be believed. One can also understand, "like men restored to health."

126, 4: As the infrequent rains cause the sudden rush of waters through the dry and empty channels, so may the Lord quickly restore the fortunes of the exiles.

Ps 127: Two short songs; the first (1f) stresses the truth that without God's blessing all human endeavor is futile, the second (3-5) congratulates the man whom God has blessed with many children.

127, 2: Our Lord taught the same truth, that God's blessings come to those who do not worry but trust in his loving providence. Cf Mt 6, 25-34; Mk 4, 26-29; Lk 12, 22-31.

127, 3: Sons: the word might also be rendered, "children"; but boys were more welcome than girls in an Israelite family.

127, 5: Enemies at the gate: the sense is not "foes besieging the walls of the city," but "adversaries in the forum, in the court of justice." Local government functioned in the large open space inside the city's gate. The larger a man's family, the greater his influence there. Cf Prv 31, 23.

Ps 128: Like Ps 127, 3ff, this is a song celebrating the blessings of family life. The psalmist congratulates the man to whom the Lord has given a fruitful wife and sturdy children (1-4), and wishes him prosperity and long life (5f).

128, 3: Vine . . . olive plants: merely for the purpose of comparison; not to be understood as if these plants grew inside a house. Cf Pss 52, 10; 92, 13ff.

Ps 129: Bewailing the affliction that has so often been Israel's lot (1-4), the people pray that their foes may be brought to nought (5-8).

129, 3: Upon my back the plowers plowed: Israel's towns were changed into plowland. Some understand the words to mean that Israel was scourged like a slave.

4 But the just LORD has severed
the cords of the wicked.

II

5 May all be put to shame and fall back
that hate Zion.
6† May they be like grass on the house-
tops,
which withers before it is plucked;
7 With which the reaper fills not his
hand,
nor the gatherer of sheaves his arms;
8† And those that pass by say not,
"The blessing of the LORD be upon
you!
We bless you in the name of the LORD!"

PSALM 130†

Prayer for Pardon and Mercy

1† A song of ascents.

I

Out of the depths I cry to you, O
LORD;
Lord, hear my voice!
2 Let your ears be attentive
to my voice in supplication:

II

3 If you, O LORD, mark iniquities,
LORD, who can stand?
4† But with you is forgiveness,
that you may be revered.

III

5 I trust in the LORD;
my soul trusts in his word.
6 My soul waits for the LORD
more than sentinels wait for the dawn.

IV

More than sentinels wait for the
dawn,
7† let Israel wait for the LORD,
For with the LORD is kindness and with him is plenteous redemption;
8 And he will redeem Israel
from all their iniquities.

PSALM 131†

Humble Trust in God

1 A song of ascents. Of David.

O LORD, my heart is not proud,
nor are my eyes haughty;
I busy not myself with great things,
nor with things too sublime for
me.
2 Nay rather, I have stilled and quieted
my soul like a weaned child.
Like a weaned child on its mother's lap,
[so is my soul within me.]
3 O Israel, hope in the LORD,
both now and forever.

PSALM 132†

The Pact between David and the Lord

1† A song of ascents.

A

I

Remember, O LORD, for David all
his anxious care:
2† How he swore to the LORD,
vowed to the Mighty One of Jacob:
3 "I will not enter the house I live in,
nor lie on the couch where I sleep;
4 I will give my eyes no sleep
my eyelids no rest,
5 Till I find a place for the LORD,
a dwelling for the Mighty One of Jacob."

II

6† Behold, we heard of it in Ephrathah;
we found it in the fields of Jaar.
7† Let us enter into his dwelling,
let us worship at his footstool.

†

129, 6f: The flat roofs of the houses in Palestine were coated with a protective covering of clay; the grass that sprouted in this clay after a heavy rain was short-lived and worthless.

129, 8: Harvesters greeted one another with such blessings. Cf Ru 2, 4.

Ps 130: The sixth of the Penitential Psalms, the De Profundis, used in the liturgy of the Church as a prayer for the faithful departed. In deep sorrow the psalmist cries to the Lord (1f), begging pardon for his sins (3f); as he himself trusts in God's mercy (5-6b), so also should Israel wait in hope for the Lord's redemption (6c-8).

130, 1: The depths: of spiritual, not physical misery.

130, 4: That you may be revered: the thought of God's merciful forgiveness should lead one to seek his pardon and to fear offending him in the future. Cf Rom 2, 4.

130, 7f: The redemption of Israel from all their iniquities was achieved by Christ, the divine Redeemer. Cf Lk 2, 38.

Ps 131: A protestation of humility. The psalmist asserts that he is free from all worldly ambition (1) and as simple as a child (2); he hopes that Israel will likewise have childlike confidence in the Lord (3).

Ps 132: A song reminding the people of the Lord's great promise to David that his descendants would always rule in Zion. It is similar to Ps 89 but differs from it in its lack of lamentation over present miseries. The psalmist first recalls how David vowed to build a new dwelling place for the Lord (1-5); he then recounts how the ark was brought to Zion (6-10). There follows the Lord's promise to David to bless his dynasty (11-13) and Zion, his capital (14-18).

132, 1: All his anxious care: to build the temple. Cf 2 Sm 7, 1ff; 1 Kgs 8, 17.

132, 2.5: The Mighty One of Jacob: one of the titles of the Lord. Cf Gn 49, 24; 49, 26; 60, 16.

132, 6: Ephrathah: Bethlehem, David's birthplace. Cf Ru 4, 11. The fields of Jaar: "Forestfield," the same as Kiryathjearim, "Foresttown," where the ark remained for several generations. Cf 1 Sm 7, 1f; 2 Sm 6, 2; 1 Chr 13, 5f.

132, 7: His footstool: the ark. Cf Ps 99, 5.

8* Advance, O LORD, to your resting
place,
you and the ark of your majesty.
9 May your priests be clothed with
justice;
let your faithful ones shout merrily for joy.
10† For the sake of David your servant, reject not the plea of your
anointed.

B

I

11* The LORD swore to David a firm promise from which he will not withdraw:
"Your own offspring
I will set upon your throne;
12 If your sons keep my covenant and the decrees which I shall teach them,
Their sons, too, forever
shall sit upon your throne."
13 For the LORD has chosen Zion;
he prefers her for his dwelling.

II

14 "Zion is my resting place forever;
in her will I dwell, for I prefer her.
15 I will bless her with abundant provision,
her poor I will fill with bread.
16 Her priests I will clothe with salvation,
and her faithful ones shall shout
merrily for joy.
17† In her will I make a horn to sprout
forth for David;
I will place a lamp for my
anointed.
18 His enemies I will clothe with shame, but upon him my crown shall shine."

PSALM 133†
The Benefits of Brotherly Concord

1 A song of ascents. Of David.

Behold, how good it is, and how pleasant,
where brethren dwell at one!
2 It is as when the precious ointment
upon the head runs down over the beard, the beard of Aaron,
till it runs down upon the collar
of his robe.
3 It is a dew like that of Hermon, which comes down upon the mountains of Zion;
For there the LORD has pronounced
his blessing,
life forever.

PSALM 134†
Exhortation to the Night Watch to Bless the Lord

1† A song of ascents.

Come, bless the LORD,
all you servants of the LORD
Who stand in the house of the LORD
during the hours of night.
2 Lift up your hands toward the sanctuary,
and bless the LORD.

3 May the LORD bless you from Zion,
the maker of heaven and earth.

PSALM 135†
Praise of God, the Lord and Benefactor of Israel

1† Alleluia.

A

Praise the name of the LORD;
Praise, you servants of the Lord

* 132, 8ff: 2 Chr 6, 41f. 11f: 2 Sm 7, 12ff.

† 132, 10: Your anointed: the royal descendants of David, contemporaneous with the psalmist. According to some, this proves that the psalm is preexilic; according to others, the "anointed" of the Lord is Zerubbabel, the postexilic descendant of David. Cf Ezr 3, 2; Hg 1, 1-2.23; Zec 4.

132, 17: A horn to sprout forth for David: a strong offspring of David. This refers pre-eminently to Christ, who is called a "sprout" of David by the prophets. Cf Jer 23, 5; 33, 15; Zec 3, 8; 6, 12. I will place a lamp: the ever-burning lamp in a house was a symbol of perpetual offspring; when a man died without descendants, his lamp was said to be put out. Cf 1 Kgs 11, 36; 15, 4; 2 Kgs 8, 19.

Ps 133: The psalmist rejoices in the compact settlement of the Israelite families as an evidence of God's blessing (1), just as the same divine blessing would be signified by the fragrant oil of anointing (2) used at the consecration of the high priest (Ex 30, 22-33), or by the rich dew (Gn 27, 27ff; Hos 14, 6; Jl 4, 17f) covering the mountain slopes round about Jerusalem (3). Hermon is the majestic snow-capped mountain at the north of the Holy Land. Its copious waters are the type of the divine blessing that fructifies the soil. Similarly, Aaron is the type for any high priest consecrated with the same precious oil. The life forever was understood in the first place of the preservation of earthly life; it is capable of a fuller application in the light of the Gospel. The similes used seem to suppose that the psalmist saw the returned exiles living in and about the Holy City, crowning its mountain-top and spreading down over its slopes like a precious oil or a heaven-sent dew.

Ps 134: This short song seems to have been sung in the temple as an encouragement for the priests and Levites who were on duty there during the night (1f); they respond by blessing the people (3).

134, 1: Servants of the Lord: the priests and Levites. Cf Dt 10, 8; Pss 113, 1; 135, 1; Dn 3, 84f.

Ps 135: This hymn begins (1-4) and ends (19-21) with an exhortation to glorify God, who is the almighty Lord of creation (5-7) and the defender of his chosen people (8-14), whereas the pagan gods are lifeless idols (15-18). Many of the verses were borrowed from other psalms.

135, 1f: Very similar to Ps 134, 1.

2 Who stand in the house of the LORD,
in the courts of the house of our God.
3 Praise the LORD, for the LORD is good;
sing praise to his name, which we love;
4† For the LORD has chosen Jacob for himself,
Israel for his own possession.

B

I

5 For I know that the LORD is great;
our LORD is greater than all gods.
6* All that the LORD wills he does
in heaven and on earth,
in the seas and in all the deeps.
7* He raises storm clouds from the end of the earth;
with the lightning he makes the rain;
he brings forth the winds from his storehouse.

II

8* He smote the first-born in Egypt,
both of man and of beast.
9 He sent signs and wonders
into your midst, O Egypt, against Pharaoh and against all his servants.
10* He smote many nations
and slew mighty kings: 11 Sihon, king of the Amorities,
and Og, king of Bashan,
and all the kings of Canaan;
12 And he made their land a heritage,
the heritage of Israel his people.
13* Your name, O LORD, endures forever;
LORD is your title through all generations,
14* For the LORD defends his people,
and is merciful to his servants.

III

15† The idols of the nations are silver and gold,
the handiwork of men.
16 They have mouths but speak not;
they have eyes but see not;
17 They have ears but hear not,
nor is there breath in their mouths.
18 Their makers shall be like them,
everyone that trusts in them.

C

19† House of Israel, bless the LORD,
house of Aaron, bless the LORD, 20 House of Levi, bless the LORD;
you who fear the LORD, bless the LORD.
21 Blessed from Zion be the LORD,
who dwells in Jerusalem.

PSALM 136†
Hymn of Thanksgiving for the Everlasting Kindness of the Lord

1 Alleluia.

Give thanks to the LORD, for he is good,
for his mercy endures forever;
2† Give thanks to the God of gods,
for his mercy endures forever;
3 Give thanks to the Lord of lords,
for his mercy endures forever;

I

4 Who alone does great wonders,
for his mercy endures forever;
5* Who made the heavens in wisdom,
for his mercy endures forever;
6 Who spread out the earth upon the waters,
for his mercy endures forever;
7 Who made the great lights,
for his mercy endures forever;
8 The sun to rule over the day,
for his mercy endures forever;
9 The moon and the stars to rule over the night,
for his mercy endures forever;

II

10* Who smote the Egyptians in their first-born,
for his mercy endures forever;
11 And brought out Israel from their midst,
for his mercy endures forever;
12 With a mighty hand and an outstretched arm,
for his mercy endures forever;
13 Who split the Red Sea in twain,
for his mercy endures forever;
14 And led Israel through its midst,
for his mercy endures forever;

135, 6: Ps 115, 3.
7: Jer 10, 13.
8f: Pss 105, 27.36; 136, 10.
10ff: Nm 21, 21-35; Dt 3, 8-11; Ps 136, 17-22.
13: Ps 102, 13.
14: Dt 32, 36.
136, 5-9: Gn 1, 8-18.
10-16: Ex 12, 29.51; 14, 22.28; 15, 22; Ps 78, 51ff.

135, 4: All nations belong to the Lord, but he has chosen Israel as his own in a special sense. Cf Ex 19, 5; Dt 7, 6; 14, 2; 26, 18; 32, 9.
135, 15-18: Almost identical with Ps 115, 4ff, 8.
135, 19ff: Similar to Ps 118, 1-4.
Ps 136: This hymn has the form of a "litany," that is, each half-verse is followed by a refrain, the former probably sung by a soloist and the latter by the people. It seems fairly certain that at least the main section, vv 4-25, did not originally have this invariable refrain, which now interrupts the grammatical structure of the sentences. Besides the introductory and concluding invitations to give grateful praise (1-3.26), this hymn extols the Lord's greatness in creating the universe (4-9), as well as his goodness in bringing Israel to the Promised Land (10-22) and in having pity on the misery of the people (23-25).
136, 2: The God of gods: the supreme and only God.

15 But swept Pharaoh and his army into the Red Sea,
for his mercy endures forever;
16 Who led his people through the wilderness,
for his mercy endures forever;
17† Who smote great kings,
for his mercy endures forever;
18 And slew powerful kings,
for his mercy endures forever;
19 Sihon, king of the Amorities,
for his mercy endures forever;
20 And Og, king of Bashan,
for his mercy endures forever;
21 And made their land a heritage,
for his mercy endures forever;
22 The heritage of Israel his servant,
for his mercy endures forever;

///

23† Who remembered us in our abjection,
for his mercy endures forever;
24 And freed us from our foes,
for his mercy endures forever;
25 Who gives food to all flesh,
for his mercy endures forever.
26 Give thanks to the God of heaven,
for his mercy endures forever.

PSALM 137†

The Exile's Remembrance of Zion

1† By the streams of Babylon
we sat and wept
when we remembered Zion.
2† On the aspens of that land
we hung up our harps,
3 Though there our captors asked of us
the lyrics of our songs,
And our despoilers urged us to be joyous:
"Sing for us the songs of Zion!"

//

4 How could we sing a song of the LORD
in a foreign land?
5 If I forget you, Jerusalem,
may my right hand be forgotten!
6 May my tongue cleave to my palate
if I remember you not,
If I place not Jerusalem ahead of my joy.

///

7† Remember, O LORD, against the children of Edom,
the day of Jerusalem,
When they said, "Raze it, raze it down to its foundations!"
8† O daughter of Babylon, you destroyer, happy the man who shall repay you
the evil you have done us!
9† Happy the man who shall seize and smash
your little ones against the rock!

PSALM 138†

Hymn of a Grateful Heart

1† Of David.

/

I will give thanks to you, O LORD,
with all my heart,
[for you have heard the words of my mouth;]
in the presence of the angels I will sing your praise;
2 I will worship at your holy temple
and give thanks to your name,
Because of your kindness and your truth;
for you have made great above all things
your name and your promise.
3 When I called, you answered me;
you built up strength within me.

//

4 All the kings of the earth shall give thanks to you, O LORD,

†

136, 17-22: These verses occur in similar form but without the refrain in Ps 135, 10ff.

136, 23f: The reference seems to be to the Babylonian exile.

Ps 137: The psalmist, now apparently returned from exile, recalls how the Jews refused to sing for their captors (1-3) because they thought joyful songs out of harmony with their mournful remembrance of Zion (4-6); condign punishment is wished upon cruel Edom and Babylon (7-9).

137, 1: The streams of Babylon: the Euphrates and Tigris, with the numerous irrigation-canals which branched off from them.

137, 2: The aspens: not, "the willows," as the older versions generally rendered it; the Hebrew word most probably signifies the populus euphraticus, the Mesopotamian aspen.

137, 7: The day of Jerusalem: the time when the Holy City was captured and destroyed by the Babylonians. In league with the latter were the Edomites, the southern neighbors and rivals of Judah. The prophets often threaten dire punishment to Edom for its hatred of Israel. Cf Is 34, 5-15; Jer 49, 7-22; Lam 4, 21f; Ez 25, 12ff; Am 1, 11f; Ob 1, 1-18.

137, 8: Daughter of Babylon: a Hebrew idiom for "city of Babylon."

137, 9: According to the ruthless custom of ancient warfare, children were indeed thus cruelly killed. Cf 2 Kgs 8, 12; Hos 9, 16. But it seems more probable that here the psalmist is personifying "the daughter of Babylon" as a mother whose little ones are the adult citizens, not the infants, of the city. Cf Lk 19, 44.

Ps 138: Thanking God for having heard his prayer (1-3), the psalmist wishes that all the great ones of the earth might join him in his hymn of gratitude (4-6), for he is confident of the Lord's continual help (7f).

138, 1: The words in brackets are in the Greek version but not in the current Hebrew text. They are probably a variant of v 4b accidentally inserted here. The angels: in Hebrew, elohim, which is the word for "God," "gods," and sometimes "godlike beings," such as the angels. Cf Pss 8, 6; 97, 7. Some render, "In the face of the gods," that is, despite the false gods of the pagans.

when they hear the words of your mouth;
5 And they shall sing of the ways of the LORD:
"Great is the glory of the LORD."
6 The LORD is exalted, yet the lowly he sees,
and the proud he knows from afar.

III

7 Though I walk amid distress, you preserve me;
against the anger of my enemies you raise your hand;
your right hand saves me.
8 The LORD will complete what he has done for me;
your kindness, O LORD, endures forever;
forsake not the work of your hands.

PSALM 139†
The All-knowing and Ever-present God

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

O LORD, you have probed me and you know me;
2† you know when I sit and when I stand;
you understand my thoughts from afar.
3 My journeys and my rest you scrutinize,
with all my ways you are familiar.
4 Even before a word is on my tongue,
behold, O LORD, you know the whole of it.
5 Behind me and before, you hem me in and rest your hand upon me.
6 Such knowledge is too wonderful for me;
too lofty for me to attain.

II

7 Where can I go from your spirit?
from your presence where can I flee?
8* If I go up to the heavens, you are there;
if I sink to the nether world, you are present there.
9† If I take the wings of the dawn,
if I settle at the farthest limits of the sea,
10 Even there your hand shall guide me,
and your right hand hold me fast.
11 If I say, "Surely the darkness shall hide me,
and night shall be my light"— 12† For you darkness itself is not dark,
and night shines as the day.
[Darkness and light are the same.]

III

13 Truly you have formed my inmost being;
you knit me in my mother's womb.
14 I give you thanks that I am fearfully, wonderfully made;
wonderful are your works.
My soul also you knew full well;
15† nor was my frame unknown to you
When I was made in secret,
when I was fashioned in the depths of the earth.
16† Your eyes have seen my actions;
in your book they are all written;
my days were limited before one of them existed.
17 How weighty are your designs, O God;
how vast the sum of them!
18† Were I to recount them, they would outnumber the sands:
did I reach the end of them, I should still be with you.

IV

19 If only you would destroy the wicked, O God,
and the men of blood were to depart from me!
20 Wickedly they invoke your name;
your foes swear faithless oaths.
21 Do I not hate, O LORD, those who hate you?
Those who rise up against you do I not loathe?

* 139, 8ff: Am 9, 2ff.

† Ps 139: A hymn to God's omnipresence and omniscience, in the form of a meditation in which the psalmist ponders the truths that the Lord sees and knows him no matter where he may be (1-6); that there is no escape from the all-seeing eye of God (7-12); and that the divine Creator of man is also the Author of his destiny (13-18). He therefore resolves to abhor the wicked and to live sincerely in God's sight (19-24). The current Hebrew text is rather poorly preserved, and the interpretation of a few passages is somewhat doubtful.

139, 2: When I sit and when I stand: in all human activity.

139, 9: Take the wings of the dawn: go to the most distant extremities of the east. The farthest limits of the sea: the uttermost bounds of the west.

139, 12: Darkness and light are the same: as far as God is concerned; an explanatory gloss on the two preceding lines.

139, 15: The depths of the earth: figurative language for "the womb"; stressing not so much the darkness of the place as the hidden, mysterious nature of the operations which occur there.

139, 16ff: The text of these three verses is obscure in several places.

139, 18: I should still be with you: even though the psalmist might reach the end of his own capacity for understanding the divine attributes, the infinity of God's nature would still stand before him as if he had not even begun to comprehend it.

22 With a deadly hatred I hate them;
they are my enemies.
23 Probe me, O God, and know my heart;
try me, and know my thoughts;
24† See if my way is crooked,
and lead me in the way of old.

PSALM 140†

Prayer for Deliverance from the Snares of the Wicked

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

2 Deliver me, O LORD, from evil men;
preserve me from violent men,
3 From those who devise evil in their hearts,
and stir up wars every day.
4*† They make their tongues sharp as those of serpents;
the venom of asps is under their lips.

II

5 Save me, O LORD, from the hands of the wicked;
preserve me from violent men
Who plan to trip up my feet—
6† the proud who have hidden a trap for me;
They have spread cords for a net;
by the wayside they have laid snares for me.
7 I say to the LORD, you are my God;
hearken, O LORD, to my voice in supplication.
8 O GOD, my Lord, my strength and my salvation;
you are my helmet in the day of battle!

III

9 Grant not, O LORD, the desires of the wicked;
further not their plans.
10 Those who surround me lift up their heads;
may the mischief which they threaten overwhelm them.
11 May he rain burning coals upon them;
may he cast them into the depths, never to rise.

IV

12 A man of wicked tongue shall not abide in the land;
evil shall abruptly entrap the violent man.
13 I know that the LORD renders justice to the afflicted, judgment to the poor.
14 Surely the just shall give thanks to your name:
the upright shall dwell in your presence.

PSALM 141†

Prayer of a Just Man To Be Saved from Wickedness

1 A psalm of David.

I

O LORD, to you I call; hasten to me;
hearken to my voice when I call upon you.
2† Let my prayer come like incense before you;
the lifting up of my hands, like the evening sacrifice.

II

3 O LORD, set a watch before my mouth,
a guard at the door of my lips.
4 Let not my heart incline to the evil of engaging in deeds of wickedness
With men who are evildoers;
and let me not partake of their dainties.
5 Let the just man strike me; that is kindness;
let him reprove me; it is oil for the head,
Which my head shall not refuse,
but I will still pray under these afflictions.
6† Their judges were cast down over the crag,
and they heard how pleasant were my words.
7 As when a plowman breaks furrows in the field,
so their bones are strewn by the edge of the nether world.

---

* 140, 4: Rom 3, 13.

† 139, 24: The way of old: the manner of living of the ancient patriarchs. Cf Jer 6, 16.

Ps 140: The psalmist beseeches God to rescue him from his violent, treacherous foes (2-4); they lay a trap for his life (5f), but he trusts in the Lord's protection (7f). Therefore he prays that their evil plans may recoil upon themselves (9-11), and that God will render due justice to both the wicked and the good (12-14).

140, 4: Similar metaphors for a wicked tongue are used in Pss 52, 4; 55, 22; 58, 5.

140, 6: The same figure, taken from the custom of a hunter laying a trap for his prey, occurs in Pss 9, 16; 31, 5; 35, 7; 57, 7; 64, 6. Cf Mt 22, 15; Lk 11, 54.

Ps 141: After calling for divine aid in general (1f), the psalmist prays that he may not be led astray by the seductions of the wicked, whose end is destruction (3-7), and that their evil may harm only themselves (8-10).

141, 2: Incense: literally, "smoke," that is, the fragrant fumes which rose from the altar at the burning of sacrificial animals or of aromatic spices, including frankincense; also used in Rv 5, 8 as a symbol of prayer. The lifting up of my hands: the gesture of supplication. Cf Pss 28, 2; 63, 5; 77, 3; 88, 10; 119, 48; 134, 2; 143, 6.

141, 6f: The text of these two verses is very obscure, and their interpretation quite uncertain.

III

8 For toward you, O GOD, my Lord,
my eyes are turned;
in you I take refuge; strip me not of life.
9 Keep me from the trap they have set for me,
and from the snares of evildoers.
10 Let all the wicked fall, each into his own net,
while I escape.

PSALM 142†

Prayer of a Prisoner in Dire Straits

1† A maskil of David. A prayer when he was in the cave.

I

2 With a loud voice I cry out to the LORD;
with a loud voice I beseech the LORD.
3 My complaint I pour out before him;
before him I lay bare my distress.
4 When my spirit is faint within me,
you know my path.

II

In the way along which I walk
they have hid a trap for me.
5 I look to the right to see,
but there is no one who pays me heed.
I have lost all means of escape;
there is no one who cares for my life.

III

6 I cry out to you, O LORD;
I say, "You are my refuge,
my portion in the land of the living."
7 Attend to my cry,
for I am brought low indeed.
Rescue me from my persecutors,
for they are too strong for me.
8† Lead me forth from prison,
that I may give thanks to your name.
The just shall gather around me
when you have been good to me.

PSALM 143†

Prayer of a Penitent in Distress

1† A psalm of David.

I

O LORD, hear my prayer;
hearken to my pleading in your faithfulness;
in your justice answer me.
2 And enter not into judgment with your servant,
for before you no living man is just.

II

3 For the enemy pursues me;
he has crushed my life to the ground;
he has left me dwelling in the dark, like those long dead.
4 And my spirit is faint within me,
my heart within me is appalled.
5* I remember the days of old;
I meditate on all your doings,
the works of your hands I ponder.
6 I stretch out my hands to you;
my soul thirsts for you like parched land.

III

7 Hasten to answer me, O LORD,
for my spirit fails me.
Hide not your face from me
lest I become like those who go down into the pit.
8* At dawn let me hear of your kindness,
for in you I trust.
Show me the way in which I should walk,
for to you I lift up my soul.
9 Rescue me from my enemies, O LORD,
for in you I hope.

IV

10† Teach me to do your will,
for you are my God.
May your good spirit guide me on level ground.
11 For your name's sake, O LORD, preserve me;
in your justice free me from distress, 12 And in your kindness destroy my enemies;
bring to nought all my foes,
for I am your servant.

143, 5: Pss 77, 6.12f. 8: Pss 25, 1; 86, 4.

Ps 142: Imploring the Lord to behold his sad plight (2-4b), the psalmist tells how his enemies have hemmed him in (4c-5), and beseeches God to rescue him (6-8).

142, 1: In the cave: cf 1 Sm 22, 1; 24, 1f; Ps 57, 1.

142, 8: The just shall gather around me: in the temple, when the psalmist offers up his thanksgiving sacrifice.

Ps 143: The seventh of the Penitential Psalms. Pleading for divine assistance despite his sinfulness (1f), the psalmist describes his external and internal afflictions (3f) as he longs for the help which God has always offered his faithful servants (5f). He begs to be rescued from his enemies (7-9), and prays for God's saving guidance and the destruction of his foes (10-12).

143, 1f: Confident that God, in justice to his own promise, will answer his prayer, the psalmist admits that in strict justice to himself he does not deserve to be heard because of his sins.

143, 10: On level ground: some ancient sources read, "On a level path." Cf Pss 26, 12; 27, 11.

PSALM 144†

Prayer for Victory and Prosperity

1† Of David.

I

Blessed be the LORD, my rock,
who trains my hands for battle,
my fingers for war;
2 My refuge and my fortress,
my stronghold, my deliverer,
My shield, in whom I trust,
who subdues peoples under me.

II

3† LORD, what is man, that you notice him;
the son of man, that you take thought of him?
4† Man is like a breath;
his days, like a passing shadow.
5† Incline your heavens, O LORD, and come down;
touch the mountains, and they shall smoke;
6 Flash forth lightning, and put them to flight,
shoot your arrows, and rout them;
7 Reach out your hand from on high—Deliver me and rescue me
from many waters,
from the hands of aliens,
8 Whose mouths swear false promises
while their right hands are raised in perjury.

III

9† O God, I will sing a new song to you;
with a ten-stringed lyre I will chant your praise, 10 You who give victory to kings,
and deliver David, your servant.
11 From the evil sword deliver me;
and rescue me from the hands of aliens,
Whose mouths swear false promises
while their right hands are raised in perjury.

IV

12† May our sons be like plants
well-nurtured in their youth,
Our daughters like wrought columns
such as stand at the corners of the temple.
13 May our garners be full,
affording every kind of store;
May our sheep be in the thousands,
and increase to myriads in our meadows;
14 may our oxen be well laden.
May there be no breach in the walls,
no exile,
no outcry in our streets.
15 Happy the people for whom things are thus;
happy the people whose God is the LORD.

PSALM 145†

The Greatness and Goodness of God

1 Praise. Of David.

I will extol you, O my God and King,
and I will bless your name forever and ever.
2 Every day will I bless you,
and I will praise your name forever and ever.
3* Great is the LORD and highly to be praised;
his greatness is unsearchable.
4 Generation after generation praises your works and proclaims your might.

5 They speak of the splendor of your glorious majesty and tell of your wondrous works.
6* They discourse of the power of your terrible deeds and declare your greatness.
7 They publish the fame of your abundant goodness and joyfully sing of your justice.
8* The LORD is gracious and merciful, slow to anger and of great kindness.
9 The LORD is good to all and compassionate toward all his works.

10 Let all your works give you thanks, O LORD,
and let your faithful ones bless you.
11 Let them discourse of the glory of your kingdom and speak of your might,

145, 3: Ps 48, 2. 6: Ps 66, 3. 8f: Ps 86, 5.15.

† Ps 144: Except for its final section, this psalm is made up almost entirely of verses borrowed from various other psalms; hence it is somewhat lacking in logical unity. The first section (1f) is a prayer of thanks for victory in war; the second (3-7a), a humble acknowledgment of man's nothingness and a supplication that God show forth His saving might; the third (9f), a promise of future thanksgiving; the fourth (12-15), a wish for prosperity and peace. A slightly varying refrain, which contains a prayer for deliverance from treacherous foes, occurs after the second and third sections (7b-8, 11).

144, 1f: Composed of phrases from Ps 18, 3.35.47f.
144, 3: Very similar to Ps 8, 5.
144, 4: Composed of phrases from Pss 39, 6; 102, 12.
144, 5ff: Adapted in large part from Pss 18, 10.15.17; 104, 32.
144, 9f: Similar to Pss 18, 51; 33, 2f.
144, 12: Like wrought columns . . . of the temple: well-formed, shapely. But the Hebrew text of these two lines is obscure, and the allusion is uncertain.

Ps 145: An alphabetic psalm of which many of the phrases occur in similar form in other psalms or in other books of the Bible. The main thoughts of this hymn are concerned with God's sovereign majesty and loving providence.

12 Making known to men your might
and the glorious splendor of your kingdom.
13* Your kingdom is a kingdom for all ages,
and your dominion endures through all generations.

The LORD is faithful in all his words
and holy in all his works.
14 The LORD lifts up all who are falling and raises up all who are bowed down.
15 The eyes of all look hopefully to you,
and you give them their food in due season;
16* You open your hand
and satisfy the desire of every living thing.

17 The LORD is just in all his ways
and holy in all his works.
18 The LORD is near to all who call upon him,
to all who call upon him in truth.
19 He fulfills the desire of those who fear him,
he hears their cry and saves them.
20 The LORD keeps all who love him,
but all the wicked he will destroy.

21 May my mouth speak the praise of the LORD, and may all flesh bless his holy name forever and ever.

PSALM 146†

Trust in God Alone

1 Alleluia.

Praise the LORD, O my soul;
2* I will praise the LORD all my life;
I will sing praise to my God while I live.

I

3* Put not your trust in princes,
in man, in whom there is no salvation.
4 When his spirit departs he returns to his earth;
on that day his plans perish.

II

5 Happy he whose help is the God of Jacob, whose hope is in the LORD, his God,
6* Who made heaven and earth,
the sea and all that is in them;
Who keeps faith forever,
7 secures justice for the oppressed,
gives good to the hungry.
The LORD sets captives free;
8 the LORD gives sight to the blind.
The LORD raises up those that were bowed down;
the LORD loves the just.
9 The LORD protects strangers;
the fatherless and the widow he sustains,
but the way of the wicked he thwarts.
10 The LORD shall reign forever;
your God, O Zion, through all generations. Alleluia.

PSALM 147†

Zion's Grateful Praise to Her Bountiful Lord

I

1 Praise the LORD, for he is good;
sing praise to our God, for he is gracious;
it is fitting to praise him.
2* The LORD rebuilds Jerusalem;
the dispersed of Israel he gathers.
3* He heals the brokenhearted
and binds up their wounds.
4* He tells the number of the stars;
he calls each by name.
5 Great is our Lord and mighty in power:
to his wisdom there is no limit.
6 The LORD sustains the lowly;
the wicked he casts to the ground.

II

7 Sing to the LORD with thanksgiving;
sing praise with the harp to our God,
8*† Who covers the heavens with clouds,
who provides rain for the earth;
Who makes grass sprout on the mountains
and herbs for the service of men;
9* Who gives food to the cattle,
and to the young ravens when they cry to him.
10† In the strength of the steed he delights not,

13: Dn 4, 31.
16: Ps 104, 27.
146, 2: Ps 104, 33.
3: Ps 118, 8f.
6: Acts 14, 14; Rv 14, 7.
147, 2: Is 11, 12.
3: Is 61, 1.
4: Is 40, 26.
8: Ps 104, 13f.
9: Jb 38, 41.

Ps 146: A hymn in praise of the kindness and generosity of God. After a short introductory strophe (1f), the psalmist exposes the folly of trusting in merely human aid (3f), and then extols the goodness of God toward those who put their trust in him alone (5-10).

Ps 147: The Greek and Latin versions divide this psalm into two parts: Ps 146 (vv 1-11), Ps 147 (vv 12-20). The psalm sings the praises of God as the restorer of exiled Israel (1-6) who sustains the needy (7-11), and as the benefactor of Zion (12-20).

147, 8f: Just as the heavenly Father clothes the mountains with vegetation for the nourishment of man and beast, so does his loving providence feed the birds, especially the ravens, whose loud cawing is poetically taken as a cry to God for food. Cf Mt 6, 26-30.

147, 10f: Trust in his own natural strength makes a man proud and displeasing to God, who delights only in a humble confidence toward himself. Cf Pss 20, 8; 33, 16ff.

nor is he pleased with the fleetness of men.
11 The LORD is pleased with those who fear him,
with those who hope for his kindness.

12 Glorify the LORD, O Jerusalem;
praise your God, O Zion.
13 For he has strengthened the bars of your gates;
he has blessed your children within you.
14* He has granted peace in your borders;
with the best of wheat he fills you.
15 He sends forth his command to the earth;
swiftly runs his word!
16 He spreads snow like wool;
frost he strews like ashes.
17* He scatters his hail like crumbs;
before his cold the waters freeze.
18 He sends his word and melts them;
he lets his breeze blow and the waters run.
19* He has proclaimed his word to Jacob,
his statutes and his ordinances to Israel.
20 He has not done thus for any other nation;
his ordinances he has not made known to them. Alleluia.

PSALM 148†

Hymn of All Creation to the Almighty Creator

1 Alleluia.

/
Praise the LORD from the heavens,
praise him in the heights;
2* Praise him, all you his angels,
praise him, all you his hosts.
3 Praise him, sun and moon;
praise him, all you shining stars.
4† Praise him, you highest heavens,
and you waters above the heavens.
5 Let them praise the name of the LORD,
for he commanded and they were created;
6 He established them forever and ever;
he gave them a duty which shall not pass away.

7 Praise the LORD from the earth,
you sea monsters and all depths;
8 Fire and hail, snow and mist,
storm winds that fulfill his word;
9 You mountains and all you hills,
you fruit trees and all you cedars;
10 You wild beasts and all tame animals,
you creeping things and you winged fowl.

11 Let the kings of the earth and all peoples,
the princes and all the judges of the earth, 12 Young men too, and maidens,
old men and boys,
13 Praise the name of the LORD,
for his name alone is exalted;
His majesty is above earth and heaven,
14† and he has lifted up the horn of his people.
Be this his praise from all his faithful ones,
from the children of Israel, the people close to him. Alleluia.

PSALM 149†

Invitation To Glorify the Lord with Song and Sword

1 Alleluia.

/
Sing to the LORD a new song
of praise in the assembly of the faithful.
2 Let Israel be glad in their maker,
let the children of Zion rejoice in their king.
3*† Let them praise his name in the festive dance,
let them sing praise to him with timbrel and harp.
4 For the LORD loves his people,
and he adorns the lowly with victory.
5 Let the faithful exult in glory;
let them sing for joy upon their couches;
6 let the high praises of God be in their throats.

Ps 148: All creatures in the heavens (1-6) and on earth (7-10) are called upon to join in the hymn of praise that universal mankind, and especially Israel, should sing to the Lord of all (11-14).

148, 4: Highest heavens: literally, "the heavens of the heavens," that is, the space above the firmament, where the "upper waters" are stored. Cf Gn 1, 6ff; Dt 10, 14; 1 Kgs 8, 27; Ps 104, 3.13.

148, 14: Lifted up the horn of his people: restored their power. Cf note on Ps 18, 3.

Ps 149: While the people are invited to praise the Lord with sacred music in the temple (1-6a), they stand with sword in hand for the defense of Zion (6b-9). Cf Neh 4, 16-23 (10-17); 1 Mc 4, 37f.54; 2 Mc 15, 26f.

149, 3: The festive dance: Cf Ex 15, 20; 2 Sm 6, 5.14.16.

And let two-edged swords be in their hands:
7 to execute vengeance on the nations,
punishments on the peoples;
8 To bind their kings with chains,
their nobles with fetters of iron;
9 To execute on them the written sentence.
This is the glory of all his faithful.
Alleluia.

PSALM 150†

Final Doxology with Full Orchestra

1† Alleluia.

Praise the LORD in his sanctuary,
praise him in the firmament of his strength.
2 Praise him for his mighty deeds,
praise him for his sovereign majesty.
3 Praise him with the blast of the trumpet,
praise him with lyre and harp,
4 Praise him with timbrel and dance,
praise him with strings and pipe.
5 Praise him with sounding cymbals,
praise him with clanging cymbals.
6 Let everything that has breath praise the LORD! Alleluia.

Ps 150: As a grand finale, the psalmist calls upon all the musical instruments of the temple service to join in the praise of the Lord; thus, the psalm serves as the closing doxology, not only to the Fifth Book of the Psalms, but to the whole Psalter.

150, 1: Praise the LORD: in Hebrew, hallelu-yah, which through the Greek and Latin versions has become our "Alleluia."

The Book of

PROVERBS

The first word of this book, MISHLE, has provided the title by which it is generally designated in Jewish and Christian circles. The name "Proverbs," while not an exact equivalent of MISHLE, describes the main contents satisfactorily, even though it is hardly an adequate designation for such parts as 1, 1—9, 18 or 31, 10-31. Among some early Christian writers the book was also known by the name of "Wisdom," and in the Roman Missal it was referred to as a "Book of Wisdom."

The Book of Proverbs is an anthology of didactic poetry forming part of the sapiential literature of the Old Testament. Its primary purpose, indicated in the first sentence (1, 2f), is to teach wisdom. It is thus directed particularly to the young and inexperienced (1, 4); but also to those who desire advanced training in wisdom (1, 5f). The wisdom which the book teaches, covers a wide field of human and divine activity, ranging from matters purely secular to most lofty moral and religious truths, such as God's omniscience (5, 21; 15, 3-11), power (19, 21; 21, 30), providence (20, 1-24), goodness (15, 29), and the joy and strength resulting from abandonment to him (3, 5; 16, 20; 18, 10). The teaching of the entire book is placed on a firm religious foundation by the principle that "the fear of the LORD is the beginning of knowledge" (1, 7; cf 9, 10).

To Solomon are explicitly ascribed parts II and V of the book; he is the patron of Hebrew wisdom. Of Agur (part VI) and Lemuel (part VIII), nothing further is known. Parts III and IV are attributed to "the wise." The remaining parts are anonymous.

The manner of compilation is conjectural. Parts II and V may have circulated first as independent collections, compiled before the fall of Jerusalem, as the references to Solomon (10, 1) and Hezekiah (25, 1) suggest. Parts III, IV and VII would seem to belong together as a third collection of a similar kind. The author of the first nine chapters, a religious sage familiar with the earlier sacred books, was the editor of the whole as we have it, probably in the early part of the fifth century B.C.

Christ and the Apostles often expressly quoted the Proverbs (Jn 7, 38; Rom 12, 20; Jas 4, 6) or repeated their teaching; compare Lk 10, 14, and Prv 25, 7; 1 Pt 4, 8; Jas 5, 20 and Prv 10, 12. The book has an important place in the Latin and Greek liturgies.

On the basis of titles, subject matter, and poetic structure the Book of Proverbs may be divided as follows:

I: Introduction: The Value of Wisdom (1, 1—9, 18)
II: First Collection of the Proverbs of Solomon (10, 1—22, 16)

I: INTRODUCTION: THE VALUE OF WISDOM

CHAPTER 1

Purpose of the Proverbs of Solomon†

1* The Proverbs of Solomon, the son of David,
king of Israel:

2† That men may appreciate wisdom and discipline,

* 1, 1: 10, 1; 25, 1; 1 Kgs 4, 32.

† 1, 1-6: This prologue explains the purpose of the book: to educate the inexperienced in knowledge and right conduct, and to increase the learning of the wise man by proverbs, parables and riddles.

1, 2: Discipline: education or formation which dispels ignorance and corrects vice.

may understand words of intelligence;
3 May receive training in wise conduct,
in what is right, just and honest;
4† That resourcefulness may be imparted to the simple,
to the young man knowledge and discretion.
5 A wise man by hearing them will advance in learning,
an intelligent man will gain sound guidance,
6 That he may comprehend proverb and parable,
the words of the wise and their riddles.

7*† The fear of the LORD is the beginning of knowledge;
wisdom and instruction fools despise.

The Path of the Wicked: Greed and Violence†

8 Hear, my son, your father's instruction,
and reject not your mother's teaching;
9 A graceful diadem will they be for your head;
a torque for your neck.
10 My son, should sinners entice you,
11 and say,
"Come along with us!
Let us lie in wait for the honest man,
let us, unprovoked, set a trap for the innocent;
12 Let us swallow them up, as the nether world does, alive,
in the prime of life, like those who go down to the pit!
13 All kinds of precious wealth shall we gain,
we shall fill our houses with booty;
14 Cast in your lot with us,
we shall all have one purse!"—

15 My son, walk not in the way with them, hold back your foot from their path!
16* [For their feet run to evil,
they hasten to shed blood.]
17† It is in vain that a net is spread before the eyes of any bird—18 These men lie in wait for their own blood,
they set a trap for their own lives.
19 This is the fate of everyone greedy of loot:
unlawful gain takes away the life of him who acquires it.

Wisdom in Person Gives Warning†

20* Wisdom cries aloud in the street,
in the open squares she raises her voice;
21 Down the crowded ways she calls out,
at the city gates she utters her words:
22 "How long, you simple ones, will you love inanity,
23 how long will you turn away at my reproof?
Lo! I will pour out to you my spirit,
I will acquaint you with my words.

24* "Because I called and you refused,
I extended my hand and no one took notice;
25 Because you disdained all my counsel,
and my reproof you ignored—
26 I, in my turn, will laugh at your doom;
I will mock when terror overtakes you;
27 When terror comes upon you like a storm,
and your doom approaches like a whirlwind;
when distress and anguish befall you.

28† "Then they call me, but I answer not;
they seek me, but find me not;
29 Because they hated knowledge,
and chose not the fear of the LORD; 30 They ignored my counsel,
they spurned all my reproof;
And in their arrogance they preferred arrogance,
and like fools they hated knowledge: 31† "Now they must eat the fruit of their own way,
and with their own devices be glutted.
32 For the self-will of the simple kills them,

7: 9, 10; Jb 28, 28; Ps 111, 10; Sir 1, 16.
16: Is 59, 7.
20: 8, 1-3; 9, 3.
24: Is 65, 2.12; 66, 4; Jer 7, 13.

1, 4: Simple: immature and inexperienced, hence easily influenced for good or evil.

1, 7: Fear of the Lord: reverential fear and respect for God on account of his sovereignty, goodness and justice toward men. This is the foundation of religion.

1, 8-19: A warning against association with the greedy and the violent who seek to destroy the honest man and to steal his possessions (11-14). The trap which the wicked set for the innocent (11), in the end (19) takes away the life of the wicked themselves.

1, 17: Instructed by the wise man, the youth (of v 4) will recognize the invitation of the wicked (11-14) as a net spread before him, and he will thus, like the bird, be protected against falling into it.

1, 20-33: Wisdom is here personified; with divine authority she sets forth and proclaims the moral order, instructing and threatening (24-33) the multitudes in the streets and places of assembly.

1, 28: Overtaken by doom, the foolish seek wisdom, but in vain because they do so too late. Cf Jn 7, 34; 8, 21.

1, 31: Sinners are punished by the bad fruits which their sins produce. Cf Wis 11, 16.

the smugness of fools destroys them.
33* But he who obeys me dwells in security,
in peace, without fear of harm."

CHAPTER 2†

The Blessings of Wisdom†

1 My son, if you receive my words
and treasure my commands,
2† Turning your ear to wisdom,
inclining your heart to understanding;
3 Yes, if you call to intelligence,
and to understanding raise your voice;
4 If you seek her like silver,
and like hidden treasures search her out:

5 Then will you understand the fear of the LORD;
the knowledge of God you will find;
6* For the LORD gives wisdom,
from his mouth come knowledge and understanding;
7 He has counsel in store for the upright,
he is the shield of those who walk honestly,
8 Guarding the paths of justice,
protecting the way of his pious ones.

9 Then you will understand rectitude and justice,
honesty, every good path;
10 For wisdom will enter your heart,
knowledge will please your soul, 11 Discretion will watch over you,
understanding will guard you;

12 Saving you from the way of evil men,
from men of perverse speech, 13 Who leave the straight paths
to walk in the way of darkness, 14 Who delight in doing evil,
rejoice in perversity;
15 Whose ways are crooked,
and devious their paths;

16* Saving you from the wife of another,
from the adulteress with her smooth words, 17 Who forsakes the companion of her youth and forgets the pact with her God;
18* For her path sinks down to death,
and her footsteps lead to the shades;
19 None who enter thereon come back again,
or gain the paths of life.

20 Thus you may walk in the way of good men,
and keep to the paths of the just.
21* For the upright will dwell in the land,
the honest will remain in it;
22 But the wicked will be cut off from the land,
the faithless will be rooted out of it.

CHAPTER 3

Attitude toward the Lord†

1 My son, forget not my teaching,
keep in mind my commands;
2* For many days, and years of life,
and peace, will they bring you.

3 Let not kindness and fidelity leave you;
bind them around your neck;
4 Then will you win favor and good esteem
before God and man.
5 Trust in the LORD with all your heart,
on your own intelligence rely not;
6 In all your ways be mindful of him,
and he will make straight your paths.

7* Be not wise in your own eyes,
fear the LORD and turn away from evil;
8 This will mean health for your flesh
and vigor for your bones.
9* Honor the LORD with your wealth,
with first fruits of all your produce;

33: 8, 33f.
2, 6: Jb 32, 8; Wis 7, 25; Sir 1, 1; Jas 1, 5.
16: 5, 3.20; 6, 24; 7, 5; 22, 14.
18: 5, 5f; 7, 27.
21f: 10, 7.30; Jb 18, 17; Pss 21, 9-13; 37, 22.28.
3, 2: 4, 10; 9, 11; 10, 27.
7: Rom 11, 25; 12, 16.
9: Ex 34, 26; Lv 27, 30; Dt 26, 2; Sir 7, 31; 35, 7.

2—7: These chapters form an ordered discourse in seven "columns" of twenty-two verses each. Chapter 2 introduces the four topics about which the sage instructs his pupil: the service of God (3, 1-12.25-34), the search for wisdom (3, 13-24.35; 4, 1-9), the avoidance of evil companions among men (4, 10-27; 5, 21-23), and among women (5, 1-20; 6, 20—7, 27). The last topic is treated at a length equal to the first three because the discourse is meant especially for youths (cf 1, 4).

2, 1-22: The search for wisdom (1-4) leads to the protection of God (5-8) and of wisdom herself (9ff; cf 1, 20-33) and to deliverance from evil men (12-15) and evil women (16-19), and so to lasting happiness (20ff).

2, 2f: Wisdom, understanding, intelligence: various names or aspects of the same gift.

3, 1-12: Many are the rewards for fidelity and trust in God, and for diffidence of self (1-8). Cf Dt 30, 20; Is 38, 19. The offering of material things for divine worship is blessed by an increase of such goods (9f). Even correction and chastisement are a mark of God's love and favor (11f).

10 Then will your barns be filled with grain,
with new wine your vats will overflow.
11* The discipline of the LORD, my son, disdain not;
spurn not his reproof;
12* For whom the LORD loves he reproves,
and he chastises the son he favors.

The Value of Wisdom†

13* Happy the man who finds wisdom,
the man who gains understanding!
14 For her profit is better than profit in silver,
and better than gold is her revenue;
15*† She is more precious than corals,
and none of your choice possessions can compare with her.

16 Long life is in her right hand,
in her left are riches and honor;
17 Her ways are pleasant ways,
and all her paths are peace;

18*† She is a tree of life to those who grasp her,
and he is happy who holds her fast.
19 The LORD by wisdom founded the earth,
established the heavens by understanding; 20† By his knowledge the depths break open,
and the clouds drop down dew.
21 My son, let not these slip out of your sight:
keep advice and counsel in view;
22 So will they be life to your soul,
and an adornment for your neck.
23 Then you may securely go your way;
your foot will never stumble;
24 When you lie down, you need not be afraid,
when you rest, your sleep will be sweet.
25 Honor is the possession of wise men,
but fools inherit shame.

Attitude toward Fellow Men†

25† Be not afraid of sudden terror,
of the ruin of the wicked when it comes;
26 For the LORD will be your confidence,
and will keep your foot from the snare.

27 Refuse no one the good on which he has a claim
when it is in your power to do it for him.
28 Say not to your neighbor, "Go, and come again, tomorrow I will give," when you can give at once.

29 Plot no evil against your neighbor,
against him who lives at peace with you.
30 Quarrel not with a man without cause,
with one who has done you no harm.
31* Envy not the lawless man
and choose none of his ways:
32 To the LORD the perverse man is an abomination,
but with the upright is his friendship.

33 The curse of the LORD is on the house of the wicked,
but the dwelling of the just he blesses;
34* When he is dealing with the arrogant, he is stern,
but to the humble he shows kindness.

CHAPTER 4

Wisdom: the Supreme Guide of Men†

1 Hear, O children, a father's instruction,
be attentive, that you may gain understanding!
2 Yes, excellent advice I give you;
my teaching do not forsake.
3 When I was my father's child, frail, yet the darling of my mother,
4* He taught me, and said to me:

11: Heb 12, 5f.
12: Jdt 8, 27; Rv 3, 19.
13: 8, 34f.
15: 8, 11.19; Wis 7, 8-11.
18: 4, 13; 8, 35; 11, 30; Gn 2, 9; 3, 22.
31: 23, 17; 24, 1.19; Ps 37, 1.
34: 1, 26.
4, 4: 1 Kgs 2, 2ff.

† 3, 13-24: Wisdom, or understanding, is more valuable than silver and gold. Its fruit is long life, riches, honor and happiness (13-18). Even the creation of the universe and its adornment (Gn 1) were not done without wisdom (19f). It is the life of the soul and gives security in work and in repose (21-24).

3, 15: Corals: some precious stone may be intended.

3, 18: A tree of life: cf 11, 30; 13, 12; Gn 2, 9.

3, 20: For the Hebrews, the depths enclosed the great subterranean ocean; the rain and dew descended from the celestial ocean above the firmament; cf Gn 1, 6-10; Jb 26, 8.12; Pss 18, 16; 24, 2.

3, 25-34: Serving God with confidence in him (25f) requires serving one's neighbor through kindness (27f), peace with the good (29ff), no envy of the wicked (31), because the Lord's friendship and kindness are with the just; his curse is with the wicked.

3, 25: The ruin of the wicked: i.e., the ruin that comes upon the wicked.

4, 1-9: The sage speaks as a father admonishing his children to secure wisdom at any cost.

"Let your heart hold fast my words:
keep my commands, that you may live!

5 "Get wisdom, get understanding!
Do not forget or turn aside from the words I utter.
6 Forsake her not, and she will preserve you;
love her, and she will safeguard you;
7 The beginning of wisdom is: get wisdom;
at the cost of all you have, get understanding.
8 Extol her, and she will exalt you;
she will bring you honors if you embrace her;
9 She will put on your head a graceful diadem;
a glorious crown will she bestow on you."

The Good and the Evil Way†

10* Hear, my son, and receive my words,
and the years of your life shall be many.
11 On the way of wisdom I direct you,
I lead you on straightforward paths.
12 When you walk, your step will not be impeded,
and should you run, you will not stumble.
13 Hold fast to instruction, never let her go;
keep her, for she is your life.

14 The path of the wicked enter not,
walk not on the way of evil men;
15 Shun it, cross it not,
turn aside from it, and pass on.
16 For they cannot rest unless they have done evil;
to have made no one stumble steals away their sleep.
17 For they eat the bread of wickedness and drink the wine of violence.
18 The way of the wicked is like darkness;
they know not on what they stumble.
18† But the path of the just is like shining light,
that grows in brilliance till perfect day.

20 My son, to my words be attentive,
to my sayings incline your ear;
21 Let them not slip out of your sight,
keep them within your heart;
22* For they are life to those who find them,
to man's whole being they are health.
23 With closest custody, guard your heart,
for in it are the sources of life.
24 Put away from you dishonest talk,
deceitful speech put far from you.
25 Let your eyes look straight ahead
and your glance be directly forward.
26 Survey the path for your feet,
and let all your ways be sure.
27 Turn neither to right nor to left,
keep your foot far from evil.

CHAPTER 5

Warning against Adultery†

1 My son, to my wisdom be attentive,
to my knowledge incline your ear,
2 That discretion may watch over you,
and understanding may guard you.
3* The lips of an adulteress drip with honey,
and her mouth is smoother than oil;
4 But in the end she is as bitter as wormwood,
as sharp as a two-edged sword.
5* Her feet go down to death,
to the nether world her steps attain;
6 Lest you see before you the road to life,
her paths will ramble, you know not where.
7 So now, O children, listen to me,
go not astray from the words of my mouth.
8* Keep your way far from her,
approach not the door of her house,
9*† Lest you give your honor to others,
and your years to a merciless one;
10 Lest strangers have their fill of your wealth,
your hard-won earnings go to an alien's house;

10: 3, 2. 22: 8, 35. 5, 3: 7, 5. 5: 2, 18; 7, 27. 8: 7, 25. 9f: Sir 9, 6.

4, 10-27: The way of wisdom leads directly to life (10-13); it is a light that grows brighter (18). The wise man is bound to shun (14-17) the dark and violent path of the wicked (19). Singleness of purpose and right conduct proceed from the heart of a wise man as from the source of life (23-26); they save him from destruction on evil paths (4, 27; 5, 21ff).

4, 18: Till perfect day: literally, "till the day is established"; this may refer to full daylight or to noonday.

5, 1-20: Understanding and discretion guard a man against the wiles of an adulteress, which lead astray and beget bitterness, bloodshed and death (1-6). They destroy honor, waste the years of life, despoil hard-earned wealth, consume the flesh, and bring remorse in the end (7-14). Conjugal fidelity and love for one wife only bring happiness and security (15-20). Cf 6, 20—7, 27.

5, 9: Honor: the words "life" and "wealth" have also been read in this place. A merciless one: the offended husband; cf 6, 34f.

11 And you groan in the end,
when your flesh and your body are consumed; 12 And you say, "Oh, why did I hate instruction,
and my heart spurn reproof!
13 Why did I not listen to the voice of my teachers,
nor to my instructors incline my ear!
14 I have all but come to utter ruin,
condemned by the public assembly!"

15 Drink water from your own cistern, running water from your own well.
16 How may your water sources be dispersed abroad,
streams of water in the streets?
17 Let your fountain be yours alone,
not one shared with strangers;
18 And have joy of the wife of your youth,
19† your lovely hind, your graceful doe.
Her love will invigorate you always,
through her love you will flourish continually, 6:22 When you lie down she will watch over you,
and when you wake, she will share your concerns;
wherever you turn, she will guide you.
5:20 Why then, my son, should you go astray for another's wife and accept the embraces of an adulteress?
21*†For each man's ways are plain to the LORD's sight;
all their paths he surveys;
22 By his own iniquities the wicked man will be caught, in the meshes of his own sin he will be held fast;
23 He will die from lack of discipline,
through the greatness of his folly he will be lost.

CHAPTER 6

Miscellaneous Proverbs†

1* My son, if you have become surety to your neighbor,
given your hand in pledge to another,
2 You have been snared by the utterance of your lips,
caught by the words of your mouth;
3 So do this, my son, to free yourself,
since you have fallen into your neighbor's power:
Go, hurry, stir up your neighbor!
4 Give no sleep to your eyes,
nor slumber to your eyelids;
5 Free yourself as a gazelle from the snare,
or as a bird from the hand of the fowler.

6* Go to the ant, O sluggard,
study her ways and learn wisdom;
7 For though she has no chief,
no commander or ruler,
8 She procures her food in the summer,
stores up her provisions in the harvest.
9 How long, O sluggard, will you rest?
when will you rise from your sleep?
10† A little sleep, a little slumber,
a little folding of the arms to rest—
11 Then will poverty come upon you like a highway man,
and want like an armed man.

12 A scoundrel, a villain, is he who deals in crooked talk.
13 He winks his eyes,
shuffles his feet,
makes signs with his fingers;
14 He has perversity in his heart,
is always plotting evil,
sows discord.
15 Therefore suddenly ruin comes upon him;
in an instant he is crushed beyond cure.
16† There are six things the LORD hates,
yes, seven are an abomination to him;
17 Haughty eyes, a lying tongue,
and hands that shed innocent blood;
18 A heart that plots wicked schemes,
feet that run swiftly to evil, 19 The false witness who utters lies,
and he who sows discord among brothers.

Warning against Adultery†

20 Observe, my son, your father's bidding,

---

* 21: Jb 14, 16; 31, 4; 34, 21. 6, 1f: 11, 15; 22, 26; Sir 8, 13; 29, 19. 6: 30, 25.

† 5, 19: Lovely hind . . . graceful doe: oriental symbols of feminine beauty and charm; cf Sg 2, 7.9.17.

5, 21-23: These verses are best read after 4, 27.

6, 1-19: These verses interrupt the discourse of chapters 2-7, which should be read apart from them; they contain four shorter proverbs akin to those in chapter 30.

6, 1: Given your hand in pledge: literally, "struck your hands"; this was probably the legal method for closing a contract.

6, 10: This verse may be regarded as the sluggard's reply or as a continuation of the remonstrance.

6, 16-19: The seven vices symbolized for the most part by bodily organs are pride, lying, murder, intrigue, readiness to do evil, false witness, and the stirring up of discord.

6, 20—7, 27: Parental training and the love of wisdom are an invaluable and constant help for the young (6, 20-23; 7, 1-4). They are the best defense against adultery (6, 24; 7, 5.24f), which involves the guilty in many dangers and punishments (6, 26-35; 7, 6-27). Cf 5, 1-20.

and reject not your mother's teaching;
21 Keep them fastened over your heart always,
put them around your neck;
23 For the bidding is a lamp, and the teaching a light,
and a way to life are the reproofs
of discipline;
24* To keep you from your neighbor's
wife,
from the smooth tongue of the adulteress.

25* Lust not in your heart after her
beauty,
let her not captivate you with her glance!
26† For the price of a loose woman
may be scarcely a loaf of bread,
But if she is married,
she is a trap for your precious life.
27 Can a man take fire to his bosom,
and his garments not burned?
28 Or can a man walk on live coals,
and his feet not be scorched?
29* So with him who goes in to his neighbor's wife—
none who touches her shall go unpunished.

30 Men despise not the thief if he steals to satisfy his appetite when he is hungry;
31 Yet if he be caught he must pay back
sevenfold;
all the wealth of his house he may yield up.
32 But he who commits adultery is a fool;
he who would destroy himself
does it.
33 A degrading beating will he get,
and his disgrace will not be wiped
away;
34 For vindictive is the husband's
wrath,
he will have no pity on the day of vengeance;
35 He will not consider any restitution, nor be satisfied with the greatest gifts.

CHAPTER 7

1 My son, keep my words,
and treasure my commands.
2 Keep my commands and live,
my teaching as the apple of your eye;
3* Bind them on your fingers, write them on the tablet of your
heart.
4 Say to Wisdom, "You are my sister!"
call Understanding, "Friend!"
5* That they may keep you from another's wife,
from the adulteress with her smooth words.
6 For at the window of my house,
through my lattice I looked out—

7 And I saw among the simple ones,
I observed among the young men,
a youth with no sense,
8 Going along the street near the corner,
then walking in the direction of her house—
9 In the twilight, at dusk of day,
at the time of the dark of night.
10 And lo! the woman comes to meet
him,
robed like a harlot, with secret designs—
11 She is fickle and unruly,
in her home her feet cannot rest;
12 Now she is in the streets, now in the open squares,
and at every corner she lurks in ambush—
13 When she seizes him, she kisses him,
and with an impudent look says
to him:

14† "I owed peace offerings, and today I have fulfilled my vows;
15 So I came out to meet you,
to look for you, and I have found
you!
16 With coverlets I have spread my couch,
with brocaded cloths of Egyptian
linen;
17 I have sprinkled my bed with myrrh,
with aloes, and with cinnamon.

18 "Come, let us drink our fill of love,
until morning, let us feast on love!
19 For my husband is not at home,
he has gone on a long journey;
20 A bag of money he took with him,
not till the full moon will he return home."

21* She wins him over by her repeated urging,
with her smooth lips she leads him
astray;

24: 2, 16; 7, 5.
25: Ex 20, 17; Dt 5, 21; Sir 9, 8; 25, 20; Mt 5, 28.
29: Sir 9, 9.
7, 3: Dt 6, 8.
5: 2, 16; 6, 24;
21: 5, 3; 6, 24.

6, 26: Some interpret the verse in a progressive sense, i.e., to satisfy the increasing demands of a courtesan a man is reduced to poverty; if the woman is married, even his very life is endangered.

7, 14: "Peace offerings . . . vows": a portion of the sacrifice reverted to the donor and had to be eaten on the same day at a family festival (Lv 7, 11-15). In this figure, the adulteress offers to share with the foolish young man the deadly feast of her sensuality.

22 He follows her stupidly,
like an ox that is led to slaughter;
Like a stag that minces toward the net,
23 till an arrow pierces its liver;
Like a bird that rushes into a snare,
unaware that its life is at stake.

24 So now, O children, listen to me,
be attentive to the words of my mouth!
25 Let not your heart turn to her ways,
go not astray in her paths;
26 For many are those she has struck down dead,
numerous, those she has slain.
27* Her house is made up of ways to the nether world,
leading down into the chambers of death.

CHAPTER 8

The Discourse of Wisdom†

1* Does not Wisdom call,
and Understanding raise her voice?
2 On the top of the heights along the road,
at the crossroads she takes her stand;
3 By the gates at the approaches of the city,
in the entryways she cries aloud:
4 "To you, O men, I call;
my appeal is to the children of men.
5† You simple ones, gain resource,
you fools, gain sense.

6 "Give heed! for noble things I speak;
honesty opens my lips.
7† Yes, the truth my mouth recounts,
but the wickedness my lips abhor.
8 Sincere are all the words of my mouth,
no one of them is wily or crooked;
9 All of them are plain to the man of intelligence,
and right to those who attain knowledge.
10 Receive my instruction in preference to silver,
and knowledge rather than choice gold.
11* [For Wisdom is better than corals,
and no choice possessions can compare with her.]

12 "I, Wisdom, dwell with experience, and judicious knowledge I attain.
13* [The fear of the LORD is to hate evil;]
Pride, arrogance, the evil way,
and the perverse mouth I hate.
14† Mine are counsel and advice;
Mine is strength; I am understanding.
15 By me kings reign,
and lawgivers establish justice;
16 By me princes govern,
and nobles; all the rulers of earth.

17 "Those who love me I also love,
and those who seek me find me.
18* With me are riches and honor,
enduring wealth and prosperity.
19* My fruit is better than gold, yes, than pure gold,
and my revenue than choice silver.
20 On the way of duty I walk, along the paths of justice, 21 Granting wealth to those who love me,
and filling their treasuries.

22* "The LORD begot me, the first-born of his ways,
the forerunner of his prodigies of long ago;
23*† From of old I was poured forth,
at the first, before the earth.
24† When there were no depths I was brought forth,
when there were no fountains or springs of water;
25 Before the mountains were settled into place,
before the hills, I was brought forth;
26 While as yet the earth and the fields were not made,
nor the first clods of the world.

27* "When he established the heavens I was there,

27: 2, 18ff; 5, 5.
8, 1: 1, 20f; 9, 3.
11: 3, 15; Wis 7, 8.
13: 6, 16f; 16, 5.
18: 3, 16.
19: 3, 14.
22: Wis 9, 9; Sir 1, 1; 24, 9.
23: Sir 1, 4.
27: 3, 19; Sir 24, 4f.

8, 1-36: Wisdom is here personified as in 1, 20-33, to confirm the words of the teacher of wisdom. She exalts her grandeur and origin, and invites all (1-11) to be attentive to her salutary influence in human society (12-21), for she was privileged to be present at the creation of the world (22-31). Finally, she promises life and the favor of God to those who find her, death to those who despise her.

8, 5: Simple ones . . . fools: see note on 1, 4.

8, 7f: The truth and sincerity of wisdom are absolute because they are divine. They can neither deceive nor tolerate deception. An intelligent man understands and accepts them.

8, 14: What is here predicated of wisdom is elsewhere attributed to God (Jb 12, 13-16).

8, 22-31: Wisdom is of divine origin. It is here represented as a being which existed before all things (22-26) and concurred with God when he planned and executed the creation of the universe, adorned it with beauty and variety, and established its wonderful order (27-30). Here that plurality of divine Persons is foreshadowed which was afterward to be fully revealed when Wisdom in the Person of Jesus Christ became incarnate.

8, 23: Poured forth: the exact meaning of the Hebrew is uncertain; the expression must imply the equivalent of "born." The Hebrews liken the movement of air and of spirit to that of liquids.

8, 24-26: The formless mass from which God created the heavens and the earth; cf Gn 1, 1f; 2, 4ff.

when he marked out the vault
over the face of the deep;
28 When he made firm the skies above,
when he fixed fast the foundations
of the earth;
29 When he set for the sea its limit,
so that the waters should not transgress his command;
30*† Then was I beside him as his crafts-
man,
and I was his delight day by day,
Playing before him all the while,
31 playing on the surface of his earth;
and I found delight in the sons of
men.

32 "So now, O children, listen to me;
33 instruction and wisdom do not reject!
Happy the man who obeys me,
and happy those who keep my
ways, 34 Happy the man watching daily at my gates,
waiting at my doorposts;
35* For he who finds me finds life,
and wins favor from the LORD; 36 But he who misses me harms himself;
all who hate me love death."

CHAPTER 9

The Two Banquets†

1 Wisdom has built her house,
she has set up her seven columns;
2 She has dressed her meat, mixed
her wine,
yes, she has spread her table.
3*† She has sent out her maidens; she calls
from the heights out over the city:
4 "Let whoever is simple turn in here;
to him who lacks understanding,
I say,
5 Come, eat of my food,
and drink of the wine I have mixed!
6 Forsake foolishness that you may live;
advance in the way of understanding.
11* For by me your days will be multiplied
and the years of your life increased."

7 He who corrects an arrogant man earns insult;
and he who reproves a wicked
man incurs opprobrium.
8* Reprove not an arrogant man, lest
he hate you;
reprove a wise man, and he will love you.
9 Instruct a wise man, and he becomes still wiser;
teach a just man, and he advances
in learning.

10* The beginning of wisdom is the fear
of the LORD,
and knowledge of the Holy One is understanding.
12 If you are wise, it is to your own advantage;
and if you are arrogant, you alone
shall bear it.

13* The woman Folly is fickle,
she is inane, and knows nothing.
14 She sits at the door of her house upon a seat on the city heights, 15 Calling to passers-by
as they go on their straight way:
16 "Let whoever is simple turn in here,
or who lacks understanding; for
to him I say,
17† Stolen water is sweet,
and bread gotten secretly is pleas-
ing!"
18† Little he knows that the shades are there,
that in the depths of the nether
world are her guests!

II: FIRST COLLECTION OF THE PROVERBS OF SOLOMON†

CHAPTER 10

1* The Proverbs of Solomon:

A wise son makes his father glad,
but a foolish son is a grief to his mother.

2* Ill-gotten treasures profit nothing,
but virtue saves from death.

30: Wis 9, 9.
35: 3, 13-18; 4, 22.
9, 3: 8, 1f.
8: Sir 10, 7.
10: 1, 7; Jb 28, 28; Ps 111, 10; Sir 1, 16.
11: 3, 2.16; 4, 10; 10, 27.
13-18: 7, 7-27.
10, 1: 1, 1; 15, 20; 17, 25; 19, 13; 25, 1; 29, 15.
2: 11, 4.6.

8, 30: His craftsman: furnishing God with the plan, as it were, for the creation of all things; cf Jb 38, 1f; Wis 7, 22—8, 1. I was his delight: the ever-present object of God's complacency.

9, 1-6.13-18: Wisdom and folly are represented as matrons, each inviting people to her banquet. Wisdom offers the food and drink of divine doctrine and virtue which give life (1-6). Unstable and senseless folly furnishes the stolen bread and water of deceit and vice which bring death to her guests.

9, 3: She calls: i.e., indirectly, through her maidens; but the text could also mean that wisdom herself publicly proclaims her invitation.

9, 17: The secrecy implies wrongdoing.

9, 18: The banquet chamber of folly is a tomb from which no one who enters it is released.

10, 1—22, 16: The varied contents of this first collection of Solomon's proverbs apply mostly to individual life. Each of its three hundred and seventy-five proverbs is meant to be distinct from the others, developing one idea through contrasting parallelism in chapters 10-15, and a climactic treatment in 16-22.

3 The LORD permits not the just to hunger,
but the craving of the wicked he thwarts.

4* The slack hand impoverishes,
but the hand of the diligent enriches.

5 A son who fills the granaries in summer is a credit;
a son who slumbers during harvest, a disgrace.

6 Blessings are for the head of the just,
but a rod for the back of the fool.

7 The memory of the just will be blessed,
but the name of the wicked will rot.

8 A wise man heeds commands,
but a prating fool will be overthrown.

9 He who walks honestly walks securely,
but he whose ways are crooked will fare badly.

10 He who winks at a fault causes trouble,
but he who frankly reproves promotes peace.

11 A fountain of life is the mouth of the just,
but the mouth of the wicked conceals violence.

12*† Hatred stirs up disputes,
but love covers all offenses.

13 On the lips of the intelligent is found wisdom,
[but the mouth of the wicked conceals violence].

14 Wise men store up knowledge,
but the mouth of a fool is imminent ruin.

15† The rich man's wealth is his strong city;
the ruination of the lowly is their poverty.

16* The just man's recompense leads to life,
the gains of the wicked, to sin.

17* A path to life is his who heeds admonition,
but he who disregards reproof goes astray.

18 It is the lips of the liar that conceal hostility;
but he who spreads accusations is a fool.

19* Where words are many, sin is not wanting;
but he who restrains his lips does well.

20 Like choice silver is the just man's tongue;
the heart of the wicked is of little worth.

21 The just man's lips nourish many,
but fools die for want of sense.

22*† It is the LORD's blessing that brings wealth,
and no effort can substitute for it.

23 Crime is the entertainment of the fool;
so is wisdom for the man of sense.

24 What the wicked man fears will befall him,
but the desire of the just will be granted.

25 When the tempest passes, the wicked man is no more;
but the just man is established forever.

26 As vinegar to the teeth, and smoke to the eyes,
is the sluggard to those who use him as a messenger.

27* The fear of the LORD prolongs life,
but the years of the wicked are brief.

28 The hope of the just brings them joy,
but the expectation of the wicked comes to nought.

29 The LORD is a stronghold to him who walks honestly,
but to evildoers, their downfall.

30 The just man will never be disturbed,

* 4: 6, 11, 12, 24; 13, 4; 20, 13; 28, 19. 12: 1 Cor 13, 4-7; 1 Pt 4, 8. 16: 11, 18f. 17: 15, 10. 19: 17, 27; Sir 20, 17; Jas 1, 19. 22: Sir 11, 22. 27: 3, 2; 4, 10; 9, 11; 14, 27.

† 10, 12: Love covers all offenses: a favorite maxim of the Apostles; cf 1 Cor 13, 7; Jas 5, 20; 1 Pt 4, 8; also Prv 17, 9.

10, 15: The inspired author reflects upon the reality of the power of money and the defeat of poverty, without approving these things.

10, 22: The blessing of God rather than our own industry crowns our efforts with success; cf Ps 127, 1f; Mt 6, 25-34.

but the wicked will not abide in the land.

31 The mouth of the just yields wisdom,
but the perverse tongue will be cut off.

32 The lips of the just know how to please,
but the mouth of the wicked, how to pervert.

CHAPTER 11

1* False scales are an abomination to the LORD,
but a full weight is his delight.

2 When pride comes, disgrace comes;
but with the humble is wisdom.

3 The honesty of the upright guides them;
the faithless are ruined by their duplicity.

4*† Wealth is useless on the day of wrath,
but virtue saves from death.

5* The honest man's virtue makes his way straight,
but by his wickedness the wicked man falls.

6 The virtue of the upright saves them,
but the faithless are caught in their own intrigue.

7* When a wicked man dies his hope perishes,
and what is expected from strength comes to nought.

8 The just man escapes trouble,
and the wicked man falls into it in his stead.

9* With his mouth the impious man would ruin his neighbor,
but through their knowledge the just make their escape.

10* When the just prosper, the city rejoices;
and when the wicked perish, there is jubilation.

11 Through the blessing of the righteous the city is exalted,
but through the mouth of the wicked it is overthrown.

12 He who reviles his neighbor has no sense,
but the intelligent man keeps silent.

13* A newsmonger reveals secrets,
but a trustworthy man keeps a confidence.

14* For lack of guidance a people falls;
security lies in many counselors.

15* He is in a bad way who becomes surety for another,
but he who hates giving pledges is safe.

16 A gracious woman wins esteem,
but she who hates virtue is covered with shame.

[The slothful become impoverished,
but the diligent gain wealth.]

17 A kindly man benefits himself,
but a merciless man harms himself.

18* The wicked man makes empty profits,
but he who sows virture has a sure reward.

19 Virtue directs toward life,
but he who pursues evil does so to his death.

20 The depraved in heart are an abomination to the LORD,
but those who walk blamelessly are his delight.

21 Truly the evil man shall not go unpunished,
but those who are just shall escape.

22 Like a golden ring in a swine's snout is a beautiful woman with a rebellious disposition.

23 The desire of the just ends only in good;
the expectation of the wicked is wrath.

24 One man is lavish yet grows still richer;
another is too sparing, yet is the poorer.

25 He who confers benefits will be amply enriched,

13: 20, 19.
14: 15, 22; 20, 18; 24, 6.
15: 6, 1f.
18: 10,16.

† 11, 4: Wealth . . . death: not what a man is worth but what he is, counts before God.

and he who refreshes others will himself be refreshed.

26 Him who monopolizes grain, the people curse—
but blessings upon the head of him who distributes it!

27 He who seeks the good commands
favor,
but he who pursues evil will have evil befall him.

28* He who trusts in his riches will fall, but like green leaves the just flourish.

29 He who upsets his household has empty air for a heritage;
and the fool will become slave to the wise man.

30 The fruit of virtue is a tree of life,
but violence takes lives away.

31* If the just man is punished on earth,
how much more the wicked and the sinner!

CHAPTER 12

1* He who loves correction loves
knowledge,
but he who hates reproof is stupid.

2 The good man wins favor from the
LORD,
but the schemer is condemned by
him.

3 No man is built up by wickedness, but the root of the just will never be disturbed.

4* A worthy wife is the crown of her husband,
but a disgraceful one is like rot in his bones.

5 The plans of the just are legitimate;
the designs of the wicked are deceitful.

6 The words of the wicked are a deadly ambush,
but the speech of the upright saves
them.

7 The wicked are overthrown and are
no more,
but the house of the just stands
firm.

8 According to his good sense a man
is praised,
but one with a warped mind is despised.

9* Better a lowly man who supports himself
than one of assumed importance
who lacks bread.

10 The just man takes care of his beast, but the heart of the wicked is merciless.

11* He who tills his own land has food
in plenty,
but he who follows idle pursuits is a fool.

12 The stronghold of evil men will be demolished,
but the root of the just is enduring.

13 In the sin of his lips the evil man is ensnared,
but the just comes free of trouble.

14*† From the fruit of his words a man has his fill of good things, and the work of his hands comes back to reward him.

15 The way of the fool seems right in his own eyes,
but he who listens to advice is wise.

16 The fool immediately shows his anger,
but the shrewd man passes over
an insult.

17* He tells the truth who states what he is sure of,
but a lying witness speaks deceit-
fully.

18 The prating of some men is like sword thrusts,
but the tongue of the wise is heal-
ing.

19 Truthful lips endure forever,
the lying tongue, for only a moment.

20 Deceit is in the hands of those who plot evil,
but those who counsel peace have
joy.

21 No harm befalls the just,
but the wicked are overwhelmed with misfortune.

28: Ps 52, 9f.
31: 1 Pt 4, 18.
12, 1: 15, 5.10; 29, 1; Sir 19, 5; 21, 6.
4: Sir 26, 1.16.
9: Sir 10, 26.
11: 28, 19; Sir 20, 27.
14: 13, 2; 18, 20.
17: 14, 5.

† 12, 14: Cf Mt 7, 17; Gal 6, 8.

22* Lying lips are an abomination to the LORD,
but those who are truthful are his delight.

23 A shrewd man conceals his knowledge,
but the hearts of fools gush forth folly.

24* The diligent hand will govern,
but the slothful will be enslaved.

25* Anxiety in a man's heart depresses it,
but a kindly word makes it glad.

26 The just man surpasses his neighbor,
but the way of the wicked leads them astray.

27 The slothful man catches not his prey,
but the wealth of the diligent man is great.

28 In the path of justice there is life,
but the abominable way leads to death.

CHAPTER 13

1 A wise son loves correction,
but the senseless one heeds no rebuke.

2* From the fruit of his words a man eats good things,
but the treacherous one craves violence.

3* He who guards his mouth protects his life;
to open wide one's lips brings downfall.

4 The soul of the sluggard craves in vain,
but the diligent soul is amply satisfied.

5 Anything deceitful the just man hates,
but the wicked brings shame and disgrace.

6* Virtue guards one who walks honestly,
but the downfall of the wicked is sin.

7 One man pretends to be rich, yet has nothing;
another pretends to be poor, yet has great wealth.

8 A man's riches serve as ransom for his life,
but the poor man heeds no rebuke.

9*† The light of the just shines gaily,
but the lamp of the wicked goes out.

10 The stupid man sows discord by his insolence,
but with those who take counsel is wisdom.

11* Wealth quickly gotten dwindles away,
but amassed little by little, it grows.

12 Hope deferred makes the heart sick,
but a wish fulfilled is a tree of life.

13† He who despises the word must pay for it,
but he who reveres the commandment will be rewarded.

14 The teaching of the wise is a fountain of life,
that a man may avoid the snares of death.

15 Good sense brings favor,
but the way of the faithless is their ruin.

16 The shrewd man does everything with prudence,
but the fool peddles folly.

17 A wicked messenger brings on disaster,
but a trustworthy envoy is a healing remedy.

18 Poverty and shame befall the man who disregards correction, but he who heeds reproof is honored.

19 Lust indulged starves the soul,
but fools hate to turn from evil.

20* Walk with wise men and you will become wise,
but the companion of fools will fare badly.

13, 13: Word: advice, or God's law.

21 Misfortune pursues sinners,
but the just shall be recompensed with good.

22 The good man leaves an inheritance to his children's children, but the wealth of the sinner is stored up for the just.

23 A lawsuit devours the tillage of the poor,
but some men perish for lack of a law court.

24* He who spares his rod hates his son,
but he who loves him takes care to chastise him.

25 When the just man eats, his hunger is appeased;
but the belly of the wicked suffers want.

CHAPTER 14

1 Wisdom builds her house,
but Folly tears hers down with her own hands.

2 He who walks uprightly fears the LORD,
but he who is devious in his ways spurns him.

3 In the mouth of the fool is a rod for his back,
but the lips of the wise preserve them.

4 Where there are no oxen, the crib remains empty;
but the large crops come through the strength of the bull.

5* A truthful witness does not lie,
but a false witness utters lies.

6 The senseless man seeks in vain for wisdom,
but knowledge is easy to the man of intelligence.

7 To avoid the foolish man, take steps!
But knowing lips one meets with by surprise.

8 The shrewd man's wisdom gives him knowledge of his way,
but the folly of fools is their deception.

9 Guilt lodges in the tents of the arrogant,
but favor in the house of the just.

10 The heart knows its own bitterness,
and in its joy no one else shares.

11* The house of the wicked will be destroyed,
but the tent of the upright will flourish.

12* Sometimes a way seems right to a man,
but the end of it leads to death!

13 Even in laughter the heart may be sad,
and the end of joy may be sorrow.

14 The scoundrel suffers the consequences of his ways,
and the good man reaps the fruit of his paths.

15 The simpleton believes everything,
but the shrewd man measures his steps.

16 The wise man is cautious and shuns evil;
the fool is reckless and sure of himself.

17 The quick-tempered man makes a fool of himself,
but the prudent man is at peace.

18 The adornment of simpletons is folly,
but shrewd men gain the crown of knowledge.

19 Evil men must bow down before the good,
and the wicked, at the gates of the just.

20* Even by his neighbor the poor man is hated,
but the friends of the rich are many.

21 He sins who despises the hungry;
but happy is he who is kind to the poor!

22 Do not those who plot evil go astray?
But those intent on good gain kindness and constancy.

23 In all labor there is profit,
but mere talk tends only to penury.

24 The crown of the wise is resourcefulness;
the diadem of fools is folly.

24: 19, 18; 22, 15; 23, 13f; 29, 15; Sir 30, 1.8-13.
14, 5: 12, 17.
11: 3,33; 12, 7; 15, 25.
12: 16, 25.
20: 19, 4.7; Sir 6, 8.12.

25 The truthful witness saves lives,
but he who utters lies is a betrayer.

26 In the fear of the LORD is a strong defense;
even for one's children he will be a refuge.

27 The fear of the LORD is a fountain of life,
that a man may avoid the snares of death.

28 In many subjects lies the glory of the king;
but if his people are few, it is the prince's ruin.

29* The patient man shows much good sense,
but the quick-tempered man displays folly at its height.

30 A tranquil mind gives life to the body,
but jealousy rots the bones.

31* He who oppresses the poor blasphemes his Maker,
but he who is kind to the needy glorifies him.

32 The wicked man is overthrown by his wickedness,
but the just man finds a refuge in his honesty.

33 In the heart of the intelligent wisdom abides,
but in the bosom of fools it is unknown.

34 Virtue exalts a nation,
but sin is a people's disgrace.

35 The king favors the intelligent servant,
but the worthless one incurs his wrath.

CHAPTER 15

1* A mild answer calms wrath,
but a harsh word stirs up anger.

2 The tongue of the wise pours out knowledge,
but the mouth of fools spurts forth folly.

3 The eyes of the LORD are in every place,
keeping watch on the evil and the good.

4 A soothing tongue is a tree of life,
but a perverse one crushes the spirit.

5* The fool spurns his father's admonition,
but prudent is he who heeds reproof.

6 In the house of the just there are ample resources,
but the earnings of the wicked are in turmoil.

7 The lips of the wise disseminate knowledge,
but the heart of fools is perverted.

8* The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the LORD,
but the prayer of the upright is his delight.

9* The way of the wicked is an abomination to the LORD,
but he loves the man who pursues virtue.

10 Severe punishment is in store for the man who goes astray;
he who hates reproof will die.

11† The nether world and the abyss lie open before the LORD;
how much more the hearts of men!

12 The senseless man loves not to be reproved;
to wise men he will not go.

13* A glad heart lights up the face,
but by mental anguish the spirit is broken.

14 The mind of the intelligent man seeks knowledge,
but the mouth of fools feeds on folly.

15 Every day is miserable for the depressed,
but a lighthearted man has a continual feast.

16† Better a little with fear of the LORD
than a great fortune with anxiety.

17 Better a dish of herbs where love is than a fatted ox and hatred with it.

† 15, 11: Nether world . . . abyss: the abode of the dead, signifying the profound obscurity which is open nevertheless to the sight and power of God.
15, 16f: Not the amount of temporal goods but the virtue of their possessor makes them a source of happiness.

18* An ill-tempered man stirs up strife,
but a patient man allays discord.

19 The way of the sluggard is hemmed in as with thorns,
but the path of the diligent is a highway.

20* A wise son makes his father glad,
but a fool of a man despises his mother.

21 Folly is joy to the senseless man,
but the man of understanding goes the straight way.

22* Plans fail when there is no counsel,
but they succeed when counselors are many.

23* There is joy for a man in his utterance;
a word in season, how good it is!

24 The path of life leads the prudent man upward,
that he may avoid the nether world below.

25 The LORD overturns the house of the proud,
but he preserves intact the widow's landmark.

26* The wicked man's schemes are an abomination to the LORD,
but the pure speak what is pleasing to him.

27 He who is greedy of gain brings ruin on his own house,
but he who hates bribes will live.

28 The just man weighs well his utterance,
but the mouth of the wicked pours out evil.

29 The LORD is far from the wicked,
but the prayer of the just he hears.

30 A cheerful glance brings joy to the heart;
good news invigorates the bones.

31* He who listens to salutary reproof will abide among the wise.

32 He who rejects admonition despises his own soul,
but he who heeds reproof gains understanding.

33* The fear of the LORD is training for wisdom,
and humility goes before honors.

CHAPTER 16

1† Man may make plans in his heart,
but what the tongue utters is from the LORD.

2* All the ways of a man may be pure in his own eyes,
but it is the LORD who proves the spirit.

3 Entrust your works to the LORD,
and your plans will succeed.

4† The LORD has made everything for his own ends,
even the wicked for the evil day.

5* Every proud man is an abomination to the LORD;
I assure you that he will not go unpunished.

6 By kindness and piety guilt is expiated,
and by the fear of the LORD man avoids evil.

7 When the LORD is pleased with a man's ways,
he makes even his enemies be at peace with him.

8 Better a little with virtue,
than a large income with injustice.

9* In his mind a man plans his course,
but the LORD directs his steps.

10† The king's lips are an oracle;
no judgment he pronounces is false.

11* Balance and scales belong to the LORD;
all the weights used with them are his concern.

12* Kings have a horror of wrongdoing,
for by righteousness the throne endures.

13* The king takes delight in honest lips,
and the man who speaks what is right he loves.

16, 1: Words, like actions, often produce results different from those which were planned.
16, 4: Even the wicked, in their punishment, cannot escape glorifying God's justice.
16, 10: Decisions of supreme judicial authority were presumed disinterested and correct.

14* The king's wrath is like messengers of death,
but a wise man can pacify it.

15 In the light of the king's countenance is life,
and his favor is like a rain cloud in spring.

16* How much better to acquire wisdom than gold!
To acquire understanding is more desirable than silver.

17 The path of the upright avoids misfortune;
he who pays attention to his way safeguards his life.

18* Pride goes before disaster,
and a haughty spirit before a fall.

19 It is better to be humble with the meek than to share plunder with the proud.

20 He who plans a thing will be successful;
happy is he who trusts in the LORD!

21 The wise man is esteemed for his discernment,
yet pleasing speech increases his persuasiveness.

22 Good sense is a fountain of life to its possessor,
but folly brings chastisement on fools.

23 The mind of the wise man makes him eloquent,
and augments the persuasiveness of his lips.

24 Pleasing words are a honeycomb, sweet to the taste and healthful to the body.

25* Sometimes a way seems right to a man,
but the end of it leads to death!

26* The laborer's appetite labors for him,
for his mouth urges him on.

27 A scoundrel is a furnace of evil,
and on his lips there is a scorching fire.

28* An intriguer sows discord,
and a talebearer separates bosom friends.

29 A lawless man allures his neighbor,
and leads him into a way that is not good.

30 He who winks his eye is plotting trickery;
he who compresses his lips has mischief ready.

31* Gray hair is a crown of glory;
it is gained by virtuous living.

32* A patient man is better than a warrior,
and he who rules his temper, than he who takes a city.

33† When the lot is cast into the lap,
its decision depends entirely on the LORD.

CHAPTER 17

1 Better a dry crust with peace
than a house full of feasting with strife.

2† An intelligent servant will rule over a worthless son,
and will share the inheritance with the brothers.

3 The crucible for silver, and the furnace for gold,
but the tester of hearts is the LORD.

4† The evil man gives heed to wicked lips,
and listens to falsehood from a mischievous tongue.

5* He who mocks the poor blasphemes his Maker;
he who is glad at calamity will not go unpunished.

6 Grandchildren are the crown of old men,
and the glory of children is their parentage.

7 Fine words are out of place in a fool;
how much more, lying words in a noble!

17, 5: 14, 31.

16, 33: The favorable or unfavorable result of chance depends on God. Deciding strifes and doubts by lot was practiced by the ancient Hebrews; cf Ex 28, 15-30; Lv 16, 8; Jos 7, 14; 1 Sm 10, 20f.

17, 2: Intelligence and ability are esteemed more highly than nobility of blood.

17, 4: To justify his own evil ways, a wicked man judges evil of others. Cf Mt 7, 1-5.

8 A man who has a bribe to offer rates
it a magic stone;
at every turn it brings him success.

9 He who covers up a misdeed fosters
friendship,
but he who gossips about it separates friends.

10 A single reprimand does more for a man of intelligence
than a hundred lashes for a fool.

11 On rebellion alone is the wicked man
bent,
but a merciless messenger will be sent against him.

12 Face a bear robbed of her cubs,
but never a fool in his folly!

13* If a man returns evil for good,
from his house evil will not depart.

14 The start of strife is like the opening of a dam;
therefore, check a quarrel before
it begins!

15* He who condones the wicked, he who condemns the just,
are both an abomination to the
LORD.

16 Of what use in the fool's hand are the means to buy wisdom, since he has no mind for it?

17* He who is a friend is always a friend,
and a brother is born for the time
of stress.

18* Senseless is the man who gives his hand in pledge,
who becomes surety for his neighbor.

19*†He who loves strife loves guilt;
he who builds his gate high courts
disaster.

20 He who is perverse in heart finds no
good,
and a double-tongued man falls
into trouble.

21 To be a fool's parent is grief for a
man;
the father of a numskull has no
joy.

22* A joyful heart is the health of the body,
but a depressed spirit dries up the bones.

23 The wicked man accepts a concealed bribe to pervert the course of justice.

24* The man of intelligence fixes his gaze on wisdom,
but the eyes of a fool are on the ends of the earth.

25* A foolish son is vexation to his father,
and bitter sorrow to her who bore
him.

26 It is wrong to fine an innocent man,
but beyond reason to scourge
princes.

27* He who spares his words is truly
wise,
and he who is chary of speech is
a man of intelligence.

28 Even a fool, if he keeps silent, is considered wise;
if he closes his lips, intelligent.

CHAPTER 18

1 In estrangement one seeks pretexts:
with all persistence he picks a quarrel.

2 The fool takes no delight in understanding, but rather in displaying what he thinks.

3 With wickedness comes contempt,
and with disgrace comes scorn.

4* The words from a man's mouth are deep waters,
but the source of wisdom is a flowing brook.

5* It is not good to be partial to the guilty,
and so to reject a rightful claim.

6 The fool's lips lead him into strife,
and his mouth provokes a beating.

7* The fool's mouth is his ruin;
his lips are a snare to his life.

7: 10, 14; 12, 13; 13, 3; Ecc 10, 12.

† 17, 19: Builds . . . high: a symbol of arrogance.

8* The words of a talebearer are like dainty morsels
that sink into one's inmost being.

9 The man who is slack in his work is own brother to the man who is destructive.

10† The name of the LORD is a strong tower;
the just man runs to it and is safe.

11* The rich man's wealth is his strong
city;
he fancies it a high wall.

12*† Before his downfall a man's heart
is haughty,
but humility goes before honors.

13*† He who answers before he hears—his is the folly and the shame.

14 A man's spirit sustains him in infirmity—
but a broken spirit who can bear?

15 The mind of the intelligent gains
knowledge,
and the ear of the wise seeks
knowledge.

16* A man's gift clears the way for him,
and gains him access to great
men.

17 The man who pleads his case first seems to be in the right;
then his opponent comes and puts him to the test.

18† The lot puts an end to disputes, and is decisive in a controversy
between the mighty.

19 A brother is a better defense than
a strong city,
and a friend is like the bars of a castle.

20*† From the fruit of his mouth a man has his fill;
with the yield of his lips he sates
himself.

21* Death and life are in the power of the tongue;
those who make it a friend shall eat its fruit.

22* He who finds a wife finds happiness;
it is a favor he receives from the
LORD.

23 The poor man implores,
but the rich man answers harshly.

24* Some friends bring ruin on us, but a true friend is more loyal than a brother.

CHAPTER 19

1* Better a poor man who walks in his integrity
than he who is crooked in his ways
and rich.

2 Without knowledge even zeal is not
good;
and he who acts hastily, blunders.

3 A man's own folly upsets his way, but his heart is resentful against
the LORD.

4* Wealth adds many friends, but the friend of the poor man deserts him.

5* The false witness will not go unpun-
ished,
and he who utters lies will not escape.

6 Many curry favor with a noble;
all are friends of the man who has something to give.

7 All the poor man's brothers hate
him;
how much more do his friends
shun him!

8 He who gains intelligence is his own best friend;
he who keeps understanding will be successful.

9 The false witness will not go unpun-
ished,
and he who utters lies will perish.

10 Luxury is not befitting a fool;
much less should a slave rule over
princes.

11 It is good sense in a man to be slow
to anger,
and it is his glory to overlook an offense.

18, 10f: Religion is a strong support and sure refuge in the struggle of life. The rich foolishly rely on their wealth for such support.

18, 12: Compare the Savior's words: "Whoever exalts himself will be humbled; but whoever humbles himself will be exalted" (Mt 23, 12).

18, 13: To speak without first listening is characteristic of a fool; cf 10, 14; Sir 11, 8.

18, 16: See note on 16, 33.

18, 20f: Everyone must accept the consequences, of benefit or harm to himself, which his words produce.

12* The king's wrath is like the roaring of a lion,
but his favor, like dew on the grass.

13* The foolish son is ruin to his father,
and the nagging of a wife is a persistent leak.

14* Home and possessions are an inheritance from parents,
but a prudent wife is from the LORD.

15* Laziness plunges a man into deep sleep,
and the sluggard must go hungry.

16* He who keeps the precept keeps his life,
but the despiser of the word will die.

17*† He who has compassion on the poor lends to the LORD,
and he will repay him for his good deed.

18* Chastise your son, for in this there is hope;
but do not desire his death.

19 The man of violent temper pays the penalty;
even if you rescue him, you will have it to do again.

20 Listen to counsel and receive instruction,
that you may eventually become wise.

21* Many are the plans in a man's heart,
but it is the decision of the LORD that endures.

22 From a man's greed comes his shame;
rather be a poor man than a liar.

23 The fear of the LORD is an aid to life;
one eats and sleeps without being visited by misfortune.

24* The sluggard loses his hand in the dish;
he will not even lift it to his mouth.

25* If you beat an arrogant man, the simple learn a lesson;
if you rebuke an intelligent man, he gains knowledge.

26* He who mistreats his father, or drives away his mother,
is a worthless and disgraceful son.

27 If a son ceases to hear instruction,
he wanders from words of knowledge.

28 An unprincipled witness perverts justice,
and the mouth of the wicked pours out iniquity.

29* Rods are prepared for the arrogant,
and blows for the backs of fools.

CHAPTER 20

1* Wine is arrogant, strong drink is riotous;
none who goes astray for it is wise.

2* The dread of the king is as when a lion roars;
he who incurs his anger forfeits his life.

3 It is honorable for a man to shun strife,
while every fool starts a quarrel.

4 In seedtime the sluggard plows not;
when he looks for the harvest, it is not there.

5* The intention in the human heart is like water far below the surface, but the man of intelligence draws it forth.

6 Many are declared to be men of virtue:
but who can find one worthy of trust?

7 When a man walks in integrity and justice,
happy are his children after him!

8 A king seated on the throne of judgment
dispels all evil with his glance.

9*† Who can say, "I have made my heart clean,
I am cleansed of my sin"?

10* Varying weights, varying measures,
are both an abomination to the LORD.

11 Even by his manners the child betrays whether his conduct is innocent and right.

12 The ear that hears, and the eye that sees—
the LORD has made them both.

13 Love not sleep, lest you be reduced to poverty;
eyes wide open mean abundant food.

14† "Bad, bad!" says the buyer;
but once he has gone his way, he boasts.

15 Like gold or a wealth of corals,
wise lips are a precious ornament.

16*† Take his garment who becomes surety for another,
and for strangers yield it up!

17 The bread of deceit is sweet to a man,
but afterward his mouth will be filled with gravel.

18 Plans made after advice succeed;
so with wise guidance wage your war.

19 A newsmonger reveals secrets;
so have nothing to do with a babbler!

20*† If one curses his father or mother,
his lamp will go out at the coming of darkness.

21 Possessions gained hastily at the outset
will in the end not be blessed.

22* Say not, "I will repay evil!"
Trust in the LORD and he will help you.

23* Varying weights are an abomination to the LORD,
and false scales are not good.

24*† Man's steps are from the LORD;
how, then, can a man understand his way?

25† Rashly to pledge a sacred gift is a trap for a man, or to regret a vow once made.

26 A wise king winnows the wicked,
and threshes them under the cartwheel.

27 A lamp from the LORD is the breath of man;
it searches through all his inmost being.

28* Kindness and piety safeguard the king,
and he upholds his throne by justice.

29* The glory of young men is their strength,
and the dignity of old men is gray hair.

30 Evil is cleansed away by bloody lashes,
and a scourging to the inmost being.

CHAPTER 21

1 Like a stream is the king's heart in the hand of the LORD;
wherever it pleases him, he directs it.

2* All the ways of a man may be right in his own eyes,
but it is the LORD who proves hearts.

3*† To do what is right and just
is more acceptable to the LORD than sacrifice.

4 Haughty eyes and a proud heart—
the tillage of the wicked is sin.

5 The plans of the diligent are sure of profit,
but all rash haste leads certainly to poverty.

6 He who makes a fortune by a lying tongue is chasing a bubble over deadly snares.

20, 16: Caution is again advised in the matter of becoming surety; cf 6, 1ff.

20, 20: His lamp will go out: misfortune, even death, awaits him; cf 13, 9; Ex 21, 17.

20, 24: Man is dependent upon God and cannot fully foresee his own course.

20, 25: This verse cautions against making vows without proper reflection; cf Dt 23, 22ff; Eccl 5, 4f.

21, 3: External rites or sacrifices do not please God unless accompanied by internal worship and right moral conduct cf 15, 8; 21, 27; Is 1, 11-15; Am 5, 22; Mal 1, 12.

7 The oppression of the wicked will sweep them away,
because they refuse to do what is right.

8 The way of the culprit is crooked, but the conduct of the innocent is
right.

9* It is better to dwell in a corner of
the housetop
than in a roomy house with a quarrelsome woman.

10 The soul of the wicked man desires evil;
his neighbor finds no pity in his
eyes.

11* When the arrogant man is punished,
the simple are the wiser;
when the wise man is instructed,
he gains knowledge.

12 The just man appraises the house of
the wicked:
there is one who brings down the wicked to ruin.

13 He who shuts his ear to the cry of the poor
will himself also call and not be heard.

14 A secret gift allays anger,
and a concealed present, violent
wrath.

15* To practice justice is a joy for the
just,
but terror for evildoers.

16† The man who strays from the way of good sense
will abide in the assembly of the shades.

17 He who loves pleasure will suffer want;
he who loves wine and perfume
will not be rich.

18*† The wicked man serves as ransom
for the just,
and the faithless man for the righteous.

19 It is better to dwell in a wilderness than with a quarrelsome and vexatious wife.

20 Precious treasure remains in the house of the wise,
but the fool consumes it.

21 He who pursues justice and kindness will find life and honor.

22 The wise man storms a city of the mighty,
and overthrows the stronghold in which it trusts.

23* He who guards his mouth and his tongue
keeps himself from trouble.

24 Arrogant is the name for the man of overbearing pride
who acts with scornful effrontery.

25 The sluggard's propensity slays
him,
for his hands refuse to work.

26 Some are consumed with avarice all
the day,
but the just man gives unspar-
ingly.

27* The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination,
the more so when they offer it with a bad intention.

28* The false witness will perish, but he who listens will finally have his say.

29 The wicked man is brazenfaced, but the upright man pays heed to his ways.

30 There is no wisdom, no understand-
ing,
no counsel, against the LORD.

31 The horse is equipped for the day
of battle,
but victory is the LORD's.

CHAPTER 22

1* A good name is more desirable than great riches,
and high esteem, than gold and silver.

2* Rich and poor have a common bond:
the LORD is the maker of them all.

3* The shrewd man perceives evil and hides,

while simpletons continue on and suffer the penalty.

4 The reward of humility and fear of the LORD is riches, honor and life.

5 Thorns and snares are on the path of the crooked;
he who would safeguard his life will shun them.

6 Train a boy in the way he should go;
even when he is old, he will not swerve from it.

7 The rich rule over the poor,
and the borrower is the slave of the lender.

8* He who sows iniquity reaps calamity,
and the rod destroys his labors.

9 The kindly man will be blessed,
for he gives of his sustenance to the poor.

10 Expel the arrogant man and discord goes out;
strife and insult cease.

11* The LORD loves the pure of heart;
the man of winning speech has the king for his friend.

12 The eyes of the LORD safeguard knowledge,
but he defeats the projects of the faithless.

13*† The sluggard says, "A lion is outside;
in the streets I might be slain."

14* The mouth of the adulteress is a deep pit;
he with whom the LORD is angry will fall into it.

15 Folly is close to the heart of a child,
but the rod of discipline will drive it far from him.

16† He who oppresses the poor to enrich himself will yield up his gains to the rich as sheer loss.

III: SAYINGS OF THE WISE

17*† The sayings of the wise:

Incline your ear, and hear my words,
and apply your heart to my doctrine;

18 For it will be well if you keep them in your bosom,
if they all are ready on your lips.

19† That your trust may be in the LORD,
I make known to you the words of Amen-em-Ope.

20 Have I not written for you the "Thirty,"
with counsels and knowledge,

21 To teach you truly
how to give a dependable report to one who sends you?

22 Injure not the poor because they are poor,
nor crush the needy at the gate;

23*† For the LORD will defend their cause,
and will plunder the lives of those who plunder them.

24 Be not friendly with a hotheaded man,
nor the companion of a wrathful man,

25 Lest you learn his ways,
and get yourself into a snare.

26* Be not one of those who give their hand in pledge,
of those who become surety for debts;

27 For if you have not the means to pay,
your bed will be taken from under you.

28* Remove not the ancient landmark which your fathers set up.

29 You see a man skilled at his work?
He will stand in the presence of kings;

8: Jb 4, 8; Sir 7, 3; Hos 8, 7.
11: Mt 5, 8.
13: 26, 13.
14: 23, 27.
17: 5, 1.
23: 23, 11.
26: 6, 1f; 11, 15; 17, 18.
28: 23, 10; Dt 19, 14; 27, 17.

22, 13: To avoid the effort required for doing good, the sluggard exaggerates the difficulties that must be overcome.

22, 16: Money gained by exploiting the poor is in turn lost to those who are more wealthy.

22, 17—24, 22: This collection of proverbs, introduced as sayings of the wise, is given in the more intimate and personal form of an address to a pupil called the son and is arranged in strophes instead of couplets.

22, 17—23, 35: The maxims warn against: oppression of the poor and defenseless (22, 22f), anger (24f), giving surety for debts (26f), bad manners at a king's table (23, 1f), anxiety for riches (4f), a grudging host (6f), intemperance in food and drink (19ff.29-35), and adultery (26ff). They exhort to: careful workmanship (22, 29), respect for the rights of orphans (23, 10f), correction of the young (13f), filial piety (15f.22-25), and fear of the LORD (17f).

22, 19f: Amen-em-Ope: an Egyptian scribe to whom is attributed a collection of maxims in Thirty chapters (v 20) composed for the instruction of his children and addressed to a young man who wishes to enter upon a career. The inspired editor of Proverbs does not translate these, but uses their materials in constructing a similar collection of proverbs.

he will not stand in the presence of obscure men.

CHAPTER 23

1 When you sit down to dine with a ruler,
keep in mind who is before you;
2† And put a knife to your throat
if you have a ravenous appetite.
3 Do not desire his delicacies;
they are deceitful food.

4 Toil not to gain wealth,
cease to be concerned about it;
5 While your glance flits to it, it is gone!
for assuredly it grows wings,
like the eagle that flies toward heaven.

6 Do not take food with a grudging man,
and do not desire his dainties;
7 For in his greed he is like a storm.
"Eat and drink," he says to you,
though his heart is not with you;
8 The little you have eaten you will vomit up,
and you will have wasted your agreeable words.

9* Speak not for the fool's hearing;
he will despise the wisdom of your words.

10* Remove not the ancient landmark,
nor invade the fields of orphans;
11* For their redeemer is strong;
he will defend their cause against you.

12 Apply your heart to instruction,
and your ears to words of knowledge.

13* Withhold not chastisement from a boy;
if you beat him with the rod, he will not die.
14* Beat him with the rod,
and you will save him from the nether world.

15 My son, if your heart be wise,
my own heart also will rejoice;
16 And my inmost being will exult,
when your lips speak what is right.

17* Let not your heart emulate sinners,
but be zealous for the fear of the LORD always;
18* For you will surely have a future,
and your hope will not be cut off.

19 Hear, my son, and be wise,
and guide your heart in the right way.

20 Consort not with winebibbers,
nor with those who eat meat to excess;
21 For the drunkard and the glutton come to poverty,
and torpor clothes a man in rags.

22 Listen to your father who begot you,
and despise not your mother when she is old.
23 Get the truth, and sell it not—wisdom, instruction and understanding.
24* The father of a just man will exult with glee;
he who begets a wise son will have joy in him.
25 Let your father and mother have joy;
let her who bore you exult.

26 My son, give me your heart,
and let your eyes keep to my ways.
27 For the harlot is a deep ditch,
and the adulteress a narrow pit;
28* Yes, she lies in wait like a robber,
and increases the faithless among men.

29† Who scream? Who shriek?
Who have strife? Who have anxiety?
Who have wounds for nothing?
Who have black eyes?
30* Those who linger long over wine,
those who engage in trials of blended wine.
31 Look not on the wine when it is red,
when it sparkles in the glass.
It goes down smoothly;
32 but in the end it bites like a serpent,
or like a poisonous adder.
33 Your eyes behold strange sights,
and your heart utters disordered thoughts;
34 You are like one now lying in the depths of the sea,
now sprawled at the top of the mast.
35† "They struck me, but it pained me not;
They beat me, but I felt it not;
When shall I awake
to seek wine once again?"

23, 9: 9, 7.
10: 22, 28.
11: 22, 23.
13: 13, 24; 19, 18; Sir 30, 1.
14: 29, 15.17.
17: 3, 31; 24, 1.19.
18: 24, 14.
24: 10, 1.
28: 7, 10-27.
30: 20, 1; Sir 19, 2; Hos 4, 11.

23, 2: Put a knife to your throat: a metaphor for self-restraint.
23, 29-35: A vivid description of the evil effects, physical and psychological, of drunkenness.
23, 35: Wine makes the drunkard insensible to bodily and moral harm. His one desire is to indulge again.

CHAPTER 24

1*† Be not emulous of evil men,
and desire not to be with them;
2 For their hearts plot violence,
and their lips speak of foul play.

3 By wisdom is a house built,
by understanding is it made firm;
4 And by knowledge are its rooms filled with every precious and pleasing possession.

5* A wise man is more powerful than a strong man, and a man of knowledge than a man of might;
6* For it is by wise guidance that you wage your war,
and the victory is due to a wealth of counselors.
7*† For a fool, to be silent is wisdom;
not to open his mouth at the gate.

8 He who plots evil doing—
men call him an intriguer.
9 Beyond intrigue and folly and sin,
it is arrogance that men find abominable.

10† If you remain indifferent in time of adversity,
your strength will depart from you.
11† Rescue those who are being dragged to death,
and from those tottering to execution withdraw not.
12* If you say, "I know not this man!"
does not he who tests hearts perceive it?
He who guards your life knows it,
and he will repay each one according to his deeds.

13 If you eat honey, my son, because it is good,
if virgin honey is sweet to your taste;
14* Such, you must know, is wisdom to your soul.
If you find it, you will have a future,
and your hope will not be cut off.

15 Lie not in wait against the home of the just man, ravage not his dwelling place;
16† For the just man falls seven times and rises again,
but the wicked stumble to ruin.

17 Rejoice not when your enemy falls,
and when he stumbles, let not your heart exult, 18 Lest the LORD see it, be displeased with you,
and withdraw his wrath from your enemy.

19 Be not provoked with evildoers,
nor envious of the wicked;
20* For the evil man has no future,
the lamp of the wicked will be put out.

21† My son, fear the LORD and the king;
have nothing to do with those who rebel against them;
22 For suddenly arises the destruction they send,
and the ruin from either one, who can measure?

IV: OTHER SAYINGS OF THE WISE

23*†These also are sayings of the wise:

To show partiality in judgment is not good.
24 He who says to the wicked man, "You are just"— men will curse him, people will denounce him;
25 But those who convict the evildoer will fare well,
and on them will come the blessing of prosperity.
26† He gives a kiss on the lips
who makes an honest reply.

27† Complete your outdoor tasks,
and arrange your work in the field;
afterward you can establish your house.

24, 1: 3, 31; 23, 17.
5: 21, 22.
6: 20, 18.
7: Sir 6, 21.
12: Ps 62, 13; Sir 16, 12; Mt 16, 27; Rom 2, 6.
14: 23, 18.
20: 13, 9.
23: 18, 5; 28, 21; Lv 19, 15; Dt 1, 17; 16, 19.

24, 1-22: These verses continue an exhortation to wisdom (vv 3-7.13f), and against: violence (1f), pride and intrigue (8f), callousness (10-12), injustice (15f), joy in the failure of others (17f) or scandal at their success (19f), and rebellion against authority (21f).

24, 7: At the gate: of the city, where justice was administered and public affairs discussed; see note on Ru 4, 1. Cf also Pss 69, 13; 127, 5; Prv 22, 22; 31, 23.31.

24, 10: Indifferent: to those who suffer unjustly.

24, 11: Rescue . . . death: most probably refers to the legal rescue of those unjustly condemned to death.

24, 16: The just man overcomes every misfortune which oppresses him. Seven times: i.e., an indefinite number; cf Mt 18, 21f; Lk 17, 4.

24, 21f: One owes obedience to God and to supreme civil authority (Mt 22, 21; Rom 13, 1ff; 1 Pt 2, 13f). The punishments for failure in either duty transcend the limits of private justice.

24, 23-34: This collection of sayings continues in the same vein as the preceding: it instructs in fairness (23-26) and preparation for the future (27); and warns against vengeance (28f) and slothfulness (30-34).

24, 26: He gives a kiss on the lips: shows himself a true friend.

24, 27: This verse is commonly interpreted as advocating careful and practical preparation for marriage.

28* Be not a witness against your neighbor without just cause, thus committing folly with your lips.

29*† Say not, "As he did to me, so will I do to him;
I will repay the man according to his deeds."

30 I passed by the field of the sluggard,
by the vineyard of the man without sense;
31 And behold! it was all overgrown with thistles;
its surface was covered with nettles,
and its stone wall broken down.
32 And as I gazed at it, I reflected;
I saw and learned the lesson:
33* A little sleep, a little slumber,
a little folding of the arms to rest—
34 Then will poverty come upon you like a highwayman,
and want like an armed man.

V: SECOND COLLECTION OF THE PROVERBS OF SOLOMON

CHAPTER 25

1*† These also are proverbs of Solomon. The men of Hezekiah, king of Judah, transmitted them.

2 God has glory in what he conceals,
kings have glory in what they fathom.

3 As the heavens in height, and the earth in depth,
the heart of kings is unfathomable.

4 Remove the dross from silver,
and it comes forth perfectly purified;
5 Remove the wicked from the presence of the king,
and his throne is made firm through righteousness.

6† Claim no honor in the king's presence,
nor occupy the place of great men;
7* For it is better that you be told, "Come up closer!"
than that you be humbled before the prince.

8 What your eyes have seen bring not forth hastily against an opponent;
For what will you do later on when your neighbor puts you to shame?
9 Discuss your case with your neighbor,
but another man's secret do not disclose;
10 Lest, hearing it, he reproach you,
and your ill repute cease not.

11 Like golden apples in silver settings are words spoken at the proper time.

12 Like a golden earring, or a necklace of fine gold,
is a wise reprover to an obedient ear.

13 Like the coolness of snow in the heat of the harvest is a faithful messenger for the one who sends him.
[He refreshes the soul of his master.]

14 Like clouds and wind when no rain follows is the man who boastfully promises what he never gives.

15* By patience is a ruler persuaded,
and a soft tongue will break a bone.

16 If you find honey, eat only what you need,
lest you become glutted with it and vomit it up.

17 Let your foot be seldom in your neighbor's house,
lest he have more than enough of you, and hate you.

18 Like a club, or a sword, or a sharp arrow,
is the man who bears false witness against his neighbor.

19 Like an infected tooth or an unsteady foot is [dependence on] a faithless man in time of trouble.

20* Like a moth in clothing, or a maggot in wood,
sorrow gnaws at the human heart.

28: 19, 5; 25, 18.
29: 20, 22.
33f: 6, 10f.
25, 1: 1, 1.
7: Lk 14, 8ff.
15: 15, 1.4.
20: Sir 30, 24.

24, 29: This verse indicates great progress from the principle of the law of Talion (see note on Ex 21, 23ff) toward the teaching found in Rom 12, 17ff. Cf also Prv 25, 21ff.

25, 1: The men of Hezekiah: literary men at the royal court of Hezekiah who are represented as transcribing the proverbs from other collections. Hezekiah was a reformer of national religious life (2 Chr 29, 25-30).

25, 6f: Compare the lesson on humility which was taught by Christ (Lk 14, 7-11).

21*† If your enemy be hungry, give him
food to eat,
if he be thirsty, give him to drink;
22 For live coals you will heap on his head,
and the LORD will vindicate you.

23 The north wind brings rain, and a backbiting tongue an angry countenance.

24* It is better to dwell in a corner of
the housetop
than in a roomy house with a
quarrelsome woman.

25 Like cool water to one faint from thirst
is good news from a far country.

26 Like a troubled fountain or a polluted spring
is a just man who gives way before
the wicked.

27† To eat too much honey is not good;
nor to seek honor after honor.

28 Like an open city with no defenses is the man with no check on his feelings.

CHAPTER 26†

1 Like snow in summer, or rain in harvest,
honor for a fool is out of place.

2 Like the sparrow in its flitting, like
the swallow in its flight,
a curse uncalled-for arrives nowhere.

3* The whip for the horse, the bridle
for the ass,
and the rod for the back of fools.

4† Answer not the fool according to his
folly,
lest you too become like him.

5 Answer the fool according to his
folly,
lest he become wise in his own
eyes.

6 He cuts off his feet, he drinks down
violence,
who sends messages by a fool.

7† A proverb in the mouth of a fool
hangs limp, like crippled legs.

8 Like one who entangles the stone in the sling
is he who gives honor to a fool.

9 Like a thorn stick brandished by the hand of a drunkard
is a proverb in the mouth of fools.

10 Like an archer wounding all who pass by
is he who hires a drunken fool.

11* As the dog returns to his vomit,
so the fool repeats his folly.

12 You see a man wise in his own eyes?
There is more hope for a fool than
for him.

13* The sluggard says, "There is a lion
in the street,
a lion in the middle of the square!"

14 The door turns on its hinges,
the sluggard, on his bed!

15* The sluggard loses his hand in the dish;
he is too weary to lift it to his
mouth.

16 The sluggard imagines himself wiser than seven men who answer with good sense.

17 Like the man who seizes a passing dog by the ears
is he who meddles in a quarrel not his own.

18 Like a crazed archer scattering firebrands and deadly arrows
19 Is the man who deceives his neighbor,
and then says, "I was only jok-
ing."

20 For lack of wood, the fire dies out;
and when there is no talebearer,
strife subsides.

21* What a bellows is to live coals, what wood is to fire,

21: Rom 12, 20.
24: 21, 9.
26, 3: 19, 29; Sir 33, 25.
11: 2 Pt 2, 22.
13: 22, 13.
15: 19, 24.
21: 15, 18; 29, 22.

†

25, 21f: Charity is invaluable in resolving enmities and restoring peace. Live coals: i.e., either remorse and embarrassment for the harm done, or increased punishment for refusing reconciliation. Cf Mt 5, 44; Rom 12, 20.

25, 27: Nor . . . honor after honor: the text is uncertain.

26, 1-28: Concrete images describe the vices of fools (1-12), of sluggards (13-16), of meddlers (17-19), of talebearers (20ff), and of flatterers (23-28).

26, 4f: There is no contradiction between these two proverbs. In any answer the wise man gives he must protect his own interest against the fool.

26, 7ff: The fool abuses whatever knowledge he possesses.

such is a contentious man in enkindling strife.

22* The words of a talebearer are like dainty morsels
that sink into one's inmost being.

23 Like a glazed finish on earthenware are smooth lips with a wicked heart.

24 With his lips an enemy pretends,
but in his inmost being he maintains deceit;

25*† When he speaks graciously, trust him not,
for seven abominations are in his heart.

26 A man may conceal hatred under dissimulation,
but his malice will be revealed in the assembly.

27* He who digs a pit falls into it;
and a stone comes back upon him who rolls it.

28 The lying tongue is its owner's enemy,
and the flattering mouth works ruin.

CHAPTER 27

1 Boast not of tomorrow,
for you know not what any day may bring forth.

2 Let another praise you—not your own mouth;
Someone else—not your own lips.

3* Stone is heavy, and sand a burden,
but a fool's provocation is heavier than both.

4 Anger is relentless, and wrath overwhelming—
but before jealousy who can stand?

5 Better is an open rebuke
than a love that remains hidden.

6 Wounds from a friend may be accepted as well meant,
but the greetings of an enemy one prays against.

7 One who is full, tramples on virgin honey;
but to the man who is hungry, any bitter thing is sweet.

8 Like a bird that is far from its nest
is a man who is far from his home.

9 Perfume and incense gladden the heart,
but by grief the soul is torn asunder.

10 Your own friend and your father's friend forsake not;
but if ruin befalls you, enter not a kinsman's house.
Better is a neighbor near at hand than a brother far away.

11 If you are wise, my son, you will gladden my heart, and I will be able to rebut him who taunts me.

12* The shrewd man perceives evil and hides;
simpletons continue on and suffer the penalty.

13*† Take his garment who becomes surety for another,
and for the sake of a stranger, yield it up!

14† When one greets his neighbor with a loud voice in the early morning, a curse can be laid to his charge.

15* For a persistent leak on a rainy day
the match is a quarrelsome woman.

16 He who keeps her stores up a stormwind;
he cannot tell north from south.

17 As iron sharpens iron,
so man sharpens his fellow man.

18 He who tends a fig tree eats its fruit,
and he who is attentive to his master will be enriched.

19 As one face differs from another,
so does one human heart from another.

20* The nether world and the abyss are never satisfied;
so too the eyes of men.

21 As the crucible tests silver and the furnace gold,
so a man is tested by the praise he receives.

22: 18, 8.
25: Sir 12, 10; 27, 23.
27: Eccl 10, 8; Sir 27, 25f.
27, 3: Sir 22, 14f.
12: 22, 3.
13: 20, 16.
15: 21, 9; 25, 24.
20: 30, 16; Eccl 4, 8.

26, 25: Seven abominations: many evil intentions.
27, 13: See note on 20, 16.
27, 14: The loud voice suggests hypocrisy in the greeting

22 Though you should pound the fool to bits with the pestle, amid the grits in a mortar,
his folly would not go out of him.

23† Take good care of your flocks,
give careful attention to your herds;
24 For wealth lasts not forever,
nor even a crown from age to age.
25 When the grass is taken away and the aftergrowth appears,
and the mountain greens are gathered in,
26 The lambs will provide you with clothing,
and the goats will bring the price of a field, 27 And there will be ample goat's milk to supply you,
to supply your household,
and maintenance for your maidens.

CHAPTER 28

1 The wicked man flees although no one pursues him;
but the just man, like a lion, feels sure of himself.

2† If a land is rebellious, its princes will be many;
but with a prudent man it knows security.

3 A rich man who oppresses the poor is like a devastating rain that leaves no food.

4† Those who abandon the law praise the wicked man,
but those who keep the law war against him.

5 Evil men understand nothing of justice,
but those who seek the LORD understand all.

6* Better a poor man who walks in his integrity than he who is crooked in his ways and rich.

7 He who keeps the law is a wise son,
but the gluttons' companion disgraces his father.

8† He who increases his wealth by interest and overcharge gathers it for him who is kind to the poor.

9*† When one turns away his ear from hearing the law,
even his prayer is an abomination.

10 He who seduces the upright into an evil way will himself fall into his own pit.
[And blameless men will gain prosperity.]

11 The rich man is wise in his own eyes,
but a poor man who is intelligent sees through him.

12 When the just are triumphant, there is great jubilation;
but when the wicked gain preeminence, people hide.

13 He who conceals his sins prospers not,
but he who confesses and forsakes them obtains mercy.

14 Happy the man who is always on his guard;
but he who hardens his heart will fall into evil.

15 Like a roaring lion or a ravenous bear is a wicked ruler over a poor people.

16 The less prudent the prince, the more his deeds oppress.
He who hates ill-gotten gain prolongs his days.

17 Though a man burdened with human blood were to flee to the grave, none should support him.

18 He who walks uprightly is safe,
but he whose ways are crooked falls into the pit.

19* He who cultivates his land will have plenty of food, but from idle pursuits a man has his fill of poverty.

20* The trustworthy man will be richly blessed;
he who is in haste to grow rich will not go unpunished.

* 28, 6: 19, 1.
9: 21, 27.
19: 12, 11.
20: 13, 11.

† 27, 23-27: The land of Palestine was very suitable for flocks and herds, which formed the principal source of wealth for their owners.

28, 2: The meaning of this poorly preserved verse seems to be that frequent changes of rulers often result from moral corruption and political disorder.

28, 4: The law: religious and moral teaching.

28, 8: Interest and overcharge were strictly forbidden in the old law among Israelites because it was presumed that the borrower was in distress; cf Ex 22, 25; Lv 25, 35ff; Dt 23, 19; Ps 15, 5; Ez 18, 8. Civil and divine law will take the offender's wealth from him.

28, 9: Prayers offered in bad faith are displeasing to God.

21* To show partiality is never good:
for even a morsel of bread a man may do wrong.

22 The avaricious man is perturbed about his wealth,
and he knows not when want will come upon him.

23 He who rebukes a man gets more thanks in the end than one with a flattering tongue.

24* He who defrauds father or mother and calls it no sin,
is a partner of the brigand.

25 The greedy man stirs up disputes,
but he who trusts in the LORD will prosper.

26 He who trusts in himself is a fool,
but he who walks in wisdom is safe.

27* He who gives to the poor suffers no want,
but he who ignores them gets many a curse.

28 When the wicked gain pre-eminence, other men hide;
but at their fall the just flourish.

CHAPTER 29

1 The man who remains stiff-necked and hates rebuke will be crushed suddenly beyond cure.

2* When the just prevail, the people rejoice;
but when the wicked rule, the people groan.

3* He who loves wisdom makes his father glad,
but he who consorts with harlots squanders his wealth.

4 By justice a king gives stability to the land;
but he who imposes heavy taxes ruins it.

5 The man who flatters his neighbor is spreading a net under his feet.

6 The wicked man steps into a snare,
but the just man runs on joyfully.

7 The just man has a care for the rights of the poor;
the wicked man has no such concern.

8* Arrogant men set the city ablaze,
but wise men calm the fury.

9 If a wise man disputes with a fool,
he may rage or laugh but can have no peace.

10 Bloodthirsty men hate the honest man,
but the upright show concern for his life.

11* The fool gives vent to all his anger;
but by biding his time, the wise man calms it.

12 If a ruler listens to lying words,
his servants all become wicked.

13*† The poor and the oppressor have a common bond:
the LORD gives light to the eyes of both.

14 If a king is zealous for the rights of the poor,
his throne stands firm forever.

15* The rod of correction gives wisdom,
but a boy left to his whims disgraces his mother.

16 When the wicked prevail, crime increases;
but their downfall the just will behold.

17 Correct your son, and he will bring you comfort, and give delight to your soul.

18 Without prophecy the people become demoralized;
but happy is he who keeps the law.

19* By words no servant can be trained;
for he understands what is said, but obeys not.

20* Do you see a man hasty in his words?
More can be hoped for from a fool!

21 If a man pampers his servant from childhood,
he will turn out to be stubborn.

22* An ill-tempered man stirs up disputes,

and a hotheaded man is the cause of many sins.

23* Man's pride causes his humiliation,
but he who is humble of spirit obtains honor.

24† The accomplice of a thief is his own enemy:
he hears himself put under a curse, yet discloses nothing.

25 The fear of man brings a snare,
but he who trusts in the LORD is safe.

26 Many curry favor with the ruler,
but the rights of each are from the LORD.

27 The evildoer is an abomination to the just,
and he who walks uprightly is an abomination to the wicked.

VI: THE WORDS OF AGUR

CHAPTER 30

1† The words of Agur, son of Jakeh the Massaite:

The pronouncement of mortal man:
"I am not God;
I am not God, that I should prevail.
2 Why, I am the most stupid of men,
and have not even human intelligence;
3 Neither have I learned wisdom,
nor have I the knowledge of the Holy One.
4 Who has gone up to heaven and come down again—
who has cupped the wind in his hands?
Who has bound up the waters in a cloak—
who has marked out all the ends of the earth?
What is his name, what is his son's name,
if you know it?"
5* Every word of God is tested;
he is a shield to those who take refuge in him.
6* Add nothing to his words,
lest he reprove you, and you be exposed as a deceiver.

VII: NUMERICAL PROVERBS

7 Two things I ask of you, deny them not to me before I die:
8 Put falsehood and lying far from me,
give me neither poverty nor riches;
[provide me only with the food I need;]
9 Lest, being full, I deny you, saying, "Who is the LORD?"
Or, being in want, I steal,
and profane the name of my God.

10 Slander not a servant to his master,
lest he curse you, and you have to pay the penalty.
11*† There is a group of people that curses its father,
and blesses not its mother.
12 There is a group that is pure in its own eyes,
yet is not purged of its filth.
13 There is a group—how haughty their eyes!
how overbearing their glance!
14 There is a group whose incisors are swords,
whose teeth are knives, Devouring the needy from the earth,
and the poor from among men.

15† The two daughters of the leech are, "Give, Give."
Three things are never satisfied,
four never say, "Enough!"
16* The nether world, and the barren womb;
the earth, that is never saturated with water,
and fire, that never says, "Enough!"

17 The eye that mocks a father,
or scorns an aged mother,
Will be plucked out by the ravens in the valley;
the young eagles will devour it.

18† Three things are too wonderful for me,

23: 11, 2; 16, 18; 18, 12; Jb 22, 29. 30, 5: Ps 12, 7. 6: Dt 4, 2. 11: 20, 20. 16: 27, 20.

29, 24: Is his own enemy: because he not only incurs guilt as an accomplice but, by his silence, brings down on himself the curse invoked on the unknown guilty partner.

30, 1: Agur: an unknown person. Massaite: from Massa in northern Arabia, elsewhere referred to as an encampment of the Ishmaelites (Gn 25, 14). But the word may not be intended as a place name; it might signify "an oracle," "a prophecy."

30, 1ff: Agur wishes to stress man's insignificance when he is compared to God; cf Jb 38—39.

30, 11-14: Perverted people are here classified as unfilial (11), self-righteous (12), proud (13) and rapacious (14).

30, 15ff: The two daughters . . . "Give, Give": the text is obscure but the sense seems to be that the leech is insatiable in its desire for blood, just as desire for blood, just as are the nether world for victims, the barren womb for offspring, the parched earth for water, and fire for fuel (16).

30, 18f: The soaring flight of the eagle, the mysterious movement upon a rock of the serpent which has no feet, the path of the ship through the trackless deep, and the marvelous procreation of human life, excite great wonderment.

yes, four I cannot understand:
19 The way of an eagle in the air,
the way of a serpent upon a rock,
The way of a ship on the high seas,
and the way of a man with a maiden.

20† Such is the way of an adulterous woman:
she eats, wipes her mouth,
and says, "I have done no wrong."

21 Under three things the earth trembles,
yes, under four it cannot bear up:
22* Under a slave when he becomes king,
and a fool when he is glutted with food;
23 Under an odious woman when she is wed,
and a maidservant when she displaces her mistress.

24 Four things are among the smallest on the earth,
and yet are exceedingly wise:
25 Ants—a species not strong,
yet they store up their food in the summer;
26† Rock-badgers—a species not mighty,
yet they make their home in the crags;
27 Locusts—they have no king,
yet they migrate all in array;
28 Lizards—you can catch them with your hands,
yet they find their way into king's palaces.

29 Three things are stately in their stride,
yes, four are stately in their carriage:
30 The lion, mightiest of beasts,
who retreats before nothing;
31 The strutting cock, and the he-goat,
and the king at the head of his people.

32† If you have foolishly been proud or presumptuous—put your hand on your mouth; 33 For the stirring of milk brings forth curds,
and the stirring of anger brings forth blood.

VIII: THE WORDS OF LEMUEL

CHAPTER 31

1 The words of Lemuel, king of Massa.
The advice which his mother gave him:

2 What, my son, my first-born!
what, O son of my womb;
what, O son of my vows!

3* Give not your vigor to women,
nor your strength to those who ruin kings.
4* It is not for kings, O Lemuel,
not for kings to drink wine;
strong drink is not for princes!
5 Lest in drinking they forget what the law decrees,
and violate the rights of all who are in need.
6 Give strong drink to one who is perishing,
and wine to the sorely depressed;
7 When they drink, they will forget their misery,
and think no more of their burdens.
8 Open your mouth in behalf of the dumb,
and for the rights of the destitute;
9 Open your mouth, decree what is just,
defend the needy and the poor!

IX: THE IDEAL WIFE

10* When one finds a worthy wife,
her value is far beyond pearls.
11 Her husband, entrusting his heart to her,
has an unfailing prize.
12† She brings him good, and not evil,
all the days of her life.
13 She obtains wool and flax
and makes cloth with skillful hands.
14† Like merchant ships,
she secures her provisions from afar.
15 She rises while it is still night,
and distributes food to her household.
16 She picks out a field to purchase;
out of her earnings she plants a vineyard.
17 She is girt about with strength,
and sturdy are her arms.
18† She enjoys the success of her dealings;
at night her lamp is undimmed.
19 She puts her hands to the distaff,
and her fingers ply the spindle.

22: 19, 10; Eccl 10, 6f.
31, 3: 5, 9.
4: 20, 1.
10-31: Sir 26, 1ff. 13-18.

30, 20: This verse portrays the indifference of an adulterous woman who thinks there is no trace of her wicked act.
30, 26: Rock-badgers: cf note to Ps 104, 18.
30, 32f: The anger aroused by overweening pride threatens an awesome punishment.
31, 12: Good, and not evil: i.e., prosperity, not adversity.
31, 14: Merchant: literally, "Canaanite" (cf v 24), probably because the merchant class had been composed chiefly of Canaanites.
31, 18: Her lamp is undimmed: indicates abundance of productive work and its accompanying prosperity; cf 20, 20, Jb 18, 6.

20 She reaches out her hands to the poor,
and extends her arms to the needy.
21 She fears not the snow for her household;
all her charges are doubly clothed.
22 She makes her own coverlets;
fine linen and purple are her clothing.
23 Her husband is prominent at the city gates
as he sits with the elders of the land.
24 She makes garments and sells them,
and stocks the merchants with belts.
25† She is clothed with strength and dignity,
and she laughs at the days to come.
26 She opens her mouth in wisdom,
and on her tongue is kindly counsel.
27 She watches the conduct of her household,
and eats not her food in idleness.
28 Her children rise up and praise her;
her husband, too, extols her:
29 "Many are the women of proven worth,
but you have excelled them all."
30† Charm is deceptive and beauty fleeting;
the woman who fears the LORD is to be praised.
31 Give her a reward of her labors,
and let her works praise her at the city gates.

31, 25: Laughs at the days to come: anticipates the future with gladness free from anxiety.

31, 30: The true charm of the ideal wife is her religious spirit, for she fears the LORD; cf note on 1, 7.

The Book of

ECCLESIASTES

The title Ecclesiastes given to this book is the Greek translation of the Hebrew name Qoheleth meaning, perhaps, "one who convokes an assembly." The book, however, does not consist of public addresses, but is a treatise, more or less logically developed, on the vanity of all things. Reflections in prose and aphorisms in verse are intermingled in Ecclesiastes, which contains, besides, an introduction and an epilogue.

The book is concerned with the purpose and value of human life. While admitting the existence of a divine plan, it considers such a plan to be hidden from man, who seeks happiness without ever finding it here below (3, 11; 8, 7.17). Ecclesiastes applies his "Vanity of vanities" to everything "under the sun," even to that wisdom which seeks to find at last a semblence of good in the things of the world. Merit does not yield happiness for it is often tried by suffering. Riches and pleasures do not avail. Existence is monotonous, enjoyment fleeting and vain; darkness quickly follows. Life, then, is an enigma beyond human ability to solve.

While Ecclesiastes concedes that there is an advantage for man in the enjoyment of certain legitimate pleasures lest he lapse into pessimism and despair, he nevertheless considers this indulgence also vanity unless man returns due thanks to the Creator who has given him all. Under this aspect, earthly wisdom would rise to the higher level of true spiritual wisdom. This true wisdom is not found "under the sun" but is perceived only by the light of faith, inasmuch as it rests with God, who is the final Judge of the good and the bad, and whose reign endures forever. The Epilogue gives the clue to this thought (12, 13f).

The moral teaching of the book is imperfect, like the Old Testament itself (Heb 7, 19), yet it marks an advance in the development of the doctrine of divine retribution. While rejecting the older solution of earthly rewards and punishments, Ecclesiastes looks forward to a more lasting one. The clear answer to the problem was to come with the light of Christ's teaching concerning future life.

The author of the book was a teacher of popular wisdom (12, 9). Qoheleth was obviously only his literary name. Because he is called "David's son, king in Jerusalem," it was commonly thought that he was King Solomon. Such personation, however, was but a literary device to lend greater dignity and authority to the book—a circumstance which does not in any way impugn its inspired character. The Epilogue seems to have been written by an editor, probably a disciple of Qoheleth. The entire work differs considerably in language and style from earlier books of the Old Testament. It reflects a late period of Hebrew, and was probably written about three centuries before Christ.

CHAPTER 1

1 *† The words of David's son, Qoheleth, king in Jerusalem:

Vanity of Toil without Profit

2 *† Vanity of vanities, says Qoheleth, vanity of vanities! All things are vanity!
3 *† What profit has man from all the labor
which he toils at under the sun?
4 One generation passes and another comes,
but the world forever stays.
5 The sun rises and the sun goes down;
then it presses on to the place where it rises.
6 Blowing now toward the south, then toward the north,
the wind turns again and again, resuming its rounds.
7 All rivers go to the sea,
yet never does the sea become full.
To the place where they go,
the rivers keep on going.

* 1, 1: 7, 27; 12, 8f. 2: 12, 8. 3: 2, 11.22; 3, 9; 5, 15.

† 1, 1: Qoheleth: see Introduction.
1, 2: Vanity of vanities: a Hebrew superlative expressing the supreme degree of futility and emptiness.
1, 3: Under the sun: used throughout this book to signify "on the earth."

8*† All speech is labored;
there is nothing man can say.
The eye is not satisfied with seeing nor is the ear filled with hearing.

9* What has been, that will be; what has been done, that will be done. Nothing is new under the sun. 10* Even the thing of which we say, "See, this is new!" has already existed in the ages that preceded us. 11*† There is no remembrance of the men of old; nor of those to come will there be any remembrance among those who come after them.

I: QOHELETH'S INVESTIGATION OF LIFE

Twofold Introduction. 12 I, Qoheleth, was king over Israel in Jerusalem, 13* and I applied my mind to search and investigate in wisdom all things that are done under the sun.

A thankless task God has appointed for men to be busied about.

14*† I have seen all things that are done under the sun, and behold, all is vanity and a chase after wind.

15 What is crooked cannot be made straight,
and what is missing cannot be supplied.

16* Though I said to myself, "Behold, I have become great and stored up wisdom beyond all who were before me in Jerusalem, and my mind has broad experience of wisdom and knowledge"; 17* yet when I applied my mind to know wisdom and knowledge, madness and folly, I learned that this also is a chase after wind.

18 For in much wisdom there is much sorrow,
and he who stores up knowledge stores up grief.

CHAPTER 2

Study of Pleasure-seeking. 1*† I said to myself, "Come, now, let me try you with pleasure and the enjoyment of good things." But behold, this too was vanity. 2 Of laughter I said: "Mad!" and of mirth: "What good does this do?" 3† I thought of beguiling my senses with wine, though my mind was concerned with wisdom, and of taking up folly, until I should understand what is best for men to do under the heavens during the limited days of their life.

4 I undertook great works; I built myself houses and planted vineyards; 5 I made gardens and parks, and set out in them fruit trees of all sorts. 6 And I constructed for myself reservoirs to water a flourishing woodland. 7 I acquired male and female slaves, and slaves were born in my house. I also had growing herds of cattle and flocks of sheep, more than all who had been before me in Jerusalem. 8 I amassed for myself silver and gold, and the wealth of kings and provinces. I got for myself male and female singers and all human luxuries. 9 I became great, and I stored up more than all others before me in Jerusalem; my wisdom, too, stayed with me. 10* Nothing that my eyes desired did I deny them, nor did I deprive myself of any joy, but my heart rejoiced in the fruit of all my toil. This was my share for all my toil. 11* But when I turned to all the works that my hands had wrought, and to the toil at which I had taken such pains, behold! all was vanity and a chase after wind, with nothing gained under the sun. 12 For what will the man do who is to come after the king? What men have already done!

Study of Wisdom and Folly. 13 I went on to the consideration of wisdom, madness and folly. 13 And I saw that wisdom has the advantage over folly as much as light has the advantage over darkness.

14* The wise man has eyes in his head,
but the fool walks in darkness.

Yet I knew that one lot befalls both of them. 15 So I said to myself, if the fool's lot is to befall me also, why then should I be wise? Where is the profit for me? And I concluded in my heart that this too is vanity. 16* Neither of the wise man nor of the fool will there be an abiding remembrance, for in days to come both will have been forgotten. How is it that the wise man dies as well as the fool! 17 Therefore I loathed life, since for me the work that is done under the sun is evil; for all is vanity and a chase after wind.

Study of the Fruits of Toil

To Others the Profits. 18 And I detested all the fruits of my labor under the sun, because I must leave them to a man who is to come after me. [19] And who knows whether he will be a wise man or a fool? Yet he will have control over all the fruits of my wise labor under the sun. This also is vanity. [20] So my feelings turned to despair of all the fruits of my labor under the sun. [21] For here is a man who has labored with wisdom and knowledge and skill, and to another, who has not labored over it, he must leave his property. This also is vanity and a great misfortune. [22]* For what profit comes to a man from all the toil and anxiety of heart with which he has labored under the sun? [23] All his days sorrow and grief are his occupation;

even at night his mind is not at rest. This also is vanity.

[24]*† There is nothing better for man than to eat and drink and provide himself with good things by his labors. Even this, I realized, is from the hand of God.
[25] For who can eat or drink apart from him? [26]* For to whatever man he sees fit he gives wisdom and knowledge and joy; but to the sinner he gives the task of gathering possessions to be given to whatever man God sees fit. This also is vanity and a chase after wind.

CHAPTER 3

Man Cannot Hit on the Right Time To Act

1 There is an appointed time for everything,
and a time for every affair under
the heavens.
2 A time to be born, and a time to die;
a time to plant, and a time to uproot the plant.
3 A time to kill, and a time to heal;
a time to tear down, and a time
to build.
4 A time to weep, and a time to laugh;
a time to mourn, and a time to
dance.
5 A time to scatter stones, and a time
to gather them;
a time to embrace, and a time to be far from embraces.
6 A time to seek, and a time to lose;
a time to keep, and a time to cast
away.
7 A time to rend, and a time to sew;
a time to be silent, and a time to speak.
8 A time to love, and a time to hate;
a time of war, and a time of peace.

[9]* What advantage has the worker from his toil? [10] I have considered the task which God has appointed for men to be busied about. [11]* He has made everything appropriate to its time, and has put the timeless into their hearts, without men's ever discovering, from beginning to end, the work which God has done.
[12] I recognized that there is nothing better than to be glad and to do well during life. [13]* For every man, moreover, to eat and drink and enjoy the fruit of all his labor is a gift of God. [14] I recognized that whatever God does will endure forever;
there is no adding to it, or taking from
it. Thus has God done that he may be revered. [15]*† What now is has already been; what is to be, already is; and God restores what would otherwise be displaced.

The Problem of Retribution. [16]* And still under the sun in the judgment place
I saw wickedness, and in the seat of justice, iniquity. [17]* And I said to myself, both the just and the wicked God will judge, since there is a time for every affair and on every work a judgment. [18] I said to myself: As for the children of men, it is God's way of testing them and of showing that they are in themselves like beasts. [19] For the lot of man and of beast is one lot; the one dies as well as the other. Both have the same life-breath, and man has no advantage over the beast; but all is vanity. [20]* Both go to the same place; both were made from the dust, and to the dust they both return. [21]* Who knows if the life-breath of the children of men goes upward and the life-breath of beasts goes earth-ward? [22]* And I saw that there is nothing better for a man than to rejoice in his work; for this is his lot. Who will let him see what is to come after him?

CHAPTER 4

Vanity of Toil. [1]* Again I considered
all the oppressions that take place under the sun: the tears of the victims with none to comfort them! From the hand of their oppressors comes violence, and there is none to comfort them! [2]* And those now dead, I declared more fortunate in death than are the living to be still alive. [3] And better off than both is the yet unborn, who has not seen the wicked work that is done under the sun.
[4] Then I saw that all toil and skillful work is the rivalry of one man for another.

† 2, 24: Unrestrained indulgence is not advocated here, but legitimate pleasure and the cheerfulness it begets.
3, 15: God restores: the meaning is probably that God allows no part of his creation to drop out of existence.

This also is vanity and a chase after wind.

5† "The fool folds his arms and consumes his own flesh"— 6 Better is one handful with tranquility
than two with toil and a chase after wind!

Companions and Successors. 7 Again I found this vanity under the sun: 8 a solitary man with no companion; with neither son nor brother. Yet there is no end to all his toil, and riches do not satisfy his greed. "For whom do I toil and deprive myself of good things?" This also is vanity and a worthless task. 9 Two are better than one: they get a good wage for their labor. 10 If the one falls, the other will lift up his companion. Woe to the solitary man! For if he should fall, he has no one to lift him up. 11 So also, if two sleep together, they keep each other warm. How can one alone keep warm? 12 Where a lone man may be overcome, two together can resist. A three-ply cord is not easily broken.

13 Better is a poor but wise youth than an old but foolish king who no longer knows caution; 14† for from a prison house one comes forth to rule, since even in his royalty he was poor at birth. 15† Then I saw all those who are to live and move about under the sun with the heir apparent who will succeed to his place. 16 There is no end to all these people, to all over whom he takes precedence; yet the later generations will not applaud him. This also is vanity and a chase after wind.

Vanity of Many Words. 17*† Guard your step when you go to the house of God. Let your approach be obedience, rather than the fools' offering of sacrifice; for they know not how to keep from doing evil.

CHAPTER 5

1 Be not hasty in your utterance and let not your heart be quick to make a promise in God's presence. God is in heaven and you are on earth; therefore let your words be few.

2† For nightmares come with many cares,
and a fool's utterance with many words.

3* When you make a vow to God, delay not its fulfillment. For God has no pleasure in fools; fulfill what you have vowed. 4 You had better not make a vow than make it and not fulfill it. 5 Let not your utterances make you guilty, and say not before his representative, "It was a mistake," lest God be angered by such words and destroy the works of your hands. 6* Rather, fear God!

Gain and Loss of Goods. 7* If you see oppression of the poor, and violation of rights and justice in the realm, do not be shocked by the fact, for the high official has another higher than he watching him and above these are others higher still—. 8† Yet an advantage for a country in every respect is a king for the arable land.

9* The covetous man is never satisfied with money, and the lover of wealth reaps no fruit from it; so this too is vanity. 10 Where there are great riches, there are also many to devour them. Of what use are they to the owner except to feast his eyes upon? 11 Sleep is sweet to the laboring man, whether he eats little or much, but the rich man's abundance allows him no sleep.

12* This is a grievous evil which I have seen under the sun: riches kept by their owner to his hurt. 13 Should the riches be lost through some misfortune, he may have a son when he is without means. 14* As he came forth from his mother's womb, so again shall he depart, naked as he came, having nothing from his labor that he can carry in his hand. 15 This too is a grievous evil, that he goes just as he came. What then does it profit him to toil for wind? 16 All the days of his life are passed in gloom and sorrow, under great vexation, sickness and wrath.

17* Here is what I recognize as good: it is well for a man to eat and drink and enjoy all the fruits of his labor under the sun during the limited days of the life which God gives him; for this is his lot. 18 Any man to whom God gives riches and property, and grants power to partake of them, so that he receives his lot and finds joy in the fruits of his toil, has a gift from God. 19† For he will hardly dwell on the shortness of his life, because God lets him busy himself with the joy of his heart.

4, 15: The king is no sooner dead than the people transfer their allegiance to his successor.

4, 17: The fools' . . . sacrifice: unacceptable to God because of their disobedience; cf 1 Sm 15, 22; Hos 6, 6.

5, 2: Nightmares: literally, "dreams."

5, 8: The wording of this verse has perhaps never been adequately explained.

5, 19: The meaning is that the joys of life, though temporary, keep a man from dwelling on the ills which afflict humanity.

CHAPTER 6

Limited Worth of Enjoyment. 1 There is another evil which I have seen under the sun, and it weighs heavily upon man:
2* there is the man to whom God gives riches and property and honor, so that he lacks none of all the things he craves; yet God does not grant him power to partake of them, but a stranger devours them. This is vanity and a dire plague.
3† Should a man have a hundred children and live many years, no matter to what great age, still if he has not the full benefit of his goods, or if he is deprived of burial, of this man I proclaim that the child born dead is more fortunate than he. 4 Though it came in vain and goes into darkness and its name is enveloped in darkness; 5 though it has not seen or known the sun, yet the dead child is at rest rather than such a man. 6† Should he live twice a thousand years and not enjoy his goods, do not both go to the same place?
7† All man's toil is for his mouth, yet his desire is not fulfilled. 8 For what advantage has the wise man over the fool, or what advantage has the poor man in knowing how to conduct himself in life?
9† "What the eyes see is better than what the desires wander after." This also is vanity and a chase after wind.

II: QOHELETH'S CONCLUSIONS

10† Whatever is, was long ago given its name, and the nature of man is known, and that he cannot contend in judgment with one who is stronger than he. 11 For though there are many sayings that multiply vanity, what profit is there for a man? 12* For who knows what is good for a man in life, the limited days of his vain life (which God has made like a shadow)? Because—who is there to tell a man what will come after him under the sun?

A. Man Cannot Find Out What Is Good for Him To Do

CHAPTER 7

CRITIQUE OF SAGES ON THE DAY OF ADVERSITY

1*† A good name is better than good ointment,
and the day of death than the day of birth.
2* It is better to go to the house of mourning
than to the house of feasting,
For that is the end of every man,
and the living should take it to heart.
3 Sorrow is better than laughter,
because when the face is sad the heart grows wiser.
4 The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning,
but the heart of fools is in the house of mirth.
5 It is better to hearken to the wise man's rebuke than to hearken to the song of fools;
6 For as the crackling of thorns under a pot,
so is the fool's laughter.

This also is vanity,
7 For oppression can make a fool of a wise man,
and a bribe corrupts the heart.
8 Better is the end of speech than its beginning;
better is the patient spirit than the lofty spirit.
9 Do not in spirit become quickly discontented,
for discontent lodges in the bosom of a fool.

10 Do not say: How is it that former times were better than these? For it is not in wisdom that you ask about this.

11 Wisdom and an inheritance are good,
and an advantage to those that see the sun.

12 For the protection of wisdom is as the protection of money; and the advantage of knowledge is that wisdom preserves the life of its owner.
13 Consider the work of God. Who can make straight what he has made crooked? 14 On a good day enjoy good things, and on an evil day consider: Both the one and the other God has made, so that man cannot find fault with him in anything.

CRITIQUE OF SAGES ON JUSTICE AND WICKEDNESS

15 I have seen all manner of things in my vain days: a just man perishing in

* 6, 2: 2, 18f. 12: Jb 8, 9; 14, 2; Ps 102, 12. 7, 1: 4, 2; Prv 22, 1; Sir 41, 13. 2: 4, 2.

† 6, 3: A large family, a long life, an honorable burial, all were highly esteemed by the Hebrews, and it was considered a great misfortune to be deprived of them.
6, 6: Same place: the grave.
6, 7: Mouth: appetite, and therefore, body.
6, 9: Better . . . wander after: the good that is present to us is better than that which is absent and, perhaps, unattainable.
6, 10: The one who is stronger than man is God.
7, 1: Ointment: applied to the child at birth; a good name remains even after death.

his justice, and a wicked one surviving in his wickedness. 16*† "Be not just to excess, and be not overwise, lest you be ruined. 17† Be not wicked to excess, and be not foolish. Why should you die before your time?" 18† It is good to hold to this rule, and not to let that one go; but he who fears God will win through at all events.

19 Wisdom is a better defense for the wise man than would be ten princes in the city, 20*† yet there is no man on earth so just as to do good and never sin. 21* Do not give heed to every word that is spoken lest you hear your servant speaking ill of you, 22 for you know in your heart that you have many times spoken ill of others.

23 All these things I probed in wisdom. I said, "I will acquire wisdom"; but it was beyond me. 24 What exists is far-reaching; it is deep, very deep: who can find it out? 25* I turned my thoughts toward knowledge; I sought and pursued wisdom and reason, and I recognized that wickedness is foolish and folly is madness.

Critique of Sages on Women. 26* More bitter than death I find the woman who is a hunter's trap, whose heart is a snare and whose hands are prison bonds. He who is pleasing to God will escape her, but the sinner will be entrapped by her. 27 Behold, this have I found, says Qoheleth, adding one thing to another that I might discover the answer 28† which my soul still seeks and has not found: One man out of a thousand have I come upon, but a woman among them all I have not found. 29† Behold, only this have I found out: God made mankind straight, but men have had recourse to many calculations.

CHAPTER 8

Critique of Sages on the Wise Man and the King

1 Who is like the wise man,
and who knows the explanation of things?
A man's wisdom illumines his face,
but an impudent look is resented.

2 Observe the precept of the king, and in view of your oath to God, 3 be not hasty to withdraw from the king; do not join in with a base plot, for he does whatever he pleases, 4 because his word is sovereign, and who can say to him, "What are you doing?"

5 "He who keeps the commandment experiences no evil, and the wise man's heart knows times and judgments; 6 for there is a time and a judgment for everything."—Yet it is a great affliction for man 7* that he is ignorant of what is to come; for who will make known to him how it will be? 8 There is no man who is master of the breath of life so as to retain it, and none has mastery of the day of death. There is no exemption from the struggle, nor are the wicked saved by their wickedness. 9* All these things I considered and I applied my mind to every work that is done under the sun, while one man tyrannizes over another to his hurt.

The Problem of Retribution. 10† Meanwhile I saw wicked men approach and enter; and as they left the sacred place, they were praised in the city for what they had done. This also is vanity. 11 Because the sentence against evildoers is not promptly executed, therefore the hearts of men are filled with the desire to commit evil—12 because the sinner does evil a hundred times and survives. Though indeed I know that it shall be well with those who fear God, for their reverence toward him; 13† and that it shall not be well with the wicked man, and he shall not prolong his shadowy days, for his lack of reverence toward God.

14 This is a vanity which occurs on earth: there are just men treated as though they had done evil and wicked men treated as though they had done justly. This, too, I say is vanity. 15*† Therefore I commend mirth, because there is nothing good for man under the sun except eating and drinking and mirth: for this is the accompaniment of his toil during the limited days of the life which God gives him under the sun.

16* When I applied my heart to know wisdom and to observe what is done on earth, [17]* I recognized that man is unable to find out all God's work that is done under the sun, even though neither by day nor by night do his eyes find rest in sleep. However much man toils in searching, he does not find it out; and even if the wise man says that he knows, he is unable to find it out.

B. Man Does Not Know What Is To Come

CHAPTER 9

[1]† All this I have kept in mind and recognized: the just, the wise, and their deeds are in the hand of God. Love from hatred man cannot tell; both appear equally vain, [2]* in that there is the same lot for all, for the just and the wicked, for the good and the bad, for the clean and the unclean, for him who offers sacrifice and him who does not. As it is for the good man, so it is for the sinner; as it is for him who swears rashly, so it is for him who fears an oath. [3] Among all the things that happen under the sun, this is the worst, that things turn out the same for all. Hence the minds of men are filled with evil, and madness is in their hearts during life; and afterward they go to the dead.

[4] Indeed, for any among the living there is hope; a live dog is better off than a dead lion. [5]* For the living know that they are to die, but the dead no longer know anything. There is no further recompense for them, because all memory of them is lost. [6] For them, love and hatred and rivalry have long since perished. They will never again have part in anything that is done under the sun.

[7]* Go, eat your bread with joy and drink your wine with a merry heart, because it is now that God favors your works. [8] At all times let your garments be white, and spare not the perfume for your head. [9] Enjoy life with the wife whom you love, all the days of the fleeting life that is granted you under the sun. This is your lot in life, for the toil of your labors under the sun. [10] Anything you can turn your hand to, do with what power you have; for there will be no work, nor reason, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the nether world where you are going.

The Evil Time Not Known. [11] Again I saw under the sun that the race is not won by the swift, nor the battle by the valiant, nor a livelihood by the wise, nor riches by the shrewd, nor favor by the experts; for a time of calamity comes to all alike. [12]† Man no more knows his own time than fish taken in the fatal net, or birds trapped in the snare; like these the children of men are caught when the evil time falls suddenly upon them.

THE UNCERTAIN FUTURE AND THE SAGES

[13] On the other hand I saw this wise deed under the sun, which I thought sublime. [14] Against a small city with few men in it advanced a mighty king, who surrounded it and threw up great siegeworks about it. [15] But in the city lived a man who, though poor, was wise, and he delivered it through his wisdom. Yet no one remembered this poor man. [16]* Though I had said, "Wisdom is better than force," yet the wisdom of the poor man is despised and his words go unheeded.

[17] "The quiet words of the wise are better heeded than the shout of a ruler of fools"—!

[18] "A fly that dies can spoil the perfumer's ointment, and a single slip can ruin much that is good."

CHAPTER 10

[1] More weighty than wisdom or wealth is a little folly!
[2]† The wise man's understanding turns him to his right;
the fool's understanding turns him to his left.

[3] When the fool walks through the street, in his lack of understanding he calls everything foolish.

[4] Should the anger of the ruler burst upon you, forsake not your place; for mildness abates great offenses.

[5] I have seen under the sun another evil, like a mistake that proceeds from the ruler: [6] a fool put in lofty position while the rich sit in lowly places. [7] I have seen slaves on horseback, while princes walked on the ground like slaves.

[8] He who digs a pit may fall into it, and he who breaks through a wall may be bitten by a serpent.
[9]* He who moves stones may be hurt by them,

9, 1-10: These statement are based on a very imperfect concept of life beyond the grave. With Christian revelation about the future life came the only satisfactory solution of the problem which so perplexed the author.

9, 1: Love from hatred: divine favor or disfavor.

9, 12: His own time: the time of death or sudden disaster.

10, 2: It is doubtful whether the author is endorsing either direction; cf Prv 4, 25ff.

and he who chops wood is in danger from it.

10 If the iron becomes dull, though at first he made easy progress, he must increase his efforts; but the craftsman has the advantage of his skill.

11 If the serpent bites because it has not been charmed, then there is no advantage for the charmer.

12* Words from the wise man's mouth win favor,
but the fool's lips consume him.
13 The beginning of his words is folly,
and the end of his talk is utter madness;
14* yet the fool multiplies words.
Man knows not what is to come,
for who can tell him what is to come after him?
15† When will the fool be weary of his labor,
he who knows not the way to the city?

MAN DOES NOT KNOW WHAT EVIL WILL COME

16 Woe to you, O land, whose king was a servant,
and whose princes dine in the morning!
17 Blessed are you, O land, whose king is of noble birth, and whose princes dine at the right time
(for vigor and not in drinking bouts).
18 When hands are lazy, the rafters sag;
when hands are slack, the house leaks.
19 Bread and oil call forth merriment and wine makes the living glad,
but money answers for everything.
20 Even in your thoughts do not make light of the king,
nor in the privacy of your bedroom revile the rich.
Because the birds of the air may carry your voice,
a winged creature may tell what you say.

CHAPTER 11

1† Cast your bread upon the waters;
after a long time you may find it again.
2† Make seven or eight portions;
you know not what misfortune may come upon the earth.

MAN DOES NOT KNOW WHAT GOOD WILL COME

3 When the clouds are full,
they pour out rain upon the earth.
Whether a tree falls to the south or to the north,
wherever it falls, there shall it lie.
4 One who pays heed to the wind will not sow,
and one who watches the clouds will never reap.
5* Just as you know not how the breath of life
fashions the human frame in the mother's womb,
So you know not the work of God which he is accomplishing in the universe.
6 In the morning sow your seed,
and at evening let not your hand be idle:
For you know not which of the two will be successful,
or whether both alike will turn out well.

Poem on Youth and Old Age. 7 Light is sweet! and it is pleasant for the eyes to see the sun. 8 However many years a man may live, let him, as he enjoys them all, remember that the days of darkness will be many. All that is to come is vanity.

9 Rejoice, O young man, while you are young and let your heart be glad in the days of your youth.
Follow the ways of your heart,
the vision of your eyes;
Yet understand that as regards all this
God will bring you to judgment.
10† Ward off grief from your heart and put away trouble from your presence,
though the dawn of youth is fleeting.

all things are vanity!

Epilogue. 9 Besides being wise, Qoheleth taught the people knowledge, and weighed, scrutinized and arranged many proverbs. 10 Qoheleth sought to find pleasing sayings, and to write down true sayings with precision. 11† The sayings of the wise are like goads; like fixed spikes are the topics given by one collector. 12* As to more than these, my son, beware. Of the making of many books there is no end, and in much study there is weariness for the flesh.

its hidden qualities, whether good or bad.

The Song of

SONGS

The Song of Songs, meaning the greatest of songs (1, 1), contains in exquisite poetic form the sublime portrayal and praise of the mutual love of the Lord and his people. The Lord is the Lover and his people are the beloved. Describing this relationship in terms of human love, the author simply follows Israel's tradition. Isaiah (5, 1-7; 54, 4-8), Jeremiah (2, 2f.32), and Ezekiel (16; 23) all characterize the covenant between the Lord and Israel as a marriage. Hosea the prophet sees the idolatry of Israel in the adultery of Gomer (1—3). He also represents the Lord speaking to Israel's heart (2, 16) and changing her into a new spiritual people, purified by the Babylonian captivity and betrothed anew to her divine Lover "in justice and uprightness, in love and mercy" (2, 21).

The author of the Song, using the same literary figure, paints a beautiful picture of the ideal Israel, the chosen people of the Old and New Testaments, whom the Lord led by degrees to an exalted spiritual union with himself in the bond of perfect love. When the Song is thus interpreted there is no reason for surprise at the tone of the poem, which employs in its descriptions the courtship and marriage customs of the author's time. Moreover, the poem is not an allegory in which each remark, e. g., in the dialogue of the lovers, has a higher meaning. It is a parable in which the true meaning of mutual love comes from the poem as a whole.

While the Song is thus commonly understood by most Catholic scholars, it is also possible to see in it an inspired portrayal of ideal human love. Here we would have from God a description of the sacredness and the depth of married union.

Although the poem is attributed to Solomon in the traditional title (1, 1), the language and style of the work, among other considerations, point to a time after the end of the Babylonian Exile (538 B.C.) as that in which an unknown poet composed this masterpiece. The structure of the Song is difficult to analyze; here it is regarded as a lyric dialogue, with dramatic movement and interest.

The use of marriage as a symbol, characteristic of the Song, is found extensively also in the New Testament (Mt 9, 15; 25, 1-13; Jn 3, 29; 2 Cor 11, 2; Eph 5, 23-32; Rv 19, 7ff; 21, 9ff). In Christian tradition, the Song has been interpreted in terms of the union between Christ and the Church and, particularly by St. Bernard, of the union between Christ and the individual soul. Throughout the liturgy, especially in the Little Office, there is a consistent application of the Song of Songs to the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Love's Desires

[2B*]† Let him kiss me with kisses of his mouth!
More delightful is your love than wine!
[3] Your name spoken is a spreading perfume—
that is why the maidens love you.
[4*] Draw me!—
[D] We will follow you eagerly!
[B] Bring me, O king, to your chambers.
[D] With you we rejoice and exult,
we extol your love; it is beyond wine:
how rightly you are loved!

Love's Boast

[5B]† I am as dark—but lovely,
O daughters of Jerusalem—
As the tents of Kedar,
as the curtains of Salma.

* 1, 2ff: 4, 10. 4: 4, 10.

† 1, 1: This title is actually the first verse of chapter 1.

1, 2ff: The marginal letters indicate the speaker of the verses: B—Bride; D—Daughters of Jerusalem; G—Bridegroom. In vv 2-7 the bride and the daughters address the bridegroom who appears here as a king, but more often in the poem as a shepherd. King and shepherd are familiar figures of the Lord in the Sacred Scriptures. Cf Ps 23, 1; Is 40, 11; Jn 10, 1-16.

1, 5: Daughters of Jerusalem: the chorus whom the bride addresses and who ask her questions (5, 9; 6, 1), thus developing action within the poem. Kedar: a Syrian desert region whose name suggests blackness; tents were often made of black goat hair. Curtains: tent coverings of Salma, a region close to Kedar.

6† Do not stare at me because I am swarthy,
because the sun has burned me.
My brothers have been angry with me;
they charged me with the care of the vineyards:
my own vineyard I have not cared for.

Love's Inquiry

7B† Tell me, you whom my heart loves,
where you pasture your flock,
where you give them rest at midday,
Lest I be found wandering
after the flocks of your companions.

8G If you do not know,
O most beautiful among women,
Follow the tracks of the flock and pasture the young ones
near the shepherds' camps.

Love's Vision

9G† To the steeds of Pharaoh's chariots would I liken you, my beloved:
10 Your cheeks lovely in pendants,
your neck in jewels.
11 We will make pendants of gold for you,
and silver ornaments.

Love's Union

12B† For the king's banquet
my nard gives forth its fragrance.
13† My lover is for me a sachet of myrrh
to rest in my bosom.
14† My lover is for me a cluster of henna
from the vineyards of Engedi.

15G*† Ah, you are beautiful, my beloved,
ah, you are beautiful; your eyes are doves!

16B† Ah, you are beautiful, my lover—yes,
you are lovely.
Our couch, too, is verdant;
17 the beams of our house are cedars,
our rafters, cypresses.

CHAPTER 2

1† I am a flower of Sharon,
a lily of the valley.

2G As a lily among thorns,
so is my beloved among women.
3B As an apple tree among the trees of the woods,
so is my lover among men.

I delight to rest in his shadow,
and his fruit is sweet to my mouth.
4*† He brings me into the banquet hall
and his emblem over me is love.
5* Strengthen me with raisin cakes,
refresh me with apples,
for I am faint with love.
6* His left hand is under my head
and his right arm embraces me.
7*† I adjure you, daughters of Jerusalem,
by the gazelles and hinds of the field,
Do not arouse, do not stir up love
before its own time.

A Tryst in the Spring

8B† Hark! my lover— here he comes springing across the mountains, leaping across the hills.
9 My lover is like a gazelle
or a young stag.
Here he stands behind our wall,
gazing through the windows,
peering through the lattices.
10 My lover speaks; he says to me,
"Arise, my beloved, my beautiful one,
and come!
11 "For see, the winter is past,
the rains are over and gone.
12 The flowers appear on the earth,
the time of pruning the vines has come,
and the song of the dove is heard in our land.
13 The fig tree puts forth its figs,
and the vines, in bloom, give forth fragrance.

15: 4, 1.7.
2, 4: 1, 4.
5: 5, 8.
6: 8, 3.
7: 3, 5; 8, 4.

1, 6: Swarthy: tanned by the sun from working in her brothers' vineyards. My own vineyard: the bride herself; cf Is 5, 1-7, where Israel is designated as the vineyard and the Lord is the Lover.

1, 7: Here and elsewhere in the Song (3, 1; 5, 8; 6, 1), the bride expresses her desire to be in the company of her lover. These verses point to a certain tension in the poem. Only at the end (8, 5ff) does mutual possession of the lovers become final.

1, 9ff: The bridegroom compares the girl's beauty to the rich adornment of the royal chariot of Pharaoh.

1, 12: Nard: a precious perfume, a figure of the bride, cf 4, 14.

1, 13: Myrrh: produced from aromatic resin of balsam or roses.

1, 14: Henna: a plant which bears white scented flowers.

1, 15: Doves: suggesting innocence and charm.

1, 16f: Though the meeting place of the lovers is but a shepherd's hut of green branches, it becomes a palace with beams of cedar and rafters of cypress when adorned with their love.

2, 1: Flower of Sharon: probably the narcissus, which grows in the fertile Plain of Sharon lying between Mount Carmel and Jaffa on the Mediterranean coast.

2, 4ff: The banquet hall: the sweet things of the table, the embrace of the bride and bridegroom, express the delicacy of their affection and the intimacy of their love.

2, 7: By the gazelles and hinds: the swiftness of these animals and the luster and soft expression of their eyes are suggestive of love; cf Prv 5, 19.

2, 8ff: In this sudden change of scene, the bride pictures her lover hastening toward her dwelling until his voice is heard bidding her come to him.

Arise, my beloved, my beautiful one,
and come!

14† "O my dove in the clefts of the rock,
in the secret recesses of the cliff,
Let me see you,
let me hear your voice,
For your voice is sweet,
and you are lovely."

15B† Catch us the foxes, the little foxes that damage the vineyards; for our vineyards are in bloom!

16* My lover belongs to me and I to him;
he browses among the lilies.

17*† Until the day breathes cool and the shadows lengthen,
roam, my lover,
Like a gazelle or a young stag
upon the mountains of Bether.

CHAPTER 3

Loss and Discovery

1B*† On my bed at night I sought him whom my heart loves—
I sought him but I did not find him.

2 I will rise then and go about the city;
in the streets and crossings I will seek
Him whom my heart loves.
I sought him but I did not find him.

3 The watchmen came upon me
as they made their rounds of the
city:
Have you seen him whom my heart loves?

4* I had hardly left them when I found him whom my heart loves.
I took hold of him and would not let him go till I should bring him to the home
of my mother,
to the room of my parent.

5* I adjure you, daughters of Jerusalem,
by the gazelles and hinds of the field,
Do not arouse, do not stir up love
before its own time.

Regal State of the Bridegroom

6D*† What is this coming up from the
desert,
like a column of smoke Laden with myrrh, with frankincense,
and with the perfume of every exotic dust?

7 Ah, it is the litter of Solomon;
sixty valiant men surround it,
of the valiant men of Israel:

8 All of them expert with the sword,
skilled in battle,
Each with his sword at his side against danger in the watches of the night.

9 King Solomon made himself a carriage
of wood from Lebanon.

10 He made its columns of silver,
its roof of gold,
Its seat of purple cloth,
its framework inlaid with ivory.

11 Daughters of Jerusalem, come forth and look upon King Solomon
In the crown with which his mother has crowned him
on the day of his marriage,
on the day of the joy of his heart.

CHAPTER 4

The Charms of the Beloved

1G* Ah, you are beautiful, my beloved,
ah, you are beautiful!
Your eyes are doves
behind your veil.
Your hair is like a flock of goats
streaming down the mountains of Gilead.

2† Your teeth are like a flock of ewes
to be shorn,
which come up from the washing,
All of them big with twins,
none of them thin and barren.

3† Your lips are like a scarlet strand;
your mouth is lovely.
Your cheek is like a half-pomegranate
behind your veil.

4*† Your neck is like David's tower
girt with battlements;
A thousand bucklers hang upon it,
all the shields of valiant men.

5* Your breast are like twin fawns,
the young of a gazelle
that browse among the lilies.

16: 6, 3; 7, 10.
17: 4, 6; 8, 14.
3, 1ff: 5, 2ff.
4: 8, 2.
5: 2, 7; 8, 4.
6: 6, 10; 8, 5.
4, 1: 1, 15.
1ff: 6, 5ff.
4: 7, 5.
5: 7, 4.

2, 14: The bride is addressed as though she were a dove in a mountain fastness out of sight and reach.

2, 15: A snatch of song in answer to the request of v 14; cf 8, 13f. Foxes: all who threaten to disturb the security of love symbolized by the vineyard; cf v 16.

2, 17: Breathes cool: in the evening when the sun is going down. Cf Gn 3, 8. Bether: a very obscure word; some interpret it in the sense of ruggedness; others, of spices; still others, of sacrifice (Gn 15, 10).

3, 1ff: See the parallel in 5, 2-8.

3, 6ff: The lover is portrayed as King Solomon, escorted by sixty armed men, coming in royal procession to meet his bride.

4, 2: Teeth: praised for whiteness and regularity.

4, 3: Pomegranate: a fruit somewhat like an orange, with a firm skin and deep red color. The girl's cheek is compared, in roundness and tint, to a half-pomegranate.

4, 4: The ornaments about her neck are compared to the trophies on the city walls. Cf 1 Kgs 10, 10; 14, 26ff; Ez 27, 10.

6*† Until the day breathes cool and the
shadows lengthen,
I will go to the mountain of myrrh,
to the hill of incense.
7† You are all-beautiful, my beloved,
and there is no blemish in you.

8† Come from Lebanon, my bride, come from Lebanon, come!
Descend from the top of Amana,
from the top of Senir and Hermon,
From the haunts of lions,
from the leopards' mountains.
9*† You have ravished my heart, my sister, my bride;
you have ravished my heart with
one glance of your eyes,
with one bead of your necklace.
10* How beautiful is your love, my sister, my bride,
how much more delightful is your love than wine,
and the fragrance of your ointments than all spices!
11† Your lips drip honey, my bride, sweetmeats and milk are under your tongue;
And the fragrance of your garments
is the fragrance of Lebanon.

The Lover and His Garden

12G*† You are an enclosed garden, my
sister, my bride,
an enclosed garden, a fountain
sealed.
13 You are a park that puts forth pomegranates,
with all choice fruits;
14† Nard and saffron, calamus and cinnamon,
with all kinds of incense;
Myrrh and aloes,
with all the finest spices.
15 You are a garden fountain, a well
of water
flowing fresh from Lebanon.
16† Arise, north wind! Come, south wind!
blow upon my garden
that its perfumes may spread abroad.
B Let my lover come to his garden
and eat its choice fruits.

CHAPTER 5

1G*† I have come to my garden, my sister, my bride;
I gather my myrrh and my spices,
I eat my honey and my sweetmeats,
I drink my wine and my milk.

D Eat, friends; drink! Drink freely of love!

A Fruitless Search

2B*† I was sleeping, but my heart kept vigil;
I heard my lover knocking:
"Open to me, my sister, my beloved,
my dove, my perfect one!
For my head is wet with dew,
my locks with the moisture of the night."
3† I have taken off my robe,
am I then to put it on?
I have bathed my feet,
am I then to soil them?

4 My lover put his hand through the opening;
my heart trembled within me,
and I grew faint when he spoke.
5 I rose to open to my lover,
with my hands dripping myrrh:
With my fingers dripping choice
myrrh
upon the fittings of the lock.
6*† I opened to my lover—
but my lover had departed, gone.
I sought him but I did not find
him;
I called to him but he did not answer me.

7*† The watchmen came upon me
as they made their rounds of the
city;
They struck me, and wounded me,
and took my mantle from me,
the guardians of the walls.
8* I adjure you, daughters of Jerusalem,
if you find my lover—
What shall you tell him?—
that I am faint with love.

6: 2, 17. 2ff: 3, 1f.
9: 6, 5. 6: 3, 1.
10: 1, 2f. 7: 3, 3.
12: 6, 2.11. 8: 2, 5.
5, 1: 6, 2.

4, 6: Mountain of myrrh. . . hill of incense: spoken figuratively of the bride; cf 8, 14.

4, 7: Cf St. Paul's description of the Church in Eph 5, 27. This verse is also applied to Our Lady, especially in the Liturgy of the feast of the Immaculate Conception.

4, 8: Amana . . . Senir and Hermon: these rugged heights symbolize obstacles that would separate the lovers; cf 2, 14.

4, 9: Sister: a term of endearment; it forms part of the conventional language of love used in this canticle.

4, 11: Honey: sweet words. Cf Prv 5, 3.

4, 12: Enclosed garden . . . fountain sealed: reserved for the bridegroom alone. The bride's fidelity is implied. Cf Prv 5, 15-19.

4, 14: These plants are all known for their sweet scent.

4, 16: The last two lines of the verse are spoken by the girl, inviting her lover to herself, the garden.

5, 1: Eat, friends; drink!: the lovers are encouraged to enjoy the delights of their love, symbol of Christ's union with the Church.

5, 2-8: A trial similar to that in 3, 1ff.

5, 3f: The bride's hesitation is due, not to levity, but to strong emotion.

5, 6: The disappearance of the lover seems to be a deliberate trial and test inflicted on the girl.

5, 7: The watchmen do not know the reason for the girl's appearance in the city streets; cf 3, 2ff.

The Charms of the Lost Lover

9D How does your lover differ from any other,
O most beautiful among women?
How does your lover differ from any other,
that you adjure us so?

10B† My lover is radiant and ruddy;
he stands out among thousands.
11 His head is pure gold;
his locks are palm fronds,
black as the raven.
12 His eyes are like doves
beside running waters,
His teeth would seem bathed in milk,
and are set like jewels.
13 His cheeks are like beds of spice
with ripening aromatic herbs.
His lips are red blossoms;
they drip choice myrrh.

14 His arms are rods of gold adorned with chrysolites.
His body is a work of ivory covered with sapphires.
15 His legs are columns of marble resting on golden bases.
His stature is like the trees on Lebanon,
imposing as the cedars.
16 His mouth is sweetness itself;
he is all delight.
Such is my lover, and such my friend,
O daughters of Jerusalem.

CHAPTER 6

Discovery

1D† Where has your lover gone,
O most beautiful among women?
Where has your lover gone
that we may seek him with you?

2B*† My lover has come down to his garden,
to the beds of spice,
To browse in the garden
and to gather lilies.
3* My lover belongs to me and I to him;
he browses among the lilies.

The Charms of the Beloved

4C† You are as beautiful as Tirzah, my beloved,
as lovely as Jerusalem,
as awe-inspiring as bannered troops.
5* Turn your eyes from me,
for they torment me.
Your hair is like a flock of goats
streaming down from Gilead.
6* Your teeth are like a flock of ewes
which come up from the washing,
All of them big with twins,
none of them thin and barren.
7 Your cheek is like a half-pomegranate
behind your veil.

8 There are sixty queens, eighty concubines,
and maidens without number—9 One alone is my dove, my perfect one,
her mother's chosen,
the dear one of her parent.
The daughters saw her and declared her fortunate,
the queens and concubines, and they sang her praises;

10D* Who is this that comes forth like the dawn,
as beautiful as the moon, as resplendent as the sun,
as awe-inspiring as bannered troops?

Love's Meeting

11B* I came down to the nut garden
to look at the fresh growth of the valley,
To see if the vines were in bloom.
if the pomegranates had blossomed.
12† Before I knew it, my heart had made me
the blessed one of my kinswomen.

CHAPTER 7

The Beauty of the Bride

1D† Turn, turn, O Shulammite, turn, turn, that we may look at you!

---

* 6, 2: 4, 12; 5, 1. 3: 2, 16; 7, 11. 5: 4, 9. 6f: 4, 1ff. 10: 3, 6; 8, 5. 11: 4, 12ff; 7, 13.

† 5, 10f: In answer to the question of v 9, the girl sings her lover's praises (vv 10-16). Gold: indicates how precious the lover is. Palm fronds: his thick, luxuriant growth of hair.

6, 1: The daughters of Jerusalem are won by this description of the lover and offer their aid in seeking him.

6, 2f: Determined to share her lover with no one, the girl refuses the aid offered by the daughters in seeking him. She implies that she had never really lost him, for he has come down to his garden.

6, 4-9: The lover again celebrates her beauty. Tirzah: probably meaning "pleasant"; it was the early capital of the northern kingdom of Israel (1 Kgs 16).

6, 12: The text is obscure in Hebrew and in the ancient versions. The Vulgate reads: "I did not know; my soul disturbed me because of the chariots of Aminadab."

7, 1: Shulammite: so called either because the girl is considered to be from Shulam in the plain of Esdraelon (cf 1 Kgs 1, 3) or because the name may mean "the peaceful one," and thus recall the name of Solomon. As at the dance of the two companies: the meaning is uncertain. The question in this verse could be construed as a refusal to dance; more probably, however, the girl accedes, as the following verses suggest.

B Why would you look at the Shulammite
as at the dance of the two companies?

2D† How beautiful are your feet in sandals,
O prince's daughter!
Your rounded thighs are like jewels,
the handiwork of an artist.
3 Your navel is a round bowl
that should never lack for mixed wine.
Your body is a heap of wheat encircled with lilies.
4* Your breasts are like twin fawns,
the young of a gazelle.
5*† Your neck is like a tower of ivory.
Your eyes are like the pools in Heshbon
by the gate of Bath-rabbim.
Your nose is like the tower on Lebanon
that looks toward Damascus.
6 You head rises like Carmel;
your hair is like draperies of purple;
a king is held captive in its tresses.

Love's Desires

7G How beautiful you are, how pleasing,
my love, my delight!
8† Your very figure is like a palm tree,
your breasts are like clusters.
9 I said: I will climb the palm tree,
I will take hold of its branches.
Now let your breasts be like clusters of the vine
and the fragrance of your breath like apples, 10† And your mouth like an excellent wine—

Love's Union

B that flows smoothly for my lover, spreading over the lips and the teeth.
11*† I belong to my lover
and for me he yearns.
12 Come, my lover, let us go forth to the fields and spend the night among the villages.
13* Let us go early to the vineyards, and see if the vines are in bloom,
If the buds have opened,
if the pomegranates have blossomed;
There will I give you my love.
14† The mandrakes give forth fragrance,
and at our doors are all choice fruits;
Both fresh and mellowed fruits, my lover,
I have kept in store for you.

CHAPTER 8

1 Oh, that you were my brother,
nursed at my mother's breasts!
If I met you out of doors, I would kiss you and none would taunt me.
2* I would lead you, bring you in to the home of my mother.
There you would teach me to give you spiced wine to drink and pomegranate juice.

3* His left hand is under my head
and his right arm embraces me.
4* I adjure you, daughters of Jerusalem,
by the gazelles and hinds of the field,
Do not arouse, do not stir up love,
before its own time.

Homecoming

5D*† Who is this coming up from the desert, leaning upon her lover?

G Under the apple tree I awakened you;
it was there that your mother conceived you,
it was there that your parent conceived.

True Love

6B† Set me as a seal on your heart,
as a seal on your arm;

---

* 7, 4: 4, 5.
5: 4, 4.
11: 2, 16; 6, 3.
13: 6, 11.
8, 2: 3, 4.
3: 2, 6.
4: 2, 7; 3, 5.
5: 3, 6; 6, 10.

† 7, 2-6: A flattering description of the girl's charms. Rounded . . . jewels: the meaning of these Hebrew words is not certain. Wine and wheat are symbolic of fertility; they are here associated with parts of the body which have a close relation to fruitfulness.

7, 5: The comparison emphasizes the stateliness and whiteness of the neck, and the limpidity of the eyes. Bath-rabbim: a proper name which occurs only here; there was a city of Rabbah northeast of Heshbon in Transjordan. Cf Jer 49, 3.

7, 8f: Palm tree: a figure of stateliness. The bridegroom is eager to enjoy the possession of his bride.

7, 10: The bride delicately turns his compliment into an expression of the love and tenderness she feels for him.

7, 11-14: The girl's answer assures him of her affection and invites him to return with her to the rural delights which are associated with their love and which recall the meeting described in 6, 11f.

7, 14: Mandrakes: herbs believed to have power to arouse love and promote fertility; cf Gn 30, 14ff.

8, 5: The lovers are pictured walking homeward, enjoying the fulfillment of the desire which the girl expressed in vv 1f. The groom speaks of their first meeting.

8, 6f: Seal: this could be worn bound to the arm, as here, or suspended at the neck, or as a ring (Jer 22, 24). It was used for identification and signatures. Stern . . . relentless in human experience, death and the nether world are inevitable, unrelenting; in the end they always triumph. Love, which is just as certain of its victory, matches its strength against the natural enemies of life; waters cannot extinguish it nor floods carry it away. It is more priceless than all riches.

For stern as death is love,
relentless as the nether world is devotion;
its flames are a blazing fire.
7 Deep waters cannot quench love,
nor floods sweep it away.
Were one to offer all he owns to purchase love,
he would be roundly mocked.

Chastity and Its Welcome

8† "Our sister is little and she has no breasts as yet.
What shall we do for our sister
when her courtship begins?
9 If she is a wall,
we will build upon it a silver parapet;
If she is a door,
we will reinforce it with a cedar plank."

10 I am a wall,
and my breasts are like towers.
So now in his eyes I have become one to be welcomed.

The Bride and Her Dowry

11B† Solomon had a vineyard at Baal-hamon;
he gave over the vineyard to caretakers.
For its fruit one would have to pay a thousand silver pieces.
12 My vineyard is at my own disposal;
the thousand pieces are for you,
O Solomon,
and two hundred for the caretakers of its fruit.

Life Together

13G† O garden-dweller,
my friends are listening for your voice,
let me hear it!

14B* Be swift, my lover,
like a gazelle or a young stag
on the mountains of spices!

* 14: 2, 9.17; 4, 6.

† 8, 8ff: The bride affirms her chastity. In 8, 9 she quotes the course of action which her elder brothers had decided on. While she is yet immature, they will shelter her in view of eventual marriage. If she is virtuous, she will be honored; if she is unchaste, she will be kept under strict vigilance. In reply to this she proclaims her virtue and boasts of having found welcome from her lover.

8, 11f: These enigmatic verses have been variously interpreted. In v 11 the girl alludes to a vineyard of great value which is compared to her own self in v 12. Her enormous dowry, a thousand silver pieces, is in keeping with her intrinsic worth. She has been the generous lover, giving herself and a dowry to her lover, referred to as Solomon, and also smaller gifts to her brothers, the caretakers (cf vv 8ff).

8, 13f: As in 2, 14f, her lover asks for a word or a song and she replies in words similar to those found in 2, 17.

The Book of

WISDOM

The Book of Wisdom was written about a hundred years before the coming of Christ. Its author, whose name is not known to us, was a member of the Jewish community at Alexandria, in Egypt. He wrote in Greek, in a style patterned on that of Hebrew verse. At times he speaks in the person of Solomon, placing his teachings on the lips of the wise king of Hebrew tradition in order to emphasize their value. His profound knowledge of the earlier Old Testament writings is reflected in almost every line of the book, and marks him, like Ben Sira, as an outstanding representative of religious devotion and learning among the sages of postexilic Judaism.

The primary purpose of the sacred author was the edification of his co-religionists in a time when they had experienced suffering and oppression, in part at least at the hands of apostate fellow Jews. To convey his message he made use of the most popular religious themes of his time, namely the splendor and worth of divine wisdom (6, 22—11, 1), the glorious events of the Exodus (11, 2-16; 12, 23-27; 15, 18—19, 22), God's mercy (11, 17—12, 22), the folly of idolatry (13, 1—15, 17), and the manner in which God's justice is vindicated in rewarding or punishing the individual soul (1, 1—6, 21). The first ten chapters especially form a preparation for the fuller teachings of Christ and his Church. Many passages from this section of the book, notably 3, 1-8, are used by the Church in her liturgy.

The principal divisions of the Book of Wisdom are:

I: Reward of Justice (1, 1—6, 21)
II: Praise of Wisdom by Solomon (6, 22—11, 1)
III: Special Providence of God during the Exodus (11, 2-16; 12, 23-27; 15, 18—19, 22) with digressions on God's mercy (11, 17—12, 22) and on the folly and shame of idolatry (13, 1—15, 17)

I: THE REWARD OF JUSTICE

CHAPTER 1

Exhortation to Justice, the Key to Life

1*† Love justice, you who judge the earth;
think of the LORD in goodness,
and seek him in integrity of heart;
2* Because he is found by those who test him not,
and he manifests himself to those who do not disbelieve him.
3* For perverse counsels separate a man from God,
and his power, put to the proof, rebukes the foolhardy;
4* Because into a soul that plots evil wisdom enters not,
nor dwells she in a body under debt of sin.
5*† For the holy spirit of discipline flees deceit
and withdraws from senseless counsels;
and when injustice occurs it is rebuked.
6* For wisdom is a kindly spirit,
yet she acquits not the blasphemer of his guilty lips;
Because God is the witness of his inmost self and the sure observer of his heart and the listener to his tongue.
7*† For the spirit of the LORD fills the world,
is all-embracing, and knows what man says.
8* Therefore no one who utters wicked things can go unnoticed, nor will chastising condemnation pass him by.
9 For the devices of the wicked man shall be scrutinized,

1, 1: 1 Chr 29, 17; Ps 2, 10; Is 26, 9.
1f: Sir 1, 25.
2: 1 Chr 28, 9.
3: Is 59, 2.
4: Sir 15, 7f; Rom 7, 14.
5: Is 63, 10.
6: Jer 17, 10.
6f: Jer 23, 24f.
7: 12, 1.
8: Prv 19, 5.

† 1, 1: Justice: not merely the cardinal virtue of that name (cf 8, 7), but the universal moral quality which is the application of Wisdom to moral conduct.

1, 5: Discipline: here and elsewhere, another name for Wisdom; injustice: the opposite of the virtue in 1, 1.

1, 7: This verse is applied to the Holy Spirit in the liturgy at Pentecost.

and the sound of his words shall reach the LORD,
for the chastisement of his trans-
gressions;
10* Because a jealous ear hearkens to everything,
and discordant grumblings are no
secret.
11†† Therefore guard against profitless
grumbling,
and from calumny withhold your tongues;
For a stealthy utterance does not go unpunished,
and a lying mouth slays the soul.
12 Court not death by your erring way
of life,
nor draw to yourselves destruction by the works of your hands.
13* Because God did not make death, nor does he rejoice in the destruction of the living.
14 For he fashioned all things that they might have being;
and the creatures of the world are wholesome,
And there is not a destructive drug among them
nor any domain of the nether world on earth,
15* For justice is undying.

The Wicked Reject Immortality and Justice Alike

16* It was the wicked who with hands
and words invited death, considered it a friend, and pined
for it,
and made a covenant with it,
Because they deserve to be in its possession,

CHAPTER 2

1* they who said among themselves,
thinking not aright:
"Brief and troublous is our lifetime;
neither is there any remedy for man's dying,
nor is anyone known to have come back from the nether world.
2 For haphazard were we born,
and hereafter we shall be as though we had not been;
Because the breath in our nostrils is a smoke
and reason is a spark at the beating of our hearts,
3* And when this is quenched, our body will be ashes
and our spirit will be poured abroad like unresisting air.
4 Even our name will be forgotten in
time,
and no one will recall our deeds.
So our life will pass away like the traces of a cloud,
and will be dispersed like a mist Pursued by the sun's rays
and overpowered by its heat.
5* For our lifetime is the passing of a
shadow;
and our dying cannot be deferred because it is fixed with a seal; and no one returns.
6* Come, therefore, let us enjoy the good things that are real,
and use the freshness of creation
avidly.
7 Let us have our fill of costly wine
and perfumes,
and let no springtime blossom
pass us by;
8 let us crown ourselves with rosebuds ere they wither.
9*† Let no meadow be free from our wantonness;
everywhere let us leave tokens of
our rejoicing,
for this our portion is, and this our
lot.
10* Let us oppress the needy just man;
let us neither spare the widow nor revere the old man for his hair grown white with time.
11 But let our strength be our norm of
justice;
for weakness proves itself useless.
12*† Let us beset the just one, because he is obnoxious to us;
he sets himself against our doings, Reproaches us for transgressions of the law
and charges us with violations of our training.
13* He professes to have knowledge of God
and styles himself a child of the
LORD.
14* To us he is the censure of our thoughts;
merely to see him is a hardship
for us, 15 Because his life is not like other men's,
and different are his ways.
16* He judges us debased;

1, 11: Calumny: speech against God and his providence is meant.

2, 9: Let no meadow . . . wantonness: the extant Greek Mss have "Let none of us be without part in our wanton doings." Most Latin Mss have both forms of this line.

2, 12-20: Often applied to the Passion of our Lord; many have understood these verses as a direct prophecy. Cf Mt 27, 41-44.

2, 12: Law: the law of Moses; training has the same meaning.

he holds aloof from our paths as from things impure.
He calls blest the destiny of the just
and boasts that God is his Father.
17* Let us see whether his words be true;
let us find out what will happen
to him.
18* For if the just one be the son of God,
he will defend him
and deliver him from the hand of his foes.
19 With revilement and torture let us put him to the test
that we may have proof of his gentleness
and try his patience.
20* Let us condemn him to a shameful
death;
for according to his own words,
God will take care of him."
21* These were their thoughts, but they erred;
for their wickedness blinded
them,
22* And they knew not the hidden counsels of God;
neither did they count on a recompense of holiness
nor discern the innocent souls' reward.
23* For God formed man to be imperishable;
the image of his own nature he made him.
24* But by the envy of the devil, death
entered the world,
and they who are in his possession experience it.

CHAPTER 3

The Hidden Counsels of God:

A. On Suffering

1*† But the souls of the just are in the hand of God,
and no torment shall touch them.
2 They seemed, in the view of the foolish, to be dead;
and their passing away was thought an affliction
3* and their going forth from us, utter destruction.
But they are in peace.
4 For if before men, indeed, they be
punished,
yet is their hope full of immortality;
5* Chastised a little, they shall be greatly blessed,
because God tried them
and found them worthy of himself.
6*† As gold in the furnace, he proved
them,
and as sacrificial offerings he took them to himself.
7*† In the time of their visitation they shall shine,
and shall dart about as sparks
through stubble;
8* They shall judge nations and rule
over peoples,
and the Lord shall be their King
forever.
9* Those who trust in him shall understand truth,
and the faithful shall abide with him in love:
Because grace and mercy are with his holy ones,
and his care is with the elect.
10† But the wicked shall receive a punishment to match their
thoughts,
since they neglected justice and forsook the Lord.
11* For he who despises wisdom and instruction is doomed.
Vain is their hope, fruitless are their labors,
and worthless are their works.
12* Their wives are foolish and their children wicked;
accursed is their brood.

B. On Childlessness

13† Yes, blessed is she who, childless and undefiled,
knew not transgression of the marriage bed;
she shall bear fruit at the visitation of souls.
14*† So also the eunuch whose hand wrought no misdeed,
who held no wicked thoughts
against the Lord—
For he shall be given fidelity's choice reward

11f: Sir 41, 8.
12: Dt 28, 18ff.
14: Is 56, 2-5.

† 3, 1-8: Verses frequently applied to the martyrs.

3, 6: Offerings: the image is that of the holocaust, in which the victim is completely consumed by fire.

3, 7: Visitation: God's loving judgment of those who have been faithful to him; the same word is used in 14, 11 for the punishment of the wicked at God's final judgment. Cf also 3, 13.

3, 10: To match their thoughts: a fate as empty as that which they describe; cf 2, 1-5.

3, 13: Visitation of souls: that is, the last judgment. Cf 3, 7-9.

3, 14: Fidelity's choice reward: cf Is 56, 1-8. More gratifying: better than sons and daughters; cf Is 56, 5.

and a more gratifying heritage in the LORD'S temple.
15* For the fruit of noble struggles is a glorious one;
and unfailing is the root of understanding.
16* But the children of adulterers will remain without issue,
and the progeny of an unlawful bed will disappear.
17 For should they attain long life, they will be held in no esteem, and dishonored will their old age
be at last;
18 While should they die abruptly, they have no hope
nor comfort in the day of scrutiny; 19* for dire is the end of the wicked generation.

CHAPTER 4

1*† Better is childlessness with virtue;
for immortal is its memory:
because both by God is it acknowledged, and by men.
2 When it is present men imitate it,
and they long for it when it is gone;
And forever it marches crowned in triumph, victorious in unsullied deeds of valor.
3* But the numerous progeny of the wicked shall be of no avail;
their spurious offshoots shall not strike deep root
nor take firm hold.
4* For even though their branches
flourish for a time,
they are unsteady and shall be rocked by the wind
and, by the violence of the winds,
uprooted;
5 Their twigs shall be broken off untimely,
and their fruit be useless, unripe
for eating,
and fit for nothing.
6 For children born of lawless unions give evidence of the wickedness of their parents, when they are examined.

C. ON EARLY DEATH

7* But the just man, though he die
early, shall be at rest.
8* For the age that is honorable comes not with the passing of time, nor can it be measured in terms
of years.
9 Rather, understanding is the hoary
crown for men,
and an unsullied life, the attainment of old age.
10*† He who pleased God was loved;
he who lived among sinners was transported—11* Snatched away, lest wickedness pervert his mind
or deceit beguile his soul;
12* For the witchery of paltry things obscures what is right and the whirl of desire transforms
the innocent mind.
13 Having become perfect in a short while, he reached the fullness of a long career;
14* for his soul was pleasing to the
LORD,
therefore he sped him out of the midst of wickedness.
But the people saw and did not understand,
nor did they take this into account.†
16* Yes, the just man dead condemns
the sinful who live,
and youth swiftly completed condemns the many years of the wicked man grown old.
17 For they see the death of the wise
man
and do not understand what the LORD intended for him,
or why he made him secure.
18* They see, and hold him in contempt;
but the LORD laughs them to
scorn.
19* And they shall afterward become dishonored corpses
and an unceasing mockery
among the dead.
For he shall strike them down speechless and prostrate and rock them to their foundations;
They shall be utterly laid waste and shall be in grief
and their memory shall perish.

The Final Judgment of the Wicked

20† Fearful shall they come, at the counting up of their sins,
and their lawless deeds
shall convict them to their face.

19: Neh 1, 10 LXX; Ps 18, 8; Is 14, 19; Jer 23, 39f; 2 Mc 3, 29.

4, 1: The Latin form of this line, "Oh, how fair is the chaste generation in its glory!" is a later adaptation which is applied in the liturgy to the splendor of virginity.

4, 10f: There are allusions here to Enoch (Gn 5, 21-24), who was young by patriarchal standards, and to Lot (Gn 19, 10f; 2 Pt 2, 7f). Cf also is 57, 1f.

4, 15: The verse here omitted repeats the last two lines of 3, 9.

4, 20: Counting up: the last judgment.

CHAPTER 5

1* Then shall the just one with great assurance confront his oppressors who set at nought his labors.
2 Seeing this, they shall be shaken with dreadful fear,
and amazed at the unlooked-for salvation.
3 They shall say among themselves, rueful
and groaning through anguish of spirit:
"This is he whom once we held as a laughingstock and as a type for mockery, 4 fools that we were!
His life we accounted madness,
and his death dishonored.
5* See how he is accounted among the sons of God;
how his lot is with the saints!
6* We, then, have strayed from the way of truth,
and the light of justice did not shine for us,
and the sun did not rise for us.
7 We had our fill of the ways of mischief and of ruin;
we journeyed through impassable deserts,
but the way of the LORD we knew not.
8* What did our pride avail us?
What have wealth and its boastfulness afforded us?
9* All of them passed like a shadow
and like a fleeting rumor; 10 Like a ship traversing the heaving water,
of which, when it has passed, no trace can be found,
no path of its keel in the waves.
11 Or like a bird flying through the air;
no evidence of its course is to be found—
But the fluid air, lashed by the beat of pinions,
and cleft by the rushing force
Of speeding wings, is traversed:
and afterward no mark of passage can be found in it.
12 Or as, when an arrow has been shot at a mark,
the parted air straightway flows together again
so that none discerns the way it went through—13* Even so we, once born, abruptly came to nought and held no sign of virtue to display,
but were consumed in our wickedness."
14* Yes, the hope of the wicked is like thistledown borne on the wind, and like fine, tempest-driven foam;
Like smoke scattered by the wind, and like the passing memory of the nomad camping for a single day.
15* But the just live forever,
and in the LORD is their recompense,
and the thought of them is with the Most High.
16* Therefore shall they receive the splendid crown,
the beauteous diadem, from the hand of the LORD—
For he shall shelter them with his right hand,
and protect them with his arm.
17* He shall take his zeal for armor
and he shall arm creation to requite the enemy;
18 He shall don justice for a breastplate
and shall wear sure judgment for a helmet;
19* He shall take invincible rectitude as a shield
20 and whet his sudden anger for a sword,
And the universe shall war with him against the foolhardy.
21* Well-aimed shafts of lightnings shall go forth and from the clouds as from a well-drawn bow shall leap to the mark;
22* and as from his sling, wrathful hailstones shall be hurled.
The water of the sea shall be enraged against them
and the streams shall abruptly overflow;
23* A mighty wind shall confront them
and a tempest winnow them out;
Thus lawlessness shall lay the whole earth waste
and evildoing overturn the thrones of potentates.

CHAPTER 6

Exhortation To Seek Wisdom

1* Hear, therefore, kings, and understand;
learn, you magistrates of the earth's expanse!

23: 11, 20; Sir 10, 13f.
6, 1f: 1, 1; Sir 33, 19; Mi 3, 1.9.

2 Hearken, you who are in power over the multitude and lord it over throngs of peoples!
3* Because authority was given you by the LORD and sovereignty by the Most High,
who shall probe your works and scrutinize your counsels!
4† Because, though you were ministers of his kingdom, you judged not rightly,
and did not keep the law,
nor walk according to the will of God,
5 Terribly and swiftly shall he come against you,
because judgment is stern for the exalted—6* For the lowly may be pardoned out of mercy
but the mighty shall be mightily put to the test.
7* For the Lord of all shows no partiality,
nor does he fear greatness,
Because he himself made the great as well as the small,
and he provides for all alike;
8 but for those in power a rigorous scrutiny impends.
9* To you, therefore, O princes, are my words addressed that you may learn wisdom and that you may not sin.
10† For those who keep the holy precepts hallowed shall be found holy,
and those learned in them will have ready a response.
11 Desire therefore my words;
long for them and you shall be instructed.
12* Resplendent and unfading is Wisdom,
and she is readily perceived by those who love her,
and found by those who seek her.
13* She hastens to make herself known in anticipation of men's desire;
14 he who watches for her at dawn shall not be disappointed,
for he shall find her sitting by his gate.
15 For taking thought of her is the perfection of prudence, and he who for her sake keeps vigil shall quickly be free from care;
16* Because she makes her own rounds, seeking those worthy of her,
and graciously appears to them in the ways,
and meets them with all solicitude.
17* For the first step toward discipline is a very earnest desire for her;
then, care for discipline is love of her;
18 love means the keeping of her laws;
To observe her laws is the basis for incorruptibility;
19 and incorruptibility makes one close to God;
20 thus the desire for Wisdom leads up to a kingdom.
21 If, then, you find pleasure in throne and scepter, you princes of the peoples, honor Wisdom, that you may reign as kings forever.

II: PRAISE OF WISDOM BY SOLOMON

Introduction

22* Now what wisdom is, and how she came to be I shall relate;
and I shall hide no secrets from you,
But from the very beginning I shall search out and bring to light knowledge of her,
nor shall I diverge from the truth.
23* Neither shall I admit consuming jealousy to my company, because that can have no fellowship with Wisdom.
24* A great number of wise men is the safety of the world,
and a prudent king, the stability of his people;
25 so take instruction from my words, to your profit.

CHAPTER 7

Solomon Is Like All Other Men

1*† I too am a mortal man, the same as all the rest,
and a descendant of the first man formed on earth.
And in my mother's womb I was molded into flesh

6, 4: Law: that of Moses; cf v 10; 2, 12.
6, 10: Response: a suitable plea before the great Judge. Cf Prv 22, 21; Jb 31, 14; Hb 2, 1; Sir 8, 9.
7, 1: First man formed on earth: Adam. The author omits throughout the book the proper names of the characters in sacred history of whom he speaks; see especially chapter 10.

2† in a ten-months' period—body and blood, from the seed of man, and the pleasure that accompanies marriage.
3 And I too, when born, inhaled the common air,
and fell upon the kindred earth;
wailing, I uttered that first sound common to all.
4 In swaddling clothes and with constant care I was nurtured.
5 For no king has any different origin or birth,
6* but one is the entry into life for all; and in one same way they leave it.

Solomon Prayed and Wisdom and Riches Came to Him

7* Therefore I prayed, and prudence was given me;
I pleaded and the spirit of Wisdom came to me.
8* I preferred her to scepter and throne,
And deemed riches nothing in comparison with her,
9 nor did I liken any priceless gem to her;
Because all gold, in view of her, is a little sand,
and before her, silver is to be accounted mire.
10* Beyond health and comeliness I loved her,
And I chose to have her rather than the light,
because the splendor of her never yields to sleep.
11* Yet all good things together came to me in her company,
and countless riches at her hands;
12* And I rejoiced in them all, because Wisdom is their leader, though I had not known that she is the mother of these.

Solomon Prays for Help To Speak of Wisdom

13* Simply I learned about her, and ungrudgingly do I share—her riches I do not hide away;
14† For to men she is an unfailing treasure;
those who gain this treasure win the friendship of God,
to whom the gifts they have from discipline commend them.
15 Now God grant I speak suitably and value these endowments at their worth:
For he is the guide of Wisdom
and the director of the wise.
16* For both we and our words are in his hand,
as well as all prudence and knowledge of crafts.
17 For he gave me sound knowledge of existing things, that I might know the organization of the universe and the force of its elements, 18 The beginning and the end and the midpoint of times,
the changes in the sun's course and the variations of the seasons.
19 Cycles of years, positions of the stars,
20 natures of animals, tempers of beasts,
Powers of the winds and thoughts of men,
uses of plants and virtues of roots—
21 Such things as are hidden I learned and such as are plain;
22* for Wisdom, the artificer of all, taught me.

Nature and Incomparable Dignity of Wisdom

For in her is a spirit intelligent, holy, unique, Manifold, subtle, agile,
clear, unstained, certain,
Not baneful, loving the good, keen,
unhampered, beneficent,[23] kindly,
Firm, secure, tranquil,
all-powerful, all-seeing,
And pervading all spirits,
though they be intelligent, pure and very subtle.
24* For Wisdom is mobile beyond all motion, and she penetrates and pervades all things by reason of her purity.
25 For she is an aura of the might of God
and a pure effusion of the glory of the Almighty;
therefore nought that is sullied enters into her.
26* For she is the refulgence of eternal light,

the spotless mirror of the power of God,
the image of his goodness.
27* And she, who is one, can do all things,
and renews everything while herself perduring;
And passing into holy souls from age to age,
she produces friends of God and prophets.
28 For there is nought God loves, be it not one who dwells with Wisdom.
29* For she is fairer than the sun and surpasses every constellation of the stars.
Compared to light, she takes precedence;
30 for that, indeed, night supplants,
but wickedness prevails not over Wisdom.

CHAPTER 8

1*† Indeed, she reaches from end to end mightily
and governs all things well.

Solomon Sought Wisdom, the Source of Blessings

2* Her I loved and sought after from my youth;
I sought to take her for my bride and was enamored of her beauty.
3 She adds to nobility the splendor of companionship with God;
even the LORD of all loved her.
4* For she is instructress in the understanding of God,
the selector of his works.
5* And if riches be a desirable possession in life,
what is more rich than Wisdom, who produces all things?
6* And if prudence renders service,
who in the world is a better craftsman than she?
7† Or if one loves justice,
the fruits of her works are virtues;
For she teaches moderation and prudence,
justice and fortitude,
and nothing in life is more useful for men than these.
8* Or again, if one yearns for copious learning,
she knows the things of old, and infers those yet to come.
She understands the turns of phrases and the solutions of riddles;
signs and wonders she knows in advance
and the outcome of times and ages.

Solomon Sought Wisdom as His Counselor and Comfort

9 So I determined to take her to live with me, knowing that she would be my counselor while all was well,
and my comfort in care and grief.
10* For her sake I should have glory among the masses, and esteem from the elders, though I be but a youth.
11 I should become keen in judgment,
and should be a marvel before rulers.
12† They would abide my silence and attend my utterance;
and as I spoke on further,
they would place their hands upon their mouths.
13* For her sake I should have immortality
and leave to those after me an everlasting memory.
14* I should govern peoples, and nations would be my subjects—15 terrible princes, hearing of me, would be afraid;
in the assembly I should appear noble, and in war courageous.
16* Within my dwelling, I should take my repose beside her;
For association with her involves no bitterness and living with her no grief,
but rather joy and gladness.

Solomon Realizes That Wisdom Is a Gift of God

17* Thinking thus within myself,
and reflecting in my heart
That there is immortality in kinship with Wisdom, 18 and good pleasure in her friendship,
and unfailing riches in the works of her hands,

And that in frequenting her society
there is prudence,
and fair renown in sharing her discourses,
I went about seeking to take her
for my own.
19† Now, I was a well-favored child,
and I came by a noble nature; 20 or rather, being noble, I attained
an unsullied body.
21*† And knowing that I could not otherwise possess her except God gave it—
and this, too, was prudence, to know whose is the gift—
I went to the LORD and besought
him,
and said with all my heart:

CHAPTER 9

Solomon's Prayer

1* God of my fathers, LORD of mercy.
you who have made all things by
your word
2* And in your wisdom have established man
to rule the creatures produced by
you,
3* To govern the world in holiness and
justice,
and to render judgment in integrity of heart:
4* Give me Wisdom, the attendant at your throne,
and reject me not from among
your children;
5* For I am your servant, the son of your handmaid,
a man weak and short-lived and lacking in comprehension of judgment and of laws.
6* Indeed, though one be perfect
among the sons of men,
if Wisdom, who comes from you,
be not with him,
he shall be held in no esteem.
7* You have chosen me king over your
people
and magistrate for your sons and daughters.
8* You have bid me build a temple on your holy mountain
and an altar in the city that is your dwelling place,
a copy of the holy tabernacle which you had established from
of old.
9* Now with you is Wisdom, who knows your works
and was present when you made
the world;
Who understands what is pleasing
in your eyes
and what is conformable with your commands.
10* Send her forth from your holy heavens
and from your glorious throne dispatch her
That she may be with me and work with me,
that I may know what is your pleasure.
11* For she knows and understands all
things,
and will guide me discreetly in my affairs
and safeguard me by her glory;
12* Thus my deeds will be acceptable,
and I shall judge your people justly
and be worthy of my father's throne.
13* For what man knows God's counsel, or who can conceive what our LORD intends?
14 For the deliberations of mortals are timid,
and unsure are our plans.
15* For the corruptible body burdens
the soul
and the earthen shelter weighs down the mind that has many concerns.
16* And scarce do we guess the things
on earth,
and what is within our grasp we find with difficulty;
but when things are in heaven,
who can search them out?
17* Or who ever knew your counsel, except you had given Wisdom and sent your holy spirit from on
high?
18* And thus were the paths of those on earth made straight,
and men learned what was your
pleasure,
and were saved by Wisdom.

8, 19f: Here the sacred writer mentions first bodily, then spiritual, excellence. To make it plain that the latter is the governing factor in the harmonious development of the human person, he then reverses the order.

8, 21: Possess her: in the Latin, "be continent." Though this verse has often been cited in connection with the virtue of chastity, the original must certainly mean "be possessed of Wisdom."

CHAPTER 10†

Wisdom Preserves Her Followers

1*† She preserved the first-formed father of the world
when he alone had been created;
And she raised him up from his fall,
2* and gave him power to rule all things.
3*† But when the unjust man withdrew from her in his anger,
he perished through his fratricidal wrath.
4*† When on his account the earth was flooded, Wisdom again saved it, piloting the just man on frailest wood.
5*† She, when the nations were sunk in universal wickedness, knew the just man, kept him blameless before God,
and preserved him resolute against pity for his child.
6*† She delivered the just man from among the wicked who were being destroyed, when he fled as fire descended upon Pentapolis—7*† Where as a testimony to its wickedness,
there yet remain a smoking desert,
Plants bearing fruit that never ripens,
and the tomb of a disbelieving soul, a standing pillar of salt.
8 For those who forsook Wisdom
first were bereft of knowledge of the right,
And then they left mankind a memorial of their folly—
so that they could not even be hidden in their fall.
9* But Wisdom delivered from tribulations those who served her.
10*† She, when the just man fled from his brother's anger,
guided him in direct ways,
Showed him the kingdom of God
and gave him knowledge of holy things;
She prospered him in his labors
and made abundant the fruit of his works, 11* Stood by him against the greed of his defrauders,
and enriched him;
12*† She preserved him from foes,
and secured him against ambush,
And she gave him the prize for his stern struggle that he might know that devotion to God is mightier than all else.
13*† She did not abandon the just man when he was sold,
but delivered him from sin.
14 She went down with him into the dungeon,
and did not desert him in his bonds,
Until she brought him the scepter of royalty
and authority over his oppressors, Showed those who had defamed him false,
and gave him eternal glory.
15* The holy people and blameless race—it was she who delivered them from the nation that oppressed them.
16*† She entered the soul of the LORD's servant,
and withstood fearsome kings with signs and portents;
17* she gave the holy ones the recompense of their labors, Conducted them by a wondrous road,
and became a shelter for them by day
and a starry flame by night.
18 She took them across the Red Sea
and brought them through the deep waters—19† But their enemies she overwhelmed, and cast them up from the bottom of the depths.
20* Therefore the just despoiled the wicked;
and they sang, O LORD, your holy name
and praised in unison your conquering hand—

1* She made their affairs prosper
through the holy prophet.

III: SPECIAL PROVIDENCE OF GOD DURING THE EXODUS

Introduction

2*† They journeyed through the uninhabited desert,
and in solitudes they pitched their tents;
3* they withstood enemies and took vengeance on their foes.
4 When they thirsted, they called upon you,
and water was given them from the sheer rock,
assuagement for their thirst from the hard stone.
5* For by the things through which their foes were punished they in their need were benefited.

First Example: Water Punishes the Egyptians and Benefits the Israelites

6*† Instead of a spring, when the perennial river was troubled with impure blood
7 as a rebuke to the decree for the slaying of infants,
You gave them abundant water in an unhoped-for way, 8 once you had shown by the thirst they then had how you punished their adversaries.
9* For when they had been tried, though only mildly chastised, they recognized how the wicked, condemned in anger, were being tormented.
11* Both those afar off and those close by were afflicted:
10 the latter you tested, admonishing them as a father;
the former as a stern king you probed and condemned.
12* For a twofold grief took hold of them and a groaning at the remembrance of the ones who had departed.
13 For when they heard that the cause of their own torments was a benefit to these others, they recognized the Lord.
14* Him who of old had been cast out in exposure they indeed mockingly rejected;
but in the end of events, they marveled at him,
since their thirst proved unlike that of the just.

Second Example: Animals Punish the Egyptians and Benefit the Israelites

15*† And in return for their senseless, wicked thoughts, which misled them into worshiping dumb serpents and worthless insects,
You sent upon them swarms of dumb creatures for vengeance;
16* that they might recognize that a man is punished by the very things through which he sins.

Digression on God's Mercy

17* For not without means was your almighty hand,
that had fashioned the universe from formless matter,
to send upon them a drove of bears or fierce lions, 18 Or new-created, wrathful, unknown beasts
to breathe forth fiery breath,
Or pour out roaring smoke,
or flash terrible sparks from their eyes.
19 Not only could these attack and completely destroy them;
even their frightful appearance itself could slay.
20* Even without these, they could have been killed at a single blast, pursued by retribution
and winnowed out by your mighty spirit;
But you have disposed all things by measure and number and weight.
21* For with you great strength abides always;

11, 2ff: Few verses in these later chapters can be fully understood without consulting the passages in the Mosaic books which are indicated in the cross references. The theme of this part of the book is expressed in 11, 5, and is illustrated in the following chapters by five examples drawn from Exodus events.

11, 6ff: The perennial river: the Nile; the contrast is between the first plague of Egypt (Ex 7, 17-24) and the water drawn from the rock in Horeb (Ex 17, 5-7; Nm 20, 8-11).

11, 15: Dumb: that is, irrational.

who can resist the might of your arm?
22*† Indeed, before you the whole universe is as a grain from a balance, or a drop of morning dew come down upon the earth.
23* But you have mercy on all, because you can do all things;
and you overlook the sins of men that they may repent.
24* For you love all things that are
and loathe nothing that you have made;
for what you hated, you would not have fashioned.
25* And how could a thing remain, unless you willed it;
or be preserved, had it not been called forth by you?
26* But you spare all things, because they are yours, O LORD and lover of souls,

CHAPTER 12

1* for your imperishable spirit is in all things!
2 Therefore you rebuke offenders little by little, warn them, and remind them of the sins they are committing,
that they may abandon their wickedness and believe in you, O LORD!
3* For truly, the ancient inhabitants of your holy land,
4 whom you hated for deeds most odious—
Works of witchcraft and impious sacrifices;
5† a cannibal feast of human flesh and of blood, from the midst of . . .—
These merciless murderers of children, 6* and parents who took with their own hands defenseless lives,
You willed to destroy by the hands of our fathers,
7* that the land that is dearest of all to you might receive a worthy colony of God's children.
8* But even these, as they were men, you spared,
and sent wasps as forerunners of your army
they they might exterminate them by degrees.
9* Not that you were without power to have the wicked vanquished in battle by the just,
or wiped out at once by terrible beasts or by one decisive word;
10* But condemning them bit by bit, you gave them space for repentance.
You were not unaware that their race was wicked
and their malice ingrained,
And that their dispositions would never change;
11* for they were a race accursed from the beginning.
Neither out of fear for anyone did you grant amnesty for their sins.
12* For who can say to you, "What have you done?"
or who can oppose your decree?
Or when peoples perish, who can challenge you, their maker;
or who can come into your presence as vindicator of unjust men?
13* For neither is there any god besides you who have the care of all,
that you need show you have not unjustly condemned;
14* Nor can any king or prince confront you on behalf of those you have punished.
15* But as you are just, you govern all things justly;
you regard it as unworthy of your power
to punish one who has incurred no blame.
16* For your might is the source of justice;
your mastery over all things makes you lenient to all.
17*† For you show your might when the perfection of your power is disbelieved;
and in those who know you, you rebuke temerity.
18 But though you are master of might,

22: Hos 13, 3.

16: 2, 11; 11, 26; Ps 103, 19.
17: 15, 2f; Ex 9, 16.

† 11, 22: Grain from a balance: a tiny particle used for weighing on sensitive scales.
12, 5: And of blood, from the midst of . . .: this line is obscure in the current Greek text and in all extant translations. Either one or two words would complete it. The horrible crimes here spoken of (cf 14, 23) were not unheard of in the ancient pagan world.
12, 17: The brunt of God's anger and vindictive justice is borne by those who know him and yet defy his authority and might. Cf 1, 2; 15, 2, but also 12, 27; 16, 13.

you judge with clemency,
and with much lenience you govern us;
for power, whenever you will, attends you.
19* And you taught your people, by these deeds,
that those who are just must be kind;
And you gave your sons good ground for hope that you would permit repentance for their sins.
20 For these were enemies of your servants, doomed to death;
yet, while you punished them with such solicitude and pleading,
granting time and opportunity to abandon wickedness, 21* With what exactitude you judged your sons, to whose fathers you gave the sworn covenants of goodly promises!
22 Us, therefore, you chastise and our enemies with a thousand blows you punish, that we may think earnestly of your goodness when we judge,
and, when being judged, may look for mercy.

Second Example Resumed

23* Hence those unjust also, who lived a life of folly,
you tormented through their own abominations.
24* For they went far astray in the paths of error,
taking for gods the worthless and disgusting among beasts,
deceived like senseless infants.
25* Therefore as though upon unreasoning children,
you sent your judgment on them as a mockery;
26 But they who took no heed of punishment which was but child's play were to experience a condemnation worthy of God.
27* For in the things through which they suffered distress, since they were tortured by the very things they deemed gods,
They saw and recognized the true God
whom before they had refused to know;
with this, their final condemnation came upon them.

CHAPTER 13

Digression on False Worship

A. NATURE WORSHIP

1*† For all men were by nature foolish who were in ignorance of God, and who from the good things seen did not succeed in knowing him who is,
and from studying the works did not discern the artisan;
2*† But either fire, or wind, or the swift air,
or the circuit of the stars, or the mighty water,
or the luminaries of heaven, the governors of the world, they considered gods.
3* Now if out of joy in their beauty they thought them gods, let them know how far more excellent is the Lord than these;
for the original source of beauty fashioned them.
4* Or if they were struck by their might and energy,
let them from these things realize how much more powerful is he who made them.
5 For from the greatness and the beauty of created things their original author, by analogy, is seen.
6† But yet, for these the blame is less;
For they indeed have gone astray perhaps,
though they seek God and wish to find him.
7 For they search busily among his works, but are distracted by what they see, because the things seen are fair.
8 But again, not even these are pardonable.
9 For if they so far succeeded in knowledge that they could speculate about the world,
how did they not more quickly find its LORD?

B. IDOLATRY

10* But doomed are they, and in dead things are their hopes,

19f: 11, 23; Sir 17, 24.
21: 18, 22; Gn 50, 24; Dt 7, 6-14; Ps 105, 8ff.
23: 11, 16; 16, 1.
24: Dt 11, 28; Jer 5, 28; Rom 1, 23.
25: Jer 4, 22.
27: 16, 16; Ex 14, 4.28.
13, 1: Acts 14, 17; Eph 4, 17ff.
2: Gn 1, 14-19; Dt 4, 19; Jb 31, 26ff.
3: Ps 8, 4.
4: Jer 10, 2; Bar 6, 39.
10: 3, 11; 15, 5.17; Dt 4, 25-28; 7, 25; 27, 15; Ps 115, 4; Hos 14, 4; Acts 17, 29.

† 13, 1: Him who is: the Hebrew sacred name of God; cf Ex 3, 14.
13, 2: Luminaries of heaven: the Latin interprets, "sun and moon"; governors: cf Gn 1, 16.
13, 6: The blame is less: the greater blame is incurred by those mentioned in 13, 10 and 15, 14ff.

who termed gods things made by human hands:
Gold and silver, the product of art, and likenesses of beasts,
or useless stone, the work of an ancient hand.

The Carpenter and Wooden Idols

11* A carpenter may saw out a suitable tree and skillfully scrape off all its bark,
And deftly plying his art,
produce something fit for daily use, 12 and use up the refuse from his handiwork
in preparing his food, and have his fill; 13* Then the good-for-nothing refuse from these remnants, crooked wood grown full of knots,
he takes and carves to occupy his spare time.
This wood he models with listless skill,
and patterns it on the image of a man 14* or makes it resemble some worthless beast.
When he has daubed it with red and crimsoned its surface with red stain,
and daubed over every blemish in it, 15* He makes a fitting shrine for it and puts it on the wall, fastening it with a nail.
16* Thus lest it fall down he provides for it,
knowing that it cannot help itself;
for, truly, it is an image and needs help.
17* But when he prays about his goods or marriage or children,
he is not ashamed to address the thing without a soul.
And for vigor he invokes the powerless;
18 and for life he entreats the dead;
And for aid he beseeches the wholly incompetent,
and about travel, something that cannot even walk.
19 And for profit in business and success with his hands
he asks facility of a thing with hands completely inert.

CHAPTER 14

1* Again, one preparing for a voyage and about to traverse the wild waves cries out to wood more unsound than the boat that bears him.
2 For the urge for profits devised this latter,
and Wisdom the artificer produced it.
3* But your providence, O Father! guides it,
for you have furnished even in the sea a road,
and through the waves a steady path,
4* Showing that you can save from any danger,
so that even one without skill may embark.
5* But you will that the products of your Wisdom be not idle;
therefore men trust their lives even to frailest wood,
and have been safe crossing the surge on a raft.
6*† For of old, when the proud giants were being destroyed,
the hope of the universe, who took refuge on a raft, left to the world a future for his race, under the guidance of your hand.
7† For blest is the wood through which justice comes about;
8* but the handmade idol is accursed, and its maker as well:
he for having produced it, and it, because though corruptible, it was termed a god.
9 Equally odious to God are the evildoer and his evil deed;
10 and the thing made shall be punished with its contriver.
11* Therefore upon even the idols of the nations shall a visitation come,
since they have become abominable amid God's works, Snares for the souls of men and a trap for the feet of the senseless.

The Origin and Evils of Idolatry

12* For the source of wantoness is the devising of idols;
and their invention was a corruption of life.
13* For in the beginning they were not, nor shall they continue forever;

† 14, 6: Noah.
14, 7: Often applied to the Cross of our Lord.

14 for by the vanity of men they came into the world,
and therefore a sudden end is devised for them.
15 For a father, afflicted with untimely mourning,
made an image of the child so quickly taken from him,
And now honored as a god what was formerly a dead man
and handed down to his subjects mysteries and sacrifices.
16* Then, in time, the impious practice gained strength and was observed as law,
and graven things were worshiped by princely decrees.
17 Men who lived so far away that they could not honor him in his presence copied the appearance of the distant king
And made a public image of him they wished to honor, out of zeal to flatter him when absent, as though present.
18 And to promote this observance among those to whom it was strange,
the artisan's ambition provided a stimulus.
19* For he, mayhap in his determination to please the ruler, labored over the likeness to the best of his skill;
20* And the masses, drawn by the charm of the workmanship, soon thought he should be worshiped who shortly before was honored as a man.
21 And this became a snare for mankind,
that men enslaved to either grief or tyranny
conferred the incommunicable Name on stocks and stones.
22* Then it was not enough for them to err in their knowledge of God;
but even though they live in a great war of ignorance,
they call such evils peace.
23* For while they celebrate either child-slaying sacrifices or clandestine mysteries, or frenzied carousals in unheard-of rites, 24 They no longer safeguard either lives or pure wedlock;
but each either waylays and kills his neighbor, or aggrieves him by adultery.
25* And all is confusion—blood and murder, theft and guile, corruption, faithlessness, turmoil, perjury, 26 Disturbance of good men, neglect of gratitude,
besmirching of souls, unnatural lust, disorder in marriage, adultery and shamelessness.
27* For the worship of infamous idols is the reason and source and extremity of all evil.
28* For they either go mad with enjoyment, or prophesy lies,
or live lawlessly or lightly forswear themselves.
29 For as their trust is in soulless idols,
they expect no harm when they have sworn falsely.
30*† But on both counts shall justice overtake them:
because they thought ill of God and devoted themselves to idols,
and because they deliberately swore false oaths, despising piety.
31† For not the might of those that are sworn by but the retribution of sinners ever follows upon the transgression of the wicked.

CHAPTER 15

1* But you, our God, are good and true,
slow to anger, and governing all with mercy.
2* For even if we sin, we are yours, and know your might;
but we will not sin, knowing that we belong to you.
3* For to know you well is complete justice,
and to know your might is the root of immortality.
4* For neither did the evil creation of men's fancy deceive us,
nor the fruitless labor of painters,
A form smeared with varied colors,
5 the sight of which arouses yearning in the senseless man, till he longs for the inanimate form of a dead image.
6* Lovers of evil things, and worthy of such hopes are they who make them and long for them and worship them.

The Potter's Clay Idols

7* For truly the potter, laboriously working the soft earth, molds for our service each several article:
Both the vessels that serve for clean purposes
and their opposites, all alike;
As to what shall be the use of each vessel of either class
the worker in clay is the judge.
8* And with misspent toil he molds a meaningless god from the self-same clay;
though he himself shortly before was made from the earth
And after a little, is to go whence he was taken,
when the life that was lent him is demanded back.
9* But his concern is not that he is to die
nor that his span of life is brief;
Rather, he vies with goldsmiths and silversmiths
and emulates molders of bronze,
and takes pride in modeling counterfeits.
10* Ashes his heart is! more worthless than earth is his hope,
and more ignoble than clay his life;
11* Because he knew not the one who fashioned him,
and breathed into him a quickening soul,
and infused a vital spirit.
12* Instead, he esteemed our life a plaything,
and our span of life a holiday for gain;
"For one must," says he, "make profit every way, be it even out of evil."
13 For this man more than any knows that he is sinning, when out of earthen stuff he creates fragile vessels and idols alike.
14* But all quite senseless, and worse than childish in mind,
are the enemies of your people who enslaved them.
15* For they esteemed all the idols of the nations gods,
which have no use of the eyes for vision,
nor nostrils to snuff the air,
Nor ears to hear,
nor fingers on their hands for feeling;
even their feet are useless to walk with.
16* For a man made them;
one whose spirit has been lent him fashioned them.
For no man succeeds in fashioning a god like himself;
17 being mortal, he makes a dead thing with his lawless hands.
For he is better than the things he worships;
he at least lives, but never they.

Second Example Resumed

18*† And besides, they worship the most loathsome beasts—
for compared as to folly, these are worse than the rest, 19* Nor for their looks are they good or desirable beasts, but they have escaped both the approval of God and his blessing.

CHAPTER 16

1*† Therefore they were fittingly punished by similar creatures,
and were tormented by a swarm of insects.
2* Instead of this punishment, you benefited your people with a novel dish, the delight they craved,
by providing quail for their food;
3* That those others, when they desired food,
since the creatures sent to plague them were so loathsome,
should be turned from even the craving of necessities,
While these, after a brief period of privation, partook of a novel dish.
4* For upon those oppressors, inexorable want had to come;
but these needed only be shown how their enemies were being tormented.
5* For when the dire venom of beasts came upon them and they were dying from the bite of crooked serpents,

15, 18ff: The author here returns to the main theme of chapters 11—19, which was interrupted by the digression 13, 1—15, 17.

15, 18: For . . . rest: this may mean that the creatures worshiped by the Egyptians (e.g., crocodiles, serpents, scarabs, etc.) were more patently lacking in intelligence than the general run of beasts; cf 11, 15; 12, 24.

16, 1: They: the Egyptian idolaters.

your anger endured not to the end.
6† But as a warning, for a short time
they were terrorized,
though they had a sign of salvation, to remind them of the precept of your law.
7 For he who turned toward it was saved, not by what he saw,
but by you, the savior of all.
8* And by this also you convinced our foes
that you are he who delivers from all evil.
9* For the bites of locusts and of flies slew them,
and no remedy was found to save their lives
because they deserved to be punished by such means; 10* But not even the fangs of poisonous reptiles overcame your sons,
for your mercy brought the antidote to heal them.
11* For as a reminder of your injunctions, they were stung,
and swiftly they were saved,
Lest they should fall into deep forgetfulness
and become unresponsive to your beneficence.
12* For indeed, neither herb nor application cured them,
but your all-healing word, O LORD!
13* For you have dominion over life and death;
you lead down to the gates of the nether world, and lead back.
14† Man, however, slays in his malice,
but when the spirit has come away, it does not return,
nor can he bring back the soul once it is confined.
15 But your hand none can escape.

Third Example: A Rain of Manna for Israel instead of the Plague of Storms

16* For the wicked who refused to know you were punished by the might of your arm, Pursued by unwonted rains and hailstorms and unremitting downpours,
and consumed by fire.
17* For against all expectation, in water which quenches anything,
the fire grew more active;
For the universe fights on behalf of the just.
18* For now the flame was tempered
so that the beasts might not be burnt up that were sent upon the wicked, but that these might see and know they were struck by the judgment of God;
19 And again, even in the water, fire blazed beyond its strength so as to consume the produce of the wicked land.
20* Instead of this, you nourished your people with food of angels and furnished them bread from heaven, ready to hand, untoiled-for, endowed with all delights and conforming to every taste.
21* For this substance of yours revealed your sweetness toward your children,
and serving the desire of him who received it,
was blended to whatever flavor each one wished.
22*† Yet snow and ice withstood fire and were not melted,
that they might know that their enemies' fruits
Were consumed by a fire that blazed in the hail and flashed lightning in the rain.
23* But this fire, again, that the just might be nourished,
forgot even its proper strength;
24* For your creation, serving you, its maker,
grows tense for punishment against the wicked,
but is relaxed in benefit for those who trust in you.
25 Therefore at that very time, transformed in all sorts of ways,
it was serving your all-nourishing bounty
according to what they needed and desired; 26* That your sons whom you loved might learn, O LORD, that it is not the various kinds of fruits that nourish man,
but it is your word that preserves those who believe you!
27* For what was not destroyed by fire, when merely warmed by a momentary sunbeam, melted;
28* So that men might know that one must give you thanks before the sunrise,

and runs off like useless water.

CHAPTER 17

Fourth Example: Darkness Afflicts the Egyptians, While the Israelites Have Light

1* For great are your judgments, and hard to be described;
therefore the unruly souls were wrong.
2* For when the lawless thought to enslave the holy nation,
shackled with darkness, fettered by the long night,
they lay confined beneath their own roofs as exiles from the eternal providence.
3* For they who supposed their secret sins were hid under the dark veil of oblivion
Were scattered in fearful trembling, terrified by apparitions.
4 For not even their inner chambers kept them fearless,
for crashing sounds on all sides terrified them,
and mute phantoms with somber looks appeared.
5* No force, even of fire, was able to give light,
nor did the flaming brilliance of the stars
succeed in lighting up that gloomy night.
6*† But only intermittent, fearful fires flashed through upon them;
And in their terror they thought beholding these was worse than the times when that sight was no longer to be seen.
7* And mockeries of the magic art were in readiness,
and a jeering reproof of their vaunted shrewdness.
8 For they who undertook to banish fears and terrors from the sick soul themselves sickened with a ridiculous fear.
9* For even though no monstrous thing frightened them, they shook at the passing of insects and the hissing of reptiles, 10 And perished trembling, reluctant to face even the air that they could nowhere escape.
11* For wickedness, of its nature cowardly, testifies in its own condemnation, and because of a distressed conscience, always magnifies misfortunes.
12 For fear is nought but the surrender of the helps that come from reason;
13 and the more one's expectation is of itself uncertain,
the more one makes of not knowing the cause that brings on torment.
14† So they, during that night, powerless though it was,
that had come upon them from the recesses of a powerless nether world,
while all sleeping the same sleep, 15* Were partly smitten by fearsome apparitions
and partly stricken by their souls' surrender,
for fear came upon them, sudden and unexpected.
16* Thus, then, whoever was there fell into that unbarred prison and was kept confined.
17 For whether one was a farmer, or a shepherd,
or a worker at tasks in the wasteland,
Taken unawares, he served out the inescapable sentence;
18* for all were bound by the one bond of darkness.
And were it only the whistling wind,
or the melodious song of birds in the spreading branches,
Or the steady sound of rushing water,
19 or the rude crash of overthrown rocks,
Or the unseen gallop of bounding animals,
or the roaring cry of the fiercest beasts,
Or an echo resounding from the hollow of the hills,
these sounds, inspiring terror, paralyzed them.
20* For the whole world shone with brilliant light and continued its works without interruption;
21 Over them alone was spread oppressive night,

an image of the darkness that next
should come upon them;
yet they were to themselves more burdensome than the darkness.

CHAPTER 18

1 But your holy ones had very great light;
And those others, who heard their voices but did not see their forms,
since now they themselves had suffered, called them blest; 2† And because they who formerly had been wronged did not harm
them, they thanked them,
and pleaded with them, for the sake of the difference between
them.
3* Instead of this, you furnished the flaming pillar
which was a guide on the unknown way,
and the mild sun for an honorable migration.
4* For those deserved to be deprived of light and imprisoned by
darkness,
who had kept your sons confined through whom the imperishable light of the law was to be given to the world.

Fifth Example: Death of the Egyptian Firstborn; the Israelites Are Spared

5*† When they determined to put to death the infants of the holy ones,
and when a single boy had been cast forth but saved,
As a reproof you carried off their multitude of sons
and made them perish all at once in the mighty water.
6* That night was known beforehand
to our fathers,
that, with sure knowledge of the oaths in which they put their faith, they might have courage.
7* Your people awaited
the salvation of the just and the destruction of their foes.
8* For when you punished our adver-
saries,
in this you glorified us whom you
had summoned.
9*† For in secret the holy children of the good were offering sacrifice and putting into effect with one accord the divine institution,
That your holy ones should share alike the same good things and dangers,
having previously sung the praises of the fathers.
10* But the discordant cry of their enemies responded,
and the piteous wail of mourning
for children was borne to them.
11* And the slave was smitten with the same retribution as his master;
even the plebeian suffered the same as the king.
12* And all alike by a single death
had countless dead;
For the living were not even sufficient for the burial,
since at a single instant their nobler offspring were destroyed.
13*† For though they disbelieved at every turn on account of sorceries,
at the destruction of the first-born they acknowledged that the people was God's son.
14 For when peaceful stillness com-passed everything
and the night in its swift course was half spent,
15* Your all-powerful word from heaven's royal throne
bounded, a fierce warrior, into the doomed land, 16* bearing the sharp sword of your inexorable decree.
And as he alighted, he filled every place with death;
he still reached to heaven, while
he stood upon the earth.
17* Then, forthwith, visions in horrible dreams perturbed them
and unexpected fears assailed
them;
18 And cast half-dead, one here, another there,
each was revealing the reason for his dying.
19 For the dreams that disturbed them had proclaimed this before-
hand,
lest they perish unaware of why
they suffered ill.
20* But the trial of death touched at one time even the just,
and in the desert a plague struck
the multitude;

Yet not for long did the anger last.
21*† For the blameless man hastened to be their champion,
bearing the weapon of his special
office,
prayer and the propitiation of incense;
He withstood the wrath and put a stop to the calamity, showing that he was your servant.
22*† And he overcame the bitterness not by bodily strength, not by force of arms;
But by word he overcame the smiter, recalling the sworn covenants
with their fathers.
23* For when corpses had already fallen
one on another in heaps,
he stood in the midst and checked
the anger,
and cut off the way to the living.
24*† For on his full-length robe was the whole world,
and the glories of the fathers were carved in four rows upon the stones,
and your grandeur was on the crown upon his head.
25* To these names the destroyer yielded, and these he feared;
for the mere trial of anger was enough.

CHAPTER 19

1*† But the wicked, merciless wrath assailed until the end.
For he knew beforehand what they were yet to do:
2*† That though they themselves had agreed to the departure and had anxiously sent them on their way,
they would regret it and pursue
them.
3*† For while they were still engaged in funeral rites
and were mourning at the burials
of the dead,
They adopted another senseless
plan;
and those whom they had sent away with entreaty, they pursued as fugitives.
4 For a compulsion suited to this ending drew them on,
and made them forgetful of what had befallen them,
That they might fill out the torments
of their punishment,
5† and your people might experience
a glorious journey
while those others met an extraordinary death.
6* For all creation, in its several kinds,
was being made over anew,
serving its natural laws,
that your children might be preserved unharmed.
7* The cloud overshadowed their camp;
and out of what had before been water, dry land was seen emerging:
Out of the Red Sea an unimpeded
road,
and a grassy plain out of the mighty flood.
8 Over this crossed the whole nation
sheltered by your hand,
after they beheld stupendous wonders.
9* For they ranged about like horses,
and bounded about like lambs,
praising you, O LORD! their deliverer.
10* For they were still mindful of what had happened in their sojourn:
how instead of the young of animals the land brought forth
gnats,
and instead of fishes the river
swarmed with countless frogs.
11* And later they saw also a new kind of bird
when, prompted by desire, they asked for pleasant foods; 12 For to appease them quail came to them from the sea.
13*† And the punishments came upon the sinners
only after forewarnings from the violence of the thunderbolts.
For they justly suffered for their own misdeeds,
since indeed they treated their guests with the more grievous hatred.
14* For those others did not receive unfamiliar visitors,
but these were enslaving benefi-cent guests.

since they received strangers unwillingly!

oppressed with awful toils
those who now shared with them the same rights.

The Book of

SIRACH

(Ecclesiasticus)

The Book of Sirach derives its name from the author, Jesus, son of Eleazar, son of Sirach (50, 27). Its earliest title seems to have been "Wisdom of the Son of Sirach." The designation "Liber Ecclesiasticus," meaning "Church Book," appended to some Greek and Latin manuscripts was due to the extensive use which the church made of this book in presenting moral teaching to catechumens and to the faithful.

The author, a sage who lived in Jerusalem, was thoroughly imbued with love for the law, the priesthood, the temple, and divine worship. As a wise and experienced observer of life he addressed himself to his contemporaries with the motive of helping them to maintain religious faith and integrity through study of the holy books, and through tradition.

The book contains numerous maxims formulated with care, grouped by affinity, and dealing with a variety of subjects such as the individual, the family, and the community in their relations with one another and with God. It treats of friendship, education, poverty and wealth, the law, religious worship, and many other matters which reflect the religious and social customs of the time.

Written in Hebrew between 200 and 175 B.C., the text was translated into Greek sometime after 132 B.C. by the author's grandson, who also wrote a Foreword which contains information about the book, the author, and the translator himself. Until the close of the nineteenth century Sirach was known only in translations, of which this Greek rendering was the most important. From it the Latin version was made. Between 1896 and 1900, again in 1931, and several times since 1956, manuscripts were discovered containing in all about two thirds of the Hebrew text, which agrees substantially with the Greek. One such text, from Masada, is pre-Christian in date.

Though not included in the Hebrew Bible after the first century A.D., nor accepted by Protestants, the Book of Sirach has always been recognized by the Catholic Church as divinely inspired and canonical. The Foreword, though not inspired, is placed in the Bible because of its antiquity and importance.

The contents of Sirach are of a discursive nature, not easily divided into separate parts. Chapters 1—43 deal largely with moral instruction; chapters 44, 1—50, 24 contain a eulogy of the heroes of Israel and some of the patriarchs. There are two appendices in which the author expresses his gratitude to God, and appeals to the unlearned to acquire true wisdom.

The Church uses the Book of Sirach extensively in her liturgy.

Foreword

Many important truths have been handed down to us through the law, the prophets, and the later authors; and for these the instruction and wisdom of Israel merit praise. Now, those who are familiar with these truths must not only understand them themselves but, as lovers of wisdom, be able, in speech and in writing, to help others less familiar. Such a one was my grandfather, Jesus, who, having devoted himself for a long time to the diligent study of the law, the prophets, and the rest of the books† of our ancestors, and having developed a thorough familiarity with them, was moved to write something himself in the nature of instruction and wisdom, in order that those who love wisdom might, by acquainting themselves with what he too had written, make even greater progress in living in conformity with the divine law.

You therefore are now invited to read it in a spirit of attentive good will, with indulgence for any apparent failure on our part, despite earnest efforts, in the interpretation of particular passages. For words spoken originally in Hebrew are not as effective when they are translated into another language. That is true not only of this book but of the law itself, the prophets and the rest of the books, which differ no little when they are read in the original.

† The law, the prophets, and the rest of the books: the Sacred Scriptures of the Old Testament written before the time of Sirach, according to the threefold division of the present Hebrew Bible.

I arrived in Egypt in the thirty-eighth year of the reign of King Euergetes,† and while there, I found a reproduction of our valuable teaching.† I therefore considered myself in duty bound to devote some diligence and industry to the translation of this book. Many sleepless hours of close application have I devoted in the interval to finishing the book for publication, for the benefit of those living abroad who wish to acquire wisdom and are disposed to live their lives according to the standards of the law.

The Wisdom of Sirach

CHAPTER 1

Praise of Wisdom†

1*† All wisdom comes from the LORD
and with him it remains forever.
2 The sand of the seashore, the drops of rain,
the days of eternity: who can number these?
3 Heaven's height, earth's breadth,
the depths of the abyss: who can explore these?
4 Before all things else wisdom was created;
and prudent understanding, from eternity.
5* To whom has wisdom's root been revealed?
Who knows her subtleties?
6 There is but one, wise and truly awe-inspiring,
seated upon his throne:
7* It is the LORD; he created her,
has seen her and taken note of her.
8 He has poured her forth upon all his works,
upon every living thing according to his bounty;
he has lavished her upon his friends.

9† Fear of the LORD is glory and splendor, gladness and a festive crown.
10 Fear of the LORD warms the heart, giving gladness and joy and length of days.
11 He who fears the LORD will have a happy end;
even on the day of his death he will be blessed.
12* The beginning of wisdom is fear of the LORD,
which is formed with the faithful in the womb.
13 With devoted men was she created from of old,
and with their children her beneficence abides.
14* Fullness of wisdom is fear of the LORD;
she inebriates men with her fruits.
15 Her entire house she fills with choice foods,
her granaries with her harvest.
16* Wisdom's garland is fear of the LORD,
with blossoms of peace and perfect health.
17 Knowledge and full understanding she showers down;
she heightens the glory of those who possess her.
18 The root of wisdom is fear of the LORD;
her branches are length of days.

19† One cannot justify unjust anger;
anger plunges a man to his downfall.
20 A patient man need stand firm but for a time,
and then contentment comes back to him.
21 For a while he holds back his words,
then the lips of many herald his wisdom.
22 Among wisdom's treasures is the paragon of prudence;
but fear of the LORD is an abomination to the sinner.
23 If you desire wisdom, keep the commandments,
and the LORD will bestow her upon you;
24 For fear of the LORD is wisdom and culture;
loyal humility is his delight.
25† Be not faithless to the fear of the LORD,

Reproduction . . . teaching: may refer to the Septuagint (Greek) translation of Hebrew wisdom writings predating Sirach.

1, 1-8: The Lord is the source and preserver of wisdom (1); he created her from eternity, before all things else (4-7); all his works reflect wisdom (21.8).

1,1: Wisdom: here the author speaks of true wisdom, namely God's external revelation of himself. Throughout the book he describes in great detail just what wisdom is; sometimes it is divine; sometimes it is a synonym for God's law; sometimes it is human. But the author makes clear that even human wisdom, properly understood, comes from God.

1, 9-16: Here are described the spiritual and temporal blessings that come during the lifetime of him who fears the Lord, i.e., practices true religion.

1,9: Fear of the Lord: see note on Ps 111, 10.

1, 19-22: The disciple of wisdom shuns unjust anger which brings downfall. By patience and self-control he preserves calm, recovers contentment, and receives public praise. The sinner, on the contrary, despises the restraints which religion imposes.

1, 25-29: Infidelity to religion, or the use of it for any but the single purpose of serving God, is hypocrisy and self-exaltation, deserving of public disgrace.

nor approach it with duplicity of heart.
26 Play not the hypocrite before men;
over your lips keep watch.
27 Exalt not yourself lest you fall
and bring upon you dishonor; 28 For then the LORD will reveal your secrets
and publicly cast you down, 29 Because you approached the fear of the LORD
with your heart full of guile.

CHAPTER 2

Duties toward God

1*† My son, when you come to serve the LORD,
prepare yourself for trials.
2 Be sincere of heart and steadfast,
undisturbed in time of adversity.
3 Cling to him, forsake him not;
thus will your future be great.
4 Accept whatever befalls you,
in crushing misfortune be patient;
5* For in fire gold is tested,
and worthy men in the crucible of humiliation.
6 Trust God and he will help you;
make straight your ways and hope in him.

7 You who fear the LORD, wait for his mercy,
turn not away lest you fall.
8 You who fear the LORD, trust him,
and your reward will not be lost.
9 You who fear the LORD, hope for good things,
for lasting joy and mercy.
10* Study the generations long past and understand;
has anyone hoped in the LORD and been disappointed?
Has anyone persevered in his fear and been forsaken?
has anyone called upon him and been rebuffed?
11 Compassionate and merciful is the LORD;
he forgives sins, he saves in time of trouble.

12† Woe to craven hearts and drooping hands,
to the sinner who treads a double path!
13 Woe to the faint of heart who trust not,
who therefore will have no shelter!
14 Woe to you who have lost hope!
what will you do at the visitation of the LORD?
15* Those who fear the LORD disobey not his words;
those who love him keep his ways.
16 Those who fear the LORD seek to please him,
those who love him are filled with his law.
17 Those who fear the LORD prepare their hearts and humble themselves before him.
18* Let us fall into the hands of the LORD
and not into the hands of men,
For equal to his majesty
is the mercy that he shows.

CHAPTER 3

Duties toward Parents†

1 Children, pay heed to a father's right;
do so that you may live.
2 For the LORD sets a father in honor over his children;
a mother's authority he confirms over her sons.
3 He who honors his father atones for sins;
4 he stores up riches who reveres his mother.
5 He who honors his father is gladdened by children,
and when he prays he is heard.
6 He who reveres his father will live a long life;
he obeys the LORD who brings comfort to his mother.
7 He who fears the LORD honors his father,
and serves his parents as rulers.
8* In word and deed honor your father that his blessing may come upon you;
9* For a father's blessing gives a family firm roots,
but a mother's curse uproots the growing plant.

9: Gn 27, 29; 49, 2-27.

2, 1-11: Serving God is not without its trials (1); moreover, it must be done with sincerity, steadfastness and fidelity (2f). Misfortune and humiliation merely purify man and prove his worth (4f). Patience and unwavering trust in God are always rewarded with the benefits of God's mercy and of lasting joy (6-11).

2, 12-18: A warning to those who compromise their religion in time of affliction; they fail in courage and trust and therefore have no security (12ff). But those who fear the Lord through obedience, reverence, love and humility find his mercy equal to his majesty (15-18).

3, 1-16: Besides the virtues that must characterize our conduct toward God, special duties toward our neighbor are enjoined, such as honor and respect toward parents, with corresponding blessings (1-9). Even to old and infirm parents this respect is due (10-13); through it, the sins of children are pardoned (14f). Failure to render respect is blasphemy and merits a curse from God (16). Cf Ex 20, 12; Eph 6, 2f.

10 Glory not in your father's shame,
for his shame is no glory to you!
11 His father's honor is a man's glory;
disgrace for her children, a mother's shame.
12* My son, take care of your father when he is old;
grieve him not as long as he lives.
13 Even if his mind fail, be considerate with him;
revile him not in the fullness of your strength.
14 For kindness to a father will not be forgotten,
it will serve as a sin offering—it will take lasting root.
15 In time of tribulation it will be recalled to your advantage,
like warmth upon frost it will melt away your sins.
16* A blasphemer is he who despises his father;
accursed of his Creator, he who angers his mother.

Humility†

17 My son, conduct your affairs with humility, and you will be loved more than a giver of gifts.
18* Humble yourself the more, the greater you are,
and you will find favor with God.
19† For great is the power of God;
by the humble he is glorified.
20* What is too sublime for you, seek not,
into things beyond your strength search not.
21 What is committed to you, attend to;
for what is hidden is not your concern.
22 With what is too much for you meddle not,
when shown things beyond human understanding.
23 Their own opinion has misled many,
and false reasoning unbalanced their judgment.
24 Where the pupil of the eye is missing, there is no light,
and where there is no knowledge, there is no wisdom.

25 A stubborn man will fare badly in the end,
and he who loves danger will perish in it.
26 A stubborn man will be burdened with sorrow;
a sinner will heap sin upon sin.
27* For the affliction of the proud man there is no cure;
he is the offshoot of an evil plant.
28 The mind of a sage appreciates proverbs,
and an attentive ear is the wise man's joy.

Alms for the Poor†

29* Water quenches a flaming fire,
and alms atone for sins.
30 He who does a kindness is remembered afterward;
when he falls, he finds a support.

CHAPTER 4

1*† My son, rob not the poor man of his livelihood;
force not the eyes of the needy to turn away.
2 A hungry man grieve not,
a needy man anger not;
3 Do not exasperate the downtrodden;
delay not to give to the needy.
4 A beggar in distress do not reject;
avert not your face from the poor.
5 From the needy turn not your eyes,
give no man reason to curse you;
6 For if in the bitterness of his soul he curse you,
his Creator will hear his prayer.
7 Endear yourself to the assembly;
before a ruler bow your head.
8 Give a hearing to the poor man,
and return his greeting with courtesy;
9 Deliver the oppressed from the hand of the oppressor;
let not justice be repugnant to you.
10 To the fatherless be as a father,
and help their mother as a husband would;
Thus will you be like a son to the Most High,
and he will be more tender to you than a mother.

The Rewards of Wisdom†

11 Wisdom instructs her children and admonishes those who seek her.

29: Dn 4, 27.
4, 1: Tb 4, 7-11.

3, 17-27: Humility gives a true estimate of self (17ff). Through it a man performs duty, avoids what is beyond his understanding and strength (20ff). Pride, however, begets false greatness, misjudgment, stubbornness, sorrow, affliction and perdition (23-27).

3, 19: An alternate or additional line would read: "For though many have been great in the course of time, it is to the humble he reveals his secrets." Cf Mt 11, 25f; 1 Cor 1, 26-29.

3, 29—4, 10: Mercy and kindness toward those in misfortune atone for sin and endear a man to God and to his fellowmen.

4, 1: Eyes of the needy: when they look for help; cf 18, 17.

4, 11-19: The Hebrew text presents wisdom speaking in the first person, as in ch 24. The precious fruits of wisdom: life, favor, glory, blessings, God's love, are intended to arouse desire for her (11-14). Her disciples are like priests (14) and judges (15), even partners who possess her for themselves and their descendants (16). They enjoy happiness and penetrate her profound secrets after surviving her tests (17f). Those who fail her are abandoned to destruction (19).

12 He who loves her loves life;
those who seek her out win her favor.
13 He who holds her fast inherits glory;
wherever he dwells, the LORD bestows blessings.
14* Those who serve her serve the Holy One;
those who love her the LORD loves.
15 He who obeys her judges nations;
he who hearkens to her dwells in her inmost chambers.
16 If one trusts her, he will possess her;
his descendants too will inherit her.
17 She walks with him as a stranger,
and at first she puts him to the test;
Fear and dread she brings upon him
and tries him with her discipline;
With her precepts she puts him to the proof,
until his heart is fully with her.
18 Then she comes back to bring him happiness and reveal her secrets to him.
19 But if he fails her, she will abandon him
and deliver him into the hands of despoilers.

Sincerity and Justice†

20 Use your time well; guard yourself from evil,
and bring upon yourself no shame.
21 There is a sense of shame laden with guilt,
and a shame that merits honor and respect.
22 Show no favoritism to your own discredit;
let no one intimidate you to your own downfall.
23 Refrain not from speaking at the proper time,
and hide not away your wisdom;
24 For it is through speech that wisdom becomes known,
and knowledge through the tongue's rejoinder.
25 Never gainsay the truth,
and struggle not against the rushing stream.
26 Be not ashamed to acknowledge your guilt,
but of your ignorance rather be ashamed.
27 Do not abase yourself before an impious man,
nor refuse to do so before rulers.
28 Even to the death fight for truth,
and the LORD your God will battle for you.
29 Be not surly in your speech,
nor lazy and slack in your deeds.
30 Be not a lion at home,
nor sly and suspicious at work.
31 Let not your hand be open to receive and clenched when it is time to give.

CHAPTER 5

Against Presumption†

1* Rely not on your wealth;
say not: "I have the power."
2 Rely not on your strength
in following the desires of your heart.
3 Say not: "Who can prevail against me?"
for the LORD will exact the punishment.
4 Say not: "I have sinned, yet what has befallen me?"
for the LORD bides his time.
5 Of forgiveness be not overconfident,
adding sin upon sin.
6 Say not: "Great is his mercy;
my many sins he will forgive."
7 For mercy and anger alike are with him;
upon the wicked alights his wrath.
8 Delay not your conversion to the LORD,
put it not off from day to day; 9 For suddenly his wrath flames forth;
at the time of vengeance, you will be destroyed.
10* Rely not upon deceitful wealth,
for it will be no help on the day of wrath.

Sincerity in Speech

11† Winnow not in every wind,
and start not off in every direction.
12† Be consistent in your thoughts;
steadfast be your words.
13* Be swift to hear,
but slow to answer.
14 If you have the knowledge, answer your neighbor;

14: Wis 7, 28.
5, 1: Lk 12, 19.
10: Prv 10, 2; 11, 4.
28.
13: Prv 29, 20; Jas 1, 19.

4, 20-31: Besides the interior trials of discipline and precept, the disciple of wisdom is warned against external dangers to his sincerity and justice, namely evil, human respect (20f), compromise of liberty in speech and action (22-25), false shame, and ignorance (26). He must fight for the truth (28), and avoid cynicism and laziness (29), and inconsistency in his conduct (30).

5, 1-10: The vices of the rich are pride and independence (1f), presumption (3), false security (4-7), and impenitence (8), which cannot escape the divine wrath (9f). Cf Prv 18, 23; 19, 1; 28, 6.

5, 11: A proverbial expression condemning inconstancy and advocating sincerity and honesty.

5, 12—6, 1: Proper use of the tongue requires constancy in speech (5, 12), prudence (13f), reserve (15), charity (6, 1), as well as the avoidance of detraction, calumny (16), and double talk, which bring shame and disgrace (5, 17; 6, 1).

if not, put your hand over your mouth.
15 Honor and dishonor through talking!
A man's tongue can be his downfall.
16 Be not called a detractor;
use not your tongue for calumny;
17 For shame has been created for the thief,
and the reproach of his neighbor for the double-tongued.

CHAPTER 6

1† Say nothing harmful, small or great;
be not a foe instead of a friend;
A bad name and disgrace will you acquire:
"That for the evil man with double tongue!"

2* Fall not into the grip of desire,
lest, like fire, it consume your strength;
3 Your leaves it will eat, your fruits destroy,
and you will be left a dry tree,
4 For contumacious desire destroys its owner
and makes him the sport of his enemies.

True Friendship†

5 A kind mouth multiplies friends,
and gracious lips prompt friendly greetings.
6 Let your acquaintances be many,
but one in a thousand your confidant.
7* When you gain a friend, first test him,
and be not too ready to trust him
8 For one sort of friend is a friend when it suits him, but he will not be with you in time of distress.
9 Another is a friend who becomes an enemy,
and tells of the quarrel to your shame.
10 Another is a friend, a boon companion,
who will not be with you when sorrow comes.
11 When things go well, he is your other self,
and lords it over your servants;
12 But if you are brought low, he turns against you and avoids meeting you.
13 Keep away from your enemies;
be on your guard with your friends.
14 A faithful friend is a sturdy shelter;
he who finds one finds a treasure.
15 A faithful friend is beyond price,
no sum can balance his worth.
16 A faithful friend is a life-saving remedy,
such as he who fears God finds;
17 For he who fears God behaves accordingly,
and his friend will be like himself.

Blessings of Wisdom†

18 My son, from your youth embrace discipline;
thus will you find wisdom with graying hair.
19 As though plowing and sowing, draw close to her;
then await her bountiful crops.
20 For in cultivating her you will labor but little,
and soon you will eat of her fruits.
21 How irksome she is to the unruly!
The fool cannot abide her.
22 She will be like a burdensome stone to test him,
and he will not delay in casting her aside.

23† For discipline is like her name,
she is not accessible to many.
24 Listen, my son, and heed my advice;
refuse not my counsel.
25 Put your feet into her fetters,
and your neck under her yoke.
26 Stoop your shoulders and carry her and be not irked at her bonds.
27 With all your soul draw close to her;
with all your strength keep her ways.
28 Search her out, discover her; seek her and you will find her.
Then when you have her, do not let her go;
29 Thus will you afterward find rest in her,
and she will become your joy.
30 Her fetters will be your throne of majesty;
her bonds, your purple cord.
31*† You will wear her as your robe of glory,
bear her as your splendid crown.

6, 2-3: 9, 6; 23, 17; Jb 31, 12; Is 56, 3. 7ff: 12, 8f; 37, 1-5; Prv 19, 4. 31: Is 62, 3.

6, 1: "That. . . . double tongue!": people will say this against the man whose deceitful tongue has brought him to disgrace.

6, 5-17: True friends are discerned not by prosperity (11), but through the trials of adversity: distress, quarrels (9), sorrow (10) and misfortune (12). Such friends are rare and their value is beyond estimation, a gift from God (14-17).

6, 18-37: The various figures in each of the three strophes urge the search for wisdom through patience (19-23), docility (32-37), and perseverance in trials (25ff), promising rich rewards (28-31). Cf 4, 11-19.

6, 23: Discipline (musar, in the sense of wisdom) is a perfect homonym for musar, "removed, withdrawn"; thus the path of discipline is inaccessible to many.

6, 31: Some forms of the text speak also of the "yoke" of wisdom under the imagery of golden ornaments.

32 My son, if you wish, you can be taught;
if you apply yourself, you will be shrewd.
33 If you are willing to listen, you will learn;
if you give heed, you will be wise.
34 Frequent the company of the elders;
whoever is wise, stay close to him.
35* Be eager to hear every godly discourse;
let no wise saying escape you.
36 If you see a man of prudence, seek him out;
let your feet wear away his doorstep!
37* Reflect on the precepts of the LORD,
let his commandments be your constant meditation;
Then he will enlighten your mind,
and the wisdom you desire he will grant.

CHAPTER 7

Conduct in Public Life†

1 Do no evil, and evil will not overtake you;
2 avoid wickedness, and it will turn aside from you.
3* Sow not in the furrows of injustice, lest you harvest it sevenfold.
4 Seek not from the LORD authority, nor from the king a place of honor.
5* Parade not your justice before the Lord,
and before the king flaunt not your wisdom.
6 Seek not to become a judge
if you have not strength to root out crime,
Or you will show favor to the ruler and mar your integrity.
7 Be guilty of no evil before the city's populace,
nor disgrace yourself before the assembly.
8 Do not plot to repeat a sin;
not even for one will you go unpunished.
9* Say not: "He will appreciate my many gifts;
the Most High will accept my offerings."
10 Be not impatient in prayers,
and neglect not the giving of alms.
11† Laugh not at an embittered man;
be mindful of him who exalts and humbles.
12 Plot no mischief against your brother,
nor against your friend and companion.
13 Delight not in telling lie after lie,
for it never results in good.
14*† Thrust not yourself into the deliberations of princes,
and repeat not the words of your prayer.
15* Hate not laborious tasks,
nor farming, which was ordained by the Most High.
16 Do not esteem yourself better than your fellows;
remember, his wrath will not delay.
17* More and more, humble your pride;
what awaits man is worms.

Duties of Family Life, Religion and Charity†

18† Barter not a friend for money,
nor a dear brother for the gold of Ophir.
19 Dismiss not a sensible wife;
a gracious wife is more precious than corals.
20* Mistreat not a servant who faithfully serves,
nor a laborer who devotes himself to his task.
21† Let a wise servant be dear to you as your own self;
refuse him not his freedom.
22 If you have livestock, look after them;
if they are dependable, keep them.
23*† If you have sons, chastise them;
bend their necks from childhood.
24* If you have daughters, keep them chaste,
and be not indulgent to them.
25* Giving your daughter in marriage ends a great task;
but give her to a worthy man.

7, 1-17: In the conduct of social relations wisdom forbids evil and injustice (1ff), pride (5.15ff), ambition and human respect (4.6), public disorder (7), presumption and impatience toward God (9f), ridicule (11), mischief and deceit toward one's neighbor (8. 12f).

7, 11: Him who exalts and humbles: God; cf 1 Sm 2, 7; Ps 75, 8; Lk 1, 52.

7, 14: Repeat not . . . prayer: brevity of speech in dealings with superiors and more especially with God is a sign of reverence and respect; cf Eccl 5, 1; Mt 6, 7.

7, 18-36: The duties of respect and appreciation, justice and kindness should characterize relations toward members of the household (18-28), and also toward God and his priests (29ff), the poor and afflicted, the living and the dead (32-36).

7, 18: Ophir was the port, at present unidentified, to which the ships of Solomon sailed and from which they brought back gold and silver; cf note on Ps 44 (45), 10.

7, 21: After six years of service a Hebrew slave was entitled to freedom, cf Ex 21, 2; Dt 15, 12-15.

7, 23: Bend their necks: keep them from rebellious pride; so with the Greek. Cf 30, 12. The present Hebrew text, which is probably not original here, reads: "Choose wives for them while they are young."

26 If you have a wife, let her not seem odious to you;
but where there is ill-feeling, trust
her not.
27* With your whole heart honor your
father;
your mother's birthpangs forget
not.
28 Remember, of these parents you were born;
what can you give them for all
they gave you?
29 With all your soul, fear God,
revere his priests.
30 With all your strength, love your Creator,
forsake not his ministers.
31*† Honor God and respect the priest;
give him his portion as you have been commanded:
First fruits and contributions,
due sacrifices and holy offerings.
32 To the poor man also extend your
hand,
that your blessing may be complete;
33† Be generous to all the living,
and withhold not your kindness
from the dead.
34* Avoid not those who weep,
but mourn with those who mourn;
35* Neglect not to visit the sick—
for these things you will be loved.
36 In whatever you do, remember your last days,
and you will never sin.

CHAPTER 8

Prudence in Dealing with Other Men†

1 Contend not with an influential man,
lest you fall into his power.
2* Quarrel not with a rich man, lest he pay out the price of your downfall;
For gold has dazzled many,
and perverts the character of
princes.
3* Dispute not with a man of railing
speech,
heap no wood upon his fire.
4 Be not too familiar with an unruly
man,
lest he speak ill of your forebears.
5*† Shame not a repentant sinner;
remember, we all are guilty.
6 Insult no man when he is old,
for some of us, too, will grow old.
7 Rejoice not when a man dies;
remember, we are all to die.
8* Spurn not the discourse of the wise, but acquaint yourself with their
proverbs;
From them you will acquire the training
to serve in the presence of princes.
9 Reject not the tradition of old men which they have learned from their fathers;
From it you will obtain the knowledge
how to answer in time of need.
10 Kindle not the coals of a sinner, lest you be consumed in his flaming fire.
11† Let not the impious man intimidate
you;
it will set him in ambush against
you.
12* Lend not to one more powerful than yourself;
and whatever you lend, count it
as lost.
13 Go not surety beyond your means;
think any pledge a debt you must pay.
14 Contend not at law with a judge, for he will settle it according to his whim.
15 Travel not with a ruthless man, lest he weigh you down with calamity;
For he will go his own way straight,
and through his folly you will perish with him.
16 Provoke no quarrel with a quick-tempered man,
nor ride with him through the
desert,
For bloodshed is nothing to him;
when there is no one to help you,
he will destroy you.
17 Take no counsel with a fool,
for he can keep nothing to himself.
18* Before a stranger do nothing that should be kept secret,
for you know not what it will engender.
19 Open your heart to no man,
and banish not your happiness.

8f: 6, 35.
12: 29, 4-7; Prv 17, 18.
18: Prv 25, 9f.

7, 31: First fruits . . . holy offerings: cf Ex 29, 27; Lv 7, 31-34; Nm 18, 8-20; Dt 18, 1-5.

7, 33: This seems to refer to the observances ordained toward the dead, that is, proper mourning and burial. Cf 2 Sm 21, 12ff; Tb 1, 20; 12, 12. When this verse is read in the light of later teaching, prayers for the souls of the deceased would also be recommended. Cf 2 Mc 12, 43ff.

8, 1-19: A prudent man will be circumspect, avoiding conflict with the powerful, the rich and insolent, the impious, the irascible, and with judges (1ff.10ff.14.16). He will seek friendship not with the undisciplined (4.12f) and the ruthless (15), nor with fools and strangers (17ff), but with the wise and the ancients of the people (8f).

8, 5: We all are guilty: cf 1 Kgs 8, 46; 2 Chr 6, 36; Eccl 7, 20; Rom 3, 9f; 1 Jn 1, 8.

8, 11: To give in to the wicked in one instance becomes an occasion of sin for the future.

CHAPTER 9

Advice concerning Women†

1 Be not jealous of the wife of your bosom,
lest you teach her to do evil against you.
2* Give no woman power over you to trample upon your dignity.
3 Be not intimate with a strange woman,
lest you fall into her snares.
4 With a singing girl be not familiar, lest you be caught in her wiles.
5† Entertain no thoughts against a virgin,
lest you be enmeshed in damages for her.
6* Give not yourself to harlots, lest you surrender your inheritance.
7 Gaze not about the lanes of the city and wander not through its squares;
8* Avert your eyes from a comely woman;
gaze not upon the beauty of another's wife—
Through woman's beauty many perish,
for lust for it burns like fire.
9 With a married woman dine not, recline not at table to drink by her side,
Lest your heart be drawn to her and you go down in blood to the grave.

Choice of Friends†

10 Discard not an old friend,
for the new one cannot equal him.
A new friend is like new wine which you drink with pleasure only when it has aged.
11 Envy not a sinner's fame,
for you know not what disaster awaits him.
12 Rejoice not at a proud man's success;
remember he will not reach death unpunished.
13 Keep far from the man who has power to kill,
and you will not be filled with the dread of death.
But if you approach him, offend him not,
lest he take away your life;
Know that you are stepping among snares
and walking over a net.
14 As best you can, take your neighbors' measure,
and associate with the wise.
15 With the learned be intimate;
let all your conversation be about the law of the LORD.
16 Have just men for your table companions;
in the fear of God be your glory.

Concerning Rulers†

17 Skilled artisans are esteemed for their deftness;
but the ruler of his people is the skilled sage.
18 Feared in the city is the man of railing speech,
and he who talks rashly is hated.

CHAPTER 10

1* A wise magistrate lends stability to his people,
and the government of a prudent man is well ordered.
2* As the people's judge, so are his ministers;
as the head of a city, its inhabitants.
3* A wanton king destroys his people,
but a city grows through the wisdom of its princes.
4 Sovereignty over the earth is in the hand of God,
who raises up on it the man of the hour;
5 Sovereignty over every man is in the hand of God,
who imparts his majesty to the ruler.

The Sin of Pride†

6* No matter the wrong, do no violence to your neighbor,
and do not walk the path of arrogance.

9, 2: 25, 21.
9, 6: Prv 5, 3-11; 6, 24; 29, 3.
9, 8: 25, 20; 41, 21.
10, 1: Wis 6, 24.
10, 2f: Prv 29, 12.
10, 3: Prv 29, 4.8.
10, 6: Lv 19, 18.

9, 1-9: Prudence and reserve in dealing with women are the best defense of morality. To preserve the liberty and dignity of his person and the integrity of his possessions, a man must avoid jealousy toward his own wife and familiarity toward all other women. Cf 25, 12—26, 18.

9, 1: Unjust suspicions often engender hatred between husband and wife and may prompt a wife to commit those faults of which heretofore she had been innocent.

9, 5: Cf Ex 22, 15f; Dt 22, 28f; Jb 31, 1.

9, 10-16: In social relations, adherence to the law of the Lord should serve as a guide (15). Associate with true friends (10), with the just and the learned (14ff); avoid the company of the mighty and of sinners doomed to punishment (11ff). Cf 6, 1-19.

9, 17—10, 5: Public office as conducted justly or unjustly benefits or destroys the people, according to the axiom, "as the prince, so the people." Cf Is 24, 2. God, however, has sovereignty over both.

10, 6-18: Glory displayed through arrogance and pride is false and displeasing to God and men, because founded on dust and ashes (6-11). It is the denial of the glory due to God, and therefore the source of all sin (12f). Even the memory of the proud is destroyed and God transfers their power to the lowly (14-18).

7 Odious to the LORD and to men is arrogance, and the sin of oppression they both hate.
8 Dominion is transferred from one people to another because of the violence of the arrogant.
9† Why are dust and ashes proud?
even during life man's body decays;
10 A slight illness—the doctor jests,
a king today—tomorrow he is dead.
11* When a man dies, he inherits corruption;
worms and gnats and maggots.
12 The beginning of pride is man's stubbornness
in withdrawing his heart from his Maker; 13* For pride is the reservoir of sin,
a source which runs over with vice;
Because of it God sends unheard-of afflictions
and brings men to utter ruin.
14 The thrones of the arrogant God overturns
and establishes the lowly in their stead.
15 The roots of the proud God plucks up,
to plant the humble in their place:
16 He breaks down their stem to the level of the ground,
then digs their roots from the earth.
17 The traces of the proud God sweeps away
and effaces the memory of them from the earth.
18 Insolence is not allotted to a man,
nor stubborn anger to one born of woman.

True Glory†

19 Whose offspring can be in honor? Those of men.
Which offspring are in honor? Those who fear God.
Whose offspring can be in disgrace? Those of men.
Which offspring are in disgrace? Those who transgress the commandments.
20 Among brethren their leader is in honor;
he who fears God is in honor among his people.
21 Be it tenant or wayfarer, alien or pauper,
his glory is the fear of the LORD.
22* It is not just to despise a man who is wise but poor, nor proper to honor any sinner.
23 The prince, the ruler, the judge are in honor;
but none is greater than he who fears God.
24* When free men serve a prudent slave,
the wise man does not complain.
25 Flaunt not your wisdom in managing your affairs,
and boast not in your time of need.
26* Better the worker who has plenty of everything than the boaster who is without bread.

27 My son, with humility have self-esteem;
prize yourself as you deserve.
28 Who will acquit him who condemns himself?
who will honor him who discredits himself?
29 The poor man is honored for his wisdom
as the rich man is honored for his wealth;
30 Honored in poverty, how much more so in wealth!
Dishonored in wealth, in poverty how much the more!

CHAPTER 11

1 The poor man's wisdom lifts his head high and sets him among princes.
2 Praise not a man for his looks;
despise not a man for his appearance.
3 Least is the bee among winged things,
but she reaps the choicest of all harvests.
4 Mock not the worn cloak and jibe at no man's bitter day:
For strange are the works of the LORD,
hidden from men his deeds.
5† The oppressed often rise to a throne,
and some that none would consider wear a crown.
6 The exalted often fall into utter disgrace;
the honored are given into enemy hands.

11: Jb 17, 14.
13: Prv 18, 12.
22: Jas 2, 1-4.
24: Prv 17, 2.
26: Prv 12, 9.

10, 9†: The text is uncertain. Its general implication is that man deteriorates physically even while alive: a slight illness today may be followed by death tomorrow. The uncertainty of life leaves no room for pride.

10, 19—11, 6: Regardless of social barriers, genuine honor among men comes from fear of the Lord and a true estimate of self. The Lord exalts the lowly and oppressed; transgressors of the commandments merit dishonor and disgrace.

11, 5: Cf 1 Sm 2, 8; Ps 105, 17-22; Lk 1, 52.

Moderation†

7 Before investigating, find no fault;
examine first, then criticize.
8* Before hearing, answer not,
and interrupt no one in the middle of his speech.
9 Dispute not about what is not your concern;
in the strife of the arrogant take no part.

10 My son, why increase your cares, since he who is avid for wealth will not be blameless?
Even if you run after it, you will never overtake it;
however you seek it, you will not find it.
11* One may toil and struggle and drive,
and fall short all the more.
12 Another goes his way a weakling
and a failure,
with little strength and great misery—
Yet the eyes of the LORD look favorably upon him;
he raises him free of the vile dust, 13 Lifts up his head and exalts him to the amazement of the many.
14*† Good and evil, life and death, poverty and riches, are from the
LORD.
15† Wisdom and understanding and knowledge of affairs,
love and virtuous paths are from
the LORD.
16 Error and darkness were formed with sinners from their birth,
and evil grows old with evildoers.
17 The LORD's gift remains with the
just;
his favor brings continued success.
18 A man may become rich through a miser's life,
and this is his allotted reward:
19*† When he says: "I have found rest,
now I will feast on my possessions,"
He does not know how long it will be till he dies and leaves them to others.

20 My son, hold fast to your duty, busy yourself with it,
grow old while doing your task.
21 Admire not how sinners live, but trust in the LORD and wait for his light;
For it is easy with the LORD suddenly, in an instant, to make a poor man rich.
22 God's blessing is the lot of the just
man,
and in due time his hopes bear
fruit.
23 Say not: "What do I need?
What further pleasure can be mine?"
24 Say not: "I am independent.
What harm can come to me now?"
25* The day of prosperity makes one forget adversity;
the day of adversity makes one forget prosperity.
26† For it is easy with the LORD on the day of death
to repay man according to his
deeds.
27 A moment's affliction brings forgetfulness of past delights;
when a man dies, his life is revealed.
28 Call no man happy before his death,
for by how he ends, a man is known.

Care in Choosing Friends

29 Bring not every man into your house,
for many are the snares of the crafty one;
30 Though he seem like a bird confined in a cage,
yet like a spy he will pick out the weak spots.
31 The talebearer turns good into evil;
with a spark he sets many coals
afire.
32 The evil man lies in wait for blood,
and plots against your choicest possessions.
33 Avoid a wicked man, for he breeds
only evil,
lest you incur a lasting stain.
34 Lodge a stranger with you, and he will subvert your course,
and make a stranger of you to your own household.

CHAPTER 12

1† If you do good, know for whom you are doing it,
and your kindness will have its effect.

11, 8: Prv 18, 13.
11: Ps 127, 2; Eccl 4, 8.
14: Jb 1, 21; 2, 10.
19: Eccl 4, 8; 6, 2; Lk 12, 19.
25: 18, 25.

11, 7-25: Discretion regulates a man's conduct toward others and their affairs (7ff); as regards his own interests, a man should avoid solicitude for the passing external benefits of life and property (10-14.18f.21.23ff), and cultivate the lasting inward gifts of wisdom and virtue (15.17.20.22).

11, 14: Divine Providence ultimately governs the lives of men. Evil: misfortune and calamity sent by God either in punishment or as an incentive to repentance or to greater virtue.

11, 15f: Some ancient witnesses omit these two verses.

11, 19: Cf the parable of the rich man, Lk 12, 16-21.

11, 26ff: Sirach, writing before Christian revelation, did not go beyond the hour of death to find full divine retribution.

12, 1-7: The limitations to the practice of charity here reflected were removed by Christ, who requires that good be done even to enemies and to those who hate, persecute and calumniate us (Mt 5, 43-48).

2 Do good to the just man and reward will be yours,
if not from him, from the LORD.
3† No good comes to him who gives comfort to the wicked,
nor is it an act of mercy that he does.
4* Give to the good man, refuse the sinner;
refresh the downtrodden, give nothing to the proud man.
5 No arms for combat should you give him,
lest he use them against yourself;
6 With twofold evil you will meet for every good deed you do for him.
7 The Most High himself hates sinners,
and upon the wicked he takes vengeance.

8*† In our prosperity we cannot know our friends;
in adversity an enemy will not remain concealed.
9* When a man is successful even his enemy is friendly;
in adversity even his friend disappears.
10 Never trust your enemy,
for his wickedness is like corrosion in bronze.
11† Even though he acts humbly and peaceably toward you,
take care to be on your guard against him.
Rub him as one polishes a brazen mirror,
and you will find that there is still corrosion.
12 Let him not stand near you,
lest he oust you and take your place.
Let him not sit at your right hand,
lest he then demand your seat,
And in the end you appreciate my advice,
when you groan with regret, as I warned you.
13 Who pities a snake charmer when he is bitten,
or anyone who goes near a wild beast?
14 So is it with the companion of the proud man,
who is involved in his sins:
15 While you stand firm, he makes no bold move;
but if you slip, he cannot hold back.
16 With his lips an enemy speaks sweetly,
but in his heart he schemes to plunge you into the abyss.
Though your enemy has tears in his eyes,
if given the chance, he will never have enough of your blood.
17 If evil comes upon you, you will find him at hand;
feigning to help, he will trip you up,
18 Then he will nod his head and clap his hands and hiss repeatedly, and show his true face.

CHAPTER 13

Caution Regarding Associates†

1 He who touches pitch blackens his hand;
he who associates with an impious man learns his ways.
2 Bear no burden too heavy for you;
go with no one greater or wealthier than yourself.
How can the earthen pot go with the metal cauldron?
When they knock together, the pot will be smashed:
3 The rich man does wrong and boasts of it,
the poor man is wronged and begs forgiveness.
4 As long as the rich man can use you he will enslave you,
but when you are exhausted, he will abandon you.
5 As long as you have anything he will speak fair words to you,
and with smiles he will win your confidence;
6 When he needs something from you he will cajole you,
then without regret he will impoverish you.
7 While it serves his purpose he will beguile you,
then twice or three times he will terrify you;
When later he sees you he will pass you by,
and shake his head over you.
8 Guard against being presumptuous;
be not as those who lack sense.
9 When invited by a man of influence, keep your distance;
then he will urge you all the more.
10 Be not bold with him lest you be rebuffed,
but keep not too far away lest you be forgotten.

12, 4f: Gal 6, 10. 8: Prv 17, 17. 9: Prv 19, 4-7.

† 12, 3ff: The author advises against generosity to those who would abuse it.

12, 8-18: Through adversity friends are distinguished from enemies; to trust the latter or permit them intimacy is to invite disaster. Cf note on 6, 5-17.

12, 11: Brazen mirror: see note on Ex 38, 8.

13, 1—14, 2: By means of various figures Sirach indicates the practical impossibility of genuine and sincere companionship between the poor and the proud rich. He lays down the principle of associating with equals (13, 15).

11 Engage not freely in discussion with him,
trust not his many words;
For by prolonged talk he will test you,
and though smiling he will probe you.
12 Mercilessly he will make of you a laughingstock,
and will not refrain from injury or chains.
13 Be on your guard and take care never to accompany men of violence.

14 Every living thing loves its own kind,
every man a man like himself.
15 Every being is drawn to its own kind;
with his own kind every man associates.
16* Is a wolf ever allied with a lamb?
So it is with the sinner and the just.
17† Can there be peace between the hyena and the dog?
Or between the rich and the poor can there be peace?
18 Lion's prey are the wild asses of the desert;
so too the poor are feeding grounds for the rich.
19 A proud man abhors lowliness;
so does the rich man abhor the poor.
20 When a rich man stumbles he is supported by a friend;
when a poor man trips he is pushed down by a friend.
21 Many are the supporters for a rich man when he speaks;
though what he says is odious, it wins approval.
When a poor man speaks they make sport of him;
he speaks wisely and no attention is paid him.
22 A rich man speaks and all are silent,
his wisdom they extol to the clouds.
A poor man speaks and they say: "Who is that?"
If he slips they cast him down.
23 Wealth is good when there is no sin;
but poverty is evil by the standards of the proud.
24* The heart of a man changes his countenance,
either for good or for evil.
25 The sign of a good heart is a cheerful countenance;
withdrawn and perplexed is the laborious schemer.

CHAPTER 14

1* Happy the man whose mouth brings him no grief,
who is not stung by remorse for sin.
2 Happy the man whose conscience does not reproach him,
who has not lost hope.

The Use of Wealth

3† Wealth ill becomes the mean man;
and to the miser, of what use is gold?
4* What he denies himself he collects for others,
and in his possessions a stranger will revel.
5 To whom will he be generous who is stingy with himself and does not enjoy what is his own?
6 None is more stingy than he who is stingy with himself;
he punishes his own miserliness.
7 If ever he is generous, it is by mistake;
and in the end he displays his greed.
8 In the miser's opinion his share is too small;
9 he refuses his neighbor and brings ruin on himself.
10 The miser's eye is rapacious for bread,
but on his own table he sets it stale.

11* My son, use freely whatever you have
and enjoy it as best you can;
12 Remember that death does not tarry,
nor have you been told the grave's appointed time.
13* Before you die, be good to your friend,
and give him a share in what you possess.
14 Deprive not yourself of present good things,
let no choice portion escape you.
15 Will you not leave your riches to others,
and your earnings to be divided by lot?
16 Give, take, and treat yourself well,
for in the nether world there are no joys to seek.
17* All flesh grows old, like a garment;

13, 16: 2 Cor 6, 14ff.
24: Prv 15, 13.
14, 1: 19, 15; 25, 8; Jas 3, 2.
4: Eccl 6, 2.
11: Prv 3, 9.
13: 4, 1; Tb 4, 7.
17: Ps 103, 14ff; Is 40, 6; Jas 1, 10; 1 Pt 1, 24.

† 13, 17: The hostility between the dogs which guard the flocks at night and the rapacious hyenas is proverbial in Palestine.

14, 3-16: The miser does no good even to himself (3-10); wealth should be wisely used during life, for it must be left behind at death (11-16). In the light of the gospel, generosity has a higher motivation and promise of reward than the Old Testament writer could propose. Cf Mt 6, 19ff; Lk 12, 32ff.

the age-old law is: All must die.
16* As with the leaves that grow on a vigorous tree:
one falls off and another sprouts—
So with the generations of flesh and blood:
one dies and another is born.
19 All man's works will perish in decay,
and his handiwork will follow after him.

The Search for Wisdom and Its Blessings†

20* Happy the man who meditates on wisdom,
and reflects on knowledge; 21 Who ponders her ways in his heart,
and understands her paths;
22 Who pursues her like a scout,
and lies in wait at her entry way;
23 Who peeps through her windows,
and listens at her doors;
24 Who encamps near her house,
and fastens his tent pegs next to her walls;
25 Who pitches his tent beside her,
and lives as her welcome neighbor;
26 Who builds his nest in her leafage,
and lodges in her branches;
27 Who takes shelter with her from the heat,
and dwells in her home.

CHAPTER 15

1 He who fears the LORD will do this;
he who is practiced in the law will come to wisdom.
2 Motherlike she will meet him,
like a young bride she will embrace him,
3* Nourish him with the bread of understanding,
and give him the water of learning to drink.
4 He will lean upon her and not fall,
he will trust in her and not be put to shame.
5 She will exalt him above his fellows;
in the assembly she will make him eloquent.
6* Joy and gladness he will find,
an everlasting name inherit.
7 Worthless men will not attain to her,
haughty men will not behold her.
8 Far from the impious is she,
not to be spoken of by liars.
9 Unseemly is praise on a sinner's lips,
for it is not accorded to him by God.
10 But praise is offered by the wise man's tongue;
its rightful steward will proclaim it.

Man's Free Will

11 Say not: "It was God's doing that I fell away";
for what he hates he does not do.
12* Say not: "It was he who set me astray";
for he has no need of wicked man.
13 Abominable wickedness the LORD hates,
he does not let it befall those who fear him.
14* When God, in the beginning, created man,
he made him subject to his own free choice.
15 If you choose you can keep the commandments;
it is loyalty to do his will.
16 There are set before you fire and water;
to whichever you choose, stretch forth your hand.
17* Before man are life and death,
whichever he chooses shall be given him.
18 Immense is the wisdom of the LORD;
he is mighty in power, and all-seeing.
19* The eyes of God see all he has made;
he understands man's every deed.
20 No man does he command to sin,
to none does he give strength for lies.

CHAPTER 16

God's Punishment of Sinners†

1 Desire not a brood of worthless children,
nor rejoice in wicked offspring.
2 Many though they be, exult not in them
if they have not the fear of the LORD.
3* Count not on their length of life,
have no hope in their future.
For one can be better than a thousand;
rather die childless than have godless children!

18: Eccl 1, 4.
20: Ps 1, 2.
15, 3: Jn 4, 10; 6, 31ff.
6: 6, 29-32.
12: Jas 1, 13.
14: Gn 1, 27.
17: Dt 30, 15.
19: Pss 33, 18; 34, 16; Heb 4, 13.
16, 3f: Wis 4, 1f.

14, 20—15, 20: From his social teaching the sage now turns to consider individual responsibility. Happiness is to be found in the pursuit and possession of wisdom (14, 20—15, 5). Joy and honor are given, not to the sinner (7ff), but to him who fears God and observes his law (1-6.10). The sinner is fully responsible for his conduct because God, who sees all things (18f), is not the author of wickedness (11ff.20): he gives to every man the liberty to choose between good and evil (14-17).

16, 1-21: Sinful offspring are a great misfortune (1-4), for history and experience show how God punishes sin (5-10). He judges everyone according to his deeds (11ff); no one is hidden from him or escapes retribution at his hand (15-21).

4 Through one wise man can a city be peopled;
through a clan of rebels it becomes desolate.
5 Many such things has my eye seen,
even more than these has my ear heard.
6*† Against a sinful band fire is enkindled,
upon a godless people wrath flames out.
7*† He forgave not the leaders of old who rebelled long ago in their might;
8*† He spared not the neighbors of Lot whom he detested for their pride;
9† Nor did he spare the doomed people who were uprooted because of their sin;
10*† Nor the six hundred thousand foot soldiers who perished for the impiety of their hearts.
11 And had there been but one stiff-necked man,
it were a wonder had he gone unpunished.
For mercy and anger alike are with him
who remits and forgives, though on the wicked alights his wrath.
12 Great as his mercy is his punishment;
he judges men, each according to his deeds.
13 A criminal does not escape with his plunder;
a just man's hope God does not leave unfulfilled.
14 Whoever does good has his reward,
which each receives according to his deeds.
15 Say not: "I am hidden from God;
in heaven who remembers me?
Among so many people I cannot be known;
what am I in the world of spirits?
16 Behold, the heavens, the heaven of heavens,
the earth and the abyss tremble at his visitation;
17 The roots of the mountains, the earth's foundations,
at his mere glance, quiver and quake.
18 Of me, therefore, he will take no thought;
with my ways who will concern himself?
19* If I sin, no eye will see me;
if all in secret I am disloyal, who is to know?
20 Who tells him of just deeds and what could I expect for doing my duty?"
21 Such are the thoughts of senseless men, which only the foolish knave will think.

Divine Wisdom Seen in Creation†

22 Hearken to me, my son, take my advice, apply your mind to my words,
23 While I propose measured wisdom,
and impart accurate knowledge.
24* When at the first God created his works
and, as he made them, assigned their tasks, 25 He ordered for all time what they were to do and their domains from generation to generation.
They were not to hunger, nor grow weary,
nor ever cease from their tasks.
26 Not one should ever crowd its neighbor,
nor should they ever disobey his word.
27* Then the LORD looked upon the earth,
and filled it with his blessings.
28 Its surface he covered with all manner of life
which must return into it again.

CHAPTER 17

1* The LORD from the earth created man,
and in his own image he made him.
2* Limited days of life he gives him
and makes him return to earth again.
3 He endows man with a strength of his own,
and with power over all things else on earth.
4 He puts the fear of him in all flesh,
and gives him rule over beasts and birds.

16, 7: The leaders of old: the "mighty men of old" who were destroyed by the flood: Gn 6, 4; Wis 14, 6; Bar 3, 26ff.

16, 8: The people of Sodom and Gomorrah: Gn 19, 24f; Ez 16, 49f.

16, 9: The Canaanites: Ex 23, 23f.27-31; 33, 2; Dt 7, 1; Wis 12, 3.

16, 10: The Israelites who murmured against Moses: Nm 11, 20; 14, 12.22ff.

16, 22—17, 18: In harmony with Gn 1—2, the author describes God's wisdom in creating the universe and all things in it (22-28), endowing man with a moral nature, with wisdom and knowledge and freedom of will according to his own image (17, 1.6), so that man may govern the earth (3f), praise God's name (8), obey his law (9-12), and render to him an account of his deeds (18). Cf Pss 19; 104.

5 He forms men's tongues and eyes and ears,
and imparts to them an understanding heart.
6 With wisdom and knowledge he fills them;
good and evil he shows them.
7 He looks with favor upon their hearts,
and shows them his glorious works,
8 That they may describe the wonders of his deeds
and praise his holy name.
9 He has set before them knowledge,
a law of life as their inheritance;
10† An everlasting covenant he has made with them,
his commandments he has revealed to them.
11 His majestic glory their eyes beheld,
his glorious voice their ears heard.
12 He says to them, "Avoid all evil";
each of them he gives precepts about his fellow men.
13 Their ways are ever known to him,
they cannot be hidden from his eyes.
14*† Over every nation he places a ruler,
but the LORD's own portion is Israel.
15 All their actions are clear as the sun to him,
his eyes are ever upon their ways.
16 Their wickedness cannot be hidden from him;
all of their sins are before the LORD.
17 A man's goodness God cherishes like a signet ring,
a man's virtue, like the apple of his eye.
18* Later he will rise up and repay them,
and requite each one of them as they deserve.

Appeal for a Return to God†

19 But to the penitent he provides a way back,
he encourages those who are losing hope!
20 Return to the LORD and give up sin,
pray to him and make your offenses few.
21 Turn again to the Most High and away from sin,
hate intensely what he loathes;
22* Who in the nether world can glorify the Most High in place of the living who offer their praise?
23 No more can the dead give praise than those who have never lived;
they glorify the LORD who are alive and well.
24 How great the mercy of the LORD, his forgiveness of those who return to him!
25 The like cannot be found in men,
for not immortal is any son of man.
26† Is anything brighter than the sun?
Yet it can be eclipsed.
How obscure then the thoughts of flesh and blood!
27 God watches over the hosts of highest heaven,
while all men are dust and ashes.

CHAPTER 18

The Divine Power and Mercy†

1 The Eternal is the judge of all things without exception;
the LORD alone is just.
2 Whom has he made equal to describing his works,
and who can probe his mighty deeds?
3 Who can measure his majestic power,
or exhaust the tale of his mercies?
4 One cannot lessen, nor increase,
nor penetrate the wonders of the LORD.
5 When a man ends he is only beginning,
and when he stops he is still bewildered.
6 What is man, of what worth is he?
the good, the evil in him, what are these?
7* The sum of a man's days is great
if it reaches a hundred years:
8 Like a drop of sea water, like a grain of sand,
so are these few years among the days of eternity.
9 That is why the LORD is patient with men

14: Ex 19, 5; Dt 4, 19f; 32, 8f; Dn 10, 13-21; 12, 1; Rom 13, 1.
18: Jb 19, 25; Jl 3, 4.
22f: Pss 6, 6; 115, 17; Is 38, 18.
18, 7: Ps 90, 10.

17, 10: An everlasting covenant . . . his commandments: the various covenants which God entered into with mankind, e.g., Gn 2, 15ff; 17, 1-22, especially on Mount Sinai where the people saw God's glory and heard his voice (Ex 19, 16 – 24, 18).

17, 14: Ruler: this may refer to civil authority or to angels placed over nations as guardians; see note on Dt 32, 8 and the cross references above.

17, 19-27: Exhorting the sinner to return to God (19ff.24ff), the author implies that the Lord will postpone death for a repentant sinner so that he may fulfill his destiny of praising God on earth (22f). In the light of Christian teaching, the gift of final penitence extends this divine purpose into life everlasting. See note on Ps 6, 6; cf also Ez 18, 23; 33, 11-16.

17, 26: Obscure: literally, evil; compare Gn 6, 5. Though moral fault is not excluded, the thought here is the inability to understand the merciful designs of God. Cf Wis 9, 14-18.

18, 1-13: Not only are God's justice and power beyond man's understanding (1-5), his mercy also is boundless and surpasses all human compassion (6-13).

and showers upon them his mercy.
10 He sees and understands that their death is grievous,
and so he forgives them all the more.
11 Man may be merciful to his fellow man,
but the LORD's mercy reaches all flesh, 12* Reproving, admonishing, teaching,
as a shepherd guides his flock;
13 Merciful to those who accept his guidance,
who are diligent in his precepts.

The Necessity of Prudence

14† My son, to your charity add no reproach,
nor spoil any gift by harsh words.
15 Like dew that abates a burning wind,
so does a word improve a gift.
16 Sometimes the word means more than the gift;
both are offered by a kindly man.
17* Only a fool upbraids before giving;
a grudging gift wears out the expectant eyes.
18 Be informed before speaking;
before sickness prepare the cure.
19† Before you are judged, seek merit for yourself,
and at the time of visitation you will have a ransom.
20 Before you have fallen, humble yourself;
when you have sinned, show repentance.
21 Delay not to forsake sins,
neglect it not till you are in distress.
22*† Let nothing prevent the prompt payment of your vows;
wait not to fulfill them when you are dying.
23 Before making a vow have the means to fulfill it;
be not one who tries the LORD.
24* Think of wrath and the day of death,
the time of vengeance when he will hide his face.
25* Remember the time of hunger in the time of plenty,
poverty and want in the day of wealth.
26 Between morning and evening the weather changes;
before the LORD all things are fleeting.
27 A wise man is circumspect in all things;
when sin is rife he keeps himself from wrongdoing.
28† Any learned man should make wisdom known,
and he who attains to her should declare her praise;
29 Those trained in her words must show their wisdom, dispensing sound proverbs like life-giving waters.

Self-Control†

30* Go not after your lusts,
but keep your desires in check.
31 If you satisfy your lustful appetites
they will make you the sport of your enemies.
32 Have no joy in the pleasures of a moment
which bring on poverty redoubled; 33 Become not a glutton and a winebibber with nothing in your purse.

CHAPTER 19

1 He who does so grows no richer;
he who wastes the little he has will be stripped bare.
2* Wine and women make the mind giddy,
and the companion of harlots becomes reckless.
4 He who lightly trusts in them has no sense,
and he who strays after them sins against his own life.
3 Rottenness and worms will possess him,
for contumacious desire destroys its owner.

The Proper Use of Speech†

5 He who gloats over evil will meet with evil,

12: Jn 10, 11.
17: 20, 13.
22: Nm 30, 3; Dt 23, 22; Ps 50, 14; Prv 20, 25; Eccl 5, 4.
24: 7, 16.
25: 11, 25.
30: Rom 6, 12; 13, 14.
19, 2: Prv 20, 1; 23, 20ff.

18, 14-27: The practice of charity is an art which avoids every offense to the recipient (14-18). Prudence directs the changing circumstances of daily life toward the attainment of its reward at the time of visitation, i.e., the day of reckoning (19-27).

18, 19: Merit . . . ransom: almsgiving is often portrayed in the Bible as a means of approach to the forgiving mercy of God. Cf 3, 29f; 29, 11f; Tb 12, 12f; Dn 4, 24; Lk 16, 9; Acts 10, 31.

18, 22f: The usual object of a vow in Old Testament times was the offering of a bloody sacrifice.

18, 28f: A general statement on the teaching of wisdom, serving either as a conclusion to the preceding section or as an introduction to the following one. The neighbors of the wise man are regarded as the field into which he channels the waters of wisdom to encourage growth. Cf 24, 28-31.

18, 30—19, 4: Inordinate gratification of the senses makes a man unreasonable, the slave of passion, the sport of his enemies. In the end it destroys him physically and spiritually.

19, 5-16: An excellent commentary on the eighth commandment of the Decalogue, forbidding intemperance in speech through calumny, rash judgment, and detraction (5f), and inculcating discreet silence in defense of self and of neighbor (7-11). Justice requires that an accused neighbor be given a hearing, and charity urges fraternal correction; both together fulfill the law of the Most High (12-16); cf Mt 7, 1f; 18, 15f.

and he who repeats an evil report has no sense.
6* Never repeat gossip,
and you will not be reviled.
7* Tell nothing to friend or foe;
if you have a fault, reveal it not,
8 For he who hears it will hold it against you,
and in time become your enemy.
9 Let anything you hear die within
you;
be assured it will not make you burst.
10 When a fool hears something, he is in labor,
like a woman giving birth to a child.
11 Like an arrow lodged in a man's thigh
is gossip in the breast of a fool.
12* Admonish your friend—he may not have done it;
and if he did, that he may not do
it again.
13 Admonish your neighbor—he may not have said it;
and if he did, that he may not say
it again.
14 Admonish your friend—often it may be slander;
every story you must not believe.
15* Then, too, a man can slip and not mean it;
who has not sinned with his
tongue?
16* Admonish your neighbor before you break with him;
thus will you fulfill the law of the Most High.

How to Recognize True Wisdom†

17* All wisdom is fear of the LORD;
perfect wisdom is the fulfillment
of the law.
18 The knowledge of wickedness is not
wisdom,
nor is there prudence in the counsel of sinners.
19 There is a shrewdness that is detestable,
while the simple man may be free
from sin.
20 There are those with little understanding who fear God,
and those of great intelligence
who violate the law.
21 There is a shrewdness keen but dishonest,
which by duplicity wins a judgment.
22 There is the wicked man who is bowed in grief,
but is full of guile within;
23 He bows his head and feigns not to hear,
but when not observed, he will take advantage of you:
24 Even though his lack of strength
keeps him from sinning, when he finds the opportunity, he will do harm.
25 One can tell a man by his appearance;
a wise man is known as such when
first met.
26 A man's attire, his hearty laughter
and his gait,
proclaim him for what he is.

CHAPTER 20

Conduct of the Wise and the Foolish

1† An admonition can be inopportune, and a man may be wise to hold his peace.
2 It is much better to admonish than
to lose one's temper,
for one who admits his fault will be kept from disgrace.
3† Like a eunuch lusting for intimacy with a maiden
is he who does right under compulsion.
4 One man is silent and is thought
wise,
another is talkative and is disliked.
5* One man is silent because he has nothing to say;
another is silent, biding his time.
6 A wise man is silent till the right time comes,
but a boasting fool ignores the proper time.
7 He who talks too much is detested;
he who pretends to authority is hated.

8† Some misfortunes bring success;
some things gained are a man's loss.
9† Some gifts do one no good,
and some must be paid back double.

6: Prv 25, 10.
7: 8, 18f.
12: Lv 19, 17; Mt 18, 15; Lk 17, 3.
15: 14, 1; Jas 3, 2.
16: Lv 19, 17.
17: 1, 1.12.14; Jb 28, 28; Ps 111, 10; Prv 1, 7; 9, 10.
20, 5: 20, 1; Prv 10, 19; 17, 28.

19, 17-26: True and false wisdom as here described are synonymous with virtue and vice, with the fulfillment of the law and the violation of it.

20, 1-7: Wisdom indicates the proper times for speech and silence, that is, the occasions when the most benefit can be gained from them.

20, 3: The sense is that violence or force against a person can prevent an external act of sin or compel a good deed without eliminating the internal sin or desire of wrongdoing. Cf 20, 20.

20, 8-16: In a series of paradoxes the author indicates how much true and lasting values differ from apparent ones.

20, 9: And some . . . double: or perhaps, "but some are doubly precious."

10 Humiliation can follow fame,
while from obscurity a man can lift up his head.
11 A man may buy much for little,
but pay for it seven times over.
12 A wise man makes himself popular by a few words,
but fools pour forth their blandishments in vain.
13 A gift from a rogue will do you no good,
for in his eyes his one gift is equal to seven.
14 He gives little and criticizes often,
and like a crier he shouts aloud.
He lends today, he asks it back tomorrow;
hateful indeed is such a man.
15 A fool has no friends,
nor thanks for his generosity;
16 Those who eat his bread have an evil tongue.
How many times they laugh him to scorn!

17† A fall to the ground is less sudden
than a slip of the tongue;
that is why the downfall of the wicked comes so quickly.
18 Insipid food is the untimely tale;
the unruly are always ready to offer it.
19 A proverb when spoken by a fool is unwelcome,
for he does not utter it at the proper time.
20 A man through want may be unable to sin,
yet in this tranquility he cannot rest.
21 One may lose his life through shame,
and perish through a fool's intimidation.
22 A man makes a promise to a friend out of shame,
and has him for his enemy needlessly.
23 A lie is a foul blot in a man,
yet it is constantly on the lips of the unruly.
24 Better a thief than an inveterate liar,
yet both will suffer disgrace;
25 A liar's way leads to dishonor,
his shame remains ever with him.
26† A wise man advances himself by his words,
a prudent man pleases the great.
27 He who works his land has abundant crops,
he who pleases the great is pardoned his faults.
28* Favors and gifts blind the eyes;
like a muzzle over the mouth they silence reproof.
29 Hidden wisdom and unseen treasure—
of what value is either?
30 Better the man who hides his folly than the one who hides his wisdom.

CHAPTER 21

Sin Must Be Avoided†

1 My son, if you have sinned, do so no more,
and for your past sins pray to be forgiven.
2 Flee from sin as from a serpent.
that will bite you if you go near it;
Its teeth are lion's teeth,
destroying the souls of men.
3 Every offense is a two-edged sword;
when it cuts, there can be no healing.
4 Violence and arrogance wipe out wealth;
so too a proud man's home is destroyed.
5 Prayer from a poor man's lips is heard at once,
and justice is quickly granted him.
6 He who hates correction walks the sinner's path,
but he who fears the LORD repents in his heart.
7 Widely known is the boastful speaker
but the wise man knows his own faults.
8 He who builds his house with another's money is collecting stones for his funeral mound.
9* A band of criminals is like a bundle of tow;
they will end in a flaming fire.
10† The path of sinners is smooth stones that end in the depths of the nether world.

28: Ex 23, 8; Dt 16, 19. 21, 9: Ps 21, 9.

20, 17-25: The ill-timed speech of the wicked, the unruly and a fool is repulsive (17ff); human respect exposes one to intimidation, rash promises and enmity (21f); lies bring dishonor and lasting disgrace (23ff).

20, 26-30: Unlike the fool who invites disaster through misuse of his tongue, the sage through prudent speech gains in honor and esteem among the great (26f). He must beware, however, of accepting bribes, lest he share in evil through silence when he should reprove (28ff).

21, 1-10: Under various figures, the consequences of sin are described as destructive of wealth, and even of bodily life, and deserving of death and a place in the depths of the nether world (2ff.6a.8ff). Through prayer, forgiveness can be sought (1), and through fear of the Lord, repentance is achieved (1, 5.6b).

21, 10: The path of sinners . . . nether world: eternal retribution is not yet proposed in this reference. It became clearly revealed through the teaching of Christ; cf Mt 7, 13f; 25, 41-46; Lk 16, 19-31.

The Wise and the Foolish Differ†

11 He who keeps the law controls his impulses;
he who is perfect in fear of the LORD has wisdom.
12 He can never be taught who is not shrewd,
but one form of shrewdness is thoroughly bitter.
13* A wise man's knowledge wells up in a flood,
and his counsel, like a living spring;
14 A fool's mind is like a broken jar—
no knowledge at all can it hold.
15 When an intelligent man hears words of wisdom,
he approves them and adds to them;
the wanton hears them with scorn and casts them behind his back.
16 A fool's chatter is like a load on a journey,
but there is charm to be found upon the lips of the wise.
17 The views of a prudent man are sought in an assembly,
and his words are considered with care.
18 Like a house in ruins is wisdom to a fool;
the stupid man knows it only as inscrutable words.
19 Like fetters on the legs is learning to a fool,
like a manacle on his right hand.
20* A fool raises his voice in laughter,
but the prudent man at the most smiles gently.
21 Like a chain of gold is learning to a wise man,
like a bracelet on his right arm.

22* The fool steps boldly into a house,
while the well-bred man remains outside;
23 A boor peeps through the doorway of a house,
but a cultured man keeps his glance cast down.
24 It is rude for one to listen at a door;
a cultured man would be overwhelmed by the disgrace of it.
25 The lips of the impious talk of what is not their concern,
but the words of the prudent are carefully weighed.
26 Fools' thoughts are in their mouths,
wise men's words are in their hearts.
27† When a godless man curses his adversary
he really curses himself.
28 A slanderer besmirches himself,
and is hated by his neighbors.

CHAPTER 22

On Laziness and Foolishness

1† The sluggard is like a stone in the mud;
everyone hisses at his disgrace.
2 The sluggard is like a lump of dung;
whoever touches him wipes his hands.
3* An unruly child is a disgrace to its father;
if it be a daughter she brings him to poverty.
4 A thoughtful daughter becomes a treasure to her husband,
a shameless one is her father's grief.
5 A hussy shames her father and her husband;
by both she is despised.
6† Like a song in time of mourning is inopportune talk,
but lashes and discipline are at all times wisdom.
7* Teaching a fool is like gluing a broken pot,
or like disturbing a man in the depths of sleep;
8 He talks with a slumberer who talks with a fool, for when it is over, he will say, "What was that?"
9 Weep over the dead man, for his light has gone out;
weep over the fool, for sense has left him.
10 Weep but a little over the dead man, for he is at rest;
but worse than death is the life of a fool.

13: Prv 13, 14; 16, 22.
20: Eccl 7, 6.
22: Prv 25, 17.
22, 3: Prv 17, 21; 19, 13.
7-11: Prv 23, 9.

21, 11-28: The mind of the wise man is a fountain of knowledge (13.15); his will is trained to keep the law (11); his words are gracious, valued, carefully weighed, sincere (16f.25f); his conduct is respectful, cultured and restrained (20.22ff). The fool's mind is devoid of knowledge and impenetrable to it (12.14.18f); his will rejects it (15); his talk is burdensome (16), his laughter unrestrained (20), his conversation shallow and meddlesome (25f); his conduct is bold and rude (22ff); his abuse of others redounds on himself (27f).

21, 27: Adversary: this can be understood in the sense that, if a man curses one who led him into sin, he implicitly curses himself for having yielded to the sin; or in the sense that the enemy is the man's own sinful nature; or even in the sense that the enemy is the devil, since the Hebrew word used here is satan. Cf 1 Chr 21, 1; Zec 3, 2; 2 Pt 2, 12f; Jude 9.

22, 1-15: To Sirach, a lazy person and an unruly child are a cause of shame and disgrace; everyone wishes to be rid of them (1-5). A wicked fool is as senseless as a man asleep or dead, but the grief he causes others lasts a lifetime (7-11). He is like a brute, troublesome and intolerable (12-15).

22, 6: Like a song . . . is . . . talk: some understand talk in the sense of a rebuke unheeded by the unruly as a joyful song is out of place among mourners. Corporal punishment, however, is always effective.

11* Seven days of mourning for the dead,
but for the wicked fool a whole lifetime.

12 Speak but seldom with the stupid man,
be not the companion of a brute;
13 Beware of him lest you have trouble
and be spattered when he shakes himself;
Turn away from him and you will find rest
and not be wearied by his lack of sense.
14 What is heavier than lead,
and what is its name but "Fool"?
15* Sand and salt and an iron mass
are easier to bear than a stupid man.

16† Masonry bonded with wooden beams
is not loosened by an earthquake;
Neither is a resolve constructed with careful deliberation shaken in a moment of fear.
17 A resolve that is backed by prudent understanding is like the polished surface of a smooth wall.
18 Small stones lying on an open height
will not remain when the wind blows;
Neither can a timid resolve based on foolish plans withstand fear of any kind.

The Preservation of Friendship†

19 One who jabs the eye brings tears:
he who pierces the heart bares its feelings.
20 He who throws stones at birds drives them away,
and he who insults a friend breaks up the friendship.
21 Should you draw a sword against a friend,
despair not, it can be undone.
22 Should you speak sharply to a friend,
fear not, you can be reconciled.
But a contemptuous insult, a confidence broken,
or a treacherous attack will drive away any friend.

23 Make fast friends with a man while he is poor;
thus will you enjoy his prosperity with him.
In time of trouble remain true to him,
so as to share in his inheritance when it comes.
24 Before flames burst forth an oven smokes;
so does abuse come before bloodshed.
25 From a friend in need of support
no one need hide in shame;
26 But from him who brings harm to his friend
all will stand aloof who hear of it.

Prayer†

27* Who will set a guard over my mouth,
and upon my lips an effective seal,
That I may not fail through them,
that my tongue may not destroy me?

CHAPTER 23

1† LORD, Father and Master of my life, permit me not to fall by them!
2 Who will apply the lash to my thoughts,
to my mind the rod of discipline,
That my failings may not be spared,
nor the sins of my heart overlooked;
3 Lest my failings increase,
and my sins be multiplied;
Lest I succumb to my foes,
and my enemy rejoice over me?
4 LORD, Father and God of my life, abandon me not into their control!
5 A brazen look allow me not;
ward off passion from my heart,
6 Let not the lustful cravings of the flesh master me,
surrender me not to shameless desires.

The Proper Use of the Tongue†

7 Give heed, my children, to the instruction that I pronounce,
for he who keeps it will not be enslaved.

11: Gn 50, 10. 27: Ps 141, 3.
15: Prv 27, 3.

22, 16ff: A prudent mind firmly resolved is undisturbed by violent and conflicting thoughts, whereas a foolish person is tossed about by the winds of fear, like small stones whipped about by high winds.

22, 19-26: As disputes and violence weaken friendship, and disloyalty and abuse of confidence destroy it utterly (19-22.24.26), so kindness to a poor man in time of poverty and adversity builds up friendship and merits a share in his prosperity and inheritance (23.25).

22, 27—23, 6: The sage implores the divine assistance to preserve him through stern discipline from sins of the tongue (22, 27; 23, 1); ignorance of mind and weakness of will (2f); and inclinations of the senses and the flesh, lest he fall into the hands of his enemies, or become a prey of shameful desires (3-6).

23, 1: LORD, Father and Master of my life: these words express the tender personal relationship between the author's soul and God, the need of his assistance, and the truth of his providence.

23, 7-15: A warning against sins of the tongue through misuse of the Holy Name, thoughtless swearing which involves obligation and incurs guilt (7-11), blasphemy (12), talk that is coarse and blundersome (13f), and the incorrigible habit of abusive language (15).

8 Through his lips is the sinner ensnared;
the railer and the arrogant man fall thereby.
9* Let not your mouth form the habit of swearing,
or becoming too familiar with the Holy Name.
10† Just as a slave that is constantly under scrutiny
will not be without welts,
So one who swears continually by the Holy Name
will not remain free from sin.
11* A man who often swears heaps up obligations;
the scourge will never be far from his house.
If he swears in error, he incurs guilt;
if he neglects his obligation, his sin is doubly great.
If he swears without reason he cannot be found just,
and all his house will suffer affliction.
12 There are words which merit death;
may they never be heard among Jacob's heirs.
For all such words are foreign to the devout,
who do not wallow in sin.
13 Let not your mouth become used to coarse talk,
for in it lies sinful matter.
14* Keep your father and mother in mind
when you sit among the mighty, Lest in their presence you commit a blunder
and disgrace your upbringing,
By wishing you had never been born
or cursing the day of your birth.
15 A man who has the habit of abusive language will never mature in character as long as he lives.

Sins of the Flesh†

16† Two types of men multiply sins,
a third draws down wrath;
For burning passion is a blazing fire,
not to be quenched till it burns itself out:
A man given to sins of the flesh,
who never stops until the fire breaks forth;
17* The rake to whom all bread is sweet and who is never through till he dies;
18* And the man who dishonors his marriage bed
and says to himself "Who can see me?
Darkness surrounds me, walls hide me;
no one sees me; why should I fear to sin?"
Of the Most High he is not mindful,
19 fearing only the eyes of men;
He does not understand that the eyes of the LORD,
ten thousand times brighter than the sun, Observe every step a man takes
and peer into hidden corners.
20 He who knows all things before they exist
still knows them all after they are made.
21*† Such a man will be punished in the streets of the city;
when he least expects it, he will be apprehended.

22 So also with the woman who is unfaithful to her husband and offers as heir her son by a stranger.
23† First, she has disobeyed the law of the Most High;
secondly, she has wronged her husband;
Thirdly, in her wanton adultery
she has borne children by another man.
24† Such a woman will be dragged before the assembly,
and her punishment will extend to her children;
25 Her children will not take root;
her branches will not bring forth fruit.
26 She will leave an accursed memory;
her disgrace will never be blotted out.
27* Thus all who dwell on the earth shall know,
and all who inhabit the world shall understand,
That nothing is better than the fear of the LORD,

23, 9: Ex 20, 7; Lv 19, 12; Dt 5, 11; Mt 5, 33ff.
11: Lv 5, 4ff.
14: 7, 27; Ex 20, 12; Dt 5, 16.
17: Prv 9, 17.
18: Is 29, 15.
21f: Lv 20, 10; Dt 22, 21.
27: 1, 10-18.24; Prv 3, 1f.

23, 10: As a slave . . . under scrutiny, so is he who calls on God to witness the truth of what he says.

23, 16-27: From sins of the tongue the author proceeds to treat of sins of the flesh and their dire consequences. The passion of lust tyrannizes over its victims and, like fire, consumes and utterly destroys them (16f.22-26). The false security of the adulterer serves but to aggravate his inevitable fate (18-21). Only the fear of the Lord and observance of his commandments can assure moral safety (27).

23, 16: Two types . . . a third: three kinds of sins of impurity, with increasing degrees of gravity: solitary sins (16), fornication (17) and adultery (18-21).

23, 21: Cf Lv 20, 10; Dt 22, 22.

23, 23: The detailed evil of adultery includes disobedience to God's law (Ex 20, 14), injustice to a partner in marriage, and disgraceful offspring.

23, 24f: The judgment of the assembly determined the illegitimacy of children born of adultery or incest and excluded them from the "community of the LORD" (Dt 23, 3). Cf Wis 3, 16-19; 4, 3-6.

nothing more salutary than to obey his commandments.

CHAPTER 24

Praise of Wisdom

1† Wisdom sings her own praises,
before her own people she proclaims her glory;
2 In the assembly of the Most High she opens her mouth,
in the presence of his hosts she declares her worth:
3* "From the mouth of the Most High I came forth, and mistlike covered the earth.
4 In the highest heavens did I dwell,
my throne on a pillar of cloud.
5 The vault of heaven I compassed alone,
through the deep abyss I wandered.
6 Over waves of the sea, over all the land,
over every people and nation I held sway.
7 Among all these I sought a resting place;
in whose inheritance should I abide?

8 "Then the Creator of all gave me his command, and he who formed me chose the spot for my tent, Saying, 'In Jacob make your dwelling,
in Israel your inheritance.'
9 Before all ages, in the beginning, he created me,
and through all ages I shall not cease to be.
10 In the holy tent I ministered before him,
and in Zion I fixed my abode.
11 Thus in the chosen city he has given me rest,
in Jerusalem is my domain.
12 I have struck root among the glorious people, in the portion of the LORD, his heritage.

13 "Like a cedar on Lebanon I am raised aloft,
like a cypress on Mount Hermon, 14 Like a palm tree in En-gedi,
like a rosebush in Jericho,
Like a fair olive tree in the field,
like a plane tree growing beside the water.
15*† Like cinnamon, or fragrant balm, or precious myrrh,
I give forth perfume;
Like galbanum and onycha and sweet spices,
like the odor of incense in the holy place.
16 I spread out my branches like a terebinth,
my branches so bright and so graceful.
17 I bud forth delights like the vine,
my blossoms become fruit fair and rich.
18† Come to me, all you that yearn for me,
and be filled with my fruits;
19 You will remember me as sweeter than honey,
better to have than the honeycomb.
20*† He who eats of me will hunger still,
he who drinks of me will thirst for more;
21 He who obeys me will not be put to shame,
he who serves me will never fail."
22*† All this is true of the book of the Most High's covenant, the law which Moses commanded us
as an inheritance for the community of Jacob.
23* It overflows, like the Pishon, with wisdom—
like the Tigris in the days of the new fruits.
24 It runs over, like the Euphrates, with understanding,
like the Jordan at harvest time.
25† It sparkles like the Nile with knowledge,
like the Gihon at vintage time.
26 The first man never finished comprehending wisdom,
nor will the last succeed in fathoming her.

24, 3ff: 1, 1; Prv 2, 6; 8, 22-36; Wis 7, 24f.
15: Ex 30, 22-25.
20: Is 55, 1; Jn 6, 35.
22: Ex 24, 7.
23ff: Gn 2, 11-14.

24, 1-27: In this chapter Wisdom speaks in the first person, describing her origin, her dwelling place in Israel, and the reward she gives her followers. As in Prv 8, Wisdom is described as a being who comes from God and is distinct from him. While we do not say with certainty that this description applies to a personal being, it does foreshadow the beautiful doctrine of the Word of God later developed in St. John's Gospel (Jn 1, 1-14). In the liturgy this chapter is applied to the Blessed Virgin because of her constant and intimate association with Christ, the Incarnate Wisdom.

24, 15: These substances were associated with worship, being mentioned in Ex 30, 22f.34 as the ingredients of the anointing oil and the sacred incense. Israel was a priestly nation.

24, 18: Compare the words of the Savior in Mt 11, 28ff.

24, 20: So pleasing is wisdom to man that, far from being satiated, he will always desire more.

24, 22: Here the author begins to speak once more. Wisdom having ended her discourse in the preceding verse. Wisdom and the law of Moses are now identified.

24, 25: Gihon: understood by some to have been a name for the Nile: cf Gn 2, 13.

27 For deeper than the sea are her thoughts;
her counsels, than the great abyss.

28† Now I, like a rivulet from her stream, channeling the waters into a garden, 29 Said to myself, "I will water my plants,
my flower bed I will drench";
And suddenly this rivulet of mine became a river,
then this stream of mine, a sea.
30 Thus do I send my teachings forth shining like the dawn,
to become known afar off.
31 Thus do I pour out instruction like prophecy and bestow it on generations to come.

CHAPTER 25

Those Who Are Worthy of Praise†

1 With three things I am delighted,
for they are pleasing to the LORD and to men:
Harmony among brethren, friendship among neighbors,
and the mutual love of husband and wife.
2 Three kinds of men I hate;
their manner of life I loathe indeed:
A proud pauper, a rich dissembler,
and an old man lecherous in his dotage.

3 What you have not saved in your youth,
how will you acquire in your old age?
4 How becoming to the gray-haired is judgment,
and a knowledge of counsel to those on in years!
5 How becoming to the aged is wisdom,
understanding and prudence to the venerable!
6 The crown of old men is wide experience;
their glory, the fear of the LORD.

7 There are nine who come to my mind as blessed,
a tenth whom my tongue proclaims:
The man who finds joy in his children,
and he who lives to see his enemies' downfall.
8† Happy is he who dwells with a sensible wife,
and he who plows not like a donkey yoked with an ox.
Happy is he who sins not with his tongue,
and he who serves not his inferior.
9 Happy is he who finds a friend and he who speaks to attentive ears.
10 He who finds wisdom is great indeed,
but not greater than he who fears the LORD.
11 Fear of the LORD surpasses all else.
its possessor is beyond compare.

Wicked and Virtuous Women†

12 Worst of all wounds is that of the heart, worst of all evils is that of a woman.
13 Worst of all sufferings is that from one's foes,
worst of all vengeance is that of one's enemies:
14 No poison worse than that of a serpent,
no venom greater than that of a woman.
15 With a dragon or a lion I would rather dwell than live with an evil woman.
16 Wickedness changes a woman's looks,
and makes her sullen as a female bear.
17 When her husband sits among his neighbors,
a bitter sigh escapes him unawares.
18 There is scarce any evil like that in a woman;
may she fall to the lot of the sinner!
19 Like a sandy hill to aged feet
is a railing wife to a quiet man.
20 Stumble not through woman's beauty,
nor be greedy for her wealth;
21 The man is a slave, in disgrace and shame,
when a wife supports her husband.

24, 28-31: Spoken by the author. He had at first drawn a small portion of the water of wisdom for his own private benefit, but finding it so useful, he soon began to let others share in this boon by teaching them the lessons of wisdom.

25, 1-11: While praising brotherly love, love of neighbor, and conjugal love, the sage condemns their opposites in the arrogant pauper who despises his brother, the fraudulent rich man who cheats his neighbor, and the lecherous old man unfaithful to his wife (1f). This last, sensual from his youth, lacks the mature blessings of judgment and wisdom in old age (3-6), and the joy of a peaceful household, where honesty and dignity, friendship, wisdom and fear of God prevail (7-11).

25, 8: Like a donkey yoked with an ox: incompatibility between husband and wife.

25, 12-25: Wickedness in a woman is most grievous, painful and bitter to her husband. Through it she becomes vengeful, dangerous and intolerable, jealous, talkative, intemperate and unchaste. Even her very appearance is changed (12-17). The worst of all evils, a source of grief, a snare and a disgrace to her husband, she depresses his mind, saddens and breaks his heart, destroys his strength (18-22). She must not be indulged but made obedient or punished (24f).

22 Depressed mind, saddened face, broken heart—this from an evil wife.
Feeble hands and quaking knees—
from a wife who brings no happiness to her husband.
23† In woman was sin's beginning,
and because of her we all die.
24 Allow water no outlet,
and be not indulgent to an erring wife.
25 If she walks not by your side,
cut her away from you.

CHAPTER 26

1*† Happy the husband of a good wife,
twice-lengthened are his days;
2† A worthy wife brings joy to her husband,
peaceful and full is his life.
3* A good wife is a generous gift bestowed upon him who fears the LORD;
4 Be he rich or poor, his heart is content,
and a smile is ever on his face.

5 There are three things at which my heart quakes,
a fourth before which I quail:
Though false charges in public, trial before all the people,
and lying testimony are harder to bear than death, 6† A jealous wife is heartache and mourning
and a scourging tongue like the other three.
7 A bad wife is a chafing yoke;
he who marries her seizes a scorpion.
8 A drunken wife arouses great anger,
for she does not hide her shame.
9 By her eyelids and her haughty stare
an unchaste wife can be recognized.

10* Keep a strict watch over an unruly wife,
lest, finding an opportunity, she make use of it;
11 Follow close if her eyes are bold,
and be not surprised if she betrays you:
12 As a thirsty traveler with eager mouth drinks from any water that he finds,
So she settles down before every tent peg
and opens her quiver for every arrow.

13 A gracious wife delights her husband,
her thoughtfulness puts flesh on his bones;
14 A gift from the LORD is her governed speech,
and her firm virtue is of surpassing worth.
15 Choicest of blessings is a modest wife,
priceless her chaste person.
16 Like the sun rising in the LORD's heavens,
the beauty of a virtuous wife is the radiance of her home.
17† Like the light which shines above the holy lampstand,
are her beauty of face and graceful figure.
18† Golden columns on silver bases are her shapely limbs and steady feet.

Dangers to Integrity and Friendship

19* These two bring grief to my heart, and the third arouses my horror:
A wealthy man reduced to want;
illustrious men held in contempt;
And the man who passes from justice to sin,
for whom the LORD makes ready the sword.

* 26, 1: 25, 8; Prv 18, 22; 31, 10ff. 3: 36, 24. 10: 42, 11. 19: Ez 18, 24ff.

† 25, 23: According to the account in Gn 3, to which Ben Sirach refers, sin, the cause of death, originated in woman: Eve, the first human being to sin, induced Adam to follow her example. But it is through Adam, as head of the race, that original sin and its punishment of spiritual death are presented by St. Paul (Rom 5) as having entered the world, to become the occasion for the redemptive work of Christ our Lord.

26, 1-4.13-18: A good wife is as a gift from God, bringing joy and peace, happiness and contentment to her husband (1-4) through her thoughtfulness, reserve, modesty and chastity, beauty, grace and virtue (13-18).

26, 2: Worthy: gifted spiritually, mentally and physically. Cf Prv 31, 10.

26, 6-12: A repetition of the thought expressed in 25, 12-25.

26, 17f: The holy lampstand and the golden columns stood in the holy place of the ancient Tabernacle (Ex 25, 31-40; 26, 32).

26, 18: Among the additions found here in some manuscripts are the following lines:

"My son, take care in the prime of life
not to surrender your strength to strangers; Single out from the land a goodly field
and there with confidence sow the seed of your increase;
So shall you have your offspring around you,
and in confidence shall they grow up.

"Though a woman for hire be thought of as a trifle, a married woman is a deadly snare for those who embrace her. [Cf Prv 6, 26.]

"A wife's complaint should be made in meekness,
and show itself in a slight flush;
But a loud-mouthed, scolding wife
is a trumpet signaling for battle:
Any human being who answers that challenge
will spend his life amid the turbulence of war."

20† A merchant can hardly remain upright,
nor a shopkeeper free from sin;

CHAPTER 27

1* For the sake of profit many sin,
and the struggle for wealth blinds the eyes.
2 Like a peg driven between fitted stones, between buying and selling sin is wedged in.
3 Unless you earnestly hold fast to the fear of the LORD,
suddenly your house will be thrown down.
4 When a sieve is shaken, the husks appear;
so do a man's faults when he speaks.
5* As the test of what the potter molds is in the furnace,
so in his conversation is the test of a man.
6* The fruit of a tree shows the care it has had;
so too does a man's speech disclose the bent of his mind.
7 Praise no man before he speaks,
for it is then that men are tested.
8 If you strive after justice you will attain it,
and put it on like a splendid robe.
9 Birds nest with their own kind,
and fidelity comes to those who live by it.
10 As a lion crouches in wait for prey,
so do sins for evildoers.
11 Ever wise are the discourses of the devout,
but the godless man, like the moon, is inconstant.
12 Limit the time you spend among fools,
but frequent the company of thoughtful men.
13 The conversation of the wicked is offensive,
their laughter is wanton guilt.
14 Their oath-filled talk makes the hair stand on end,
their brawls make one stop one's ears.
15* Wrangling among the haughty ends in bloodshed,
their cursing is painful to hear.

16*† He who betrays a secret cannot be trusted,
he will never find an intimate friend.
17 Cherish your friend, keep faith with him;
but if you betray his confidence, follow him not;
18 For as an enemy might kill a man,
you have killed your neighbor's friendship.
19 Like a bird released from the hand,
you have let your friend go and cannot recapture him;
20 Follow him not, for he is far away,
he has fled like a gazelle from the trap.
21* A wound can be bound up, and an insult forgiven,
but he who betrays secrets does hopeless damage.

Malice, Anger and Vengeance

22 He who has shifty eyes plots mischief
and no one can ward him off;
23* In your presence he uses honeyed talk,
and admires your every word,
But later he changes his tone
and twists your words to your ruin.
24* There is nothing that I hate so much,
and the LORD hates him as well.
25* As a stone falls back on him who throws it up,
so a blow struck in treachery injures more than one.
26 As he who digs a pit falls into it,
and he who lays a snare is caught in it, 27 Whoever does harm will be involved in it without knowing how it came upon him.

28 Mockery and abuse will be the lot of the proud,
and vengeance lies in wait for them like a lion.
29 The trap seizes those who rejoice in pitfalls,
and pain will consume them before they die;
30 Wrath and anger are hateful things,
yet the sinner hugs them tight.

* 27, 1: 7, 18; 31, 6; Prv 30, 8f. 5: 1 Pt 1, 7. 6: Mt 7, 20. 15: 23, 9-15. 16: Prv 11, 13; 20, 19. 21: 22, 20. 23: Prv 26, 24ff. 24: Prv 6, 13.16. 25f: Ps 7, 16f; Prv 26, 27; Eccl 10, 8.

† 26, 20—27, 15: From proper conduct in family life, the author proceeds to social morality, warning especially against injustice in commerce (26, 20—27, 3), and perversity of speech in business (4-7). The pursuit of justice in these matters is all the more mentorious as it is difficult (8ff). The discourses of the devout are marked with wisdom, but the conversations of the wicked, with offense, swearing, cursing, quarrels and even bloodshed (11-15).

27, 16—28, 11: Betrayal of confidence through indiscretion destroys friendship and does irreparable harm (16-21); cf 22, 22. False friendship based on hypocrisy and deceit is hateful to God and man (22ff); it soon becomes a victim of its own treachery (25ff). The same fate awaits the malicious and vengeful (27, 28—28, 1). They can obtain mercy and forgiveness only by first forgiving their neighbor, being mindful of death and of the commandments of the Most High (28, 2-7). And they must avoid quarrels and strife (8-11).

CHAPTER 28

1* The vengeful will suffer the LORD's vengeance,
for he remembers their sins in detail.
2* Forgive your neighbor's injustice;
then when you pray, your own sins will be forgiven.

3* Should a man nourish anger against his fellows and expect healing from the LORD?
4 Should a man refuse mercy to his fellows,
yet seek pardon for his own sins?
5 If he who is but flesh cherishes wrath,
who will forgive his sins?
6* Remember your last days, set enmity aside;
remember death and decay, and cease from sin!
7 Think of the commandments, hate not your neighbor;
of the Most High's covenant, and overlook faults.

8 Avoid strife and your sins will be fewer,
for a quarrelsome man kindles disputes, 9* Commits the sin of disrupting friendship and sows discord among those at peace.
10* The more wood, the greater the fire,
the more underlying it, the fiercer the fight;
The greater a man's strength, the sterner his anger,
the greater his power, the greater his wrath.
11 Pitch and resin make fires flare up,
and insistent quarrels provoke bloodshed.

The Evil Tongue†

12 If you blow upon a spark, it quickens into flame,
if you spit on it, it dies out;
yet both you do with your mouth!
13* Cursed be gossips and the double-tongued,
for they destroy the peace of many.
14 A meddlesome tongue subverts many,
and makes them refugees among the peoples;
It destroys walled cities,
and overthrows powerful dynasties.
15 A meddlesome tongue can drive virtuous women from their homes and rob them of the fruit of their toil;
16 Whoever heeds it has no rest,
nor can he dwell in peace.

17 A blow from a whip raises a welt,
but a blow from the tongue smashes bones;
18* Many have fallen by the edge of the sword,
but not as many as by the tongue.
19 Happy he who is sheltered from it,
and has not endured its wrath;
Who has not borne its yoke
nor been fettered with its chain; 20 For its yoke is a yoke of iron and its chains are chains of bronze!
21 Dire is the death it inflicts,
besides which even the nether world is a gain;
22 It will not take hold among the just nor scorch them in its flame, 23 But those who forsake the LORD will fall victims to it,
as it burns among them unquenchably!
It will hurl itself against them like a lion;
like a panther, it will tear them to pieces.
24* As you hedge round your vineyard with thorns,
set barred doors over your mouth;
25 As you seal up your silver and gold,
so balance and weigh your words.
26 Take care not to slip by your tongue
and fall victim to your foe waiting in ambush.

CHAPTER 29

Loans, Alms and Surety†

1* He does a kindness who lends to his neighbor, and he fulfills the precepts who holds out a helping hand.

28, 1: Dt 32, 35; Rom 12, 19.
2: Mt 6, 14.
3: Mt 18, 23ff.
6: 7, 36; 38, 20.
9: Prv 15, 18.
10ff: Prv 26, 20f.
13: 5, 16f.
18: Jas 3, 5ff.
24: 22, 27; Ps 141, 3.
29, 1: Dt 15, 8; Ps 112, 5; Prv 19, 17.

†28, 12-26: Further treatment of sins of the tongue and their havoc; cf 5, 12—6, 1; 19, 5-16; 20, 17-25; 23, 7-15. Gossips and the double-tongued destroy domestic peace (12-16). The whip, the sword, chains, even the nether world, are not so cruel as the suffering inflicted by an evil tongue (17-21). Not the just but those who forsake the LORD are victims of their evil tongues (22f). Therefore, guard your mouth and tongue as you would guard treasure against an enemy (24ff).

29, 1-20: Some practical maxims concerning the use of wealth. Give to a poor man (8f), lend to a needy neighbor, but repay when a loan falls due lest the lender's burden be increased (1-5) and his kindness abused (6f); through charity build up defense against evil (10-13). Go surety for your neighbor according to your means, but take care (20) not to fall, for the shameless play false and bring their protectors and themselves to misfortune and ruin (14-19).

2* Lend to your neighbor in his hour of need,
and pay back your neighbor when a loan falls due;
3 Keep your promise, be honest with him,
and you will always come by what you need.
4 Many a man who asks for a loan adds to the burdens of those who help him;
5 When he borrows, he kisses the lender's hand
and speaks with respect of his creditor's wealth;
But when payment is due he disappoints him
and says he is helpless to meet the claim.
6 If the lender is able to recover barely half,
he considers this an achievement;
If not, he is cheated of his wealth
and acquires an enemy at no extra charge;
With curses and insults the borrower pays him back,
with abuse instead of honor.
7 Many refuse to lend, not out of meanness,
but from fear of being cheated.
8 To a poor man, however, be generous;
keep him not waiting for your alms;
9* Because of the precept, help the needy,
and in their want, do not send them away empty-handed.
10 Spend your money for your brother and friend,
and hide it not under a stone to perish;
11* Dispose of your treasure as the Most High commands,
for that will profit you more than the gold.
12 Store up almsgiving in your treasure house,
and it will save you from every evil;
13 Better than a stout shield and a sturdy spear
it will fight for you against the foe.
14* A good man goes surety for his neighbor,
and only the shameless would play him false;
15 Forget not the kindness of your backer,
for he offers his very life for you.
16 The wicked turn a pledge on their behalf into misfortune,
and the ingrate abandons his protector;
17* Going surety has ruined many prosperous men
and tossed them about like waves of the sea, 18 Has exiled men of prominence and sent them wandering through foreign lands.
19 The sinner through surety comes to grief,
and he who undertakes too much falls into lawsuits.
20 Go surety for your neighbor according to your means,
but take care lest you fall thereby.

Frugality and Its Rewards†

21* Life's prime needs are water, bread, and clothing,
a house, too, for decent privacy.
22* Better a poor man's fare under the shadow of one's own roof than sumptuous banquets among strangers.
23 Be it little or much, be content with what you have,
and pay no heed to him who would disparage your home;
24 A miserable life it is to go from house to house,
for as a guest you dare not open your mouth.
25 The visitor has no thanks for filling the cups;
besides, you will hear these bitter words:
26 "Come here, stranger, set the table,
give me to eat the food you have!
27 Away, stranger, for one more worthy;
for my brother's visit I need the room!"
28 Painful things to a sensitive man are abuse at home and insults from his creditors.

CHAPTER 30

The Training of Children†

1* He who loves his son chastises him often,

2: Ex 22, 24ff; Lv 25, 36; Mt 5, 42.
9: 4, 1ff; Lv 19, 9f; 23, 22; Dt 15, 8.
11: 17, 17; Tb 4, 7ff.
14: 8, 13.
17: Prv 6, 1f; 11, 15.
21: 39, 26.
22: 40, 29.
30, 1: Prv 13, 24; 23, 13; 29, 15; Heb 12, 7.

† 29, 21-28: The man who provides his own basic needs of food, clothing and dwelling, and is content with what he has, preserves his freedom and self-respect (21ff). But if he lives as a guest, even among the rich, he exposes himself to insult and abuse (24-28).

30, 1-13: Sound discipline and careful education of children correct frivolity and stubbornness, prevent remorse and humiliation, and bring to parents lasting joy and delight, prestige among friends, jealousy of enemies, perpetuation and vindication of themselves through their offspring (1-6). Lack of discipline and overindulgence of children bring sorrow and disappointment, terror and grief (7-13).

that he may be his joy when he grows up.
2 He who disciplines his son will benefit from him,
and boast of him among his intimates.
3 He who educates his son makes his enemy jealous,
and shows his delight in him among his friends.
4 At the father's death, he will seem not dead,
since he leaves after him one like himself,
5 Whom he looks upon through life with joy,
and even in death, without regret:
6 The avenger he leaves against his foes,
and the one to repay his friends with kindness.

7 He who spoils his son will have wounds to bandage,
and will quake inwardly at every outcry.
8 A colt untamed turns out stubborn;
a son left to himself grows up unruly.
9 Pamper your child and he will be a terror for you,
indulge him and he will bring you grief.
10 Share not in his frivolity lest you share in his sorrow,
when finally your teeth are clenched in remorse.
11 Give him not his own way in his youth,
and close not your eyes to his follies.
12* Bend him to the yoke when he is young,
thrash his sides while he is still small,
Lest he become stubborn, disobey you,
and leave you disconsolate.
13 Discipline your son, make heavy his yoke,
lest his folly humiliate you.

Health of Soul and Body†

14 Better a poor man strong and robust,
than a rich man with wasted frame.
15 More precious than gold is health and well-being,
contentment of spirit than coral.
16 No treasure greater than a healthy body;
no happiness, than a joyful heart!
17*† Preferable is death to a bitter life,
unending sleep to constant illness.
18* Dainties set before one who cannot eat
are like the offerings placed before a tomb.
19 What good is an offering to an idol
that can neither taste nor smell?
20 So it is with the afflicted man who groans at the good things his eyes behold!

21* Do not give in to sadness,
torment not yourself with brooding;
22 Gladness of heart is the very life of man,
cheerfulness prolongs his days.
23* Distract yourself, renew your courage,
drive resentment far away from you;
For worry has brought death to many,
nor is there aught to be gained from resentment.
24 Envy and anger shorten one's life,
worry brings on premature old age.
25* One who is cheerful and gay while at table benefits from his food.

CHAPTER 31

The Proper Attitude toward Riches†

1 Keeping watch over riches wastes the flesh,
and the care of wealth drives away rest.
2† Concern for one's livelihood banishes slumber;
more than a serious illness it disturbs repose.
3 The rich man labors to pile up wealth,
and his only rest is wanton pleasure;
4 The poor man toils for a meager subsistence,
and if ever he rests, he finds himself in want.

12: 7, 23. 17: 41, 2. 18: Tb 4, 17. 21: 38, 20; Prv 12, 25; 15, 13; 17, 22. 23: 38, 18f. 25: Prv 15, 15.

30, 14-25: Health of mind and body and joy of heart are judged more precious than wealth (14ff); bitterness, constant illness and affliction more difficult to bear than death (17-20). Sadness, resentment, anxiety, envy and anger shorten . . . life; they should be dispelled by cheerfulness and gladness of heart, which help to prolong one's days (21-25).

30, 17: Preferable is death . . . constant illness: the true value of human suffering was revealed through the passion and death of Christ. It serves as reparation for sin, and when united with Christ's suffering, as merit for eternal life.

31, 1-11: Solicitude for acquiring wealth and anxiety over preserving it disturb repose and easily lead to sin and ruin (1-7). Cf Mt 6, 25-34. A rich man who has not sinned or been seduced by wealth is worthy of praise (8-11).

31, 2: The Hebrew adds a verse that seems out of place here: "A faithful comrade drives away reproach, and the friend who keeps secrets is as dear as life."

5 The lover of gold will not be free from sin,
for he who pursues wealth is led astray by it.
6* Many have been ensnared by gold,
though destruction lay before their eyes;
7 It is a stumbling block to those who are avid for it,
a snare for every fool.

8*† Happy the rich man found without fault,
who turns not aside after gain!
9 Who is he, that we may praise him?
he, of all his kindred, has done wonders,
10 For he has been tested by gold and come off safe,
and this remains his glory;
He could have sinned but did not,
could have done evil but would not,
11* So that his possessions are secure,
and the assembly recounts his praises.

Table Etiquette†

12 If you are dining with a great man,
bring not a greedy gullet to his table,
Nor cry out, "How much food there is here!"
13* Remember that gluttony is evil.
No creature is greedier than the eye:
therefore it weeps for any cause.
15 Recognize that your neighbor feels as you do,
and keep in mind your own dislikes:
14 Toward what he eyes, do not put out a hand;
nor reach when he does for the same dish.
16 Behave at table like a favored guest,
and be not greedy, lest you be despised.
17* Be the first to stop, as befits good manners;
gorge not yourself, lest you give offense.
18 If there are many with you at table,
be not the first to reach out your hand.
19* Does not a little suffice for a well-bred man?
When he lies down, it is without discomfort.
20 Distress and anguish and loss of sleep,
and restless tossing for the glutton!
Moderate eating ensures sound slumber
and a clear mind next day on rising.
21† If perforce you have eaten too much,
once you have emptied your stomach, you will have relief.
22 Listen to me, my son, and scorn me not;
later you will find my advice good.
In whatever you do, be moderate,
and no sickness will befall you.
23* On a man generous with food, blessings are invoked,
and this testimony to his goodness is lasting;
24 He who is miserly with food is denounced in public,
and this testimony to his stinginess is lasting.
25 Let not wine-drinking be the proof of your strength, for wine has been the ruin of many.
26 As the furnace probes the work of the smith,
so does wine the hearts of the insolent.
27* Wine is very life to man
if taken in moderation.
Does he really live who lacks the wine
which was created for his joy?
28 Joy of heart, good cheer and merriment
are wine drunk freely at the proper time.
29 Headache, bitterness and disgrace
is wine drunk amid anger and strife.
30 More and more wine is a snare for the fool;
it lessens his strength and multiplies his wounds.
31 Rebuke not your neighbor when wine is served,
nor put him to shame while he is merry;
Use no harsh words with him
and distress him not in the presence of others.

CHAPTER 32

1 If you are chosen to preside at dinner, be not puffed up,

17: 37, 29.
19: Eccl 5, 11.
23: Prv 22, 9.
27: Ps 104, 15; 1 Tm 5, 23.

† 31, 8ff: The Church in her liturgy applies this passage to holy confessors of the Faith.

31, 12—32, 13: A man observing etiquette at table avoids greed and selfishness (31, 12f), is considerate of a neighbor's likes and dislikes and is generous toward him (14f.23f), observes proper manners (16ff), is moderate in eating and drinking (19-22.25-30). A good host makes himself one with his guests, is solicitous for them (32, 1f), provides conversation and diversion (3-6), is modest in speech (7f.10), is respectful of elders (9), polite in comportment and grateful to God for his favors (11ff).

31, 21: Emptied your stomach: the practice of induced vomiting, well-known among pagan Romans, and less well-known among the Jews, seems to be referred to here.

but with the guests be as one of themselves;
Take care of them first before you sit down;
2 when you have fulfilled your duty, then take your place,
To share in their joy
and win praise for your hospitality.
3 Being older, you may talk; that is only your right,
but temper your wisdom, not to disturb the singing.
4 When wine is present, do not pour out discourse,
and flaunt not your wisdom at the wrong time.
5 Like a seal of carnelian in a setting of gold is a concert when wine is served.
6 Like a gold mounting with an emerald seal
is string music with delicious wine.
7* Young man, speak only when necessary,
when they have asked you more than once;
8 Be brief, but say much in those few words,
be like the wise man, taciturn.
9 When among your elders be not forward,
and with officials be not too insistent.
10 Like the lightning that flashes before a storm is the esteem that shines on modesty.
11 When it is time to leave, tarry not;
be off for home! There take your ease, 12 And there enjoy doing as you wish,
but without sin or words of pride.
13 Above all, give praise to your Creator,
who showers his favors upon you.

The Providence of God†

14* He who would find God must accept discipline;
he who seeks him obtains his request.
15* He who studies the law masters it,
but the hypocrite finds it a trap.
16* His judgment is sound who fears the LORD;
out of obscurity he draws forth a clear plan.
17* The sinner turns aside reproof
and distorts the law to suit his purpose.
18 The thoughtful man will not neglect direction;
the proud and insolent man is deterred by nothing.
19* Do nothing without counsel,
and then you need have no regrets.
20 Go not on a way that is set with snares,
and let not the same thing trip you twice.
21 Be not too sure even of smooth roads,
22 be careful on all your paths.
23 Whatever you do, be on your guard,
for in this way you will keep the commandments.
24 He who keeps the law preserves himself;
and he who trusts in the LORD shall not be put to shame.

CHAPTER 33

1* No evil can harm the man who fears the LORD;
through trials, again and again he is safe.
2 He who hates the law is without wisdom,
and is tossed about like a boat in a storm.
3† The prudent man trusts in the word of the LORD,
and the law is dependable for him as a divine oracle.
4 Prepare your words and you will be listened to;
draw upon your training, and then give your answer.

5† Like the wheel of a cart is the mind of a fool;
his thoughts revolve in circles.
6 A fickle friend is like the stallion that neighs, no matter who the rider.
7 Why is one day more important than another,
when it is the sun that lights up every day?
8* It is due to the LORD's wisdom that they differ;
it is through him the seasons and feasts come and go.

8: Gn 1, 14.

---

† 32, 14—33, 4: God is shown to reveal himself through the discipline of his law, a clear and safe plan of life for the pious Jew of old. Direction and counsel are aids in following it (14ff.18-24; 33, 1.3f). Sinners and hypocrites, hating the law or distorting it, fail in wisdom and are devoid of security (32, 15.17f; 33, 2).

33, 3: Oracle: as the answer given through the Urim and Thummim to the high priest is true, so the law proves itself true to him who obeys it. Cf Ex 28, 30; Nm 27, 21.

33, 5-15: Contrasts observable in the physical universe as well as in the moral order serve the purposes of divine wisdom (5-9). All creatures are like clay. . . in the hands of their Creator—the fool and the wise man, the sinner, and the just (10-15). This does not imply that man is created to be a sinner: God is not the author of wickedness. Cf Jas 1, 13f.

9* Some he dignifies and sanctifies,
and others he lists as ordinary days.
10* So too, all men are of clay,
for from earth man was formed;
11 Yet with his great knowledge the LORD makes men unlike;
in different paths he has them walk.
12 Some he blesses and makes great,
some he sanctifies and draws to himself.
Others he curses and brings low,
and expels them from their place.
13* Like clay in the hands of a potter,
to be molded according to his pleasure,
So are men in the hands of their Creator,
to be assigned by him their function.
14* As evil contrasts with good, and death with life,
so are sinners in contrast with the just;
15 See now all the works of the Most High:
they come in pairs, the one the opposite of the other.

16† Now I am the last to keep vigil,
like a gleaner after the vintage;
17 Since by the LORD's blessing I have made progress
till like a vintager I have filled my wine press, 18 I would inform you that not for myself only have I toiled,
but for every seeker after wisdom.

Property and Servants†

19* Listen to me, O leaders of the multitude;
O rulers of the assembly, give ear!
20 Let neither son nor wife, neither brother nor friend,
have power over you as long as you live.
21 While breath of life is still in you,
let no man have dominion over you.
Give not to another your wealth,
lest then you have to plead with him;
22 Far better that your children plead with you than that you should look to their generosity.
23 Keep control over all your affairs;
let no one tarnish your glory.
24 When your few days reach their limit,
at the time of death distribute your inheritance.

25 Fodder and whip and loads for an ass;
the yoke and harness and the rod of his master.
27 Food, correction and work for a slave;
and for a wicked slave, punishment in the stocks.
26* Make a slave work and he will look for his rest;
let his hands be idle and he will seek to be free.
28 Force him to work that he be not idle,
for idleness is an apt teacher of mischief.
29 Put him to work, for that is what befits him;
if he becomes unruly, load him with chains.
30 But never lord it over any human being,
and do nothing unjust.
31* If you have but one slave, treat him like yourself,
for you have acquired him with your life's blood;
32 If you have but one slave, deal with him as a brother,
for you need him as you need your life:
33 If you mistreat him and he runs away,
in what direction will you look for him?

CHAPTER 34

Trust in the Lord and Not in Dreams†

1 Empty and false are the hopes of the senseless,
and fools are borne aloft by dreams.
2 Like a man who catches at shadows or chases the wind,
is the one who believes in dreams.
3 What is seen in dreams is to reality
what the reflection of a face is to the face itself.
4* Can the unclean produce the clean?
can the liar ever speak the truth?

19: Wis 6, 1f.
26: Prv 29, 19.
31: 7, 21.
34, 4: Jb 14, 4.

33, 16ff: Here the author refers to himself as the most recent of the writers who have endeavored to present true wisdom to their readers.

33, 19-33: Public officials should reject every influence that would restrict their freedom in the management of their affairs. They must make their own household subservient to them rather than be subservient to it (19-24). Slaves are to be given food and work and correction but never to be treated unjustly (25-29). Great care should be taken of good slaves (30-33).

34, 1-17: Confidence placed in dreams, divinations and omens is false because these are devoid of reality (1-8). True confidence is founded on knowledge and experience (9-12), and above all on the fear of the Lord, with its accompanying blessings of divine assistance and protection (13-17).

5 Divination, omens and dreams all are unreal;
what you already expect, the mind depicts.
6 Unless it be a vision specially sent by the Most High,
fix not your heart on it;
7 For dreams have led many astray, and those who believed in them have perished.
8 The law is fulfilled without fail, and perfect wisdom is found in the mouth of the faithful man.
9 A man with training gains wide knowledge;
a man of experience speaks sense.
10 One never put to the proof knows little,
whereas with travel a man adds to his resourcefulness.
11 I have seen much in my travels, learned more than ever I could say.
12 Often I was in danger of death, but by these attainments I was saved.

13 Lively is the courage of those who fear the LORD,
for they put their hope in their savior;
14* He who fears the LORD is never alarmed, never afraid; for the LORD is his hope.
15 Happy the soul that fears the LORD!
In whom does he trust, and who is his support?
16* The eyes of the LORD are upon those who love him;
he is their mighty shield and strong support,
A shelter from the heat, a shade from the noonday sun,
a guard against stumbling, a help against falling.
17 He buoys up the spirits, brings a sparkle to the eyes, gives health and life and blessing.

True Worship of God†

18* Tainted his gifts who offers in sacrifice ill-gotten goods!
Mock presents from the lawless win not God's favor.
19 The Most High approves not the gifts of the godless, nor for their many sacrifices does he forgive their sins.
20 Like the man who slays a son in his father's presence is he who offers sacrifice from the possessions of the poor.
21* The bread of charity is life itself for the needy;
he who withholds it is a man of blood.
22 He slays his neighbor who deprives him of his living:
he sheds blood who denies the laborer his wages.
23 If one man builds up and another tears down,
what do they gain but trouble?
24 If one man prays and another curses,
whose voice will the LORD hear?
25* If a man again touches a corpse after he has bathed,
what did he gain by the purification?
26 So with a man who fasts for his sins, but then goes and commits them again:
Who will hear his prayer,
and what has he gained by his mortification?

CHAPTER 35†

1* To keep the law is a great oblation, and he who observes the commandments sacrifices a peace offering.
2† In works of charity one offers fine flour, and when he gives alms he presents his sacrifice of praise.
3 To refrain from evil pleases the LORD,
and to avoid injustice is an atonement.
4* Appear not before the LORD empty-handed,
for all that you offer is in fulfillment of the precepts.
5 The just man's offering enriches the altar and rises as a sweet odor before the Most High.

14: Pss 23, 4; 112, 7f; Prv 3, 23ff; 28, 1.
16: Pss 33, 18; 34, 16.
18: 35, 11; Prv 21, 27.
21f: Lv 19, 13; Dt 24, 14f; Tb 4, 14.
25: Nm 19, 11f; Prv 26, 11; 2 Pt 2, 22.
35, 1ff: 1 Sm 15, 22; Ps 51, 18f; Is 1, 11-18; Hos 6, 6; Am 5, 21-24.
4: Ex 23, 15; 34, 20; Dt 16, 16.

34, 18-26: To be acts of true religion, sacrifice and penance must be accompanied by the proper moral dispositions. To offer to God goods taken from the poor (18-22), or to practice penance without interior reform, is a mockery, worthless in the sight of God (23-26). Cf Mt 15, 4-7; Mk 7, 9-13.

35, 1-24: Keeping the commandments of the law and avoiding injustice constitute sacrifice pleasing and acceptable to God (1ff). Offerings also should be made to him, cheerfully and generously; these he repays . . . sevenfold (4-10). Extortion from widows and orphans is injustice, which God quickly repays (11-18). Punishing the proud and the merciless and coming to the aid of the distressed, he requites all according to their deeds (19-24).

35, 2: Fine flour, together with oil and frankincense, was a prescribed offering to God; cf Lv 2, 1ff.

6 The just man's sacrifice is most pleasing,
nor will it ever be forgotten.
7* In generous spirit pay homage to the LORD,
be not sparing of freewill gifts.
8* With each contribution show a cheerful countenance,
and pay your tithes in a spirit of joy.
9 Give to the Most High as he has given to you,
generously, according to your means.
10* For the LORD is one who always repays,
and he will give back to you sevenfold.
11* But offer no bribes, these he does not accept!
Trust not in sacrifice of the fruits of extortion, 12* For he is a God of justice,
who knows no favorites.
13† Though not unduly partial toward the weak,
yet he hears the cry of the oppressed.
14* He is not deaf to the wail of the orphan,
nor to the widow when she pours out her complaint;

15 Do not the tears that stream down her cheek
cry out against him that causes them to fall?
16 He who serves God willingly is heard;
his petition reaches the heavens.
17 The prayer of the lowly pierces the clouds;
it does not rest till it reaches its goal, 18 Nor will it withdraw till the Most High responds, judges justly and affirms the right.

19* God indeed will not delay, and like a warrior, will not be still 20 Till he breaks the backs of the merciless and wreaks vengeance upon the proud; 21 Till he destroys the haughty root and branch,
and smashes the scepter of the wicked;
22 Till he requites mankind according to its deeds,
and repays men according to their thoughts;
23 Till he defends the cause of his people,
and gladdens them by his mercy.
24 Welcome is his mercy in time of distress
as rain clouds in time of drought.

CHAPTER 36

A Prayer for God's People†

1 Come to our aid, O God of the universe,
and put all the nations in dread of you!
2 Raise your hand against the heathen,
that they may realize your power.
3 As you have used us to show them your holiness,
so now use them to show us your glory.
4 Thus they will know, as we know,
that there is no God but you.

5 Give new signs and work new wonders;
show forth the splendor of your right hand and arm; 6* Rouse your anger, pour out wrath,
humble the enemy, scatter the foe.
7 Hasten the day, bring on the time;
9 crush the heads of the hostile rulers.
8 Let raging fire consume the fugitive,
and your people's oppressors meet destruction.

10 Gather all the tribes of Jacob,
that they may inherit the land as of old,
11* Show mercy to the people called by your name;
Israel, whom you named your first-born.
12* Take pity on your holy city,
Jerusalem, your dwelling place.
13 Fill Zion with your majesty,
your temple with your glory.

14 Give evidence of your deeds of old;
fulfill the prophecies spoken in your name, 15 Reward those who have hoped in you,
and let your prophets be proved true.
16 Hear the prayer of your servants,

7: 7, 31.
8: 2 Cor 9, 7.
10: Prv 19, 17.
11: 34, 18f; Prv 21, 27.
12: Dt 10, 17; 2 Chr 19, 7; Jb 34, 19; Wis 6, 7; Acts 10, 34; Rom 2, 11; Gal 2, 6; 1 Pt 1, 17.
14f: Ex 22, 22.
19: Is 42, 13ff; 2 Pt 3, 9.
36, 6: Ps 79, 6.
11: Ex 4, 22.
12: 2 Chr 6, 41; Ps 132, 8.14; Is 2, 1ff; Mi 4, 1ff.

† 35, 13: Cf Lv 19, 15.
36, 1-17: Making an act of faith and hope in the supreme Lord of the universe, the author begs God to continue manifesting his holiness and mercy through Israel, his people (1ff.10-13), and his power and justice through the punishment of the nations (2.5-9), that all the earth may acknowledge him the eternal God (4.14-17).

for you are ever gracious to your people; 17 Thus it will be known to the very ends of the earth
that you are the eternal God.

Choice of Associates†

18 The throat can swallow any food,
yet some foods are more agreeable than others;
19 As the palate tests meat by its savor,
so does a keen mind insincere words.
20 A deceitful character causes grief,
but an experienced man can turn the tables on him.
21 Though any man may be accepted as a husband,
yet one girl will be more suitable than another:
22* A woman's beauty makes her husband's face light up,
for it surpasses all else that charms the eye;
23 And if, besides, her speech is kindly,
his lot is beyond that of mortal men.
24* A wife is her husband's richest treasure,
a helpmate, a steadying column.
25 A vineyard with no hedge will be overrun;
a man with no wife becomes a homeless wanderer.
26 Who will trust an armed band that shifts from city to city?
27* Or a man who has no nest,
but lodges where night overtakes him?

CHAPTER 37

1* Every friend declares his friendship,
but there are friends who are friends in name only.
2 Is it not a sorrow unto death
when your bosom companion becomes your enemy?
3 "Alas, my companion! Why were you created to blanket the earth with deceit?"
4 A false friend will share your joys,
but in time of trouble he stands afar off.
5 A true friend will fight with you against the foe,
against your enemies he will be your shield-bearer.
6 Forget not your comrade during the battle,
and neglect him not when you distribute your spoils.

7 Every counselor points out a way,
but some counsel ways of their own;
8 Be on the alert when one proffers advice,
find out first of all what he wants.
For he may be thinking of himself alone;
why should the profit fall to him?
9 He may tell you how good your way will be,
and then stand by to watch your misfortune.
10 Seek no advice from one who regards you with hostility;
from those who envy you, keep your intentions hidden.
11 Speak not to a woman about her rival,
nor to a coward about war,
to a merchant about business,
to a buyer about value,
to a miser about generosity,
to a cruel man about mercy,
to a lazy man about work,
to a seasonal laborer about the harvest,
to an idle slave about a great task:
pay no attention to any advice they give.
12 Instead, associate with a religious man,
who you are sure keeps the commandments;
Who is like-minded with yourself
and will feel for you if you fall.
13 Then, too, heed your own heart's counsel;
for what have you that you can depend on more?
14 A man's conscience can tell him his situation better than seven watchmen in a lofty tower.
15 Most important of all, pray to God
to set your feet in the path of truth.

Wisdom and Temperance†

16* A word is the source of every deed;
a thought, of every act.
17 The root of all conduct is the mind;
four branches it shoots forth:
18* Good and evil, death and life,

22: 26, 13ff.
24: Gn 2, 18; Prv 18, 22.
27: Prv 27, 8.
37, 1: 6, 7ff.
16: 32, 19.
18: Prv 18, 21.

† 36, 18—37, 15: In the choice of wife, friend or associate, experience is a discerner of character (18-21). Beauty and kindly speech make a woman desirable as wife (22f). The good wife becomes her husband's richest treasure, his helpmate in establishing his household (24-27). A true friend fights for his comrade and shares his spoils with him (37, 5f); a false one deceives and abandons him in time of need (1-4). A true counselor and associate should be sought among those who keep the commandments, not among those who break them and seek their own advantage (7-12). In all things pray to God for light and follow conscience (13ff).

37, 16-25: Thoughts determine action. Wisdom is the source of good and life; folly, of evil and death (16ff). If the fruits of a man's wisdom benefit himself, he may be praised in his own lifetime; if they benefit his people, his praise endures after him, in their lives (19-25).

their absolute mistress is the tongue.
19 A man may be wise and benefit many,
yet be of no use to himself.
20 Though a man may be wise, if his words are rejected
he will be deprived of all enjoyment.
21 When a man is wise to his own advantage,
the fruits of his knowledge are seen in his own person;
22* When a man is wise to his people's advantage,
the fruits of his knowledge are enduring:
23 Limited are the days of one man's life,
but the life of Israel is days without number.
24 One wise for himself has full enjoyment,
and all who see him praise him;
25* One wise for his people wins a heritage of glory,
and his name endures forever.

26† My son, while you are well, govern your appetite
so that you allow it not what is bad for you; 27* For not every food is good for everyone,
nor is everything suited to every taste.
28* Be not drawn after every enjoyment,
neither become a glutton for choice foods, 29 For sickness comes with overeating,
and gluttony brings on biliousness.
30 Through lack of self-control many have died,
but the abstemious man prolongs his life.

CHAPTER 38

Sickness and Death†

1 Hold the physician in honor, for he is essential to you, and God it was who established his profession.
2 From God the doctor has his wisdom,
and the king provides for his sustenance.
3 His knowledge makes the doctor distinguished,
and gives him access to those in authority.
4 God makes the earth yield healing herbs
which the prudent man should not neglect;
5* Was not the water sweetened by a twig that men might learn his power?
6 He endows men with the knowledge to glory in his mighty works,
7 Through which the doctor eases pain
and the druggist prepares his medicines;
8 Thus God's creative work continues without cease
in its efficacy on the surface of the earth.

9* My son, when you are ill, delay not,
but pray to God, who will heal you:
10 Flee wickedness; let your hands be just,
cleanse your heart of every sin;
11* Offer your sweet-smelling oblation and petition,
a rich offering according to your means.
12 Then give the doctor his place
lest he leave; for you need him too.
13 There are times that give him an advantage,
14 and he too beseeches God
That his diagnosis may be correct and his treatment bring about a cure.
15 He who is a sinner toward his Maker
will be defiant toward the doctor.

16*† My son, shed tears for one who is dead
with wailing and bitter lament;
As is only proper, prepare the body,
absent not yourself from his burial:
17 Weeping bitterly, mourning fully,
pay your tribute of sorrow, as he deserves, 18 One or two days, to prevent gossip;
then compose yourself after your grief,
19* For grief can bring on an extremity
and heartache destroy one's health.

22: 15, 1ff.
25: 39, 9; 44, 13f.
27: 1 Cor 6, 12; 10, 23.
28f: 31, 13.16ff.
38, 5: Ex 15, 25.
9: Is 38, 2f.
11: Lv 2, 1ff.
16: 22, 9f.
19: Prv 12, 25; 15, 13; 17, 22.

† 37, 26-30: Temperance and self-control should govern a man's appetite for food, which is intended not to destroy but to preserve life.

38, 1-15: The profession of medicine comes from God, who makes the earth yield healing herbs and gives the physician knowledge of their virtue (1-8). In illness the sick man should cleanse his soul from sin and petition God for help through an offering of sacrifice; the physician, too, does well to invoke God that he may understand the illness and apply the proper remedy (9-14). The sinner, in contrast, defies both his Maker and the doctor (15).

38, 16-23: A period of mourning for the deceased and care for their burial is becoming (16ff). But grief should not be excessive, for it neither helps the dead, who cannot return, nor fails to harm the living. The mourner's own end will quickly follow, and the time to prepare for it is now (19-23).

20* Turn not your thoughts to him again;
cease to recall him; think rather
of the end.
21* Recall him not, for there is no hope of his return;
it will not help him, but will do you
harm.
22* Remember that his fate will also be
yours;
for him it was yesterday, for you
today.
23 With the departed dead, let memory
fade;
rally your courage, once the soul
has left.

Vocations of the Craftsman and the Scribe†

24 The scribe's profession increases his
wisdom;
whoever is free from toil can become a wise man.
25 How can he become learned who guides the plow,
who thrills in wielding the goad
like a lance,
Who guides the ox and urges on the bullock,
and whose every concern is for cattle?
26 His care is for plowing furrows, and he keeps a watch on the beasts in the stalls.

27 So with every engraver and designer
who, laboring night and day, Fashions carved seals,
and whose concern is to vary the pattern.
His care is to produce a vivid impression,
and he keeps watch till he finishes
his design.

28 So with the smith standing near his anvil,
forging crude iron.
The heat from the fire sears his flesh,
yet he toils away in the furnace
heat.
The clang of the hammer deafens
his ears,
His eyes are fixed on the tool he is shaping.
His care is to finish his work,
and he keeps watch till he perfects
it in detail.

29 So with the potter sitting at his labor,
revolving the wheel with his feet.
He is always concerned for his products,
and turns them out in quantity.
30 With his hands he molds the clay,
and with his feet softens it.
His care is for proper coloring, and he keeps watch on the fire of his kiln.
31 All these men are skilled with their hands,
each one an expert at his own
task;
32 Without them no city could be lived
in,
and wherever they stay, they need not hunger.
33 They do not occupy the judge's bench,
nor are they prominent in the assembly;
They set forth no decisions or judgments,
nor are they found among the rulers;
34 Yet they maintain God's ancient
handiwork,
and their concern is for exercise
of their skill.

CHAPTER 39

1 How different the man who devotes
himself
to the study of the law of the Most High!
He explores the wisdom of the men
of old
and occupies himself with the prophecies;
2 He treasures the discourses of famous men,
and goes to the heart of involved
sayings;
3 He studies obscure parables,
and is busied with the hidden meanings of the sages.
4 He is in attendance on the great,
and has entrance to the ruler.
5 He travels among the peoples of foreign lands
to learn what is good and evil among men.
6 His care is to seek the LORD, his Maker,
to petition the Most High,
To open his lips in prayer,
to ask pardon for his sins.

20: 7, 36; 18, 24; 30, 21.
21: 2 Sm 12, 23;
Wis 2, 1.
22: Jas 4, 13ff.

†38, 24—39, 11: More excellent than the useful service of craftsmen—farmer, engraver, smith, potter (25-34)—is the profession of the scribe (24), who studies and meditates on the law of the Most High, seeks him in prayer of thanksgiving, petition and repentance for sin (39, 1.6f), explores the wisdom of the past and present, travels abroad to observe the conduct of many peoples, and attends rulers and great men. Through the spirit of understanding granted by God, he will show forth his wisdom to the glory of God's law, gaining renown for generations to come (2-5.8-11).

Then, if it pleases the LORD Almighty,
he will be filled with the spirit of understanding;
He will pour forth his words of wisdom
and in prayer give thanks to the LORD, 7 Who will direct his knowledge and his counsel,
as he meditates upon his mysteries.
8 He will show the wisdom of what he has learned and glory in the law of the LORD's covenant.
9* Many will praise his understanding;
his fame can never be effaced;
Unfading will be his memory,
through all generations his name will live;
10 Peoples will speak of his wisdom,
and in assembly sing his praises.
11 While he lives he is one out of a thousand,
and when he dies his renown will not cease.

Praise of God the Creator†

12 Once more I will set forth my theme to shine like the moon in its fullness!
13 Listen, my faithful children: open up your petals,
like roses planted near running waters;
14 Send up the sweet odor of incense,
break forth in blossoms like the lily.
Send up the sweet odor of your hymn of praise;
bless the LORD for all he has done!
15 Proclaim the greatness of his name,
loudly sing his praises,
With music on the harp and all stringed instruments;
sing out with joy as you proclaim:

16* The works of God are all of them good;
in its own time every need is supplied.
17* At his word the waters become still as in a flask;
he had but to speak and the reservoirs were made.
18 He has but to command and his will is done;
nothing can limit his achievement.
19* The works of all mankind are present to him;
not a thing escapes his eye.
20 His gaze spans all the ages;
to him there is nothing unexpected.
21 No cause then to say: "What is the purpose of this?"
Everything is chosen to satisfy a need.
22 His blessing overflows like the Nile;
like the Euphrates it enriches the surface of the earth.
23* Again, his wrath expels the nations
and turns fertile land into a salt marsh.
24 For the virtuous his paths are level,
to the haughty they are steep;
25 Good things for the good he provided from the beginning,
but for the wicked good things and bad.
26* Chief of all needs for human life
are water and fire, iron and salt,
The heart of the wheat, milk and honey,
the blood of the grape, and oil, and cloth;
27 For the good all these are good,
but for the wicked they turn out evil.
28 There are storm winds created to punish,
which in their fury can dislodge mountains;
When destruction must be, they hurl all their force
and appease the anger of their Maker.
29 In his treasury also, kept for the proper time,
are fire and hail, famine, disease, 30 Ravenous beasts, scorpions, vipers,
and the avenging sword to exterminate the wicked;
31 In doing his bidding they rejoice,
in their assignments they disobey not his command.
32 So from the first I took my stand,
and wrote down as my theme:
33* The works of God are all of them good;
every need when it comes he fills.
34 No cause then to say: "This is not as good as that";
for each shows its worth at the proper time.
35 So now with full joy of heart proclaim and bless the name of the Holy One.

39, 9: 37, 25; 44, 14.
16: Gn 1, 31; Ecc 3, 11.
17: Gn 1, 6-10; Ex 14, 21f; Jos 3, 16.
19: 15, 19; 42, 20.
23: Jos 1, 2-6.
26: 29, 21.
33: 39, 16; Gn 1, 31; Ecc 3, 11.

† 39, 12-35: The sage invites his disciples to join him in joyfully proclaiming his favorite theme: The works of God are all of them good; in its own time every need is supplied (12-16.32-35). He describes God's omniscience, supreme power and wisdom, whereby all created things, good in themselves, are ever present to him, obey him, and fulfill their intended purpose (17-21), bringing blessing to the virtuous, but evil and punishment to the wicked who misuse them (22-31). Cf similar hymns of praise, 36, 1-17; 42, 15—43, 35.

CHAPTER 40

Joys and Miseries of Life†

1* A great anxiety has God allotted,
and a heavy yoke, to the sons of men;
From the day one leaves his mother's womb
to the day he returns to the mother of all the living, 2 His thoughts, the fear in his heart,
and his troubled forebodings till the day he dies—
3 Whether he sits on a lofty throne
or grovels in dust and ashes, 4 Whether he bears a splendid crown or is wrapped in the coarsest of cloaks—5 Are of wrath and envy, trouble and dread, terror of death, fury and strife.
Even when he lies on his bed to rest,
his cares at night disturb his sleep.
6 So short is his rest it seems like none,
till in his dreams he struggles as he did by day, Terrified by what his mind's eye sees,
like a fugitive being pursued;
7 As he reaches safety, he wakes up astonished that there was nothing to fear.
8 So it is with all flesh, with man and with beast,
but for sinners seven times more.
9* Plague and bloodshed, wrath and the sword,
plunder and ruin, famine and death:
10 For the wicked, these were created evil,
and it is they who bring on destruction.

11† All that is of earth returns to earth,
and what is from above returns above.
12 All that comes from bribes or injustice will be wiped out,
but loyalty remains for ages.
13 Wealth out of wickedness is like a wadi in spate:
like a mighty stream with lightning and thunder, 14* Which, in its rising, rolls along the stones,
but suddenly, once and for all, comes to an end.
15 The offshoot of violence will not flourish,
for the root of the godless is on sheer rock;
16 Or they are like reeds on the riverbank,
withered before all other plants;
17† But goodness will never be cut off,
and justice endures forever.

Wealth or wages can make life sweet,
but better than either is finding a treasure.
18* A child or a city will preserve one's name,
but better than either, attaining wisdom.
19 Sheepfolds and orchards bring flourishing health;
but better than either, a devoted wife;
20* Wine and music delight the soul,
but better than either, conjugal love.
21 The flute and the harp offer sweet melody,
but better than either, a voice that is true.
22* Charm and beauty delight the eye,
but better than either, the flowers of the field.
23 A friend, a neighbor, are timely guides,
but better than either, a prudent wife.
24 A brother, a helper, for times of stress;
but better than either, charity that rescues.
25 Gold and silver make one's way secure,
but better than either, sound judgment.
26 Wealth and vigor build up confidence,
but better than either, fear of God.
Fear of the LORD leaves nothing wanting;
he who has it need seek no other support:
27* The fear of God is a paradise of blessings;
its canopy, all that is glorious.

40, 1: Gn 3, 17; Jb 7, 1; 14, 1; Eccl 2, 23.
9: 39, 28ff.
14: 23, 25; Wis 4, 3ff.
18: Prv 19, 14.
20: Ps 104, 15.
22: Mt 6, 28f.
27: Is 4, 5.

40, 1-16: The former idyllic description of the universe is contrasted with the picture of the evils afflicting humanity. Every man, high or low, is burdened from birth to death with fears, anxieties and troubles, by day and often by night, the time appointed for rest (1-7). For sinners, the suffering is much greater (8ff). What they gained by violence and injustice is quickly destroyed; but justice endures forever (14ff).

40, 1: Mother of all the living: the earth from which man was taken. Cf Gn 2, 7; 3, 19f; Jb 1, 21; Ps 139, 15.

40, 11: All that is of earth . . . returns above: a reference to bodily mortality and to the divine origin of life from the Spirit of God. Cf 41, 10; Gn 2, 7; 3, 19; Jb 34, 14f; Pss 104, 29f; 146, 4; Eccl 12, 7. The Greek and the Latin render the second half of the verse: "all waters shall return to the sea."

40, 17-27: Of the many treasures making life sweet, such as health, children, friends, music, vigor, the best are called true conjugal love, wisdom, and above all, fear of God; cf 25, 6-11.

28† My son, live not the life of a beggar,
better to die than to beg;
29* When one has to look to another's table,
his life is not really a life.
His neighbor's delicacies bring revulsion of spirit
to one who understands inward feelings:
30 In the mouth of the shameless man begging is sweet,
but within him it burns like fire.

CHAPTER 41†

1 O death! how bitter the thought of you for the man at peace amid his possessions,
For the man unruffled and always successful,
who still can enjoy life's pleasures.
2* O death! how welcome your sentence
to the weak man of failing strength, Tottering and always rebuffed,
with no more sight, with vanished hope.
3* Fear not death's decree for you;
remember, it embraces those before you, and those after.
4 Thus God has ordained for all flesh;
why then should you reject the will of the Most High?
Whether one has lived a thousand years, a hundred, or ten,
in the nether world he has no claim on life.

5* A reprobate line are the children of sinners,
and witless offspring are in the homes of the wicked.
6 Their dominion is lost to sinners' children,
and reproach abides with their descendants.
7 Children curse their wicked father,
for they suffer disgrace through him.
8 Woe to you, O sinful men, who forsake the law of the Most High.
9 If you have children, calamity will seize them;
you will beget them only for groaning.
When you stumble, there is lasting joy;
at death, you become a curse.
10* Whatever is of nought returns to nought,
so too the godless from void to void.
11* Man's body is a fleeting thing,
but a virtuous name will never be annihilated.
12* Have a care for your name, for it will stand by you better than precious treasures in the thousands; 13 The boon of life is for limited days,
but a good name, for days without number.

True and False Shame†

14 My children, heed my instruction about shame;
judge of disgrace only according to my rules,
For it is not always well to be ashamed,
nor is it always the proper thing to blush:
15 Before father and mother be ashamed of immorality,
before master and mistress, of falsehood;
16 Before prince and ruler, of flattery;
before the public assembly, of crime;
17 Before friend and companion, of disloyalty,
and of breaking an oath or agreement.
18 Be ashamed of theft from the people where you settle,
and of stretching out your elbow when you dine;
19 Of refusing to give when asked,
of defrauding another of his appointed share, 20 Of failing to return a greeting,
and of rebuffing a friend;
21* Of gazing at a married woman,
and of entertaining thoughts about another's wife;
Of trifling with a servant girl you have,
and of violating her couch;
22* Of using harsh words with friends,
and of following up your gifts with insults;

29: 29, 24.
41, 2: 30, 17.
3: 38, 20ff.
5ff: 3, 9ff; Wis 3, 16-19.
10: 40, 11; Wis 4, 19.
11: Prv 10, 7.
12: Prv 22, 1; Eccl 7, 1.
21: 9, 8; Mt 5, 28.
22: 18, 14; 20, 13.

† 40, 28ff. Among the Jews, beggary was considered degrading to human dignity; it was agreeable only to the shameless, who had lost their sense of honor. Cf 29, 22f.

41, 1-13: Whether death seems bitter to one who enjoys peace, success and pleasure, or welcome to one who is weak and in despair, it comes to all and must be accepted as the will of God (1-4). As the human body passes away (11), so do those who have sinned through the body and their offspring alike, who, needy and accursed, pass on with their parents as if they had never been (5-10). Only the good name of the virtuous endures (11ff).

41, 13: After this verse many texts repeat 20, 29f.

41, 14—42, 8: The author illustrates the subject of true and false shame with numerous and detailed examples of sin (14-24) and virtue (42, 1-8), following the norm of the commandments.

23* Of repeating what you hear,
and of betraying secrets—24 These are the things you should rightly avoid as shameful
if you would be looked upon by everyone with favor.

CHAPTER 42

1* But of these things be not ashamed,
lest you sin through human respect:
2 Of the law of the Most High and his precepts,
or of the sentence to be passed upon the sinful;
3 Of sharing the expenses of a business or a journey,
or of dividing an inheritance or property;
4* Of accuracy of scales and balances,
or of tested measures and weights;
5* Of acquiring much or little,
or of bargaining in dealing with a merchant;
Of constant training of children,
or of beating the sides of a disloyal servant;
6 Of a seal to keep an erring wife at home.
or of a lock placed where there are many hands;
7 Of numbering every deposit,
or of recording all that is given or received;
8 Of chastisement of the silly and the foolish,
or of the aged and infirm answering for wanton conduct.
Thus you will be truly cautious and recognized by all men as discreet.

A Father's Care for His Daughter†

9* A daughter is a treasure that keeps her father wakeful,
and worry over her drives away rest:
Lest she pass her prime unmarried,
or when she is married, lest she be disliked;
10 While unmarried, lest she be seduced,
or, as a wife, lest she prove unfaithful;
Lest she conceive in her father's home,
or be sterile in that of her husband.
11* Keep a close watch on your daughter,
lest she make you the sport of your enemies,
A byword in the city, a reproach among the people,
an object of derision in public gatherings.
See that there is no lattice in her room,
no place that overlooks the approaches to the house.
12* Let her not parade her charms before men,
or spend her time with married women;
13 For just as moths come from garments,
so harm to women comes from women:
14 Better a man's harshness than a woman's indulgence,
and a frightened daughter than any disgrace.

The Works of God in Nature†

15* Now will I recall God's works;
what I have seen, I will describe.
At God's word were his works brought into being;
they do his will as he has ordained for them.
16 As the rising sun is clear to all,
so the glory of the LORD fills all his works;
17 Yet even God's holy ones must fail in recounting the wonders of the LORD, Though God has given these, his hosts, the strength to stand firm before his glory.
18 He plumbs the depths and penetrates the heart;
their innermost being he understands.
The Most High possesses all knowledge,
and sees from of old the things that are to come:
19 He makes known the past and the future,
and reveals the deepest secrets.
20* No understanding does he lack;
no single thing escapes him.
21 Perennial is his almighty wisdom;
he is from all eternity one and the same,
22* With nothing added, nothing taken away;

23: 27, 16.
42, 1: Prv 24, 23; Jas 2, 1.
4: Prv 11, 1.
5: 30, 1-13; 33, 25-33.
9: 7, 24f.
11: 26, 10.
12f: 9, 1-9.
15: Ps 77, 12f.
20: 39, 19; Wis 1, 6-10.
22: Is 40, 13; Rom 11, 34.

42, 9-14: The author considers a daughter to be a source of anxiety to her father, lest she fail to marry, or be seduced, or lest, marrying, she be disliked, prove unfaithful, or find herself sterile (9f). He is advised to keep a close watch on her at home, and on her companionship while abroad, lest he suffer on her account among the people (11-14).

42, 15—43, 35: These verses comprise a new section. In them the author contemplates God's power, beauty and goodness as manifested in the mighty work of creating and preserving the universe (42, 15ff.23.25; 43, 1-27), his omniscience (42, 18ff), his perfect wisdom (21f), his eternity (24). The conclusion is a fervent hymn of praise (43, 28-35). Cf 16, 22—18, 13.

no need of a counselor for him!
23 How beautiful are all his works!
even to the spark and the fleeting vision!
24 The universe lives and abides forever;
to meet each need, each creature is preserved.
25* All of them differ, one from another,
yet none of them has he made in vain,
For each in turn, as it comes, is good;
can one ever see enough of their splendor?

CHAPTER 43

1* The clear vault of the sky shines forth like heaven itself, a vision of glory.
2 The orb of the sun, resplendent at its rising:
what a wonderful work of the Most High!
3 At noon it seethes the surface of the earth,
and who can bear its fiery heat?
4 Like a blazing furnace of solid metal,
it sets the mountains aflame with its rays;
By its fiery darts the land is consumed;
the eyes are dazzled by its light.
5 Great indeed is the LORD who made it,
at whose orders it urges on its steeds.
6* The moon, too, that marks the changing times,
governing the seasons, their lasting sign,
7 By which we know the feast days and fixed dates,
this light-giver which wanes in its course:
8 As its name says, each month it renews itself;
how wondrous in this change!
9* The beauty, the glory, of the heavens are the stars that adorn with their sparkling the heights of God, 10 At whose command they keep their place
and never relax in their vigils.
A weapon against the flood waters stored on high,
lighting up the firmament by its brilliance, 11* Behold the rainbow! Then bless its Maker, for majestic indeed is its splendor;
12 It spans the heavens with its glory,
this bow bent by the mighty hand of God.

13 His rebuke marks out the path for the lightning,
and speeds the arrows of his judgment to their goal.
14 At it the storehouse is opened,
and like vultures the clouds hurry forth.
15 In his majesty he gives the storm its power and breaks off the hailstones.
16 The thunder of his voice makes the earth writhe;
before his might the mountains quake.
17 A word from him drives on the south wind,
the angry north wind, the hurricane and the storm.
18 He sprinkles the snow like fluttering birds;
it comes to settle like swarms of locusts.
19 Its shining whiteness blinds the eyes,
the mind is baffled by its steady fall.
20 He scatters frost like so much salt;
it shines like blossoms on the thornbush.
21 Cold northern blasts he sends that turn the ponds to lumps of ice.
He freezes over every body of water,
and clothes each pool with a coat of mail.
22 When the mountain growth is scorched with heat,
and the flowering plains as though by flames, 23 The dripping clouds restore them all,
and the scattered dew enriches the parched land.
24 His is the plan that calms the deep,
and plants the islands in the sea.
25* Those who go down to the sea tell part of its story,
and when we hear them we are thunderstruck;
26 In it are his creatures, stupendous, amazing,
all kinds of life, and the monsters of the deep.
27* For him each messenger succeeds,
and at his bidding accomplishes his will.

28† More than this we need not add;
let the last word be, he is all in all!
29 Let us praise him the more, since we cannot fathom him,
for greater is he than all his works;

25: 33, 15.
43, 1ff: Ps 19, 2f.
6: Lv 23, 5; Nm 28, 11-14; Ps 81, 4.
9: Ps 8, 4.
11: Gn 9, 13.
25: Ps 104, 25-30.
27: Ps 33, 6.

† 43, 28: All in all: the perfections reflected in creation are found in a transcendent way in God, who alone is their source.

30 Awful indeed is the LORD's majesty, and wonderful is his power.
31 Lift up your voices to glorify the LORD,
though he is still beyond your power to praise;
32 Extol him with renewed strength,
and weary not, though you cannot reach the end:
33* For who can see him and describe him?
or who can praise him as he is?
34 Beyond these, many things lie hid;
only a few of his works have we seen.
35* It is the LORD who has made all things,
and to those who fear him he gives wisdom.

CHAPTER 44

Praise of Israel's Great Ancestors†

1† Now will I praise those godly men,
our ancestors, each in his own time:
2* The abounding glory of the Most High's portion,
his own part, since the days of old.
Subduers of the land in kingly fashion,
men of renown for their might,
3* Or counselors in their prudence,
or seers of all things in prophecy;
4 Resolute princes of the folk,
and governors with their staves;
Authors skilled in composition,
and forgers of epigrams with their spikes;
5 Composers of melodious psalms,
or discoursers on lyric themes;
6 Stalwart men, solidly established and at peace in their own estates—7 All these were glorious in their time,
each illustrious in his day.
8 Some of them have left behind a name
and men recount their praiseworthy deeds; 9 But of others there is no memory,
for when they ceased, they ceased.
And they are as though they had not lived,
they and their children after them.
10 Yet these also were godly men whose virtues have not been forgotten; 11 Their wealth remains in their families,
their heritage with their descendants; 12 Through God's covenant with them
their family endures,
their posterity, for their sake.
13 And for all time their progeny will endure,
their glory will never be blotted out;
14* Their bodies are peacefully laid away,
but their name lives on and on.
15 At gatherings their wisdom is retold,
and the assembly proclaims their praise.

The Early Patriarchs

16*†[ENOCH walked with the LORD and was taken up,
that succeeding generations might learn by his example.]
17* NOAH, found just and perfect, renewed the race in the time of devastation.
Because of his worth there were survivors,
and with a sign to him the deluge ended;
18 A lasting agreement was made with him,
that never should all flesh be destroyed.
19* ABRAHAM, father of many peoples,
kept his glory without stain:
20*†He observed the precepts of the Most High,
and entered into an agreement with him;
In his own flesh he incised the ordinance,
and when tested he was found loyal.
21† For this reason, God promised him with an oath that in his descendants the nations would be blessed,

33: Ps 106, 2.
35: Jb 28, 28.
44, 2: Dt 32, 8f.
3: 39, 1.
14: Wis 3, 3.
16: 49, 14; Gn 5, 18-24; Heb 11, 5.
17: Gn 6, 8—9, 29; Heb 11, 7.
19: Gn 12, 1—25, 10; Gal 3, 6; Heb 11, 8-19.
20: Gn 17, 10; 22, 1.

44, 1—50, 24: As in the previous section God's wisdom shone forth in the works of nature, so in these chapters it is also revealed through the history of God's people as seen in the lives of their patriarchs, prophets, priests and rulers. The example of these great men, whose virtues are here recalled, constitutes a high point of the author's teaching and illustrates his belief in the canonical Scriptures.

44, 1-15: The reader is here introduced to those men of Israel, later mentioned by name, who through various achievements and beneficial social activities have acquired great renown (1-8.14f); and also to those who, though forgotten, endure through the fruit of their virtues and through their families because of God's covenant with them (9-13).

44, 16: Enoch: because of his friendship with God and also by reason of his unusual disappearance from the earth, this prophet's renown was great among the chosen people, particularly in the two centuries just before the coming of Christ; cf Gn 5, 21-24; Heb 11, 5. The present verse is an expansion of the original text; cf 49, 14.

44, 20: In his own flesh . . . ordinance: the covenant of circumcision; cf Gn 17, 10-14. And when tested . . . loyal: Abraham's willingness to sacrifice his son Isaac at the Lord's command; cf Gn 22, 9-12.

44, 21: The River: the Euphrates; cf Gn 2, 14.

That he would make him numerous
as the grains of dust,
and exalt his posterity like the stars;
That he would give them an inheritance from sea to sea,
and from the River to the ends of
the earth.
22* And for ISAAC he renewed the same promise
because of Abraham, his father.
The covenant with all his forebears
was confirmed,
and the blessing rested upon the head of JACOB.
23 God acknowledged him as the first-born,
and gave him his inheritance.
He fixed the boundaries for his tribes,
and their division into twelve.

CHAPTER 45

Praise of Moses, Aaron and Phinehas†

1* From him was to spring the man who won the favor of all:
Dear to God and men,
MOSES, whose memory is held in benediction.
2*† God's honor devolved upon him,
and the Lord strengthened him
with fearful powers;
3* God wrought swift miracles at his words
and sustained him in the king's presence.
He gave him the commandments for his people,
and revealed to him his glory.
4* For his trustworthiness and meek-
ness
God selected him from all mankind;
5† He permitted him to hear his voice,
and led him into the cloud,
Where, face to face, he gave him the commandments,
the law of life and understanding,
That he might teach his precepts to
Jacob,
his judgments and decrees to Israel.

6*† He raised up also, like Moses in holiness,
his brother AARON, of the tribe of Levi.
7† He made him perpetual in his office when he bestowed on him the priesthood of his people;
He established him in honor and crowned him with lofty majesty;
8 He clothed him with splendid apparel,
and adorned him with the glorious vestments:
Breeches and tunic and robe with pomegranates around the hem,
9 And a rustle of bells round about,
through whose pleasing sound at each step
He would be heard within the sanctuary,
and the children of his race would
be remembered;
10 The sacred vestments of gold, of violet,
and of crimson, wrought with embroidery;
The breastpiece for decision, the
ephod and cincture 11 with scarlet yarn, the work of the
weaver;
Precious stones with seal engravings
in golden settings, the work of the jeweler,
To commemorate in incised letters
each of the tribes of Israel;
12 On his turban the diadem of gold,
its plate wrought with the insignia
of holiness,
Majestic, glorious, renowned for splendor,
a delight to the eyes, beauty supreme.
13 Before him, no one was adorned with these,
nor may they ever be worn by any Except his sons and them alone, generation after generation, for all time.
14 His cereal offering is wholly burnt with the established sacrifice
twice each day;

22: Gn 26, 3.5.24; 27, 28f; 28, 14.
45, 1: Ex 2, 2; 11, 3; 33, 11; Nm 12.7.
2: Ex 7, 1—13, 22.
2-5: Ex 7—Dt 34.
3: Ex 4, 17; 7, 1.
4: Nm 12, 3, 7.
6ff: Ex 28f; Wis 18, 24.

45, 1-5: Moses manifested God's power through miracles (1ff), God's authority through the promulgation of the commandments and the law (5), and God's mercy through the intimacy granted him by the Lord for his own faithfulness and meekness (4f). The very personification of the old covenant, Moses was also a type of Christ, the Prophet and Legislator of the new; cf Dt 18, 15.

45, 2: God's honor devolved upon him: Moses was actually God's substitute in dealing with Pharaoh, hence God entrusted his own honor to Moses.

45, 5: Face to face: on God's intimacy with Moses, see Ex 33, 11; Nm 12, 8. St. Paul alluded to this in 1 Cor 13, 12.

45, 6-21: The author here expresses his reverence and esteem for the priesthood of the old covenant. He recalls God's choice of Aaron and his sons for this sublime office (6f), and describes in detail the beauty of the high priest's vestments (8-13). He relates the ordination of Aaron at the hands of Moses, his brother (15), and describes the priestly functions, of offering sacrifice to God (16), and of blessing (15), teaching, governing and judging the people (17); the inheritance of the high priest (20ff); the punishment of those families who were jealous of Aaron (18f); and the confirmation of the covenant of the priesthood with Aaron's descendants through Phinehas (23ff).

45, 7: The priesthood of Aaron was superseded by the priesthood of Christ; cf Heb 7, 18-28.

15 For Moses ordained him
and anointed him with the holy oil,
In a lasting covenant with him and with his family, as permanent
as the heavens,
That he should serve God in his priesthood
and bless his people in his name.
16 He chose him from all mankind to offer holocausts and choice offerings,
To burn sacrifices of sweet odor for
a memorial,
and to atone for the people of Israel.
17 He gave to him his laws,
and authority to prescribe and to judge:
To teach the precepts to his people,
and the ritual to the descendants
of Israel.
18* Men of other families were inflamed against him,
were jealous of him in the desert,
The followers of Dathan and Abi-
ram,
and the band of Korah in their defiance.
19 But the LORD saw this and became angry,
he destroyed them in his burning
wrath.
He brought down upon them a miracle,
and consumed them with his flaming fire.
20* Then he increased the glory of Aaron
and bestowed upon him his inheritance:
The sacred offerings he allotted to
him,
with the showbread as his portion;
21 The oblations of the LORD are his food,
a gift to him and his descendants.
22 But he holds no land among the people
nor shares with them their heritage;
For the LORD himself is his portion, his inheritance in the midst of Israel.

23* PHINEHAS too, the son of Eleazar,
was the courageous third of his line
When, zealous for the God of all,
he met the crisis of his people
And, at the prompting of his noble
heart,
atoned for the children of Israel.
24 Therefore on him again God conferred the right,
in a covenant of friendship, to provide for the sanctuary,
So that he and his descendants should possess the high priesthood forever.

25* For even his covenant with David,
the son of Jesse of the tribe of Judah,
Was an individual heritage through
one son alone;
but the heritage of Aaron is for all his descendants.

26 And now bless the LORD
who has crowned you with glory!
May he grant you wisdom of heart
to govern his people in justice, Lest their welfare should ever be forgotten,
or your authority, throughout all
time.

CHAPTER 46

Joshua, Caleb and the Judges†

1* Valiant leader was JOSHUA, son of Nun,
assistant to Moses in the prophetic
office,
Formed to be, as his name implies,
the great savior of God's chosen
ones,
To punish the enemy
and to win the inheritance for Israel.
2* What glory was his when he raised his arm,
to brandish his javelin against the
city!
3† And who could withstand him when he fought the battles of the
LORD?
4* Did he not by his power stop the sun,
so that one day became two?
5 He called upon the Most High God when his enemies beset him on all sides,
And God Most High gave answer to
him
in hailstones of tremendous
power,
6 Which he rained down upon the hostile army
till on the slope he destroyed the foe;
That all the doomed nations might know that the LORD was watching over his people's battles.
And because he was a devoted follower of God

2: Jos 8, 18.
4: Jos 10, 13.

† 46, 1-6: Joshua, whose name means "the Lord is savior" (1), was the instrument through which God delivered his people in miraculous ways (2-6) by destroying their enemies, whose land he gave to the Israelites as an inheritance (1).
46, 3: The battles of the Lord: cf Jos 6—10.

7*† and in Moses' lifetime showed himself loyal,
He and CALEB, son of Jephunneh,
when they opposed the rebel assembly, Averted God's anger from the people and suppressed the wicked complaint—
8* Because of this, they were the only two spared from the six hundred thousand infantry,
To lead the people into their inheritance,
the land flowing with milk and honey.
9* And the strength he gave to Caleb remained with him even in his old age Till he won his way onto the summits of the land;
his family too received an inheritance,
10 That all the people of Jacob might know how good it is to be a devoted follower of the LORD.
11*† The JUDGES, too, each one of them, whose hearts were not deceived,
Who did not abandon God:
may their memory be ever blessed,
12 Their bones return to life from their resting place,
and their names receive fresh luster in their children!
13* Beloved of his people, dear to his Maker, dedicated from his mother's womb, Consecrated to the LORD as a prophet,
was SAMUEL, the judge and priest.
At God's word he established the kingdom and anointed princes to rule the people.
14 By the law of the LORD he judged the nation,
when he visited the encampments of Jacob.
15 As a trustworthy prophet he was sought out and his words proved him true as a seer.
16* He, too, called upon God,
and offered him a suckling lamb;
17* Then the LORD thundered forth from heaven,
and the tremendous roar of his voice was heard.
18 He brought low the rulers of the enemy and destroyed all the lords of the Philistines.
19* When Samuel approached the end of his life,
he testified before the LORD and his anointed prince,
"No bribe or secret gift have I taken from any man!"
and no one dared gainsay him.
20* Even when he lay buried, his guidance was sought;
he made known to the king his fate,
And from the grave he raised his voice
as a prophet, to put an end to wickedness.

CHAPTER 47

Nathan, David and Solomon

1*† After him came NATHAN who served in the presence of David.
2* Like the choice fat of the sacred offerings,
so was DAVID in Israel.
3* He made sport of lions as though they were kids,
and of bears, like lambs of the flock.
4* As a youth he slew the giant and wiped out the people's disgrace,
When his hand let fly the slingstone that crushed the pride of Goliath.
5 Since he called upon the Most High God, who gave strength to his right arm
To defeat the skilled warrior
and raise up the might of his people,
6* Therefore the women sang his praises

46, 7-10: Caleb, who with Joshua advised Moses and the people in the desert to conquer Canaan, despite the counsel of their companion scouts and the rebellion of the people, merited to lead the Israelites of the succeeding generation into the Promised Land. Caleb in his old age received as his inheritance a portion of land which he himself had previously conquered; cf Jos 15, 13f.

46, 11-20: Of the Judges praised and blessed for their fidelity to God in opposing idolatry, Samuel, a man of spotless integrity, was the greatest (11f.19). He was judge of the entire nation, and was also a prophet and priest who through his sacrificial offering obtained victory over the Philistines. He established the kingdom, anointed kings (13-18), and even after his death foretold the king's fate and put an end to wickedness (20).

47, 1-11: David, a youthful and fearless warrior, the favorite of all Israel, by defeating Goliath, the boastful Philistine giant, removed the people's disgrace and greatly strengthened their power (1-7). With his whole being he loved and praised God, and his devotion to divine worship led him to develop a liturgical cult. David fell into sin, but repenting, received pardon from God and the promise of an everlasting kingdom (8-11).

and ascribed to him tens of thousands.
When he assumed the royal crown, he battled 7* and subdued the enemy on every side.
He destroyed the hostile Philistines and shattered their power till our own day.
8 With his every deed he offered thanks to God Most High, in words of praise.
With his whole being he loved his Maker and daily had his praises sung;
9* He added beauty to the feasts and solemnized the seasons of each year
With string music before the altar, providing sweet melody for the psalms
10 So that when the Holy Name was praised, before daybreak the sanctuary would resound.
11* The LORD forgave him his sins and exalted his strength forever;
He conferred on him the rights of royalty and established his throne in Israel.

12*†Because of his merits he had as his successor a wise son, who lived in security:
13* SOLOMON reigned during an era of peace, for God made tranquil all his borders.
He built a house to the name of God, and established a lasting sanctuary.
14* How wise you were when you were young, overflowing with instruction, like the Nile in flood!
15 Your understanding covered the whole earth, and, like a sea, filled it with knowledge.
16 Your fame reached distant coasts, and their peoples came to hear you;
17 With song and story and riddle, and with your answers, you astounded the nations.
18† You were called by that glorious name which was conferred upon Israel.
Gold you gathered like so much iron, you heaped up silver as though it were lead;
19* But you abandoned yourself to women and gave them dominion over your body.
20 You brought dishonor upon your reputation, shame upon your marriage, Wrath upon your descendants, and groaning upon your domain;
21* Thus two governments came into being, when in Ephraim kingship was usurped.
22* But God does not withdraw his mercy, nor permit even one of his promises to fail.
He does not uproot the posterity of his chosen one, nor destroy the offspring of his friend.
So he gave to Jacob a remnant, to David a root from his own family.
23*†Solomon finally slept with his fathers, and left behind him one of his sons, Expansive in folly, limited in sense, REHOBOAM, who by his policy made the people rebel;
Until one arose who should not be remembered, the sinner who led Israel into sin,
Who brought ruin to Ephraim 24 and caused them to be exiled from their land.

Elijah and Elisha

Their sinfulness grew more and more,
25† and they lent themselves to every evil,

47, 12-24: Solomon, son and successor of David, inherited peace through his father's conquests. He built the magnificent temple of Jerusalem (12f) and received from God the favor of unparalleled wisdom, through which he obtained great fame (14-17). Luxury and sensuality, however, brought disgrace upon him, and because of his oppressive burdens, he disposed the kingdom for division after his death (19-21.23f). Nevertheless God did not withdraw his promise of establishing his throne in the descendants of David (22).

47, 18: Cf 2 Sm 12, 25, where Solomon is called Jedidiah, "beloved of the Lord." The same term is used of Israel in Jer 11, 15.

47, 23: Expansive: the name Rehoboam means "the people is expansive," that is, widespread. The sinner: Jeroboam; cf 1 Kgs 12, 2.20.26-32.

47, 25—48, 11: The prophetic ministry of Elijah amid widespread idolatry is here described as a judgment by fire (47, 25f). Through his preaching, miracles and vengeance against God's enemies within and without Israel, the prophet succeeded for a time in destroying idols and in restoring faith and the worship of the true God (48, 2-8). His miraculous departure from this life gave rise to the belief that he did not die but would return before the end of the world to put an end to wrath and restore the tribes of Israel (9ff). Cf Mt 17, 9-13.

CHAPTER 48

1* Till like a fire there appeared the prophet whose words were as a flaming furnace.
2 Their staff of bread he shattered,
in his zeal he reduced them to straits;
3* By God's word he shut up the heavens
and three times brought down fire.
4 How awesome are you, ELIJAH!
Whose glory is equal to yours?
5* You brought a dead man back to life
from the nether world, by the will of the LORD.
6* You sent kings down to destruction,
and nobles, from their beds of sickness.
7* You heard threats at Sinai,
at Horeb avenging judgments.
8* You anointed kings who should inflict vengeance,
and a prophet as your successor.
9* You were taken aloft in a whirlwind,
in a chariot with fiery horses.
10* You are destined, it is written, in time to come to put an end to wrath before the day of the LORD,
To turn back the hearts of fathers toward their sons,
and to reestablish the tribes of Jacob.
11 Blessed is he who shall have seen you before he dies,
12*† O Elijah, enveloped in the whirlwind!

Then ELISHA, filled with a twofold portion of his spirit, wrought many marvels by his mere word.
During his lifetime he feared no one,
nor was any man able to intimidate his will.
13* Nothing was beyond his power;
beneath him flesh was brought back into life.
14 In life he performed wonders,
and after death, marvelous deeds.
15* Despite all this the people did not repent,
nor did they give up their sins,
Until they were rooted out of their land
and scattered all over the earth.
But Judah remained, a tiny people,
with its rulers from the house of David.
16 Some of these did what was right,
but others were extremely sinful.

Hezekiah and Isaiah†

17* HEZEKIAH fortified his city
and had water brought into it;
With iron tools he cut through the rock
and he built reservoirs for water.
18* During his reign Sennacherib led an invasion and sent his adjutant;
He shook his fist at Zion
and blasphemed God in his pride.
19 The people's hearts melted within them,
and they were in anguish like that of childbirth.
20* But they called upon the Most High God
and lifted up their hands to him;
He heard the prayer they uttered,
and saved them through ISAIAH.
21* God struck the camp of the Assyrians and routed them with a plague.
22 For Hezekiah did what was right and held fast to the paths of David,
As ordered by the illustrious prophet Isaiah, who saw the truth in visions.
23* In his lifetime he turned back the sun and prolonged the life of the king.
24* By his powerful spirit he looked into the future and consoled the mourners of Zion;
25 He foretold what should be till the end of time,
hidden things yet to be fulfilled.

24f: 2 Kgs 20, 17; Is 40, 1ff; 42, 9; 46, 10; 48, 6; 61, 2.

† 48, 12-16: Elisha fearlessly continued the work of his predecessor by numerous miracles (12ff), but the obstinacy of the people eventually brought on the destruction of the kingdom of Israel and the dispersion of its subjects. Judah, however, survived under the rule of Davidic kings, both good and bad (15f).

48, 17-25: The fidelity, trust and courage of King Hezekiah (17.22), the zeal of the prophet Isaiah, and the prayer of the people (20) availed with God. The Assyrian oppressors were routed (18f.21), the king's life was prolonged, and consolations were granted the people through Isaiah's prophecies concerning the future (23ff), especially the coming of the Messiah and the establishment of his kingdom; cf Is 7, 14; 9, 6f; 40—65.

CHAPTER 49

Josiah and the Prophets†

1* The name JOSIAH is like blended incense, made lasting by a skilled perfumer.
Precious is his memory, like honey to the taste,
like music at a banquet.
2 For he grieved over our betrayals,
and destroyed the abominable idols.
3 He turned to God with his whole heart,
and, though times were evil, he practiced virtue.
4 Except for David, Hezekiah and Josiah,
they all were wicked;
They abandoned the Law of the Most High,
these kings of Judah, right to the very end.
5 So he gave over their power to others,
their glory to a foolish foreign nation
6* Who burned the holy city
and left its streets desolate, As JEREMIAH had foretold; 7* for they had treated him badly
who even in the womb had been made a prophet,
To root out, pull down, and destroy,
and then to build and to plant.
8* EZEKIEL beheld the vision and described the different creatures of the chariot;
9* He also referred to JOB,
who always persevered in the right path.
10 Then, too, the TWELVE PROPHETS—may their bones return to life from their resting place!—
Gave new strength to Jacob and saved him by their faith and hope.

The Heroes after the Exile

11*†How can we fittingly praise ZERUBBABEL, who was like a signet ring on God's right hand, 12 And Jeshua, Jozadak's son?
In their time they built the house of God;
They erected the holy temple,
destined for everlasting glory.
13* Extolled be the memory of NEHEMIAH!
He rebuilt our ruined walls,
Restored our shattered defenses,
and set up gates and bars.

The Earliest Patriarchs

14*†Few on earth have been made the equal of ENOCH,
for he was taken up bodily.
15* Was ever a man born like JOSEPH?
Even his dead body was provided for.
16* Glorious, too, were SHEM and SETH and ENOS;
but beyond that of any living being was the splendor of ADAM.

CHAPTER 50

Simon, Son of Jochanan

1† The greatest among his brethren,
the glory of his people,
was SIMON the priest, son of Jochanan,
In whose time the house of God was renovated,
in whose days the temple was reinforced.
2 In his time also the wall was built with powerful turrets for the temple precincts;
3 In his time the reservoir was dug,
the pool with a vastness like the sea's.
4 He protected his people against brigands
and strengthened his city against the enemy.
5 How splendid he was as he appeared from the tent,
as he came from within the veil!

49, 1-10: The author's praise of King Josiah (1-3), of the prophets Jeremiah and Ezekiel and likewise the minor prophets (7-10) derives from their spirit of fidelity to the Lord and his law amid the infidelity of kings and people (4ff.10).

49, 11ff: Zerubbabel and Jeshua, in rebuilding the temple, and Nehemiah, the governor, in repairing the walls of the Holy City also restored what these constructions signify, namely, religious worship and civil authority as prescribed in the law.

49, 14ff: The patriarchs here mentioned were glorious because of their spirit of religion, i.e., their profound reverence for God and obedience to him. The splendor of Adam, moreover, was due to his direct origin from God.

50, 1-21: The son of Jochanan here mentioned was Simon II, in whose time as high priest (219-196 B.C.) great works were accomplished for the benefit of public worship and welfare (1-4). The author, a contemporary of this high priest, describes in great detail and by numerous comparisons the impression of awful majesty received, the lofty joy aroused, at sight of the high priest fully vested entering the sanctuary, ascending the altar (6-11), and, in the presence of the whole assembly of Israel, encircled by assistant priests bearing offerings, sacrificing the burnt offering on the Day of Atonement, while the trumpets blast and the people bow down in adoration of the Most High (12-17). The hymnody, the joyful shouts of the multitude, and finally the high priest's blessing, in which he pronounces—once only in the year, on this occasion—the holy name of Yahweh, climax the description of this most solemn Jewish liturgical function (18-21).

6 Like a star shining among the clouds,
like the full moon at the holyday season;
7 Like the sun shining upon the temple,
like the rainbow appearing in the cloudy sky;
8 Like the blossoms on the branches in springtime,
like a lily on the banks of a stream;
Like the trees of Lebanon in summer,
9 like the fire of incense at the sacrifice;
Like a vessel of beaten gold,
studded with precious stones;
10 Like a luxuriant olive tree thick with fruit,
like a cypress standing against the clouds;
11* Vested in his magnificent robes,
and wearing his garments of splendor,
As he ascended the glorious altar
and lent majesty to the court of the sanctuary.

12 When he received the sundered victims from the priests while he stood before the sacrificial wood,
His brethren ringed him about like a garland,
like a stand of cedars on Lebanon;
13 All the sons of Aaron in their dignity
clustered around him like poplars,
With the offerings to the LORD in their hands,
in the presence of the whole assembly of Israel.
14 Once he had completed the services at the altar
with the arranging of the sacrifices for the Most High, 15* And had stretched forth his hand for the cup,
to offer blood of the grape,
And poured it out at the foot of the altar,
a sweet-smelling odor to the Most High God, 16* The sons of Aaron would sound a blast,
the priests, on their trumpets of beaten metal;
A blast to resound mightily
as a reminder before the Most High.
17 Then all the people with one accord would quickly fall prostrate to the ground
In adoration before the Most High,
before the Holy One of Israel.

18 Then hymns would re-echo,
and over the throng sweet strains of praise resound.
19 All the people of the land would shout for joy, praying to the Merciful One,
As the high priest completed the services at the altar
by presenting to God the sacrifice due; 20* Then coming down he would raise his hands
over all the congregation of Israel.
The blessing of the LORD would be upon his lips,
the name of the LORD would be his glory.
21 Then again the people would lie prostrate to receive from him the blessing of the Most High.

22† And now, bless the God of all,
who has done wondrous things on earth;
Who fosters men's growth from their mother's womb,
and fashions them according to his will!
23 May he grant you joy of heart and may peace abide among you;
24 May his goodness toward us endure in Israel
as long as the heavens are above.

Epilogue and Canticles†

25† My whole being loathes two nations,
the third is not even a people:
26*† Those who live in Seir and Philistia,
and the degenerate folk who dwell in Shechem.

27† Wise instruction, appropriate proverbs,
I have written in this book,
I, Jesus, son of Eleazar, son of Sirach,
as they gushed forth from my heart's understanding.

50, 22ff: Praise and thanksgiving are given to God for his wondrous works, and a blessing is invoked on man that he may enjoy peace and gladness of heart and the abiding goodness of the Most High.

50, 25f: The author's abhorrence of the pagan Edomites (Idumeans), Philistines and Samaritans can be understood in the light of Old Testament thinking, which does not always distinguish between hatred of evildoers and hatred of the evil they do.

50, 25: Not even a people: the Samaritans.

50, 26: Seir: Mount Seir in the territory of the Edomites. Shechem: a city in Samaria.

50, 27ff: These verses contain the subscription of the author, Jesus, son of Eleazar, son of Sirach, to his long and beautiful treatise on wisdom as applying to all of human life, integrating it under the direction of the fear of the Lord.

wise the man who takes them to heart!
20 If he puts them into practice, he can cope with anything, for the fear of the LORD is his lamp.

CHAPTER 51

1*†I give you thanks, O God of my father;
I praise you, O God my savior!
I will make known your name, refuge of my life;
2* you have been my helper against my adversaries.
You have saved me from death,
and kept back my body from the pit,
From the clutches of the nether world you have snatched my feet;
3* you have delivered me, in your great mercy
From the scourge of a slanderous tongue,
and from lips that went over to falsehood;
From the snare of those who watched for my downfall,
and from the power of those who sought my life;
From many a danger you have saved me,
4* from flames that hemmed me in on every side;
From the midst of unremitting fire,
5 from the deep belly of the nether world;
From deceiving lips and painters of lies,
6* from the arrows of dishonest tongues.
I was at the point of death,
my soul was nearing the depths of the nether world;
7* I turned every way, but there was no one to help me,
I looked for one to sustain me, but could find no one.
8 But then I remembered the mercies of the LORD,
his kindness through ages past;
For he saves those who take refuge in him,
and rescues them from every evil.
9 So I raised my voice from the very earth,
from the gates of the nether world, my cry.
10* I called out: O Lord, you are my father,
you are my champion and my savior;
Do not abandon me in time of trouble,
in the midst of storms and dangers.
11 I will ever praise your name and be constant in my prayers to you.
Thereupon the LORD heard my voice,
he listened to my appeal;
12† He saved me from evil of every kind and preserved me in time of trouble.
For this reason I thank him and I praise him;
I bless the name of the LORD.

13*†When I was young and innocent,
I sought wisdom.
14 She came to me in her beauty,

51, 1-12: A canticle of praise and thanks to God for delivering the author from slander, dangers, destruction, death, the nether world, and evil of every kind.

51, 12: After this verse the Hebrew text gives the litany of praise contained below. It is similar to Ps 136. Though not found in any versions, and therefore of doubtful authenticity, the litany seems from internal evidence to go back to the time of Sirach:

Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endures forever;
Give thanks to the God of glory, for his mercy endures forever;
Give thanks to the guardian of Israel, for his mercy endures forever;
Give thanks to the creator of the universe, for his mercy endures forever;
Give thanks to the redeemer of Israel, for his mercy endures forever;
Give thanks to him who gathers the dispersed of Israel, for his mercy endures forever;
Give thanks to him who builds his city and his sanctuary, for his mercy endures forever;
Give thanks to him who makes a horn to sprout forth for the house of David, for his mercy endures forever;
Give thanks to him who has chosen for his priests the sons of Zadok, for his mercy endures forever;
Give thanks to the shield of Abraham, for his mercy endures forever;
Give thanks to the rock of Isaac, for his mercy endures forever;
Give thanks to the mighty one of Jacob, for his mercy endures forever;
Give thanks to him who has chosen Zion, for his mercy endures forever;
Give thanks to the king over kings of kings, for his mercy endures forever.
He has lifted up the horn of his people, be this his praise from all his faithful ones,
From the children of Israel, the people close to him. Alleluia! (Cf Ps 148, 14.)

51, 13-30: An alphabetic canticle describing: a) the approach to wisdom through prayer, persistent study and instruction (13-17), purification from sin, enlightenment and ardent desire; b) the possession of wisdom (18-22). The author concludes with an urgent invitation to men to receive instruction in wisdom from him, and to live by it, because wisdom gives herself to those who seek her (23-26); and for their labor, God will reward them in the end (27-30). Cf Mt 11, 28; Eccl 12, 14.

In the Greek of 13f there is an expansion introducing Solomon as the speaker. This deviates from the original author's intent. It reads: "Publicly, in my prayer, facing the temple, I asked for her."

and until the end I will cultivate her.
15 As the blossoms yielded to ripening grapes,
the heart's joy,
My feet kept to the level path
because from earliest youth I was familiar with her.
16 In the short time I paid heed,
I met with great instruction.
17 Since in this way I have profited,
I will give my teacher grateful praise.
18 I became resolutely devoted to her—
the good I persistently strove for.
19 I burned with desire for her,
never turning back.
I became preoccupied with her,
never weary of extolling her.
My hand opened her gate
and I came to know her secrets.
20* For her I purified my hands;
in cleanness I attained to her.
At first acquaintance with her, I gained understanding such that I will never forsake her.
21 My whole being was stirred as I learned about her;
therefore I have made her my prize possession.
22 The LORD has granted me my lips as a reward,
and my tongue will declare his praises.
23* Come aside to me, you untutored,
and take up lodging in the house of instruction;
24 How long will you be deprived of wisdom's food,
how long will you endure such bitter thirst?
25* I open my mouth and speak of her:
gain, at no cost, wisdom for yourselves.
26* Submit your neck to her yoke,
that your mind may accept her teaching.
For she is close to those who seek her,
and the one who is in earnest finds her.
27 See for yourselves! I have labored only a little,
but have found much.
28 Acquire but a little instruction;
you will win silver and gold through her.
29 Let your spirits rejoice in the mercy of God,
and be not ashamed to give him praise.
30* Work at your tasks in due season,
and in his own time God will give you your reward.

THE PROPHETIC BOOKS

The prophetic books bear the names of the four major and twelve minor prophets, besides Lamentations and Baruch. The terms "major" and "minor" refer merely to the length of the respective compositions and not to any distinction in the prophetic office. Jonah is a story of the mission of the prophet rather than a collection of prophecies. Lamentations and Daniel are listed among the hagiographa in the Hebrew Bible, not among the prophetic books. The former contains a series of elegies on the fate of Jerusalem; the latter is apocalyptic in character. Daniel, who lived far removed from Palestine, was not called by God to preach; yet the book is counted as prophecy. Baruch, though excluded from the Hebrew canon, is found in the Septuagint version, and the Church has always acknowledged it to be sacred and inspired.

The prophetic books, together with the oral preaching of the prophets, were the result of the institution of prophetism, in which a succession of Israelites chosen by God and appointed by him to be prophets received communications from him and transmitted them to the people in his name (Dt 18, 15-20). The prophets were spokesmen of God, intermediaries between him and his people. The communications they received from God came through visions, dreams, and ecstasies and were transmitted to the people through sermons, writings, and symbolic actions.

The office of prophet was due to a direct call from God. It was not the result of heredity, just as it was not a permanent gift but a transient one, subject entirely to the divine will. The prophets preserved and developed revealed religion (1 Sm 12, 6-25), denounced idolatry (1 Kgs 14, 1-13), defended the moral law (2 Sm 12, 1-15), gave counsel in political matters (Is 31, 1ff), and often also in matters of private life (1 Sm 9, 6-9). At times miracles confirmed their preaching, and their predictions of the future intensified the expectation of the Messiah and of his kingdom.

The prophetic literature in this volume contains the substance of the prophets' authentic preaching, résumés, and genuine samples of such preaching. Some parts were recorded by the prophets themselves, some by persons other than the prophets who uttered them.

The prophecies express judgments of the people's moral conduct, on the basis of the Mosaic alliance between God and Israel. They teach sublime truths and lofty morals. They contain exhortations, threats, announcements of punishment, promises of deliverance, made with solemn authority and in highly imaginative language. In the affairs of men, their prime concern is the interests of God, especially in what pertains to the chosen people through whom the Messiah is to come; hence their denunciations of idolatry and of that externalism in worship which excludes the interior spirit of religion. They are concerned also with the universal nature of the moral law, with personal responsibility, with the person and office of the Messiah, and with the conduct of foreign nations.

In content, the literary genre of prophecy uses warning and threat besides exhortation and promise to declare in God's name events of the near and distant future (Is 8—9). In form, the divine source of prophetic declaration appears in: "The word (or oracle) of the Lord," or "Thus says the LORD*," followed by the announcement of a coming event and its moral cause (Hos 4, 7-10). Divine exhortation and promise are introduced by such forms as: "Hear this word, O men of Israel, that the* LORD pronounces over you" (Am 3, 1). Kindly and persuasive tones pervade the promises of reward and even the threats of punishment (Am 5, 14-15).

Disregard for exact chronological perspective in the prophecies is an additional characteristic. Predictions of the immediate and distant future are often interrelated, not on the basis of years separating the events but on the analogy of the pattern joining present with very distant, though similar, conditions and circumstances. This is prophetic compenetration, idealization in which persons and things of the more immediate present, in the prophet's day, fade into a wider and more perfect order of persons and things of the future; the former are figures and types of the latter. Thus, some details of what the Psalmist said of the kingdom of David and Solomon (Ps 72) went beyond what was fulfilled in these men, as St. Thomas points out, and found their realization only in the kingdom of Christ. St. Jerome before him, and still earlier the apostles themselves—Peter (Acts 2, 14-36) and Paul (Gal

4, 21-31)—taught us that through anticipation in types we discover in Sacred Scripture the truth of things to come.

Thus the universal blessing for mankind, often promised by God through the mouths of his prophets in figures and types, was in time to become personalized and to confer its full benefit on us through the Word made flesh, who became for us the New Covenant through his life, death, and resurrection, as the prophets had foretold.

The Book of

ISAIAH

The greatest of the prophets appeared at a critical moment of Israel's history. The second half of the eighth century B.C. witnessed the collapse of the northern kingdom under the hammerlike blows of Assyria (722), while Jerusalem itself saw the army of Sennacherib drawn up before its walls (701). In the year that Uzziah, king of Judah, died (742), Isaiah received his call to the prophetic office in the Temple of Jerusalem. Close attention should be given to chapter 6, where this divine summons to be the ambassador of the Most High is circumstantially described.

The vision of the Lord enthroned in glory stamps an indelible character on Isaiah's ministry and provides the key to the understanding of his message. The majesty, holiness and glory of the Lord took possession of his spirit and, conversely, he gained a new awareness of human pettiness and sinfulness. The enormous abyss between God's sovereign holiness and man's sin overwhelmed the prophet. Only the purifying coal of the seraphim could cleanse his lips and prepare him for acceptance of the call: "Here I am, send me!"

The ministry of Isaiah may be divided into three periods, covering the reigns of Jotham (742-735), Ahaz (735-715), and Hezekiah (715-687). To the first period belong, for the most part, the early oracles (1—5) which exposed the moral breakdown of Judah and its capital, Jerusalem. With the accession of Ahaz, the prophet became adviser to the king, whose throne was threatened by the Syro-Ephraimite coalition. Rejecting the plea of Isaiah for faith and courage, the weak Ahaz turned to Assyria for help. From this period came the majority of messianic oracles found in the section of Immanuel prophecies (6—12).

Hezekiah succeeded his father and undertook a religious reform which Isaiah undoubtedly supported. But the old intrigues began again, and the king was soon won over to the pro-Egyptian party. Isaiah denounced this "covenant with death" and again summoned Judah to faith in Yahweh as her only hope. But it was too late; the revolt had already begun. Assyria acted quickly and her army, after ravaging Judah, laid siege to Jerusalem (701). "I shut up Hezekiah like a bird in his cage," boasts the famous inscription of Sennacherib. But Yahweh delivered the city, as Isaiah had promised: God is the Lord of history, and Assyria but an instrument in his hands.

Little is known about the last days of this great religious leader, whose oracles, of singular poetic beauty and power, constantly reminded his wayward people of their destiny and the fidelity of Yahweh to his promises.

The complete Book of Isaiah is an anthology of poems composed chiefly by the great prophet, but also by disciples, some of whom came many years after Isaiah. In 1—39 most of the oracles come from Isaiah and faithfully reflect the situation in eighth-century Judah. To disciples deeply influenced by the prophet belong sections such as the Apocalypse of Isaiah (24—27), the oracles against Babylon (13—14), and probably the poems of 34—35.

Chapters 40—55, sometimes called the Deutero-Isaiah, are generally attributed to an anonymous poet who prophesied toward the end of the Babylonian exile. From this section come the great messianic oracles known as the songs of the Servant, whose mysterious destiny of suffering and glorification is fulfilled in the passion and glorification of Christ. Chapters 56—66 contain oracles from a later period and were composed by disciples who inherited the spirit and continued the work of the great prophet.

The principal divisions of the Book of Isaiah are the following:

A: The Book of Judgment

- I: Indictment of Israel and Judah (1, 1—5, 30)
- II: Immanuel Prophecies (6, 1—12, 6)
- III: Oracles against the Pagan Nations (13, 1—23, 18)
- IV: Apocalypse of Isaiah (24, 1—27, 13)
- V: The Lord Alone, Israel's and Judah's Salvation (28, 1—33, 24)

VI: The Lord, Zion's Avenger (34, 1—35, 10)
VII: Historical Appendix (36, 1—39, 8)

B: The Book of Consolation

I: The Lord's Glory in Israel's Liberation (40, 1—48, 21)
II: Expiation of Sin, Spiritual Liberation of Israel (49, 1—55, 13)
III: Return of the First Captives (56, 1—66, 24)

A: THE BOOK OF JUDGMENT

I: INDICTMENT OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH

CHAPTER 1

Israel's Sinfulness. 1† The vision which Isaiah, son of Amoz, had concerning Judah and Jerusalem in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah, kings of Judah.

2* Hear, O heavens, and listen, O earth,
for the LORD speaks:
Sons have I raised and reared,
but they have disowned me!
3† An ox knows its owner,
and an ass, its master's manger;
But Israel does not know,
my people has not understood.
4*† Ah! sinful nation, people laden with wickedness,
evil race, corrupt children!
They have forsaken the LORD,
spurned the Holy One of Israel,
apostatized.
5† Where would you yet be struck,
you that rebel again and again?
The whole head is sick,
the whole heart faint.
6 From the sole of the foot to the head
there is no sound spot:
Wound and welt and gaping gash,
not drained, or bandaged,
or eased with salve.
7 Your country is waste,
your cities burnt with fire;
Your land before your eyes strangers devour
[a waste, like Sodom overthrown]—
8† And daughter Zion is left like a hut in a vineyard,
Like a shed in a melon patch,
like a city blockaded.
9*† Unless the LORD of hosts had left us a scanty remnant,
We had become as Sodom,
we should be like Gomorrah.
10 Hear the word of the LORD,
princes of Sodom!
Listen to the instruction of our God,
people of Gomorrah!
11*† What care I for the number of your sacrifices?
says the LORD.
I have had enough of whole-burnt rams
and fat of fatlings;
In the blood of calves, lambs and goats
I find no pleasure.
12 When you come in to visit me,
who asks these things of you?
13*† Trample my courts no more!
Bring no more worthless offerings;
your incense is loathsome to me.
New moon and sabbath, calling of assemblies,
octaves with wickedness: these I cannot bear.
14 Your new moons and festivals I detest;
they weigh me down, I tire of the load.
15*† When you spread out your hands,
I close my eyes to you;
Though you pray the more,
I will not listen.
Your hands are full of blood!
16 Wash yourselves clean!
Put away your misdeeds from before my eyes;

† 1,1: The title of the book: an editorial addition. Isaiah: meaning "the salvation of the LORD," or "The LORD is salvation." Amoz: not the minor prophet. Judah: the southern kingdom of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin. Uzziah: also called Azariah; cf 2 Kgs 15, 1; 2 Chr 26, 1.

1, 3: Israel: not the northern kingdom, as in 9, 11, exclusively, which Isaiah usually calls "Ephraim" from the tribe bordering on the southern kingdom, but the entire chosen people, cf 8, 14.

1, 4: Holy One of Israel: a title used frequently by Isaiah, rarely by other writers.

1, 5-8: Sufferings inflicted upon God's people for their sins.

1, 8: Daughter Zion: Jerusalem. Hut . . . shed: for the shelter of watchmen and laborers.

1, 9: LORD of hosts: God, who is the Creator and Ruler of the heavenly armies of the angels, stars, etc. Remnant: St. Paul uses this text in Rom 9, 29, where he speaks of God's saving mercy toward the Jews and Gentiles. Sodom . . . Gomorrah: cf Gn 19.

1, 11: The number of your sacrifices: however numerous, they are not acceptable without the right dispositions on the part of the worshipers.

1, 13: Octaves with wickedness: the solemnity of the feasts marred by evil deeds.

1, 15: Spread out your hands: in prayer.

cease doing evil; [17]* learn to do good.
Make justice your aim: redress the wronged,
hear the orphan's plea, defend the widow.

[18]* Come now, let us set things right, says the LORD:
Though your sins be like scarlet, they may become white as snow;
Though they be crimson red, they may become white as wool.
[19] If you are willing, and obey, you shall eat the good things of the land;
[20] But if you refuse and resist, the sword shall consume you:
for the mouth of the LORD has spoken!

[21]*† How has she turned adulteress, the faithful city, so upright!
Justice used to lodge within her, but now, murderers.
[22] Your silver is turned to dross, your wine is mixed with water.
[23]* Your princes are rebels and comrades of thieves;
Each one of them loves a bribe and looks for gifts.
The fatherless they defend not, and the widow's plea does not reach them.
[24]* Now, therefore, says the Lord, the LORD of hosts, the Mighty One of Israel:
Ah! I will take vengeance on my foes and fully repay my enemies!
[25] I will turn my hand against you, and refine your dross in the furnace, removing all your alloy.
[26]* I will restore your judges as at first, and your counselors as in the beginning;
After that you shall be called city of justice, faithful city.

[27]† Zion shall be redeemed by judgment,
and her repentant ones by justice.
[28] Rebels and sinners alike shall be crushed,
those who desert the LORD shall be consumed.
[29]† You shall be ashamed of the terebinths which you prized,
and blush for the groves which you chose.
[30] You shall become like a tree with falling leaves,
like a garden that has no water.
[31] The strong man shall turn to tow, and his work shall become a spark;
Both shall burn together,
and there shall be none to quench the flames.

CHAPTER 2

Zion, the Messianic Capital. [1]† This is what Isaiah, son of Amoz, saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem.

[2]*† In days to come,
The mountain of the LORD's house shall be established as the highest mountain and raised above the hills.
All nations shall stream toward it;
[3]*† many peoples shall come and say:
"Come, let us climb the LORD's mountain,
to the house of the God of Jacob,
That he may instruct us in his ways, and we may walk in his paths."
For from Zion shall go forth instruction,
and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.
[4]* He shall judge between the nations, and impose terms on many peoples.
They shall beat their swords into plowshares
and their spears into pruning hooks;
One nation shall not raise the sword against another,
nor shall they train for war again.

[5] O house of Jacob, come, let us walk in the light of the LORD!

The Lord's Judgment against Idols

[6]*† You have abandoned your people, the house of Jacob,

1, 21: A picture of Jerusalem, once so faithful to God. Apostasy from the covenant is often likened by the prophets to unfaithfulness to the marriage vow.

1, 27: This verse is the key to the whole Book of Isaiah. Zion's defiant persistence in sin has demanded a divine judgment, by which her survivors will be cleansed and will return to God in justice; cf 40, 2.

1, 29: Terebinths which you prized . . . groves which you chose: as popular shrines for idolatrous worship.

2, 1: An editorial addition introducing chapters 2-5.

2, 2-4: The messianic destiny which ensures Judah's later restoration. In the messianic kingdom the prophets generally see the Lord's house as the seat of authority and the source of clear and certain doctrine; also, its rule willingly accepted by all peoples, maintained by spiritual sanctions, and tending to universal peace. This passage is found substantially unchanged in Mi 4, 1-3; it probably, although not certainly, has Isaiah as its author.

2, 3: Zion . . . Jerusalem: types of the earthly center of the messianic kingdom.

2, 6: Fortune-tellers and soothsayers: divination was strictly forbidden; cf Dt 18, 9-14.

Because they are filled with fortune-tellers
and soothsayers, like the Philistines;
they covenant with strangers.
7 Their land is full of silver and gold,
and there is no end to their treasures;
Their land is full of horses,
and there is no end to their chariots.
8* Their land is full of idols;
they worship the works of their hands,
that which their fingers have made.

9 But man is abased,
each one brought low.
[Do not pardon them!]
10* Get behind the rocks, hide in the dust,
From the terror of the LORD
and the splendor of his majesty!
11† The haughty eyes of man will be lowered,
the arrogance of men will be abased,
and the LORD alone will be exalted, on that day.
12 For the LORD of hosts will have his day against all that is proud and arrogant,
all that is high, and it will be brought low;
13† Yes, against all the cedars of Lebanon
and all the oaks of Bashan, 14 Against all the lofty mountains
and all the high hills, 15 Against every lofty tower
and every fortified wall, 16† Against all the ships of Tarshish
and all stately vessels.
17 Human pride will be abased,
the arrogance of men brought low,
And the LORD alone will be exalted, on that day.

18 The idols will perish forever.

19 Men will go into caves in the rocks
and into holes in the earth,
From the terror of the LORD
and the splendor of his majesty,
when he arises to overawe the earth.

20 On that day men will throw to the moles and the bats the idols of silver and gold which they made for worship.

21 They go into caverns in the rocks and into crevices in the cliffs,
From the terror of the LORD
and the splendor of his majesty,
when he arises to overawe the earth.

22 As for you, let man alone,
in whose nostrils is but a breath;
for what is he worth?

CHAPTER 3

Judgment of Judah and Jerusalem

1*† The Lord, the LORD of hosts, shall take away from Jerusalem and from Judah support and prop [all supplies of bread and water]:
2 Hero and warrior,
judge and prophet, fortune-teller and elder,
3 The captain of fifty and the nobleman, counselor, skilled magician, and expert charmer.
4 I will make striplings their princes;
the fickle shall govern them,
5 And the people shall oppress one another,
yes, every man his neighbor.
The child shall be bold toward the elder,
and the base toward the honorable.
6 When a man seizes his brother
in his father's house, saying,
"You have clothes! Be our ruler, and take in hand this ruin!"—
7 Then shall he answer in that day:
"I will not undertake to cure this,
when in my own house there is no bread or clothing!
You shall not make me ruler of the people."

8 Jerusalem is crumbling, Judah is falling;
for their speech and their deeds are before the LORD,
a provocation in the sight of his majesty.
9 Their very look bears witness against them;
their sin like Sodom they vaunt,
They hide it not. Woe to them!
they deal out evil to themselves.
10 Happy the just, for it will be well with them,
the fruit of their works they will eat.

8: 31, 1ff.
10: 2 Thes 1, 9.
3, 1: Lv 26, 26; Ez 4, 16.

2, 11: That day: the day of the Lord, a day of retribution, often referred to, especially by the minor prophets, and described in terms of natural phenomena: earthquake, fire, storm.

2, 13: Lebanon: Mount Lebanon in Syria, famed for its cedars. Bashan: the wooded uplands east of the Jordan River.

2, 16: Tarshish: cf note on Ps 48, 8.

3, 1-12: Anarchy will reign in Jerusalem and Judah. In the prevailing desperation, even the most unworthy and the least qualified will be sought as rulers.

11 Woe to the wicked man! All goes ill, with the work of his hands he will be repaid.
12 My people—a babe in arms will be their tyrant,
and women will rule them!
O my people, your leaders mislead,
they destroy the paths you should follow.

13 The LORD rises to accuse,
standing to try his people.
14 The Lord enters into judgment
with his people's elders and princes:
It is you who have devoured the vineyard;
the loot wrested from the poor is in your houses.
15* What do you mean by crushing my people,
and grinding down the poor when they look to you?
says the Lord, the GOD of hosts.

16* The LORD said:
Because the daughters of Zion are haughty,
and walk with necks outstretched Ogling and mincing as they go,
their anklets tinkling with every step, 17† The Lord shall cover the scalps of Zion's daughters with scabs, and the LORD shall bare their heads.

18 On that day the LORD will do away with the finery of the anklets, sunbursts, and crescents; 19 the pendants, bracelets, and veils; 20 the headdresses, bangles, cinctures, perfume boxes, and amulets; 21† the signet rings, and the nose rings; 22 the court dresses, wraps, cloaks, and purses; 23 the mirrors, linen tunics, turbans, and shawls.

24 Instead of perfume there will be stench,
instead of the girdle, a rope,
And for the coiffure, baldness;
for the rich gown, a sackcloth skirt.
Then, instead of beauty:
25 Your men will fall by the sword,
and your champions, in war;
26 Her gates will lament and mourn,
as the city sits desolate on the ground.

CHAPTER 4

1† Seven women will take hold of one man
on that day, saying:
"We will eat our own food
and wear our own clothing;
Only let your name be given us,
put an end to our disgrace!"

The Messianic Branch

2*† On that day,
The branch of the LORD will be luster and glory,
and the fruit of the earth will be honor and splendor
for the survivors of Israel.
3*† He who remains in Zion and he that is left in Jerusalem
Will be called holy:
every one marked down for life in Jerusalem.
4 When the Lord washes away
the filth of the daughters of Zion,
And purges Jerusalem's blood from her midst
with a blast of searing judgment, 5* Then will the LORD create,
over the whole site of Mount Zion
and over her place of assembly,
A smoking cloud by day
and a light of flaming fire by night.
6 For over all, his glory will be shelter and protection:
shade from the parching heat of day,
refuge and cover from storm and rain.

CHAPTER 5

The Vineyard Song

1† Let me now sing of my friend,
my friend's song concerning his vineyard.
My friend had a vineyard
on a fertile hillside;
2 He spaded it, cleared it of stones,
and planted the choicest vines;
Within it he built a watchtower,
and hewed out a wine press.
Then he looked for the crop of grapes,
but what it yielded was wild grapes.

3 Now, inhabitants of Jerusalem and men of Judah,

15: Lv 25, 42.55.
16ff: 32, 11f.
4, 2: 11, 1; Jer 23, 5; 33, 15.
3: 6, 13; 10, 20; Ob 17.
5: Ex 13, 21.

3, 17: Bare their heads: a mark of social disgrace; cf Nm 5, 18.

3, 21: Nose rings: of gold, a feminine ornament in the East; cf note on Gn 24, 22.

4, 1: Seven women . . . one man: the disproportion of the sexes due to war leaves the female population almost without male partners. The women are eager to marry, not for support, but to avoid the disgrace of being childless.

4, 2: Branch of the LORD: divine blessings in general, which later culminated in the Messiah; cf Jer 23, 5; Zec 3, 8; 6, 12.

4, 3: Marked down for life: in God's list of his elect; cf Ex 32, 32.

5, 1: My friend had a vineyard: the Lord and his chosen people.

judge between me and my vineyard:
4 What more was there to do for my vineyard
that I had not done?
Why, when I looked for the crop of grapes,
did it bring forth wild grapes?
5 Now, I will let you know what I mean to do to my vineyard:
Take away its hedge, give it to grazing,
break through its wall, let it be trampled!
6 Yes, I will make it a ruin:
it shall not be pruned or hoed,
but overgrown with thorns and briers;
I will command the clouds
not to send rain upon it.
7† The vineyard of the LORD of hosts is the house of Israel,
and the men of Judah are his cherished plant;
He looked for judgment, but see, bloodshed!
for justice, but hark, the outcry!

Doom of the Unjust

8*† Woe to you who join house to house,
who connect field with field,
Till no room remains, and you are left to dwell alone in the midst of the land!
9* In my hearing the LORD of hosts has sworn:
Many houses shall be in ruins,
large ones and fine, with no one to live in them.
10† Ten acres of vineyard shall yield but one liquid measure,
And a homer of seed
shall yield but an ephah.
17 Lambs shall graze there at pasture,
and kids shall eat in the ruins of the rich.

11 Woe to those who demand strong drink
as soon as they rise in the morning,
And linger into the night
while wine inflames them!
12* With harp and lyre, timbrel and flute,
they feast on wine;
But what the LORD does, they regard not,
the work of his hands they see not.
13 Therefore my people go into exile,
because they do not understand;
Their nobles die of hunger,
and their masses are parched with thirst.
14*† Therefore the nether world enlarges its throat
and opens its maw without limit;
Down go their nobility and their masses,
their throngs and their revelry.
15 Men shall be abased, each one brought low,
and the eyes of the haughty lowered,
16 But the LORD of hosts shall be exalted by his judgment, and God the Holy shall be shown holy by his justice.

18 Woe to those who tug at guilt with cords of perversity,
and at sin as if with cart ropes!
19* To those who say, "Let him make haste
and speed his work, that we may see it;
On with the plan of the Holy One of Israel!
let it come to pass, that we may know it!"
20 Woe to those who call evil good, and good evil,
who change darkness into light, and light into darkness,
who change bitter into sweet, and sweet into bitter!
21* Woe to those who are wise in their own sight,
and prudent in their own esteem!
22* Woe to the champions at drinking wine,
the valiant at mixing strong drink!
23* To those who acquit the guilty for bribes,
and deprive the just man of his rights!
24 Therefore, as the tongue of fire licks up stubble,
as dry grass shrivels in the flame,
Even so their root shall become rotten
and their blossom scatter like dust;
For they have spurned the law of the LORD of hosts,
and scorned the word of the Holy One of Israel.
25 Therefore the wrath of the LORD blazes against his people,
he raises his hand to strike them;

5, 8-10: Land-grabbers who unjustly acquire property will be impoverished instead of enriched.
5, 10: Ten acres: a field requiring ten days of plowing by a yoke of oxen. Liquid measure: in Hebrew, a "bath," i.e., about ten gallons. Homer: a dry measure of about ten bushels. Ephah: a dry measure of about one bushel.
5, 14: Nether world: cf note on Ps 6, 6.

When the mountains quake,
their corpses shall be like refuse in the streets.
For all this, his wrath is not turned back,
and his hand is still outstretched.

Invasion

26† He will give a signal to a far-off nation,
and whistle to them from the ends of the earth;
speedily and promptly will they come.
27 None of them will stumble with weariness,
none will slumber and none will sleep.
None will have his waist belt loose,
nor the thong of his sandal broken.
28 Their arrows are sharp,
and all their bows are bent.
The hoofs of their horses seem like flint,
and their chariot wheels like the hurricane.
29 Their roar is that of the lion,
like the lion's whelps they roar;
They growl and seize the prey,
they carry it off and none will rescue it.
30* [They will roar over it, on that day,
with a roaring like that of the sea.]

II: IMMANUEL PROPHECIES

CHAPTER 6

Call of Isaiah. 1*† In the year King Uzziah died, I saw the Lord seated on a high and lofty throne, with the train of his garment filling the temple. 2 Seraphim were stationed above; each of them had six wings: with two they veiled their faces, with two they veiled their feet, and with two they hovered aloft.
3* "Holy, holy, holy is the LORD of hosts!" they cried one to the other. "All the earth is filled with his glory!" 4*† At the sound of that cry, the frame of the door shook and the house was filled with smoke.
5*† Then I said, "Woe is me, I am doomed! For I am a man of unclean lips, living among a people of unclean lips; yet my eyes have seen the King, the LORD of hosts!" 6 Then one of the seraphim flew to me, holding an ember which he had taken with tongs from the altar.
7*† He touched my mouth with it. "See," he said, "now that this has touched your lips, your wickedness is removed, your sin purged."
8 Then I heard the voice of the Lord saying, "Whom shall I send? Who will go for us?" "Here I am," I said; "send me!" 9*† And he replied: Go and say to this people:

Listen carefully, but you shall not understand!
Look intently, but you shall know nothing!
10* You are to make the heart of this people sluggish,
to dull their ears and close their eyes;
Else their eyes will see, their ears hear,
their heart understand,
and they will turn and be healed.

11 "How long, O Lord?" I asked. And he replied:

Until the cities are desolate,
without inhabitants,
Houses, without a man,
and the earth is a desolate waste.
12† Until the LORD removes men far away,
and the land is abandoned more and more.
13* If there be still a tenth part in it,
then this in turn shall be laid waste;
As with a terebinth or an oak whose trunk remains when its leaves have fallen.
[Holy offspring is the trunk.]

5, 26-30: A description of the invading Assyrian army, God's instrument for punishing his people.

6, 1: In the year King Uzziah died: 742 B.C.

6, 1ff: Temple: the holy place, just in front of the holy of holies. Seraphim: literally "the burning ones," are celestial beings who surround the throne of God. Each has six wings. Reverence for the divine majesty causes them to veil their faces with two wings; modesty, to veil their extremities in similar fashion; alacrity in God's service, to extend two wings in preparation for flight. Holy, holy, holy: God's perfect interior holiness whose exterior manifestation is his glory. These words are found in the Roman liturgy just before the Canon of the Mass.

6, 4: Smoke: reminiscent of the clouds which surrounded God at Mount Sinai; cf Ex 19, 16-19; Dt 4, 11f.

6, 5: Doomed: it was popularly believed that to see God would lead to one's death; cf Gn 32, 31; Ex 33, 20; Jgs 13, 22.

6, 7: Touched your lips: Isaiah is thus symbolically purified to be worthy of his vocation as God's prophet. In the Roman liturgy, the celebrant at Mass makes reference to this incident just before he reads the gospel.

6, 9f: The truth that the nation will remain impenitent is vividly foretold, as if its obstinacy would be caused, instead of merely occasioned, by the prophet's warning. Cf Mt 13, 13ff; Mk 4, 12; Lk 8, 10.

6, 12: Several limited deportations in the time of Isaiah would later culminate in the Babylonian exile.

CHAPTER 7

Birth of Immanuel. 1*† In the days of Ahaz, king of Judah, son of Jotham, son of Uzziah, Rezin, king of Aram, and Pekah, king of Israel, son of Remaliah, went up to attack Jerusalem, but they were not able to conquer it. 2 When word came to the house of David that Aram was encamped in Ephraim, the heart of the king and heart of the people trembled, as the trees of the forest tremble in the wind.

3*† Then the LORD said to Isaiah: Go out to meet Ahaz, you and your son Shear-jashub, at the end of the conduit of the upper pool, on the highway of the fuller's field, 4 and say to him: Take care you remain tranquil and do not fear; let not your courage fail before these two stumps of smoldering brands [the blazing anger of Rezin and the Arameans, and of the son of Remaliah], 5 because of the mischief that Aram [Ephraim and the son of Remaliah] plots against you, saying, 6† "Let us go up and tear Judah asunder, make it our own by force, and appoint the son of Tabeel king there."

7 Thus says the LORD:
This shall not stand, it shall not be!
8 Damascus is the capital of Aram,
and Rezin the head of Damascus;
Samaria is the capital of Ephraim,
and Remaliah's son the head of Samaria.
9*† But within sixty years and five,
Ephraim shall be crushed, no longer a nation.
Unless your faith is firm
you shall not be firm!

10 Again the LORD spoke to Ahaz: 11† Ask for a sign from the LORD, your God; let it be deep as the nether world, or high as the sky! 12† But Ahaz answered, "I will not ask! I will not tempt the LORD!" 13 Then he said: Listen, O house of David! Is it not enough for you to weary men, must you also weary my God? 14† Therefore the Lord himself will give you this sign: the virgin shall be with child, and bear a son, and shall name him Immanuel. 15† He shall be living on curds and honey by the time he learns to reject the bad and choose the good. 16 For before the child learns to reject the bad and choose the good, the land of those two kings whom you dread shall be deserted.

17 The LORD shall bring upon you and your people and your father's house days worse than any since Ephraim seceded from Judah. [This means the king of Assyria.] 18 On that day

The LORD shall whistle
for the fly that is in the farthest streams of Egypt, and for the bee in the land of Assyria.
19 All of them shall come and settle in the steep ravines and in the rocky clefts,
on all thornbushes and in all pastures.

20† On that day the LORD shall shave with the razor hired from across the River [with the king of Assyria] the head, and the hair between the legs. It shall also shave off the beard.

21 On that day a man shall keep a heifer or a couple of sheep, 22 and from their abundant yield of milk he shall live on curds; curds and honey shall be the food of all who remain in the land. 23 On that day every place where there used to be a thousand vines, worth a thousand pieces of silver, shall be turned to briers and thorns. 24 Men shall go there with bow and arrows; for all the country shall be briers and thorns. 25 For fear of briers and thorns you shall not go upon any mountainside which used to be hoed with the mattock; they shall be grazing land for cattle and shall be trampled upon by sheep.

* 7, 1: 2 Kgs 16, 5; 2 Chr 28, 5-15. 3: 36, 2; 2 Chr 32, 3. 9: 8, 6ff.

† 7, 1: Days of Ahaz: who ruled from 735 to 715 B.C. This attack against Jerusalem by the kings of Aram (Syria) and Israel was occasioned by Ahaz' refusal to enter with them into an anti-Assyrian alliance; cf 2 Kgs 16.

7, 3: Shear-jashub: this name means "a remnant will return."

7, 6: Son of Tabeel: an adherent of Jerusalem's enemies. His appointment would interrupt the lawful succession from David.

7, 9: Within sixty years and five: if the text is correct, its reference is unknown.

7, 11: Deep . . . sky: an extraordinary or miraculous sign that would prove God's firm will to save the royal house of David from its oppressors.

7, 12: Tempt the Lord: Ahaz expresses in this hypocritical way his preference for depending upon the might of Assyria rather than upon God.

7, 14: The sign proposed by Isaiah was concerned with the preservation of Judah in the midst of distress (cf 7, 15.17), but more especially with the fulfillment of God's earlier promise to David (2 Sm 7, 12-16) in the coming of Immanuel (meaning, "With us is God") as the ideal king (cf 9, 5-6; 11, 1-5). The Church has always followed St. Matthew in seeing the transcendent fulfillment of this verse in Christ and his Virgin Mother. The prophet need not have known the full force latent in his own words; and some Catholic writers have sought a preliminary and partial fulfillment in the conception and birth of the future King Hezekiah, whose mother, at the time Isaiah spoke, would have been a young, unmarried woman (Hebrew, almah). The Holy Spirit was preparing, however, for another Nativity which alone could fulfill the divinely given terms of Immanuel's mission, and in which the perpetual virginity of the Mother of God was to fulfill also the words of this prophecy in the integral sense intended by the divine Wisdom.

7, 15: Curds and honey: the restricted diet of those who remain after devastation has changed the once fertile fields of Judah into grazing land; cf 7, 21-25.

7, 20: God will use the Assyrians from across the River (the Euphrates) as his instrument (razor) to inflict disgrace and suffering upon his people.

CHAPTER 8

The Son of Isaiah. 1† The LORD said to me: Take a large cylinder-seal, and inscribe on it in ordinary letters: "Belonging to Maher-shalal-hash-baz." 2† And I took reliable witnesses, Uriah the priest, and Zechariah, son of Jeberechiah. 3† Then I went to the prophetess and she conceived and bore a son. The LORD said to me: Name him Maher-shalal-hash-baz, 4 for before the child knows how to call his father or mother by name, the wealth of Damascus and the spoil of Samaria shall be carried off by the king of Assyria.

5 Again the LORD spoke to me:

6*† Because this people has rejected
the waters of Shiloah that flow gently,
And melts with fear before the loftiness
of Rezin and Remaliah's son, 7 Therefore the LORD raises against them
the waters of the River, great and mighty
[the king of Assyria and all his power].
It shall rise above all its channels, and overflow all its banks;
8 It shall pass into Judah, and flood it all throughout:
up to the neck it shall reach;
It shall spread its wings
the full width of your land, Immanuel!

9 Know, O peoples, and be appalled!
Give ear, all you distant lands!
Arm, but be crushed! Arm, but be crushed!
10† Form a plan, and it shall be thwarted;
make a resolve, and it shall not be carried out,
for "With us is God!"

Disciples of Isaiah. 11* For thus said the LORD to me, taking hold of me and warning me not to walk in the way of this people:

12 Call not alliance what this people calls alliance,
and fear not, nor stand in awe of what they fear.
13 But with the LORD of hosts make your alliance—
for him be your fear and your awe.
14* Yet he shall be a snare, an obstacle and a stumbling stone to both the houses of Israel, A trap and a snare
to those who dwell in Jerusalem;
15 And many among them shall stumble and fall,
broken, snared, and captured.

16† The record is to be folded and the sealed instruction kept among my disciples. 17 For I will trust in the LORD, who is hiding his face from the house of Jacob; yes, I will wait for him. 18† Look at me and the children whom the Lord has given me: we are signs and portents in Israel from the LORD of hosts who dwells on Mount Zion. 19*† And when they say to you, "Inquire of mediums and fortune-tellers (who chirp and mutter!); should not a people inquire of their gods, apply to the dead on behalf of the living?"— 20 then this document will furnish its instruction. That kind of thing they will surely say.

The Prince of Peace. 23† First he degraded the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali; but in the end he has glorified the seaward road, the land west of the Jordan, the District of the Gentiles.

Anguish has taken wing, dispelled is darkness:
for there is no gloom where but now there was distress.

CHAPTER 9

1* The people who walked in darkness have seen a great light;
Upon those who dwelt in the land of gloom
a light has shone.

8, 1: Ordinary letters: easily read by all. Maher-shalal-hash-baz: a symbolic name to be given to another son of Isaiah (v 3); it means "quick spoils; speedy plunder," and describes what the Assyrians will do.

8, 2: Reliable witnesses: who would testify that Isaiah had indeed prophesied the future destruction. Uriah the priest: cf 2 Kgs 16, 10.

8, 3: The prophetess: wife of Isaiah.

8, 6ff: This people: Judah. Waters of Shiloah: the stream that flows into the pool of Shiloah in Jerusalem, its slow current symbolizing the silent, divine protection which Judah has rejected. God will therefore summon the mighty Assyrian army, symbolized by the River (Euphrates), to devastate Judah, which, however, will not be entirely destroyed, because it is the land of Immanuel.

8, 10: The plan of Israel's enemies will be thwarted because, as the name "Immanuel" signifies, With us is God.

8, 16: Kept among my disciples: for preservation and transmission.

8, 18: Signs: Isaiah and his sons had symbolic names.

8, 19: Chirp and mutter: a mocking reference to the sounds uttered by necromancers, as if the dead were speaking; all such practices were forbidden.

8, 21f: These verses have been transposed and placed within 14, 25, which affords the context in which they can be understood.

8,23: Zebulun . . . Naphtali: northern Palestine, which was first to be attacked by the Assyrians; God, however, redeems it, as he redeems all his people. Seaward road: from Damascus, across southern Galilee to the Mediterranean Sea. District of the Gentiles: northern Galilee, inhabited by pagans; cf Jos 20, 7; Is 9, 1; Mt 4, 15f refers to this, since Jesus began his public mission in Galilee.

2 You have brought them abundant joy and great rejoicing.
As they rejoice before you as at the harvest,
as men make merry when dividing spoils.
3 For the yoke that burdened them,
the pole on their shoulder,
And the rod of their taskmaster
you have smashed, as on the day of Midian.
4* For every boot that tramped in battle,
every cloak rolled in blood,
will be burned as fuel for flames.
5*† For a child is born to us, a son is given us;
upon his shoulder dominion rests.
They name him Wonder-Counselor, God-Hero,
Father-Forever, Prince of Peace.
6* His dominion is vast and forever peaceful,
From David's throne, and over his kingdom,
which he confirms and sustains
By judgment and justice,
both now and forever.
The zeal of the LORD of hosts will do this!

Fall of the Northern Kingdom

7 The Lord has sent word against Jacob,
it falls upon Israel;
8 And all the people know it,
Ephraim and those who dwell in Samaria,
those who say in arrogance and pride of heart, 9 "Bricks have fallen,
but we will build with cut stone;
Sycamores are felled,
but we will replace them with cedars."
10 But the LORD raises up their foes against them and stirs up their enemies to action:
11† Aram on the east and the Philistines on the west
devour Israel with open mouth.
For all this, his wrath is not turned back,
and his hand is still outstretched!

12 The people do not turn to him who struck them,
nor seek the LORD of hosts.
13 So the LORD severs from Israel head and tail,
palm branch and reed in one day.
14 [The elder and the noble are the head,
the prophet who teaches falsehood is the tail.]
15* The leaders of this people mislead them and those to be led are engulfed.
16 For this reason, the Lord does not spare their young men, and their orphans and widows he does not pity;
They are wholly profaned and sinful,
and every mouth gives vent to folly.
For all this, his wrath is not turned back,
his hand is still outstretched!

17 For wickedness burns like fire,
devouring brier and thorn;
It kindles the forest thickets,
which go up in columns of smoke.
18 At the wrath of the LORD of hosts the land quakes,
and the people are like fuel for fire;
No man spares his brother,
each devours the flesh of his neighbor.
19 Though they hack on the right, they are hungry;
though they eat on the left, they are not filled.
20† Manasseh devours Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasseh;
together they turn on Judah.
For all this, his wrath is not turned back,
his hand is still outstretched!

CHAPTER 10

Social Injustice

1* Woe to those who enact unjust statutes and who write oppressive decrees, 2* Depriving the needy of judgment
and robbing my people's poor of their rights, Making widows their plunder,
and orphans their prey!

9, 5: A child: the Immanuel of Is 7, 14 and 8, 8; cf 11, 1.2.9. In Christian tradition and liturgy, this passage is used to refer to Christ. Upon his shoulder dominion rests: authority. Wonder-Counselor: remarkable for his wisdom and prudence. God-Hero: a warrior and a defender of his people, like God himself. Father-Forever: ever devoted to his people. Prince of Peace: his reign will be characterized by peace.

9, 11: Aram: the Syrian kingdom, with its capital at Damascus.

9, 20: Manasseh . . . Ephraim: two of the leading tribes of the northern kindgom.

3 What will you do on the day of punishment,
when ruin comes from afar?
To whom will you flee for help?
Where will you leave your wealth,
4 Lest it sink beneath the captive or fall beneath the slain?
For all this, his wrath is not turned back,
his hand is still outstretched!

Assyria the Unconscious Instrument of God

5 Woe to Assyria! My rod in anger, my staff in wrath.
6† Against an impious nation I send him,
and against a people under my wrath I order him
To seize plunder, carry off loot,
and tread them down like the mud of the streets.
7 But this is not what he intends,
nor does he have this in mind;
Rather, it is in his heart to destroy,
to make an end of nations not a few.
8 "Are not my commanders all kings?" he says,
9*† "Is not Calno like Carchemish, Or Hamath like Arpad,
or Samaria like Damascus?
10 Just as my hand reached out to idolatrous kingdoms
that had more images than Jerusalem and Samaria, 11* Just as I treated Samaria and her idols, shall I not do to Jerusalem and her graven images?"

12 [But when the LORD has brought to an end all his work on Mount Zion and in Jerusalem,

I will punish the utterance
of the king of Assyria's proud heart, 13 and the boastfulness of his haughty eyes. For he says:]

"By my own power I have done it,
and by my wisdom, for I am shrewd.
I have moved the boundaries of peoples,
their treasures I have pillaged,
and, like a giant, I have put down the enthroned.
14 My hand has seized like a nest
the riches of nations;
As one takes eggs left alone,
so I took in all the earth;
No one fluttered a wing,
or opened a mouth, or chirped!"

15 Will the axe boast against him who hews with it?
Will the saw exalt itself above him who wields it?
As if a rod could sway him who lifts it,
or a staff him who is not wood!
16† Therefore the Lord, the LORD of hosts,
will send among his fat ones leanness,
And instead of his glory there will be kindling
like the kindling of fire.
17 The Light of Israel will become a fire,
Israel's Holy One a flame,
That burns and consumes his briers and his thorns in a single day.
18 His splendid forests and orchards will be consumed, soul and body;
19 And the remnant of the trees in his forest will be so few,
Like poles set up for signals,
that any boy can record them.
20 On that day
The remnant of Israel,
the survivors of the house of Jacob,
will no more lean upon him who struck them;
But they lean upon the LORD,
the Holy One of Israel, in truth.
21† A remnant will return, the remnant of Jacob,
to the mighty God.
22* For though your people, O Israel,
were like the sand of the sea,
Only a remnant of them will return;
their destruction is decreed
as overwhelming justice demands.

23 Yes, the destruction he has decreed,
the Lord, the GOD of hosts, will carry out within the whole land. 24 Therefore thus says the Lord, the GOD of hosts: O my people, who dwell in Zion, do not fear the Assyrian, though he strikes you with a rod, and raises his staff against you. 25 For only a brief moment more, and my anger shall be over; but them I will destroy in wrath. 26* Then the LORD of hosts will raise against them a scourge such as struck Midian at the rock of Oreb; and he will raise his staff over the sea as he did against Egypt. 27† On that day,

Sennacherib's Invasion

He has come up from the direction of Rimmon, 28 he has reached Aiath, passed through Migron,
at Michmash his supplies are stored.
29 They cross the ravine:
"We will spend the night at Geba."
Ramah is in terror,
Gibeah of Saul has fled.
30 Cry and shriek, O daughter of Gallim!
Hearken, Laishah! Answer her,
Anathoth!
31 Madmenah is in flight,
the inhabitants of Gebim seek refuge.
32† Even today he will halt at Nob,
he will shake his fist at the mount
of daughter Zion,
the hill of Jerusalem!
33 Behold, the Lord, the LORD of hosts, lops off the boughs with terrible
violence;
The tall of stature are felled,
and the lofty ones brought low; 34 The forest thickets are felled with the axe,
and Lebanon in its splendor falls.

CHAPTER 11

The Rule of Immanuel

1*† But a shoot shall sprout from the stump of Jesse,
and from his roots a bud shall blossom.
2*† The spirit of the LORD shall rest upon
him:
a spirit of wisdom and of understanding,
A spirit of counsel and of strength,
a spirit of knowledge and of fear
of the LORD,
3 and his delight shall be the fear
of the LORD.
Not by appearance shall he judge,
nor by hearsay shall he decide,
4* But he shall judge the poor with justice,
and decide aright for the land's
afflicted.
He shall strike the ruthless with the rod of his mouth,
and with the breath of his lips he shall slay the wicked.
5 Justice shall be the band around his waist,
and faithfulness a belt upon his hips.
6*† Then the wolf shall be a guest of the lamb,
and the leopard shall lie down
with the kid;
The calf and the young lion shall browse together,
with a little child to guide them.
7 The cow and the bear shall be neighbors,
together their young shall rest;
the lion shall eat hay like the ox.
8 The baby shall play by the cobra's
den,
and the child lay his hand on the adder's lair.
9* There shall be no harm or ruin on all my holy mountain;
for the earth shall be filled with knowledge of the LORD,
as water covers the sea.

Union of Ephraim and Judah

10* On that day,
The root of Jesse,
set up as a signal for the nations,
The Gentiles shall seek out,
for his dwelling shall be glorious.
11*† On that day,
The Lord shall again take it in hand to reclaim the remnant of his people
that is left from Assyria and Egypt,
Pathros, Ethiopia, and Elam, Shinar, Hamath, and the isles of the sea.
12 He shall raise a signal to the nations
and gather the outcasts of Israel;
The dispersed of Judah he shall assemble
from the four corners of the earth.
13* The envy of Ephraim shall pass
away,
and the rivalry of Judah be removed;

9: Hb 2, 14.
10: 49, 22; Rom 15, 12.
11: 27, 13; Mi 7, 12; Zec 10, 10.
13: Ex 37, 16-17.

†

10, 32ff: Just when the enemy is about to capture Jerusalem, God intervenes and destroys the hostile army.

11, 1: Jesse: David's father. Shoot . . . stump: after the Babylonian Exile only a stump of the Davidic dynasty will remain; from it will arise the new shoot, the messianic King.

11, 2f: The source of the traditional names of the gifts of the Holy Spirit. The Septuagint and the Vulgate read "piety" for fear of the LORD in its first occurence, thus listing seven gifts.

11, 6-9: This picture of the idyllic harmony of paradise is a dramatic symbol of the universal peace and justice of messianic times.

11, 11: Pathros . . . sea: where God's people lived in exile. Pathros: upper Egypt. Elam: east of Babylonia. Shinar: Babylonia. Hamath: on the Orontes River in Syria. Isles: or coastlands, in the Mediterranean.

Ephraim shall not be jealous of Judah,
and Judah shall not be hostile to Ephraim;
14† But they shall swoop down on the foothills
of the Philistines to the west,
together they shall plunder the Kedemites;
Edom and Moab shall be their possessions,
and the Ammonites their subjects.
15*† The LORD shall dry up the tongue
of the Sea of Egypt, and wave his hand over the Euphrates in his fierce anger
And shatter it into seven streamlets,
so that it can be crossed in sandals.
16 There shall be a highway for the remnant of his people that is left from Assyria,
As there was for Israel
when he came up from the land of Egypt.

CHAPTER 12

Song of Thanksgiving

1† On that day, you will say:
I give you thanks, O LORD;
though you have been angry with me,
your anger has abated, and you have consoled me.
2* God indeed is my savior;
I am confident and unafraid.
My strength and my courage is the LORD,
and he has been my savior.

3 With joy you will draw water at the fountain of salvation, 4 and say on that day:
Give thanks to the LORD, acclaim his name;
among the nations make known his deeds,
proclaim how exalted is his name.
5* Sing praise to the LORD for his glorious achievement;
let this be known throughout all the earth.
6* Shout with exultation, O city of Zion,
for great in your midst
is the Holy One of Israel!

CHAPTER 13

Babylon. 1 An oracle concerning Babylon; a vision of Isaiah, son of Amoz.

2*† Upon the bare mountains set up a signal;
cry out to them,
Wave for them to enter
the gates of the volunteers.
3† I have commanded my dedicated soldiers,
I have summoned my warriors,
eager and bold to carry out my anger.
4* Listen! the rumble on the mountains:
that of an immense throng!
Listen! the noise of kingdoms,
nations assembled!
The LORD of hosts is mustering
an army for battle.
5 They come from a far-off country,
and from the end of the heavens,
The LORD and the instruments of his wrath,
to destroy all the land.
6*† Howl, for the day of the LORD is near;
as destruction from the Almighty it comes.
7* Therefore all hands fall helpless,
the bows of the young men fall from their hands.
Every man's heart melts 8* in terror.
Pangs and sorrows take hold of them,
like a woman in labor they writhe;
They look aghast at each other,
their faces aflame.
9 Lo, the day of the LORD comes,
cruel, with wrath and burning anger;
To lay waste the land
and destroy the sinners within it!
10* The stars and constellations of the heavens
send forth no light;

* 15: Ex 14, 29. 12, 2: Ex 15, 2; Ps 118, 14. 5: Ex 15, 1. 6: 41, 14.16; 54, 1; Zep 3, 14; Zec 2, 10. 13, 2: 5, 26. 4: Jer 50, 9. 6: Jer 46, 10; Jl 1, 15. 7: Ez 7, 17. 8: 21, 3; Ps 48, 7; Mi 4, 9. 10: 24, 23.

† 11, 14: Kedemites: tribes in the Arabian Desert.

11, 15: Tongue . . . Egypt: the body of water between Egypt and Palestine.

12, 1-6: Israel's thanksgiving to the Lord, expressed in language like that of the Psalms.

13, 2: To them: the Medes (v 17) and Persians, who would destroy Babylon. Gates of the volunteers: the mustering places of Babylon's enemies for war against her.

13, 3: Dedicated soldiers: in the sense that they will wage a "holy war" and carry out God's plan.

13, 6ff: Day of the LORD: described often in prophetical writings, it generally signified the coming of the Lord in power and majesty to destroy his enemies and inaugurate his kingdom. Here it refers to the overthrow of Babylon. The figures used convey the idea of horror and destruction. Read vv 6-8 with vv 14-16.

The sun is dark when it rises,
and the light of the moon does not shine.
11* Thus I will punish the world for its evil
and the wicked for their guilt.
I will put an end to the pride of the arrogant,
the insolence of tyrants I will humble.
12† I will make mortals more rare than pure gold,
men, than gold of Ophir.
13 For this I will make the heavens tremble
and the earth shall be shaken from its place,
At the wrath of the LORD of hosts
on the day of his burning anger.

14* Like a hunted gazelle,
or a flock that no one gathers, Every man shall turn to his kindred and flee to his own land.
15 Everyone who is caught shall be run through;
to a man, they shall fall by the sword.
16* Their infants shall be dashed to pieces in their sight;
their houses shall be plundered
and their wives ravished.

17* I am stirring up against them the Medes, who think nothing of silver
and take no delight in gold.
18 The fruit of the womb they shall not spare,
nor shall they have eyes of pity for children.
19 And Babylon, the jewel of kingdoms,
the glory and pride of the Chaldeans, Shall be overthrown by God
like Sodom and like Gomorrah.
20* She shall never be inhabited,
nor dwelt in, from age to age;
The Arab shall not pitch his tent there,
nor shepherds couch their flocks.
21*† But wildcats shall rest there and owls shall fill the houses;
There ostriches shall dwell,
and satyrs shall dance.
22 Desert beasts shall howl in her castles,
and jackals in her luxurious palaces.
Her time is near at hand
and her days shall not be prolonged.

CHAPTER 14

The King of Babylon. 1* When the LORD has pity on Jacob and again chooses Israel and settles them on their own soil, the aliens will join them and be counted with the house of Jacob.
2* The house of Israel will take them and bring them along to its place, and possess them as male and female slaves on the Lord's soil, making captives of its captors and ruling over its oppressors.
3* On the day the LORD relieves you of sorrow and unrest and the hard service in which you have been enslaved,
4*† you will take up this taunt-song against the king of Babylon:

How the oppressor has reached his end!
how the turmoil is stilled!
5 The LORD has broken the rod of the wicked,
the staff of the tyrants
6 That struck the peoples in wrath relentless blows;
That beat down the nations in anger, with oppression unchecked.
7 The whole earth rests peacefully, song breaks forth;
8* The very cypresses rejoice over you, and the cedars of Lebanon:
"Now that you are laid to rest, there will be none to cut us down."

9 The nether world below is all astir preparing for your coming;
It awakens the shades to greet you, all the leaders of the earth;
It has the kings of all nations rise from their thrones.
10 All of them speak out and say to you,
"You too have become weak like us, you are the same as we.
11* Down to the nether world your pomp is brought,
the music of your harps.
The couch beneath you is the maggot,
your covering, the worm."

12† How have you fallen from the heavens,
O morning star, son of the dawn!
How are you cut down to the ground, you who mowed down the nations!
13*† You said in your heart:

11: 2, 17; Jer 50, 32.
14: Jer 50, 16.
16: Na 3, 10.
17: 21, 2; Jer 51, 11.28.
20: Jer 51, 62.
21: 34, 13†; 35, 7.
14, 1: 56, 3; 60, 4; Ps 102, 14; Jer 24, 6; Zec 1, 17.
2: 66, 20.
3: Jer 30, 10.
4: Hb 2, 6.
8: Ez 31, 16.
11: Sir 10, 13.
13: Jer 51, 53; Am 9, 2.

13, 12: Ophir: cf note to Ps 45, 10.
13, 21: Satyrs: in the popular mind, demons of goatlike form dwelling in ruins, symbols of immorality; cf Lv 17, 7.
14, 4-21: This taunt-song, or satire, is one of the finest in the Bible.
14, 12: Morning star: the king of Babylon. The Vulgate has "Lucifer," a name applied by the Church Fathers to Satan.
14, 13: Recesses of the North: see note on Ps 48, 3.

"I will scale the heavens;
Above the stars of God
I will set up my throne;
I will take my seat on the Mount of Assembly,
in the recesses of the North.
14* I will ascend above the tops of the clouds;
I will be like the Most High!"
15 Yet down to the nether world you go to the recesses of the pit!

16 When they see you they will stare, pondering over you:
"Is this the man who made the earth tremble,
and kingdoms quake?
17 Who made the world a desert,
razed its cities,
and gave his captives no release?
18 All the kings of the nations lie in glory,
each in his own tomb;
19 But you are cast forth without burial,
loathsome and corrupt,
Clothed as those slain at sword-point,
a trampled corpse.
Going down to the pavement of the pit,
20 you will never be one with them in the grave."

For you have ruined your land,
you have slain your people!
Let him not be named forever,
that scion of an evil race!
21 Make ready to slaughter his sons
for the guilt of their fathers;
Lest they rise and possess the earth,
and fill the breadth of the world with tyrants.

22* I will rise up against them, says the LORD of hosts, and cut off from Babylon name and remnant, progeny and offspring, says the LORD. 23 I will make it a haunt of hoot owls and a marshland; I will sweep it with the broom of destruction, says the LORD of hosts.

Assyria

24 The LORD of hosts has sworn:
As I have resolved,
so shall it be;
As I have proposed,
so shall it stand:
25 I will break the Assyrian in my land
and trample him on my mountains;
8:21† He shall pass through it hard-pressed and hungry,
and in his hunger he shall become enraged,
and curse his king and his gods.
He shall look upward,
but there shall be strict darkness without any dawn;
8:22 He shall gaze at the earth,
but there shall be distress and darkness,
with the light blacked out by its clouds.
14:25 Then his yoke shall be removed from them,
and his burden from their shoulder.
26 This is the plan proposed for the whole earth,
and this the hand outstretched over all nations.
27 The LORD of hosts has planned;
who can thwart him?
His hand is stretched out;
who can turn it back?

Philistia. 28† In the year that King Ahaz died, there came this oracle:

29† Rejoice not, O Philistia, not a man of you,
that the rod which smote you is broken;
For out of the serpent's root shall come an adder,
its fruit shall be a flying saraph.
30 In my pastures the poor shall eat,
and the needy lie down in safety;
But I will kill your root with famine
that shall slay even your remnant.
31 Howl, O gate; cry out, O city!
Philistia, all of you melts away!
For there comes a smoke from the north,
without a straggler in the ranks.
32* What will one answer the messengers of the nation?
"The LORD has established Zion, and in her the afflicted of his people find refuge."

CHAPTER 15

Moab

1* Oracle on Moab:
Laid waste in a night,
Ar of Moab is destroyed;
Laid waste in a night,
Kir of Moab is destroyed.
2*† Up goes daughter Dibon
to the high places to weep;

14: Ez 28, 2.
22: Jer 51, 62.
32: Pss 87, 5; 102,
17f; Zep 3, 12.
15, 1: 16, 7.
2: Jer 48, 38f.

†

8, 21-22: He . . . clouds: The two verses have been transposed from chapter 8.
14, 28: The year that King Ahaz died: 715 B.C.
14, 29: Rod: an Assyrian oppressor whose identity is uncertain. Flying saraph: a poisonous serpent, distinguished by its speedy movement; cf note on Nm 21, 6.
15, 2: Every head . . . sheared off: traditional signs of grief.

Over Nebo and over Medeba
Moab wails.
Every head is shaved,
every beard sheared off.
3 In the streets they wear sackcloth,
lamenting and weeping;
On the rooftops and in the squares
everyone wails.
4* Heshbon and Elealeh cry out,
they are heard as far as Jahaz.
At this the loins of Moab tremble,
his soul quivers within him;
5* The heart of Moab cries out,
his fugitives reach Zoar [Eglath-shelishiyah].
The ascent of Luhith
they climb weeping;
On the way to Horonaim
they utter rending cries.

6 The waters of Nimrim
have become a waste;
The grass is withered,
new growth is gone,
nothing is green.
7 So now whatever they have acquired or stored away
they carry across the Gorge of the Poplars,
8 For the cry has gone round
the land of Moab;
As far as Eglaim the wailing,
and to Beer-elim, the wail.
9† The waters of Dimon are filled with blood,
but I will bring still more upon Dimon:
Lions for those who are fleeing from Moab
and for those who remain in the land!

CHAPTER 16

1 Send them forth, hugging the earth
like reptiles,
from Sela across the desert,
to the mount of daughter Zion.
2† Like flushed birds,
like startled nestlings,
Are the daughters of Moab
at the fords of the Arnon.
3† Offer counsel, take their part:
at high noon let your shadow be like the night,
To hide the outcasts,
to conceal the fugitives.
4 Let the outcasts of Moab live with
you,
be their shelter from the destroyer.
When the struggle is ended, the ruin
complete,
and they have done with trampling the land,
5* A throne shall be set up in mercy,
and on it shall sit in fidelity
[in David's tent]
A judge upholding right
and prompt to do justice.
6* We have heard of the pride of Moab,
how very proud he is,
With his haughty, arrogant insolence
that his empty words do not match.
7*† Therefore Moab wails for Moab,
everywhere they wail;
For the raisin cakes of Kir-hareseth
they sigh, stricken with grief.
8† The terraced slopes of Heshbon lan-
guish,
the vines of Sibmah, Whose clusters overpowered
the lords of nations,
While they reached as far as Jazer
and scattered over the desert,
And whose branches spread forth
and extended over the sea.
9* Therefore I weep with Jazer
for the vines of Sibmah;
I water you with tears,
Heshbon and Elealeh;
For on your summer fruits and harvests
the battle cry has fallen.
10* From the orchards are taken away
joy and gladness,
In the vineyards there is no singing,
no shout of joy;
In the wine presses no one treads
grapes,
the vintage shout is stilled.
11* Therefore for Moab
my breast moans like a lyre,
and my heart for Kir-hareseth.
12*† When Moab grows weary on the high places,
he shall enter his sanctuary to pray,
but it shall avail him nothing.
13† This is the word the LORD spoke against Moab in times past. 14 But now

4: Jer 48, 34.
5: 16, 9; Jer 48, 3.
16, 5: 32, 1.
6: Jer 48, 29.
7: 15, 3.
9: 15, 5; Jer 48, 32.
10: 24, 8.
11: 15, 5; Jer 48, 36
12: Jer 48, 13.

15, 9: There is in the Hebrew a play on words: Dimon and dam, the latter signifying "blood."

16, 2: The Arnon: principal river of Moab.

16, 3-5: Directed to Jerusalem, which should receive the suffering Moabites with mercy, as befits the city of David's family, who were partly descended from Ruth the Moabite.

16, 7-14: Moab had been prosperous; now it has become a desert.

16, 7: Raisin cakes: masses of dried compressed grapes used as food (cf 2 Sm 6, 19; 1 Chr 16, 3; Sg 2, 5), and also in pagan cult (Hos 3, 1).

16, 8: Desert: to the east. Sea: the Dead Sea.

16, 12: In vain do the Moabites appeal to their god Chemosh.

16, 13f: A prose application of the preceding poetic oracle against Moab (15, 1— 16, 12); cf Jer 4, 8. Like those of a hireling: who fulfills his period of service according to the shortest manner of reckoning; cf 21, 16.

the LORD has spoken: In three years, like those of a hireling, the glory of Moab shall be degraded despite all its great multitude; there shall be a remnant, very small and weak.

CHAPTER 17

Damascus

1*† Oracle on Damascus:
Lo, Damascus shall cease to be a city
and become a ruin;
2 Her cities shall be forever abandoned,
given over to flocks to lie in undisturbed.
3† The fortress shall be lost to Ephraim and the kingdom to Damascus;
The remnant of Aram shall have the same glory
as the Israelites,
says the LORD of hosts.
4* On that day
The glory of Jacob shall fade,
and his full body grow thin,
5† Like the reaper's mere armful of stalks
when he gathers the standing grain;
Or as when one gleans the ears
in the Valley of Rephaim.
6*† Only a scattering of grapes shall be left!
As when an olive tree has been beaten,
Two or three olives remain at the very top,
four or five on its fruitful
branches,
says the LORD, the God of Israel.

7* On that day man shall look to his
maker,
his eyes turned toward the Holy
One of Israel.
8† He shall not look to the altars, his
handiwork,
nor shall he regard what his fingers have made:
the sacred poles or the incense
stands.
9* On that day his strong cities shall
be like those abandoned by the Hi-vites and Amorites
When faced with the children of Israel:
they shall be laid waste.
10*† For you have forgotten God, your savior,
and remembered not the Rock,
your strength.
Therefore, though you plant your pagan plants
and set out your foreign vine slips, 11 Though you make them grow the day you plant them
and make your sprouts blossom
on the next morning,
The harvest shall disappear on the day of the grievous blow,
the incurable blight.

12† Ah! the roaring of many peoples that roar like the roar of the seas!
The surging of nations
that surge like the surging of mighty waves!
13 But God shall rebuke them,
and they shall flee far away;
Windswept, like chaff on the mountains,
like tumbleweed in a storm.
14 In the evening, they spread terror,
before morning, they are gone!
Such is the portion of those who despoil us,
the lot of those who plunder us.

CHAPTER 18

Ethiopia

1† Ah, land of buzzing insects,
beyond the rivers of Ethiopia,
2* Sending ambassadors by sea,
in papyrus boats on the waters!
Go, swift messengers,
to a nation tall and bronzed,
To a people dreaded near and far,
a nation strong and conquering,
whose land is washed by rivers.
3 All you who inhabit the world,
who dwell on earth,
When the signal is raised on the mountain, look!
When the trumpet blows, listen!

4 For thus says the LORD to me:
I will quietly look on from where I dwell,

17, 1: Jer 49, 23.
4: 10, 16.
6: 24, 13.
7 Mi 5, 12.
9: 27, 10.
10: Jer 2, 32; Hos 8, 14.
18, 2: 18, 7.

17, 1: Damascus: capital of Syria, destroyed in 732 B.C.

17, 3: Ephraim: Israel, leagued with Syria against Assyria and Judah; destroyed in 721 B.C. Aram: Syria.

17, 5: Valley of Rephaim: a fertile plain to the southwest of Jerusalem; cf Jos 15, 8; 2 Sm 5, 18.

17, 6: Olives not easily picked by hand were knocked from the tree by means of a long stick; cf 24, 13.

17, 8: Sacred poles: see note on Ex 34, 13. Incense stands: small altars on which incense was burned in idolatrous worship; cf 27, 9; Lv 26, 30.

17, 10: Pagan plants: literally "plants of delights," understood by some as planted in honor of the god of fertility.

17, 12f: Many peoples: the hordes that accompanied the invading Assyrians, whom God repels just as he vanquished the primeval waters of chaos; see notes on Jb 3, 8; 7, 12; Ps 89, 11.

18, 1: Land of buzzing insects: the region of the Upper Nile where these multiplied with great rapidity.

18, 1f: Papyrus boats: light and serviceable vessels made of bundles of papyrus stalks and sealed with pitch. Egypt, ruled by a dynasty from Ethiopia, had invited Judah to join a coalition against Assyria, but Isaiah bade the ambassadors return to their own people.

Like the glowing heat of sunshine,
like a cloud of dew at harvest time.
5 Before the vintage, when the flowering is ended,
and the blooms are succeeded by ripening grapes,
Then comes the cutting of branches with pruning hooks
and the discarding of the lopped-off shoots.
6 They shall all be left to the mountain birds of prey,
and to the beasts in the land;
The birds of prey shall summer on them
and on them all the beasts of the earth shall winter.

7* Then will gifts be brought to the LORD of hosts from a people tall and bronzed, from a people dreaded near and far, a nation strong and conquering, whose land is washed by rivers—to Mount Zion where dwells the name of the LORD of hosts.

CHAPTER 19

Egypt

1 Oracle on Egypt:
See, the LORD is riding on a swift cloud
on his way to Egypt;
The idols of Egypt tremble before him,
the hearts of the Egyptians melt within them.
2 I will rouse Egypt against Egypt:
brother will war against brother,
Neighbor against neighbor,
city against city, kingdom against kindgom.
3* The courage of the Egyptians ebbs away within them,
and I will bring to nought their counsel;
They shall consult idols and charmers,
ghosts and spirits.
4*† I will deliver Egypt
into the power of a cruel master,
A harsh king who shall rule over them,
says the Lord, the LORD of hosts.
5* The waters shall be drained from the sea,
the river shall shrivel and dry up;
6 Its streams shall become foul,
and the canals of Egypt shall dwindle and dry up.
Reeds and rushes shall wither away,
7 and bulrushes on the bank of the Nile;
All the sown land along the Nile shall dry up and blow away, and be no more.
8 The fishermen shall mourn and lament,
all who cast hook in the Nile;
Those who spread their nets in the water shall pine away.
9* The linen-workers shall be disappointed,
the combers and weavers shall turn pale;
10 The spinners shall be crushed,
all the hired laborers shall be despondent.

11† Utter fools are the princes of Zoan!
the wisest of Pharaoh's advisers give stupid counsel.
How can you say to Pharaoh,
"I am a disciple of wise men, of ancient kings"?
12 Where then are your wise men?
Let them tell you and make known
What the LORD of hosts has planned against Egypt.
13 The princes of Zoan have become fools,
the princes of Memphis have been deceived.
The chiefs of her tribes
have led Egypt astray.
14 The LORD has prepared among them a spirit of dizziness,
And they have made Egypt stagger in whatever she does,
as a drunkard staggers in his vomit.
15*† Egypt shall have no work to do for head or tail, palm branch or reed.

16* On that day the Egyptians shall be like women, trembling with fear, because of the LORD of hosts shaking his fist at them. 17* And the land of Judah shall be a terror to the Egyptians. Every time they remember Judah, they shall stand in dread because of the plan which the LORD of hosts has in mind for them.

18† On that day there shall be five cities in the land of Egypt speaking the language of Canaan and swearing by the LORD of hosts; one shall be called "City of the Sun."

7: 45, 14; Zep 3, 10; Mal 1, 11.
19, 3: 44, 25.
4: Ez 29, 19; 30, 10.
5: Ez 30, 12; 32, 2
9: Ez 27, 7.
15: 9, 14.
16: Na 3, 13.
17: Ex 14, 25.

† 19, 4: Cruel master: the king of Assyria.
19, 11.13: Zoan, later known as Tanis, and Memphis (in Hebrew, Noph) were the key cities of the Nile Delta.
19, 15: Head or tail, palm branch or reed: the leaders or the people; cf 9, 13f.
19, 18: Five cities: colonies of Jews living together and speaking their languages, Hebrew and Aramaic; cf Jer 43. City of the Sun: the meaning is uncertain, but the reference seems to be to the city known later as Heliopolis.

19 On that day there shall be an altar to the LORD in the land of Egypt, and a sacred pillar to the LORD near the boundary. 20 It shall be a sign and a witness to the LORD of hosts in the land of Egypt, when they cry out to the LORD against their oppressors, and he sends them a savior to defend and deliver them. 21* The LORD shall make himself known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the LORD in that day; they shall offer sacrifices and oblations, and fulfill the vows they make to the LORD.
22 Although the LORD shall smite Egypt severely, he shall heal them; they shall turn to the LORD and he shall be won over and heal them.
23 On that day there shall be a highway from Egypt to Assyria; the Assyrians shall enter Egypt, and the Egyptians enter Assyria, and Egypt shall serve Assyria.
24* On that day Israel shall be a third party with Egypt and Assyria, a blessing in the midst of the land, 25 when the LORD of hosts blesses it: "Blessed be my people Egypt, and the work of my hands Assyria, and my inheritance, Israel."

CHAPTER 20

Captivity of Egypt and Ethiopia. 1 In the year the general sent by Sargon, king of Assyria, fought against Ashdod and captured it, 2† the LORD gave a warning through Isaiah, the son of Amoz: Go and take off the sackcloth from your waist, and remove the sandals from your feet. This he did, walking naked and barefoot. 3 Then the LORD said: Just as my servant Isaiah has gone naked and barefoot for three years as a sign and portent against Egypt and Ethiopia, 4 so shall the king of Assyria lead away captives from Egypt, and exiles from Ethiopia, young and old, naked and barefoot, with buttocks uncovered
[the shame of Egypt]. 5* They shall be dismayed and ashamed because of Ethiopia, their hope, and because of Egypt, their boast. 6* The inhabitants of this coastland shall say on that day, "Look at our hope! We have fled here for help and deliverance from the king of Assyria; where can we flee
now?"

CHAPTER 21

Fall of Babylon

1† Oracle on the wastelands by the sea:
Like whirlwinds sweeping in waves
through the Negeb,
there comes from the desert,
from the fearful land,

2*† A cruel sight, revealed to me:
the traitor betrays,
the despoiler spoils.
"Go up, Elam; besiege, O Media;
I will put an end to all groaning!"
3* Therefore my loins are filled with anguish,
pangs have seized me like those of a woman in labor;
I am too bewildered to hear,
too dismayed to look.
4 My mind reels,
shuddering assails me;
My yearning for twilight
has turned into dread.

5† They set the table,
spread out the rugs;
they eat, they drink.
Rise up, O princes,
oil the shield!
6 For thus says my Lord to me:
Go, station a watchman,
let him tell what he sees.
7 If he sees a chariot,
a pair of horses,
Someone riding an ass,
someone riding a camel,
Then let him pay heed,
very close heed.
8* Then the watchman cried,
"On the watchtower, O my Lord,
I stand constantly by day;
And I stay at my post through all the watches of the night.
9* Here he comes now:
a single chariot,
a pair of horses;
He calls out and says,
'Fallen, fallen is Babylon,
And all the images of her gods
are smashed to the ground.' " 10* O my people who have been threshed,
beaten on my threshing floor!
What I have heard from the LORD of hosts,
The God of Israel,
I have announced to you.

* 21: Zec 14, 16.18. 24: Gn 12, 2. 20, 5: 30, 3.5. 6: 31, 3; 36, 6. 21, 2: 13, 17. 3: Ps 38, 8. 8: Hb 2, 1. 9: 46, 1; Jer 50, 2; 51, 8; Rv 14, 8. 10: 51, 23.

† 20, 2-6: The symbolic act of the prophet conveyed the idea that Assyria would lead captive the Egyptians and Ethiopians. The Judeans and their allies would then realize the folly of having trusted in them.

21, 1: Wastelands by the sea: Babylonia. Negeb: the desert south of Judah.

21, 2: Elam . . . Media: nations which, under the leadership of Cyrus, captured Babylon in 538 B.C. End to all groaning: those who were captive of Babylon shall be freed.

21, 5: Babylon is destroyed while its leaders are feasting; cf Dn 5. Oil the shield: shields were oiled and greased so as to divert blows more easily.

Edom

11† Oracle on Edom:
They call to me from Seir,
"Watchman, how much longer the night?
Watchman, how much longer the night?"
12 The watchman replies,
"Morning has come, and again night.
If you will ask, ask; come back again."

Arabia

13† Oracle on Arabia:
In the thicket in the nomad country spend the night,
O caravans of Dedanites.
14 Meet the thirsty, bring them water;
you who dwell in the land of Tema, greet the fugitives with bread.
15 They flee from the sword,
from the whetted sword;
From the taut bow,
from the fury of battle.

16† For thus says the Lord to me: In another year, like those of a hireling, all the glory of Kedar shall come to an end.
17 Few of Kedar's stalwart archers shall remain, for the LORD, the God of Israel, has spoken.

CHAPTER 22

Jerusalem

1† Oracle of the Valley of Vision:
What is the matter with you now, that you have gone up,
all of you, to the housetops,
2* O city full of noise and chaos,
O wanton town!
Your slain are not slain with the sword,
nor killed in battle.
3* All your leaders fled away together, fled afar off;
All who were in you were captured together,
captured without the use of a bow.
4* At this I say: Turn away from me, let me weep bitterly;
Do not try to comfort me
for the ruin of the daughter of my people.
5* It is a day of panic, rout and confusion,
from the Lord, the GOD of hosts, in the Valley of Vision.
Walls crash;
they cry for help to the mountains.
6† Elam takes up the quivers, Aram mounts the horses,
and Kir uncovers the shields.
7 Your choice valleys are filled with chariots,
and horses are posted at the gates,
8† and shelter over Judah is removed.

On that day you looked to the weapons in the House of the Forest; 9 you saw that the breaches in the City of David were many; you collected the water of the lower pool. 10 You numbered the houses of Jerusalem, tearing some down to strengthen the wall; 11 you made a reservoir between the two walls for the water of the old pool. But you did not look to the city's Maker, nor did you consider him who built it long ago.

12* On that day the Lord,
the GOD of hosts, called on you To weep and mourn,
to shave your head and put on sackcloth.
13* But look! you feast and celebrate,
you slaughter oxen and butcher sheep,
You eat meat and drink wine:
"Eat and drink, for tomorrow we die!"
14 This reaches the ears of the LORD of hosts—
You shall not be pardoned this wickedness till you die,
says the Lord, the GOD of hosts.

Shebna and Eliakim

15† Thus says the Lord, the GOD of hosts:
Up, go to that official,
Shebna, master of the palace,
16 Who has hewn for himself a sepulcher on a height and carved his tomb in the rock:
"What are you doing here, and what people have you here,
that here you have hewn for yourself a tomb?"

5: 37, 3.
12: Jl 2, 17.
13: 56, 12; Wis 2, 6; 1 Cor 15, 32.

21, 11f: Seir: another name for Edom. The Edomites ask the prophet how much longer they must suffer (the night of suffering); he answers ambiguously: "Liberation (morning) and further suffering (night)," but perhaps they will later receive a more encouraging answer (ask, come back again).

21, 13f: Arabia: that is, the nomad country. Dedanites: an Arab tribe associated with Edom and Tema, and living east of the Red Sea; cf Gn 10, 7; 25, 3; Jer 25, 23.

21, 16: Year . . . of a hireling: see note on 16, 14. Kedar: a nomad tribe in Arabia; cf 42, 11; 60, 7; Ps 120, 5.

22, 1-8: Valley of Vision: while the people live in revelry and disorder, the prophet foresees the impending doom of the city.

22, 6: Elam, Aram, Kir: all allies of Assyria. Kir: perhaps the same people referred to in Am 1, 5.

22, 8-11: Defense measures, in which the inhabitants of Jerusalem placed their trust instead of relying on God. House of the Forest: an armory built by Solomon; its columns of wood suggested the trees of a forest; cf 1 Kgs 7, 2; 10, 17.

22, 15: Shebna: referred to as the scribe in 36, 3.

17 The LORD shall hurl you down headlong, mortal man!
He shall grip you firmly 18 And roll you up and toss you like a ball into an open land
To perish there, you and the chariots you glory in,
you disgrace to your master's house!
19 I will thrust you from your office
and pull you down from your station.

20*† On that day I will summon my servant
Eliakim, son of Hilkiah;
21 I will clothe him with your robe,
and gird him with your sash,
and give over to him your authority.
He shall be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem,
and to the house of Judah.
22*† I will place the key of the House of David on his shoulder;
when he opens, no one shall shut,
when he shuts, no one shall open.
23 I will fix him like a peg in a sure spot,
to be a place of honor for his family;
24† On him shall hang all the glory of his family:
descendants and offspring,
all the little dishes, from bowls to jugs.

25 On that day, says the LORD of hosts, the peg fixed in a sure spot shall give way, break off and fall, and the weight that hung on it shall be done away with; for the LORD has spoken.

CHAPTER 23

Tyre and Sidon

1† Oracle on Tyre:
Wail, O ships of Tarshish,
for your port is destroyed;
From the land of the Kittim
the news reaches them.
2 Silence! you who dwell on the coast,
you merchants of Sidon,
Whose messengers crossed the sea
3† over the deep waters.
The grain of Shihor, the harvest of the Nile, was her revenue,
and she the merchant among nations.
4† Shame, O Sidon, fortress on the sea,
for the sea has spoken:
"I have not been in labor, nor given birth,
nor raised young men,
nor reared virgins."
5 When it is heard in Egypt
they shall be in anguish at the news of Tyre.
6 Pass over to Tarshish, wailing,
you who dwell on the coast!
7 Is this your wanton city,
whose origin is from old,
Whose feet have taken her to dwell in distant lands?
8 Who has planned such a thing against Tyre, the bestower of crowns, Whose merchants are princes,
whose traders are the earth's honored men?
9* The LORD of hosts has planned it,
to disgrace all pride of majesty,
to degrade all the earth's honored men.
10 Cross to your own land,
O ship of Tarshish;
the harbor is no more.
11† His hand he stretches out over the sea,
he shakes kingdoms;
The LORD has ordered the destruction of Canaan's strongholds.
12* You shall exult no more, he says,
you who are now oppressed, virgin daughter Sidon.
Arise, pass over to the Kittim,
even there you shall find no rest.

13*† [This people is the land of the Chaldeans, not Assyria.]
She whom the impious founded,
setting up towers for her,
Has had her castles destroyed,
and has been turned into a ruin.
14 Lament, O ships of Tarshish,
for your haven is destroyed.

15*† On that day, Tyre shall be forgotten for seventy years. With the days of another king, at the end of seventy years, it shall be for Tyre as in the song about the harlot:

16 Take a harp, go about the city,
O forgotten harlot;
Pluck the strings skillfully, sing many songs,
that they may remember you.

15: Jer 25, 11.

22, 20: Eliakim: also referred to in 36, 3; he is described as loyal to God.
22, 22: Key: symbol of authority; cf Mt 16, 19; Rv 3, 7.
22, 24f: If Eliakim should anger God, he and his family (compared here to dishes, bowls and jugs) will suffer disaster.
23, 1-4.12ff: These verses refer to Sidon, vv 5-11 to Tyre.
23, 1: Kittim: Cyprus.
23, 3: Shihor: a synonym for the Nile.
23, 4: The sea: brings to distant coasts the news that Sidon must disown her children; her people are dispersed.
23, 11: Canaan's strongholds: the fortresses of Phoenicia.
23, 13: The gloss here identifies she whom the impious founded with the land of the Chaldeans.
23, 15: Seventy years: a conventional period of time indicating simply a long disaster; cf Jer 25, 11 and 29, 10.

17* At the end of the seventy years the LORD shall visit Tyre. She shall return to her hire and deal with all the world's kingdoms on the face of the earth.
18† But her merchandise and her hire shall be sacred to the LORD. It shall not be stored up or laid away, but from her merchandise those who dwell before the LORD shall eat their fill and clothe themselves in choice attire.

IV: APOCALYPSE OF ISAIAH

CHAPTER 24

Devastation of the World: A Remnant Saved

1*†Lo, the LORD empties the land and lays it waste;
he turns it upside down,
scattering its inhabitants:
2 Layman and priest alike,
servant and master,
The maid as her mistress,
the buyer as the seller,
The lender as the borrower,
the creditor as the debtor.
3 The earth is utterly laid waste, utterly stripped,
for the LORD has decreed this thing.
4 The earth mourns and fades,
the world languishes and fades;
both heaven and earth languish.
5† The earth is polluted because of its inhabitants,
who have transgressed laws, violated statutes,
broken the ancient covenant.
6 Therefore a curse devours the earth, and its inhabitants pay for their guilt;
Therefore they who dwell on earth
turn pale,
and few men are left.
7* The wine mourns, the vine languishes,
all the merry-hearted groan.
8* Stilled are the cheerful timbrels,
ended the shouts of the jubilant,
stilled is the cheerful harp.
9 They cannot sing and drink wine;
strong drink is bitter to those who partake of it.
10*†Broken down is the city of chaos,
shut against entry, every house.
11* In the streets they cry out for lack of wine;
all joy has disappeared
and cheer has left the land.
12 In the city nothing remains but ruin;
its gates are battered and deso-
late.
13* Thus it is within the land,
and among the peoples,
As with an olive tree after it is
beaten,
as with a gleaning when the vintage is done.
14† These lift up their voice in acclaim;
from the sea they proclaim the majesty of the LORD:
15* "For this, in the coastlands,
give glory to the LORD!
In the coastlands of the sea,
to the name of the LORD, the God
of Israel!"
16 From the end of the earth we hear
songs:
"Splendor to the Just One!"
But I said, "I am wasted, wasted
away.
Woe is me! The traitors betray:
with treachery have the traitors betrayed!
17* Terror, pit, and trap are upon you, inhabitant of the
earth;
18 He who flees at the sound of terror
will fall into the pit;
He who climbs out of the pit
will be caught in the trap.
For the windows on high will be opened
and the foundations of the earth
will shake.
19 The earth will burst asunder,
the earth will be shaken apart,
the earth will be convulsed.
20* The earth will reel like a drunkard,
and it will sway like a hut;
Its rebellion will weigh it down,
until it falls, never to rise again."

21*†On that day the LORD will punish the host of the heavens in the
heavens,
and the kings of the earth on the
earth.
22 They will be gathered together
like prisoners into a pit;
They will be shut up in a dungeon,
and after many days they will be
punished.
23*†Then the moon will blush
and the sun grow pale,

24, 1—27, 13: This section, probably composed at a later date, contains oracles on the day of the Lord, combined with hymns of thanksgiving and of supplication.
24, 5: Ancient covenant: God's commandments to all mankind.
24, 10: City of chaos: a symbol of godlessness as opposed to Jerusalem, the city of God.
24, 14: These: the saved.
24, 21: Host of the heavens: the stars, which were regarded by the pagans as gods; cf Dt 4, 19; Jer 8, 2.
24, 23: His elders: the heavenly courtiers surrounding the throne of God.

For the LORD of hosts will reign
on Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, glorious in the sight of his elders.

CHAPTER 25

1*† O LORD, you are my God,
I will extol you and praise your name;
For you have fulfilled your wonderful plans of old,
faithful and true.
2* For you have made the city a heap,
the fortified city a ruin;
The castle of the insolent is a city no more,
nor ever to be rebuilt.
3 Therefore a strong people will honor you,
fierce nations will fear you.
4* For you are a refuge to the poor,
a refuge to the needy in distress;
Shelter from the rain,
shade from the heat.
As with the cold rain,
5 as with the desert heat,
even so you quell the uproar of the wanton.
6† On this mountain the LORD of hosts will provide for all peoples
A feast of rich food and choice wines, juicy, rich food and pure, choice wines.
7* On this mountain he will destroy the veil that veils all peoples,
The web that is woven over all nations;
8 he will destroy death forever.
The Lord GOD will wipe away
the tears from all faces;
The reproach of his people he will remove from the whole earth; for the LORD has spoken.

9* On that day it will be said:
"Behold our God, to whom we looked to save us!
This is the LORD for whom we looked;
let us rejoice and be glad that he has saved us!"
10*† For the hand of the LORD will rest on this mountain, but Moab will be trodden down
as a straw is trodden down in the mire.
11* He will stretch forth his hands in Moab
as a swimmer extends his hands to swim;
He will bring low their pride
as his hands sweep over them.
12* The high-walled fortress he will raze,
and strike it down level with the earth, with the very dust.

CHAPTER 26

The Divine Vindicator. 1 On that day they will sing this song in the land of Judah:

"A strong city have we;
he sets up walls and ramparts to protect us.
2* Open up the gates to let in a nation that is just,
one that keeps faith.
3* A nation of firm purpose you keep in peace;
in peace, for its trust in you."

4* Trust in the LORD forever!
For the LORD is an eternal Rock.
5* He humbles those in high places,
and the lofty city he brings down;
He tumbles it to the ground,
levels it with the dust.
6 It is trampled underfoot by the needy,
by the footsteps of the poor.
7* The way of the just is smooth;
the path of the just you make level.
8 Yes, for your way and your judgments, O LORD,
we look to you;
Your name and your title
are the desire of our souls.
9* My soul yearns for you in the night,
yes, my spirit within me keeps vigil for you;
When your judgment dawns upon the earth,
the world's inhabitants learn justice.
10* The wicked man, spared, does not learn justice;
in an upright land he acts perversely,
and sees not the majesty of the LORD.
11 O LORD, your hand is uplifted,
but they behold it not;
Let them be shamed when they see your zeal for your people:
let the fire prepared for your enemies consume them.
12* O LORD, you mete out peace to us,
for it is you who have accomplished all we have done.

25, 6: This mountain: Zion, symbol of the heavenly Jerusalem.
25, 10: Moab: symbol of God's enemies.

13 O LORD, our God, other lords than you have ruled us;
it is from you only that we can call
upon your name.

14 Dead they are, they have no life,
shades that cannot rise;
For you have punished and destroyed them,
and wiped out all memory of
them.
15* You have increased the nation, O
LORD,
increased the nation to your own
glory,
and extended far all the borders
of the land.
16* O LORD, oppressed by your punish-
ment,
we cried out in anguish under your chastising.
17* As a woman about to give birth
writhes and cries out in her pains,
so were we in your presence, O
LORD.
18 We conceived and writhed in pain,
giving birth to wind;
Salvation we have not achieved for
the earth,
the inhabitants of the world cannot bring it forth.
19*† But your dead shall live, their corpses shall rise;
awake and sing, you who lie in the
dust.
For your dew is a dew of light,
and the land of shades gives birth.

Day of the Lord: Reward and Punishment

20 Go, my people, enter your chambers,
and close your doors behind you;
Hide yourselves for a brief moment,
until the wrath is past.
21* See, the LORD goes forth from his
place,
to punish the wickedness of the earth's inhabitants;
The earth will reveal the blood upon
her,
and no longer conceal her slain.

CHAPTER 27

1*† On that day,
The LORD will punish with his sword
that is cruel, great, and strong, Leviathan the fleeing serpent,
Leviathan the coiled serpent;
and he will slay the dragon that is in the sea.

2* On that day—
The pleasant vineyard, sing about it!
3* I, the LORD, am its keeper,
I water it every moment;
Lest anyone harm it,
night and day I guard it.
4* I am not angry,
but if I were to find briers and thorns,
In battle I should march against
them;
I should burn them all.
5* Expunging and expelling, I should strive against them, carrying them off with my cruel
wind in time of storm.

6 In days to come Jacob shall take
root,
Israel shall sprout and blossom,
covering all the world with fruit.
7† Is he to be smitten as his smiter was smitten?
or slain as his slayer was slain?
5*† Or shall he cling to me for refuge?
He must make peace with me;
peace shall he make with me!
9 This, then, shall be the expiation of Jacob's guilt,
this the whole fruit of the removal
of his sin:
He shall pulverize all the stones of the altars
like pieces of chalk;
no sacred poles or incense altars
shall stand.

10*† For the fortified city shall be deso-
late,
an abandoned pasture, a forsaken
wilderness,
where calves shall browse and lie.
Its boughs shall be destroyed, 11* its branches shall wither and be broken off,
and women shall come to build a fire with them.
This is not an understanding people;
therefore their maker shall not spare them,
nor shall he who formed them
have mercy on them.

27, 5.9: Israel will make peace with God and destroy all signs of idolatrous worship.

27, 7 God's people will not be treated as sternly as were their enemies.

27, 10f: The fortified city: symbol of the powers of evil; see note on 24, 10.

12† On that day,
The LORD shall beat out the grain between the Euphrates and the Wadi of Egypt, and you shall be gleaned one by one, O sons of Israel.

13*† On that day,
A great trumpet shall blow,
and the lost in the land of Assyria and the outcasts in the land of Egypt
Shall come and worship the LORD
on the holy mountain, in Jerusalem.

V: THE LORD ALONE, ISRAEL'S AND JUDAH'S SALVATION

CHAPTER 28

The Fate of Samaria

1*† Woe to the majestic garland
of the drunkard Ephraim,
To the fading blooms of his glorious
beauty,
on the head of him who is stupe-
fied with wine.
2*† Behold, the LORD has a strong one
and a mighty,
who, like a downpour of hail, a destructive storm,
Like a flood of water, great and overflowing,
levels to the ground with violence;
3 With feet that will trample
the majestic garland of the drunkard Ephraim.
4 The fading blooms of his glorious
beauty
on the head of the fertile valley
Will be like an early fig before summer:
when a man sees it,
he picks and swallows it at once.

5 On that day the LORD of hosts will be a glorious crown
And a brilliant diadem
to the remnant of his people, 6 A spirit of justice
to him who sits in judgment,
And strength to those who turn back the battle at the gate.

Against Judah

7* But these also stagger from wine
and stumble from strong drink:
Priest and prophet stagger from strong drink,
overpowered by wine;
Led astray by strong drink,
staggering in their visions,
tottering when giving judgment.
8 Yes, all the tables
are covered with filthy vomit,
with no place left clean.

9† "To whom would he impart knowl-
edge?
To whom would he convey the message?
To those just weaned from milk,
those taken from the breast?
10 For he says,
'Command on command, command
on command,
rule on rule, rule on rule,
here a little, there a little!' "
11*† Yes, with stammering lips and in a strange language
he will speak to this people 12 to whom he said:
This is the resting place,
give rest to the weary;
Here is repose—
but they would not listen.
13 So for them the word of the LORD shall be:
"Command on command, command on command,
Rule on rule, rule on rule,
here a little, there a little!"
So that when they walk, they stumble backward,
broken, ensnared, and captured.

14 Therefore, hear the word of the LORD, you arrogant,
who rule this people in Jerusalem:
15*† Because you say, "We have made a covenant with death,
and with the nether world we have made a pact;
When the overwhelming scourge
passes,
it will not reach us;
For we have made lies our refuge,

13: Hos 11, 11.

2: 30, 30.
7: 56, 10.12.
11: Jer 5, 15; 1 Cor 14, 21; Dt 28, 49; Bar 4, 15.
15: Wis 1, 16; Jer 5, 12.

27, 12: The Euphrates and the Wadi of Egypt: the ideal borders of Israel; cf Gn 15, 18; 2 Kgs 24, 7.

27, 13: The triumph of God's people is described in eschatological language; they will gather in Jerusalem from Assyria and Egypt.

28, 1: Ephraim: the northern kingdom. Its capital, Samaria, was built upon a hill, suggestive of a majestic garland adorning the head of the drunken kingdom.

28, 2: A strong one and a mighty: Assyria.

28, 9f: The words of those who ridicule Isaiah. The Hebrew of v 10, by its very sound, conveys the idea of mocking imitation of what the prophet says, as though he spoke like a stammering child: SAU LASAU, SAU LASAU, CAU LACAU, CAU LACAU, ZE'ER SHAM, ZE'ER SHAM. But in v 13 God repeats these words in deadly earnest, putting them in the mouth of the victorious pagan army.

28, 11: God will answer the mockers and defend Isaiah. Strange language: spoken by the invading army.

28, 15.18: A covenant with death, and with the nether world: an alliance with foreign powers, such as Egypt and Babylon, to prevent death and destruction. Have made lies . . . a hiding place: this confidence in human aid proves to be false and deceitful, incapable of averting the dreaded disaster. Overwhelming scourge: the flood of the Assyrian invasion; cf 8, 7f.

and in falsehood we have found a hiding place,"—
16*† Therefore, thus says the Lord GOD:
See, I am laying a stone in Zion,
a stone that has been tested,
A precious cornerstone as a sure foundation;
he who puts his faith in it shall not be shaken.
17 I will make of right a measuring
line,
of justice a level.—
Hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies,
and waters shall flood the hiding
place.
18 Your covenant with death shall be canceled
and your pact with the nether world shall not stand.
When the overwhelming scourge
passes,
you shall be trampled down by it.
19 Whenever it passes, it shall take you;
morning after morning it shall
pass,
By day and by night;
terror alone shall convey the message.
20 For the bed shall be too short to stretch out in,
and the cover too narrow to wrap
in.
21*† For the LORD shall rise up as on Mount Perazim,
bestir himself as in the Valley of Gibeon,
To carry out his work, his singular
work,
to perform his deed, his strange deed.
22* Now, be arrogant no more lest your bonds be tightened,
For I have heard from the Lord, the GOD of hosts,
the destruction decreed for the whole earth.
23† Give ear and hear my voice, pay attention and listen to what
I say:
24 Is the plowman forever plowing, always loosening and harrowing
his land for planting?
25† When he has leveled the surface,
does he not scatter gith and sow
cumin,
Put in wheat and barley,
with spelt as its border?
26 He has learned this rule, instructed by his God.
27 Gith is not threshed with a sledge,
nor does a cartwheel roll over
cumin.
But gith is beaten out with a staff,
and cumin crushed for food with a rod.
28 No, he does not thresh it unendingly, nor does he crush it with his noisy cartwheels and horses.
29 This too comes from the LORD of hosts;
wonderful is his counsel and great
his wisdom.

CHAPTER 29

The Fall of Jerusalem

1*† Woe to Ariel, Ariel,
the city where David encamped!
Add year to year,
let the feasts come round.
2* But I will bring distress upon Ariel, with mourning and grief.
You shall be to me like Ariel,
3* I will encamp like David against
you;
I will encircle you with outposts and set up siege works against
you.
4† Prostrate you shall speak from the
earth,
and from the base dust your words shall come.
Your voice shall be like a ghost's
from the earth,
and your words like chirping from
the dust.
5* The horde of your arrogant shall be like fine dust,
the horde of the tyrants like flying chaff.
Then suddenly, in an instant,
6 you shall be visited by the LORD
of hosts,
With thunder, earthquake, and
great noise,
whirlwind, storm, and the flame
of consuming fire.

16: Ps 118, 22; Mt 21, 42; Acts 4, 11; Rom 9, 33; 1 Pt 2, 6.
21: Jos 10, 10; 2 Sm 5, 20; 1 Chr 14, 11.
22: 10, 23.
29, 1: 2 Sm 5, 9.
2: 33, 7.
3: 2 Kgs 25, 1; Ez 4, 2.
5: 17, 13; Ps 18, 43; Jb 21, 18.

† 28, 16: A stone in Zion: the true and sure foundation of salvation promised by God to the Davidic dynasty (cf 7, 13-16; 9, 1-6), which the Apostles saw fulfilled in Christ the universal Savior; cf 1 Pt 2, 6-8; Rom 9, 33; 10, 9ff. Cornerstone, the assurance of salvation rejected by Israel in the prophet's time, is reflected by the psalmist (Ps 118, 22) and fulfilled in the Person of Christ; cf Mt 21, 42; Lk 20, 17; Acts 4, 11; Rom 9, 33; 1 Pt 2, 7.

28, 21: Mount Perazim . . . Valley of Gibeon: where David defeated the Philistines; cf 2 Sm 5, 20. 25; 1 Chr 14, 11.16.

28, 23-29: The practical variation of the farmer's work taught him by God reflects God's dealing with his people, wisely adapted to circumstances; he does not crush their weakness altogether; cf ch 29.

28, 25: Gith . . . cumin: herbs used in seasoning food. Spelt: a variety of wheat.

29, 1f: Ariel: variously interpreted to mean "lion of God" or "hearth (altar) of God," a poetic name for Jerusalem; or perhaps to be read as Uru-el, "foundation of God," an archaic name for the Jebusite city of Jerusalem; like that Ariel, against which David encamped, it will be besieged by God.

29, 4: Chirping: see note on 8, 19.

7† Then like a dream,
a vision in the night,
Shall be the horde of all the nations
who war against Ariel
with all the earthworks of her besiegers.
8 As when a hungry man dreams he is eating and awakens with an empty stomach,
Or when a thirsty man dreams he is drinking
and awakens faint and dry,
So shall the horde of all the nations be,
who make war against Zion.

Blindness and Perversity

9*†Be irresolute, stupefied;
blind yourselves and stay blind!
Be drunk, but not from wine,
stagger, but not from strong drink!
10* For the LORD has poured out on you
a spirit of deep sleep.
He has shut your eyes [the prophets]
and covered your heads [the seers].

11* For you the revelation of all this has become like the words of a sealed scroll. When it is handed to one who can read, with the request, "Read this," he replies, "I cannot; it is sealed." 12 When it is handed to one who cannot read, with the request, "Read this," he replies, "I cannot read."

13* The Lord said:
Since this people draws near with words only
and honors me with their lips alone,
though their hearts are far from me,
And their reverence for me has become routine observance of the precepts of men, 14* Therefore I will again deal with this people
in surprising and wondrous fashion:
The wisdom of its wise men shall perish
and the understanding of its prudent men be hid.
15* Woe to those who would hide their plans too deep for the LORD!
Who work in the dark, saying,
"Who sees us, or who knows us?"
16* Your perversity is as though the potter
were taken to be the clay:
As though what is made should say of its maker,
"He made me not!"
Or the vessel should say of the potter,
"He does not understand."

Redemption

17*†But a very little while,
and Lebanon shall be changed into an orchard,
and the orchard be regarded as a forest!
18* On that day the deaf shall hear
the words of a book;
And out of gloom and darkness,
the eyes of the blind shall see.
19* The lowly will ever find joy in the LORD,
and the poor rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.
20* For the tyrant will be no more
and the arrogant will have gone;
All who are alert to do evil will be cut off,
21* those whose mere word condemns a man,
Who ensnare his defender at the gate,
and leave the just man with an empty claim.
22*†Therefore thus says the LORD,
the God of the house of Jacob,
who redeemed Abraham:
Now Jacob shall have nothing to be ashamed of,
nor shall his face grow pale.
23 When his children see
the work of my hands in his midst,
They shall keep my name holy;
they shall reverence the Holy One of Jacob,
and be in awe of the God of Israel.
24 Those who err in spirit shall acquire understanding,
and those who find fault shall receive instruction.

22: 45, 17.

29, 7f: Just when the Assyrians think their capture of Jerusalem to be certain, the Lord will snatch victory from their hands and save his city.

29, 9-12: Jerusalem in her blindness refuses to believe God's revelation that she will be saved.

29, 17-24: The prophet presents God's plan of redemption in terms of unheard-of natural phenomena as if such changes in nature took place, e.g., the change of the cedars of Lebanon into an orchard (v 17).

29, 22: Who redeemed Abraham: by freeing him from the idolatry of his native land.

CHAPTER 30

Futile Alliance with Egypt

1* Woe to the rebellious children,
says the LORD,
Who carry out plans that are not mine,
who weave webs that are not inspired by me,
adding sin upon sin.
2* They go down to Egypt,
but my counsel they do not seek.
They find their strength in Pharaoh's protection and take refuge in Egypt's shadow;
3* Pharaoh's protection shall be your shame,
and refuge in Egypt's shadow your disgrace.
4* When their princes are at Zoan
and their messengers reach Hanes, 5* All shall be ashamed
of a people that gain them nothing, Neither help nor benefit,
but only shame and reproach.

6† [Oracle on the Beasts of the Negeb]

Through the distressed and troubled land of the lioness and roaring lion,
of the viper and flying saraph,
They carry their riches on the backs of asses
and their treasures on the humps of camels
To a people good for nothing,
7† to Egypt whose help is futile and vain.
Therefore I call her
"Rahab quelled."

8*† Now come, write it on a tablet they can keep,
inscribe it in a record;
That it may be in future days
an eternal witness:
9* This is a rebellious people,
deceitful children,
Children who refuse to obey the law of the LORD.
10* They say to the seers, "Have no visions";
to the prophets, "Do not descry for us what is right;
speak flatteries to us, conjure up illusions.
11* Out of the way! Out of our path!
Let us hear no more of the Holy One of Israel."

12 Therefore, thus says the Holy One of Israel:
Because you reject this word,
And put your trust in what is crooked and devious,
and depend on it,
13* This guilt of yours shall be like a descending rift Bulging out in a high wall
whose crash comes suddenly, in an instant.
14* It crashes like a potter's jar
smashed beyond rescue,
And among its fragments cannot be found a sherd to scoop fire from the hearth or dip water from the cistern.
15* For thus said the Lord GOD,
the Holy One of Israel:
By waiting and by calm you shall be saved,
in quiet and in trust your strength lies.
But this you did not wish.
16* "No," you said,
"Upon horses we will flee."
—Very well, flee!
"Upon swift steeds we will ride."
—Not so swift as your pursuers.
17 A thousand shall tremble at the threat of one;
if five threaten you, you shall flee,
Until you are left like a flagstaff on the mountaintop,
like a flag on the hill.
18* Yet the LORD is waiting to show you favor,
and he rises to pity you;
For the LORD is a God of justice:
blessed are all who wait for him!
19* O people of Zion, who dwell in Jerusalem,
no more will you weep;
He will be gracious to you when you cry out,
as soon as he hears he will answer you.
20† The Lord will give you the bread you need and the water for which you thirst.

16: 31, 3.
18: Ps 34, 9; Jer 17, 7.
19: 58, 9.

30, 6: Flying saraph: see note on Nm 21, 6.

30, 7: Rahab: Egypt, here as elsewhere (cf Ps 87, 4), is compared to the stormy, impetuous sea monster (cf 51, 9; Jb 26, 12; Ps 89, 11), which yet, when asked for aid by Judah, becomes silent, quelled.

30, 8: Isaiah will write down his condemnation of the people so that (vv 12-18) its fulfillment may afterward be admitted.

30, 20: Teacher: God, who in the past taught in a veiled manner through his prophets, will in future help them to understand his teaching clearly. This was eminently true when the Son of God became Man.

No longer will your Teacher hide himself,
but with your own eyes you shall see your Teacher, 21* While from behind, a voice shall sound in your ears:
"This is the way; walk in it,"
when you would turn to the right or to the left.
22* And you shall consider unclean your silver-plated idols and your gold-covered images;
You shall throw them away like filthy rags
to which you say, "Begone!"

Zion's Future Prosperity

23* He will give rain for the seed
that you sow in the ground,
And the wheat that the soil produces will be rich and abundant.
On that day your cattle will graze in spacious meadows;
24 The oxen and the asses that till the ground
will eat silage tossed to them with shovel and pitchfork.
25* Upon every high mountain and lofty hill
there will be streams of running water.
On the day of the great slaughter, when the towers fall, 26* The light of the moon will be like that of the sun and the light of the sun will be seven times greater [like the light of seven days].
On the day the LORD binds up the wounds of his people,
he will heal the bruises left by his blows.

Divine Judgment on Assyria

27† See the name of the LORD coming from afar
in burning wrath, with lowering clouds!
His lips are filled with fury,
his tongue is like a consuming fire;
28 His breath, like a flood in a ravine that reaches suddenly to the neck,
Will winnow the nations with a destructive winnowing,
and with repeated winnowings will he battle against them
[and a bridle on the jaws of the peoples to send them astray].
30 The LORD will make his glorious voice heard,
and let it be seen how his arm descends
In raging fury and flame of consuming fire,
in driving storm and hail.
31 When the LORD speaks, Assyria will be shattered,
as he strikes with the rod;
32 While at every sweep of the rod which the LORD will bring down on him in punishment, 29† You will sing
as on a night when a feast is observed,
And be merry of heart,
as one marching along with a flute
Toward the mountain of the LORD, toward the Rock of Israel, accompanied by the timbrels and lyres.
33 For the pyre has long been ready, prepared for the king;
Broad and deep it is piled with dry grass and wood in abundance,
And the breath of the LORD, like a stream of sulphur,
will set it afire.

CHAPTER 31

Against the Egyptian Alliance

1* Woe to those who go down to Egypt for help,
who depend upon horses;
Who put their trust in chariots because of their number,
and in horsemen because of their combined power,
But look not to the Holy One of Israel
nor seek the LORD!
2 Yet he too is wise and will bring disaster;
he will not turn from what he has threatened to do.
He will rise up against the house of the wicked
and against those who help evildoers.
3* The Egyptians are men, not God,
their horses are flesh, not spirit;
When the LORD stretches forth his hand,
the helper shall stumble, the one helped shall fall,
and both of them shall perish together.

4 Thus says the LORD to me:
As a lion or a lion cub growling over its prey,
With a band of shepherds assembled against it,

21: Jer 31, 33f.
22: 31, 7.
23: Lv 26, 3.5.
25: Jl 4, 18.
26: Jer 30, 17.
31, 1: 30, 2; 36, 6.
3: Ps 146, 3ff.

† 30, 27-33: God's punishment of Assyria. The name of the LORD: God himself; cf Ps 20, 2.
30, 29-33: Pyre: on which the corpse of the king of Assyria is burned. This is the occasion of festal rejoicing for the Israelites, who are now free from his yoke.

Is neither frightened by their shouts
nor disturbed by their noise,
So shall the LORD of hosts come down to wage war upon the mountain and hill of Zion.
5* Like hovering birds, so the LORD of hosts shall shield Jerusalem,
To protect and deliver,
to spare and rescue it.

6* Return, O children of Israel, to him whom you have utterly deserted. 7* On that day each one of you shall spurn his sinful idols of silver and gold, which he made with his hands.

Downfall of Assyria

8* Assyria shall fall by a sword not wielded by man,
no mortal sword shall devour him;
He shall flee before the sword,
and his young men shall be impressed as laborers.
9† He shall rush past his crag in panic,
and his princes shall flee in terror from his standard, Says the LORD who has a fire in Zion
and a furnace in Jerusalem.

CHAPTER 32

The Kingdom of Justice

1* See, a king will reign justly and princes will rule rightly.
2* Each of them will be a shelter from the wind,
a retreat from the rain.
They will be like streams of water in a dry country,
like the shade of a great rock in a parched land.
3 The eyes of those who see will not be closed;
the ears of those who hear will be attentive.
4 The flighty will become wise and capable,
and the stutterers will speak fluently and clearly.
5 No more will the fool be called noble,
nor the trickster be considered honorable.
6* For the fool speaks foolishly,
planning evil in his heart:
How to do wickedness,
to speak perversely against the LORD,
To let the hungry go empty
and the thirsty be without drink.
7 And the trickster uses wicked trickery, planning crimes:
How to ruin the poor with lies,
and the needy when they plead their case.
8 But the noble man plans noble things,
and by noble things he stands.

The Women of Jerusalem

9 O complacent ladies, rise up and hear my voice, overconfident women, give heed to my words.
10* In a little more than a year
you overconfident ones will be shaken;
The vintage will fail,
there will be no harvest.
11* Tremble, you who are complacent!
Shudder, you who are overconfident!
Strip yourselves bare,
with only a loincloth to cover you.
12 Beat your breasts
for the pleasant fields, the fruitful vine, 13* And the soil of my people,
overgrown with thorns and briers;
For all the joyful houses,
the wanton city.
14*†Yes, the castle will be forsaken,
the noisy city deserted;
19 Down it comes, as trees come down in the forest!
The city will be utterly laid low.
Hill and tower will become wasteland forever
for wild asses to frolic in, and flocks to pasture, 15*†Until the spirit from on high is poured out on us.

Then will the desert become an orchard
and the orchard be regarded as a forest.
16 Right will dwell in the desert
and justice abide in the orchard.
17* Justice will bring about peace;
right will produce calm and security.
18* My people will live in peaceful country,
in secure dwellings and quiet resting places.

32, 15-18.20: Extraordinary peace and prosperity will come to Israel under just rulers.

20* Happy are you who sow beside every stream,
and let the ox and the ass go freely!

CHAPTER 33

Overthrow of Assyria

1 Woe, O destroyer never destroyed,
O traitor never betrayed!
When you finish destroying, you will be destroyed;
when wearied with betraying, you will be betrayed.
2* O LORD, have pity on us, for you we wait.
Be our strength every morning,
our salvation in time of trouble!
3 At the roaring sound, peoples flee;
when you rise in your majesty, nations are scattered.
4* Men gather spoil as caterpillars are gathered up;
they rush upon it like the onrush of locusts.
5* The LORD is exalted, enthroned on high;
he fills Zion with right and justice.
6* That which makes her seasons lasting,
the riches that save her, are wisdom and knowledge;
the fear of the LORD is her treasure.

7† See, the men of Ariel cry out in the streets,
the messengers of Shalem weep bitterly.
8* The highways are desolate,
travelers have quit the paths,
Covenants are broken, their terms are spurned;
yet no man gives it a thought.
9*† The country languishes in mourning,
Lebanon withers with shame;
Sharon is like the steppe,
Bashan and Carmel are stripped bare.

10 Now will I rise up, says the LORD,
now will I be exalted, now be lifted up.
11 You conceive dry grass, bring forth stubble;
my spirit shall consume you like fire.
12* The peoples shall be as in a limekiln,
like brushwood cut down for burning in the fire.
13 Hear, you who are far off, what I have done;
you who are near, acknowledge my might.
14* On Zion sinners are in dread, trembling grips the impious:
"Who of us can live with the consuming fire?
who of us can live with the everlasting flames?"
15* He who practices virtue and speaks honestly,
who spurns what is gained by oppression,
Brushing his hands free of contact with a bribe,
stopping his ears lest he hear of bloodshed,
closing his eyes lest he look on evil—16 He shall dwell on the heights,
his stronghold shall be the rocky fastness,
his food and drink in steady supply.

Restoration of Zion

17† Your eyes will see a king in his splendor,
they will look upon a vast land.
18 Your mind will dwell on the terror:
"Where is he who counted, where is he who weighed?
Where is he who counted the towers?"
19 To the people of alien tongue you will look no more,
the people of obscure speech,
stammering in a language not understood.
20 Look to Zion, the city of our festivals;
let your eyes see Jerusalem
as a quiet abode, a tent not to be struck, Whose pegs will never be pulled up,
nor any of its ropes severed.

22 Indeed the LORD will be there with us, majestic;
yes, the LORD our judge, the LORD our lawgiver,
the LORD our king, he it is who will save us.
21† In a place of rivers and wide streams
on which no boat is rowed,
where no majestic ship passes, 23 The rigging hangs slack;
it cannot hold the mast in place,
nor keep the sail spread out.

VI: THE LORD, ZION'S AVENGER

CHAPTER 34

Judgment upon Edom

1* Come near, O nations, and hear;
be attentive, O peoples!
Let the earth and what fills it listen,
the world and all it produces.
2 The LORD is angry with all the nations and is wrathful against all their host;
he has doomed them and given them over to slaughter.
3* Their slain shall be cast out,
their corpses shall send up a stench;
The mountains shall run with their blood,
4* and all the hills shall rot;
The heavens shall be rolled up like a scroll,
and all their host shall wither away,
As the leaf wilts on the vine,
or as the fig withers on the tree.

5* When my sword has drunk its fill in the heavens,
lo, it shall come down in judgment
upon Edom, a people I have doomed.
6* The LORD has a sword filled with blood,
greasy with fat,
With the blood of lambs and goats,
with the fat of rams' kidneys;
For the LORD has a sacrifice in Bozrah,
a great slaughter in the land of Edom.
7 Wild oxen shall be struck down with fatlings,
and bullocks with bulls;
Their land shall be soaked with blood,
and their earth greasy with fat.
8* For the LORD has a day of vengeance,
a year of requital by Zion's defender.
9 Edom's streams shall be changed into pitch
and her earth into sulphur,
and her land shall become burning pitch;
10 Night and day it shall not be quenched,
its smoke shall rise forever.
From generation to generation she shall lie waste,
never again shall anyone pass through her.
11*† But the desert owl and hoot owl shall possess her,
the screech owl and raven shall dwell in her.
The LORD will measure her with line and plummet to be an empty waste
for satyrs to dwell in.

12* Her nobles shall be no more,
nor shall kings be proclaimed there;
all her princes are gone.
13* Her castles shall be overgrown with thorns,
her fortresses with thistles and briers.
She shall become an abode for jackals
and a haunt for ostriches.
14† Wildcats shall meet with desert beasts,
satyrs shall call to one another;
There shall the lilith repose,
and find for herself a place to rest.
15 There the hoot owl shall nest and lay eggs,
hatch them out and gather them in her shadow;

There shall the kites assemble,
none shall be missing its mate.

16*† Look in the book of the LORD and read:
No one of these shall be lacking,
For the mouth of the LORD has ordered it,
and his spirit shall gather them there.
17 It is he who casts the lot for them,
and with his hands he marks off their shares of her;
They shall possess her forever,
and dwell there from generation to generation.

CHAPTER 35

Israel's Deliverance

1*† The desert and the parched land will exult;
the steppe will rejoice and bloom.
2* They will bloom with abundant flowers,
and rejoice with joyful song.
The glory of Lebanon will be given to them,
the splendor of Carmel and Sharon;
They will see the glory of the LORD,
the splendor of our God.
3* Strengthen the hands that are feeble, make firm the knees that are weak,
4* Say to those whose hearts are frightened:
Be strong, fear not!
Here is your God,
he comes with vindication;
With divine recompense
he comes to save you.
5* Then will the eyes of the blind be
opened,
the ears of the deaf be cleared;
6* Then will the lame leap like a stag, then the tongue of the dumb will sing.

Streams will burst forth in the desert,
and rivers in the steppe.
7 The burning sands will become pools,
and the thirsty ground, springs of
water;
The abode where jackals lurk will be a marsh for the reed and papyrus.
8 A highway will be there,
called the holy way;
No one unclean may pass over it,
nor fools go astray on it.
9* No lion will be there,
nor beast of prey go up to be met
upon it.
It is for those with a journey to make,
and on it the redeemed will walk.
10* Those whom the LORD has ransomed will return
and enter Zion singing,
crowned with everlasting joy;
They will meet with joy and gladness,
sorrow and mourning will flee.

VII: HISTORICAL APPENDIX

Invasion of Sennacherib. 1*† In the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah, Sennacherib, king of Assyria, went on an expedition against all the fortified cities of Judah and captured them. 2 From Lachish the king of Assyria sent his commander with a great army to King Hezekiah in Jerusalem. When he stopped at the conduit of the upper pool, on the highway of the fuller's field, 3 there came out to him the master of the palace, Eliakim, son of Hilkiah, and Shebna the scribe, and the herald Joah, son of Asaph. 4 The commander said to them, "Tell King Hezekiah: Thus says the great king, the king of Assyria, 'On what do you base this confidence of yours? 5 Do you think mere words substitute for strategy and might in war? On whom, then, do you rely, that you rebel against me? 6* This Egypt, the staff on which you rely, is in fact a broken reed which pierces the hand of anyone who leans on it. That is what Pharaoh, king of Egypt, is to all who rely on him. 7*† But if you say to me: "We rely on the LORD, our God," is not he the one whose high places and altars Hezekiah removed, commanding Judah and Jerusalem to worship before this altar?'

8 "Now, make a wager with my lord the king of Assyria: 'I will give you two thousand horses, if you can put riders on them.' 9 How then can you repulse even one of the least servants of my lord? And yet you rely on Egypt for chariots and horsemen! 10* 'Was it without the LORD's will that I have come up to destroy this land? The LORD said to me, "Go up and destroy that land!"' "

11† Then Eliakim and Shebna and Joah said to the commander, "Please speak to your servants in Aramaic; we understand it. Do not speak to us in Judean within earshot of the people who are on the wall."

12 But the commander replied, "Was it to you and your master that my lord sent me to speak these words? Was it

36, 1—39, 8: Except for 38, 9-20, this historical appendix describing the siege, etc., is paralleled in 2 Kgs 18, 13—20, 19, which, however, has certain details proper to itself. The events are also recorded in substantially the same way in the cuneiform inscriptions of Sennacherib.

36, 7: The Assyrians pretend that Hezekiah's removal of the high places and altars (illegal sanctuaries) was taken by the Lord as an insult. They declare to Jerusalem's emissaries that the city therefore no longer has a right to the Lord's protection and that they are the ones who truly carry out his will (cf v 10).

36, 11: The Jewish emissaries ask that the conversation be carried on in Aramaic, not in Judean, for they fear the effect of the Assyrian claims upon the morale of the people.

not rather to the men sitting on the wall, who, with you, will have to eat their own excrement and drink their own urine?" 13 Then the commander stepped forward and cried out in a loud voice in Judean, "Listen to the words of the great king, the king of Assyria. 14 Thus says the king: 'Do not let Hezekiah deceive you, since he cannot deliver you. 15 Let not Hezekiah induce you to rely on the LORD, saying, "The LORD will surely save us; this city will not be handed over to the king of Assyria." ' 16* Do not listen to Hezekiah, for the king of Assyria says: 'Make peace with me and surrender! Then each of you will eat of his own vine and of his own fig tree, and drink the water of his own cistern, 17 until I come to take you to a land like your own, a land of grain and wine, of bread and vineyards. 18* Do not let Hezekiah seduce you by saying, "The LORD will save us." Has any of the gods of the nations ever rescued his land from the hand of the king of Assyria? 19* Where are the gods of Hamath and Arpad? Where are the gods of Sepharvaim? Where are the gods of Samaria? Have they saved Samaria from my hand? 20 Which of all the gods of these lands ever rescued his land from my hand? Will the LORD then save Jerusalem from my hand?' " 21 But they remained silent and did not answer him one word, for the king had ordered them not to answer him.

22 Then the master of the palace, Eliakim, son of Hilkiah, Shebna the scribe, and the herald Joah, son of Asaph, came to Hezekiah with their garments torn, and reported to him what the commander had said.

CHAPTER 37

1 When King Hezekiah heard this, he tore his garments, wrapped himself in sackcloth, and went into the temple of the LORD. 2 He sent Eliakim, the master of the palace, and Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests, wrapped in sackcloth, to tell the prophet Isaiah, son of Amoz: 3† "Thus says Hezekiah: 'This is a day of distress, of rebuke, and of disgrace. Children are at the point of birth, but there is no strength to bring them forth. 4 Perhaps the LORD, your God, will hear the words of the commander, whom his master, the king of Assyria, sent to taunt the living God, and will rebuke him for the words which the LORD, your God, has heard. Send up a prayer for the remnant that is here.' "

5 When the servants of King Hezekiah had come to Isaiah, 6* he said to them: "Tell this to your master: 'Thus says the LORD: Do not be frightened by the words you have heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me. 7 I am about to put in him such a spirit that, when he hears a certain report, he will return to his own land, and there I will cause him to fall by the sword.' "

8 When the commander returned to Lachish and heard that the king of Assyria had left there, he found him besieging Libnah. 9† The king of Assyria heard a report that Tirhakah, king of Ethiopia, had come out to fight against him. Again he sent envoys to Hezekiah with this message: "Thus shall you say to Hezekiah, king of Judah: 10* 'Do not let your God on whom you rely deceive you by saying that Jerusalem will not be handed over to the king of Assyria. 11 You yourself have heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all the countries: They doomed them! Will you, then, be saved? 12 Did the gods of the nations whom my fathers destroyed save them? Gozen, Haran, Rezeph, and the Edenites in Telassar? 13 Where is the king of Hamath, the king of Arpad, or a king of the cities of Sepharvaim, Hena or Ivvah?' "

14 Hezekiah took the letter from the hand of the messengers and read it; then he went up to the temple of the LORD, and spreading it out before him, 15 he prayed to the LORD: 16† "O LORD of hosts, God of Israel, enthroned upon the cherubim! You alone are God over all the kingdoms of the earth. You have made the heavens and the earth. 17 Incline your ear, O LORD, and listen! Open your eyes, O LORD and see! Hear all the words of the letter that Sennacherib sent to taunt the living God. 18 Truly, O LORD, the kings of Assyria have laid waste all the nations and their lands, 19* and cast their gods into the fire; they destroyed them because they were not gods but the work of human hands, wood and stone. 20 Therefore, O LORD, our God, save us from his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that you, O LORD, alone are God."

Punishment of Sennacherib. 21 Then Isaiah, son of Amoz, sent this message 18: 37, 11.

19: 10, 9; 37, 13.
37, 6: 41, 10-14; 51, 7 10: 36, 14.
19: Jer 16, 20.

† 37, 3: A proverbial expression. In the Bible the pangs of childbirth often typify extreme anguish; cf 13, 8; Jer 6, 24; Mi 4, 9f. In this instance there is reference to the desperate situation of Hezekiah from which he was scarcely able to free himself.

37, 9: Tirhakah: may have been general of the Egyptian army in 701 B.C.; later he became king, one of the Ethiopian dynasty of Egyptian kings (c. 690-664 B.C.). Many consider that this account in Isaiah combines features of two originally distinct sieges of Jerusalem by Sennacherib.

37, 16: In contrast to the empty boasting of the Assyrians, Hezekiah proclaims the Lord as God over all the kingdoms of the earth.

to Hezekiah: Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: In answer to your prayer for help against Sennacherib, king of Assyria, [22]* this is the word the LORD has spoken concerning him:

She despises you, laughs you to scorn,
the virgin daughter Zion;
Behind you she wags her head,
daughter Jerusalem.
[23]* Whom have you insulted and blasphemed,
against whom have you raised your voice
And lifted up your eyes on high?
Against the Holy One of Israel!
[24] Through your servants you have insulted the Lord:
You said, "With my many chariots
I climbed the mountain heights,
the recesses of Lebanon;
I cut down its lofty cedars,
its choice cypresses;
I reached the remotest heights,
its forest park.
[25] I dug wells and drank water in foreign lands;
I dried up with the soles of my feet
all the rivers of Egypt.

[26] Have you not heard?
Long ago I prepared it,
From days of old I planned it,
now I have brought it to pass:
That you should reduce fortified cities
into heaps of ruins, [27] While their inhabitants, shorn of power,
are dismayed and ashamed,
Becoming like the plants of the field,
like the green growth,
like the scorched grass on the housetops.
[28] I am aware whether you stand or sit;
I know whether you come or go,
and also your rage against me.
[29] Because of your rage against me
and your fury which has reached my ears,
I will put my hook in your nose
and my bit in your mouth,
and make you return the way you came.

[30]† This shall be a sign for you:
this year you shall eat the aftergrowth,
next year, what grows of itself;
But in the third year, sow and reap,
plant vineyards and eat their fruit!
[31]* The remaining survivors of the house of Judah shall again strike root below
and bear fruit above.
[32] For out of Jerusalem shall come a remnant,
and from Mount Zion, survivors.
The zeal of the LORD of hosts shall do this.

[33] Therefore, thus says the LORD concerning the king of Assyria: He shall not reach this city, nor shoot an arrow at it, nor come before it with a shield, nor cast up siegeworks against it. [34]* He shall return by the same way he came, without entering the city, says the LORD. [35]* I will shield and save this city for my own sake, and for the sake of my servant David.

[36]† The angel of the LORD went forth and struck down one hundred and eighty-five thousand in the Assyrian camp. Early the next morning, there they were, all the corpses of the dead. [37] So Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, broke camp and went back home to Nineveh.

[38]† When he was worshiping in the temple of his god Nisroch, his sons Adrammelech and Sharezer slew him with the sword and fled into the land of Ararat. His son Esarhaddon reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER 38

Sickness and Recovery of Hezekiah. [1]† In those days, when Hezekiah was mortally ill, the prophet Isaiah, son of Amoz, came and said to him: "Thus says the LORD: Put your house in order, for you are about to die; you shall not recover." [2] Then Hezekiah turned his face to the wall and prayed to the LORD: [3] "O LORD, remember how faithfully and wholeheartedly I conducted myself

37, 30: You: Hezekiah. A sign: it is difficult to know the nature of this sign. Either it is merely a proverbial expression to signify that prosperity follows adversity, or it indicates that after two years the normal conditions of life will be resumed.

37, 36: The destruction of Sennacherib's army is also recorded by Herodotus, a Greek historian of the fifth century B.C. It was probably due to the bubonic plague, but the sacred author attributes it to its ultimate cause, God through his angel.

37, 38: The violent death of Sennacherib (681 B.C.) is also mentioned in non-biblical sources. It occurred twenty years after his invasion of Judea.

38, 1—39, 8: The events of this section—sickness and recovery of Hezekiah, embassy of Merodach-baladan—point forward to Babylon (cc 40-66). They occurred prior to the events of 36, 1—37, 38, which point back to Assyria (1, 1—35, 10).

in your presence, doing what was pleasing to you!" And Hezekiah wept bitterly.
4 Then the word of the LORD came to Isaiah: 5† "Go, tell Hezekiah: Thus says
the LORD, the God of your father David:
I have heard your prayer and seen your tears. I will heal you: in three days you shall go up to the LORD's temple; I will add fifteen years to your life. 6* I will rescue you and this city from the hand of the king of Assyria; I will be a shield to this city."
21 Isaiah then ordered a poultice of figs to be taken and applied to the boil, that he might recover. 22 Then Hezekiah asked, "What is the sign that I shall go up to the temple of the LORD?" 7 [Isaiah answered:] "This will be the sign for you from the LORD that he will do what he has promised: 8*† See, I will make the shadow cast by the sun on the stairway to the terrace of Ahaz go back the ten steps it has advanced." So the sun came back the ten steps it had advanced.

Hezekiah's Hymn of Thanksgiving.
9 The song of Hezekiah, king of Judah, after he had been sick and had recovered from his illness:

10*†Once I said,
"In the noontime of life I must depart!
To the gates of the nether world I shall be consigned
for the rest of my years." 11† I said, "I shall see the LORD no more
in the land of the living.
No longer shall I behold my fellow
men
among those who dwell in the world."
12*†My dwelling, like a shepherd's tent, is struck down and borne away
from me;
You have folded up my life, like a
weaver
who severs the last thread.
Day and night you give me over to torment;
13 I cry out until the dawn.
Like a lion he breaks all my bones;
[day and night you give me over to torment].
14 Like a swallow I utter shrill cries;
I moan like a dove.
My eyes grow weak, gazing heavenward:
O Lord, I am in straits; be my surety!

15† What am I to say or tell him?
He has done it!
I shall go on through all my years
despite the bitterness of my soul.
16† Those live whom the LORD protects;
yours . . . the life of my spirit.
You have given me health and life;
17† thus is my bitterness transformed into peace.
You have preserved my life
from the pit of destruction,
When you cast behind your back
all my sins.
18*†For it is not the nether world that gives you thanks,
nor death that praises you;
Neither do those who go down into the pit
await your kindness.
19 The living, the living give you
thanks,
as I do today.
Fathers declare to their sons,
O God, your faithfulness.
20 The LORD is our savior;
we shall sing to stringed instruments
In the house of the LORD
all the days of our life.

heard that Hezekiah had recovered from his sickness, he sent letters and gifts to him. 2* Hezekiah was pleased at this, and therefore showed the messengers his treasury, the silver and gold, 38, 8: Stairway to the terrace of Ahaz: this interpretation is based on a reading of the Hebrew text revised according to the Dead Sea Scroll of Isaiah; cf 2 Kgs 23, 12. Many translate the phrase as "steps of Ahaz" and understand this as referring to a sundial.

38, 10: In the noontime of life: long before the end of a full span of life; cf Pss 55, 24; 102, 25.

38, 11: See the Lord: go to the Temple and take part in its service.

38, 12: These two metaphors emphasize the suddenness and finality of death.

38, 15: What am I to say or tell him?: a rhetorical question, as if the poet were at a loss in giving fitting expression to his gratitude; cf Ps 116, 12. He has done it: accomplished the cure. Despite the bitterness: even though the one praying was previously so dejected.

38, 16: Yours . . . the life of my spirit: the current Hebrew text is corrupt. The revised Latin psalter renders it: "you have revived my soul."

38, 17: You cast behind your back all my sins: figurative language to express the divine forgiveness of sins, as if God no longer saw or cared about them. This expression is ordinarily used of men forgetting God; cf 1 Kgs 14, 9; Ez 23, 35; Ps 50, 17.

38, 18f: See note on Ps 6, 6.

39, 1: Merodach-baladan: twice king of Babylon, probably from 721 to 710 B.C., and again for nine months, in 704-703. This visit of his messengers, certainly before 701, was in reality a political one. Babylon hoped to lead an anti-Assyrian confederation composed of neighboring states.

and everything that was in his storerooms; there was nothing in his house or in his whole realm that he did not

King Hezekiah and asked him, "What did these men say to you? Where did they come from?" Hezekiah answered,
"They came to me from a distant land,
from Babylon." 4 "What did they see in your house?" he asked. Hezekiah replied, "They saw everything in my house; there is nothing in my storerooms that I did not show them."
5 Then Isaiah said to Hezekiah, "Hear the word of the LORD of hosts:
6*† Behold, the days shall come when all that is in your house, and everything that your fathers have stored up until this day, shall be carried off to Babylon;
nothing shall be left, says the LORD.
7* Some of your own bodily descendants shall be taken and made servants in the palace of the king of Babylon."

is favorable." For he thought, "There will be peace and security in my lifetime."

Promise of Salvation

1 Comfort, give comfort to my people,
says your God.
2*† Speak tenderly to Jerusalem, and proclaim to her that her service is at an end,
her guilt is expiated;
Indeed, she has received from the hand of the LORD
double for all her sins.

3*† A voice cries out:
In the desert prepare the way of the
LORD!
Make straight in the wasteland a highway for our God!
4 Every valley shall be filled in,
every mountain and hill shall be made low;
The rugged land shall be made a plain,
the rough country, a broad valley.
5 Then the glory of the LORD shall be revealed,
and all mankind shall see it together;
for the mouth of the LORD has spoken.

6* A voice says, "Cry out!"
I answer, "What shall I cry out?"
"All mankind is grass,
and all their glory like the flower
of the field.
7 The grass withers, the flower wilts,
when the breath of the LORD blows
upon it.
[So then, the people is the grass.]
8 Though the grass withers and the flower wilts,
the word of our God stands forever."

9 Go up onto a high mountain,
Zion, herald of glad tidings;
Cry out at the top of your voice,
Jerusalem, herald of good news!
Fear not to cry out
and say to the cities of Judah:
Here is your God!
10 Here comes with power
the Lord GOD,
who rules by his strong arm;
Here is his reward with him,
his recompense before him.
11* Like a shepherd he feeds his flock;
in his arms he gathers the lambs,
Carrying them in his bosom,
and leading the ewes with care.

Power of the Creator To Save His People

12† Who has cupped in his hand the waters of the sea,
and marked off the heavens with
a span?
Who has held in a measure the dust
of the earth,
weighed the mountains in scales
and the hills in a balance?
13* Who has directed the spirit of the LORD,

†
39, 6: Because Judah preferred to follow a pro-Babylonian policy, instead of trusting in God, it would later be exiled to Babylon.
39, 8: Favorable: for the exile would not occur in his lifetime.
40, 2: Service: servitude and exile.
40, 3-5: The figurative language here describes the actual return of the exiles from Babylon to Jerusalem. It is the Lord who leads them; their road is made easy for them. Mt 3, 3 and parallels see in these verses a prophecy of the Baptizer and Christ.
40, 12: Span: the distance between the extended little finger and the thumb. Measure: literally, "third"; here a small container.

or has instructed him as his counselor?
14 Whom did he consult to gain knowledge?
Who taught him the path of judgment,
or showed him the way of understanding?

15 Behold, the nations count as a drop in the bucket,
as dust on the scales;
the coastlands weigh no more than powder.
16† Lebanon would not suffice for fuel,
nor its animals be enough for holocausts.
17 Before him all the nations are as nought,
as nothing and void he accounts them.

18* To whom can you liken God?
With what equal can you confront him?
19* An idol, cast by a craftsman, which the smith plates with gold and fits with silver chains?
20* Mulberry wood, the choice portion which a skilled craftsman picks out for himself, Choosing timber that will not rot,
to set up an idol that will not be unsteady?

41:6† One man helps another,
one says to the other, "Keep on!"
41:7† The craftsman encourages the goldsmith, the one who beats with the hammer, him who strikes on the anvil;
He says the soldering is good,
and he fastens it with nails to steady it.

40:21 Do you not know? Have you not heard?
Was it not foretold you from the beginning?
Have you not understood? Since the earth was founded 22* He sits enthroned above the vault of the earth,
and its inhabitants are like grasshoppers;
He stretches out the heavens like a veil,
spreads them out like a tent to dwell in.
23 He brings princes to nought
and makes the rulers of the earth as nothing.
24 Scarcely are they planted or sown,
scarcely is their stem rooted in the earth,
When he breathes upon them and they wither,
and the stormwind carries them away like straw.

25 To whom can you liken me as an equal?
says the Holy One.
26*† Lift up your eyes on high and see who has created these:
He leads out their army and numbers them,
calling them all by name.
By his great might and the strength of his power not one of them is missing!
27† Why, O Jacob, do you say,
and declare, O Israel,
"My way is hidden from the LORD,
and my right is disregarded by my God"?
28 Do you not know
or have you not heard?
The LORD is the eternal God,
creator of the ends of the earth.
He does not faint nor grow weary,
and his knowledge is beyond scrutiny.
29 He gives strength to the fainting;
for the weak he makes vigor abound.
30 Though young men faint and grow weary,
and youths stagger and fall,
31 They that hope in the LORD will renew their strength,
they will soar as with eagles' wings;
They will run and not grow weary,
walk and not grow faint.

CHAPTER 41

The Liberator of Israel

1† Keep silence before me, O coastlands;
you peoples, wait for my words!
Let them draw near and speak;
let us come together for judgment.

2† Who has stirred up from the East
the champion of justice,

18f: Acts 17, 29.
19: Ps 115, 4-7.
20: 44, 13.
22: Ps 104, 2.
26: Ps 147, 4f.

40, 16: Lebanon . . . fuel: the famed cedars would not be enough to keep the fires of sacrifice burning.

41, 6-7: These two verses have been transposed to chapter 40.

40, 26: Created: see note on Gn 1, 1. By name: for he is their Creator.

40, 27f: God's people, here called Jacob and Israel, must not give way to discouragement: their Lord is the eternal God.

41, 1-4: It is generally agreed that these verses describe the vocation and victory of Cyrus, whom the Lord used as his instrument to redeem Israel.

41, 2: Cyrus is the champion of justice and God's attendant.

and summoned him to be his attendant?
To him he delivers the nations
and subdues the kings;
With his sword he reduces them to dust,
with his bow, to driven straw.
3 He pursues them, passing on without loss,
by a path his feet do not even tread.
4* Who has performed these deeds?
He who has called forth the generations since the beginning.
I, the LORD, am the first,
and with the last I will also be.
5 The coastlands see, and fear;
the ends of the earth tremble:
these things are near, they come to pass.
6* But you, Israel, my servant,
Jacob, whom I have chosen,
offspring of Abraham my friend—9 You whom I have taken from the ends of the earth and summoned from its far-off places,
You whom I have called my servant,
whom I have chosen and will not cast off—10 Fear not, I am with you;
be not dismayed; I am your God.
I will strengthen you, and help you,
and uphold you with my right hand of justice.

11 Yes, all shall be put to shame and disgrace who vent their anger against you;
Those shall perish and come to nought
who offer resistance.
12 You shall seek out, but shall not find,
those who strive against you;
They shall be as nothing at all who do battle with you.

13 For I am the LORD, your God,
who grasp your right hand;
It is I who say to you, "Fear not,
I will help you."
14† Fear not, O worm Jacob,
O maggot Israel;
I will help you, says the LORD;
your redeemer is the Holy One of Israel.
15 I will make of you a threshing sledge,
sharp, new, and double-edged,
To thresh the mountains and crush them,
to make the hills like chaff.
16 When you winnow them, the wind shall carry them off and the storm shall scatter them.
But you shall rejoice in the LORD,
and glory in the Holy One of Israel.
17 The afflicted and the needy seek water in vain,
their tongues are parched with thirst.
I, the LORD, will answer them;
I, the God of Israel, will not forsake them.
18 I will open up rivers on the bare heights,
and fountains in the broad valleys;
I will turn the desert into a marshland,
and the dry ground into springs of water.
19 I will plant in the desert the cedar, acacia, myrtle, and olive;
I will set in the wasteland the cypress,
together with the plane tree and the pine, 20 That all may see and know,
observe and understand,
That the hand of the LORD has done this,
the Holy One of Israel has created it.

21† Present your case, says the LORD;
bring forward your reasons, says the King of Jacob.
22 Let them come near and foretell to us
what it is that shall happen!
What are the things of long ago?
Tell us, that we may reflect on them
And know their outcome;
or declare to us the things to come!
23 Foretell the things that shall come afterward,
that we may know that you are gods!
Do something, good or evil,
that will put us in awe and in fear.
24 Why, you are nothing and your work is nought!
To choose you is an abomination.

25† I have stirred up one from the north, and he comes;
from the east I summon him by name;
He shall trample the rulers down like red earth,
as the potter treads the clay.
26 Who announced this from the beginning, that we might know;
beforehand, that we might say it is true?

---

* 41, 4: 44, 7; 46, 10. 6f: 44, 11.21; 45, 4.

† 41, 14: Redeemer: in Hebrew, goel, one who frees another from slavery and avenges his sufferings; cf Lv 25, 48; Dt 19, 6.12.
41, 21-24: An indictment of idols.
41, 25: I summon him: Cyrus.

Not one of you foretold it, not one spoke;
no one heard you say,
27 "The first news for Zion: they are coming now," or, "For Jerusalem I will pick out a bearer of the glad tidings."
28 When I look, there is not one,
no one of them to give counsel,
to make an answer when I question them.
29 Ah, all of them are nothing,
their works are nought,
their idols are empty wind!

CHAPTER 42

The Servant of the Lord

1*† Here is my servant whom I uphold,
my chosen one with whom I am pleased,
Upon whom I have put my spirit;
he shall bring forth justice to the nations,
2 Not crying out, not shouting,
not making his voice heard in the street.
3† A bruised reed he shall not break,
and a smoldering wick he shall not quench, 4† Until he establishes justice on the earth;
the coastlands will wait for his teaching.

5 Thus says God, the LORD,
who created the heavens and stretched them out,
who spreads out the earth with its crops,
Who gives breath to its people
and spirit to those who walk on it:
6* I, the LORD, have called you for the victory of justice,
I have grasped you by the hand;
I formed you, and set you
as a covenant of the people,
a light for the nations,
7 To open the eyes of the blind,
to bring out prisoners from confinement,
and from the dungeon, those who live in darkness.
8 I am the LORD, this is my name;
my glory I give to no other,
nor my praise to idols.
9 See, the earlier things have come to pass,
new ones I now foretell;
Before they spring into being,
I announce them to you.

The Salvation of Israel Despite Its Sins

10 Sing to the LORD a new song,
his praise from the end of the earth:
Let the sea and what fills it resound,
the coastlands, and those who dwell in them.
11† Let the steppe and its cities cry out,
the villages where Kedar dwells;
Let the inhabitants of Sela exult,
and shout from the top of the mountains.
12 Let them give glory to the LORD,
and utter his praise in the coastlands.

13* The LORD goes forth like a hero,
like a warrior he stirs up his ardor;
He shouts out his battle cry,
against his enemies he shows his might:
14 I have looked away, and kept silence,
I have said nothing, holding myself in;
But now, I cry out as a woman in labor,
gasping and panting.
15* I will lay waste mountains and hills,
all their herbage I will dry up;
I will turn the rivers into marshes,
and the marshes I will dry up.
16* I will lead the blind on their journey;
by paths unknown I will guide them.
I will turn darkness into light before them,
and make crooked ways straight.
These things I do for them,
and I will not forsake them.
17 They shall be turned back in utter shame
who trust in idols;
Who say to molten images,
"You are our gods."
18† You who are deaf, listen,
you who are blind, look and see!
19 Who is blind but my servant,
or deaf like the messenger I send?
20 You see many things without taking note;
your ears are open, but without hearing.

42, 1: 45, 6; 49, 6.
6: 45, 13.
13: Ex 14, 3.
15: Ex 9, 25; 10, 15; 14, 21; Ps 105, 33ff.
16: Ex 13, 21.

† 42, 1-4: Servant: there are three other "Servant-of-the-Lord" oracles, 49, 1-7; 50, 4-11; 52, 13—53, 12. Many identifications have been proposed, e.g., historical Israel, ideal Israel, an Old Testament historical character before or during the lifetime of the prophet, the prophet himself. The New Testament and Christian tradition, however, have seen a fulfillment of these prophecies in Jesus Christ.

42, 3: A reference to the mercy of Christ.

42, 4: Coastlands: the lands of the Mediterranean. In the Old Testament the word often refers to the pagan lands of the west.

42, 11: Kedar: cf footnote to 21, 16. Sela: Petra, the capital of Edom.

42, 18-20: Because of their unbelief, the Lord rebukes his people, whom he calls his servant, his messenger.

21 Though it pleased the LORD in his justice to make his law great and glorious, 22† This is a people despoiled and plundered,
all of them trapped in holes,
hidden away in prisons.
They are taken as booty, with no one to rescue them,
as spoil, with no one to demand their return.

23 Who of you gives ear to this?
Who listens and pays heed for the time to come?
24† Who was it that gave Jacob to be plundered,
Israel to the despoilers?
Was it not the LORD, against whom we have sinned?
In his ways they refused to walk,
his law they disobeyed.
25 So he poured out wrath upon them,
his anger, and the fury of battle;
It blazed round about them, yet they did not realize,
it burned them, but they took it not to heart.

CHAPTER 43

Promises of Redemption and Restoration

1 But now, thus says the LORD,
who created you, O Jacob, and formed you, O Israel:
Fear not, for I have redeemed you;
I have called you by name: you are mine.
2 When you pass through the water,
I will be with you;
in the rivers you shall not drown.
When you walk through fire, you shall not be burned;
the flames shall not consume you.
3† For I am the LORD, your God,
the Holy One of Israel, your savior.
I give Egypt as your ransom,
Ethiopia and Seba in return for you.
4* Because you are precious in my eyes
and glorious, and because I love you,
I give men in return for you and peoples in exchange for your life.
5 Fear not, for I am with you;
from the east I will bring back your descendants,
from the west I will gather you.
6* I will say to the north: Give them up!
and to the south: Hold not back!
Bring back my sons from afar,
and my daughters from the ends of the earth:
7 Everyone who is named as mine,
whom I created for my glory,
whom I formed and made.
8 Lead out the people who are blind though they have eyes,
who are deaf though they have ears.

9† Let all the nations gather together, let the peoples assemble!
Who among them could have revealed this,
or foretold to us the earlier things?
Let them produce witnesses to prove themselves right,
that one may hear and say, "It is true!"
10 You are my witnesses, says the LORD,
my servants whom I have chosen To know and believe in me
and understand that it is I.
Before me no god was formed,
and after me there shall be none.

11 It is I, I the LORD;
there is no savior but me.
12 It is I who foretold, I who saved;
I made it known, not any strange god among you;
You are my witnesses, says the LORD.
I am God, 13* yes, from eternity I am He;
There is none who can deliver from my hand:
who can countermand what I do?

14† Thus says the LORD, your redeemer,
the Holy One of Israel:
For your sakes I send to Babylon;
I will lower all the bars,
and the Chaldeans shall cry out in lamentation.
15 I am the LORD, your Holy One,
the creator of Israel, your King.
16* Thus says the LORD,
who opens a way in the sea
and a path in the mighty waters, 17* Who leads out chariots and horsemen,
a powerful army,
Till they lie prostrate together, never to rise,

43, 4: Dt 4, 37; Hos 11, 1.
6: 49, 22; Ez 16, 20.
13: 41, 4.
16: 51, 10f; Ex 14, 21.

† 42, 22: A people: Israel in exile.
42, 24: Despoilers: the Assyrians and Babylonians.
43, 3f: Egypt . . . Ethiopia and Seba: countries which God permitted the Persians to conquer in return for having given Israel its freedom.
43, 9: Only God can know and predict future events; cf 41, 1-5.21-29.
43, 14-17: The destruction of Babylon.

snuffed out and quenched like a wick.
18† Remember not the events of the past,
the things of long ago consider not;
19 See, I am doing something new!
Now it springs forth, do you not perceive it?
In the desert I make a way,
in the wasteland, rivers.
20 Wild beasts honor me,
jackals and ostriches,
For I put water in the desert and rivers in the wasteland
for my chosen people to drink, 21 The people whom I formed for myself,
that they might announce my praise.

22† Yet you did not call upon me, O Jacob,
for you grew weary of me, O Israel.
23* You did not bring me sheep for your holocausts,
nor honor me with your sacrifices.
I did not exact from you the service of offerings,
nor weary you for frankincense.
24† You did not buy me sweet cane for money,
nor fill me with the fat of your sacrifices;
Instead, you burdened me with your sins,
and wearied me with your crimes.
25 It is I, I, who wipe out,
for my own sake, your offenses;
your sins I remember no more.
26 Would you have me remember,
have us come to trial?
Speak up, prove your innocence!
27† Your first father sinned;
your spokesmen rebelled against me 28 Till I repudiated the holy gates, put Jacob under the ban,
and exposed Israel to scorn.

CHAPTER 44

1 Hear then, O Jacob, my servant,
Israel, whom I have chosen.
2† Thus says the LORD who made you, your help, who formed you from the womb:
Fear not, O Jacob, my servant,
the darling whom I have chosen.
3 I will pour out water upon the thirsty ground,
and streams upon the dry land;
I will pour out my spirit upon your offspring,
and my blessing upon your descendants.
4* They shall spring up amid the verdure
like poplars beside the flowing waters.
5*† One shall say, "I am the LORD's,"
another shall be named after Jacob,
And this one shall write on his hand, "The LORD's,"
and Israel shall be his surname.

The True God and False Gods

6* Thus says the LORD, Israel's King and redeemer, the LORD of hosts:
I am the first and I am the last;
there is no God but me.
7 Who is like me? Let him stand up and speak, make it evident, and confront me with it.
Who of old announced future events?
Let them foretell to us the things to come.
8*† Fear not, be not troubled:
did I not announce and foretell it long ago?
You are my witnesses! Is there a God or any Rock besides me?

9*† Idol makers all amount to nothing, and their precious works are of no avail, as they themselves give witness. To their shame, they neither see nor know anything; and they are more deaf than men are. 10 Indeed, all the associates of anyone who forms a god, or casts an idol to no purpose, will be put to shame; 11 they will all assemble and stand forth, to be reduced to fear and shame.
12* The smith fashions an iron image, works it over the coals, shapes it with hammers, and forges it with his strong arm. He is hungry and weak, drinks no water and becomes exhausted.

43, 18: No need to think solely of the past wonders of the exodus from Egypt; equally great is the exodus from Babylon.
43, 22-28: The reason for the liberation of the Israelites is not their fidelity but rather God's mercy.
43, 24: Sweet cane: a fragrant substance used in making incense and the sacred anointing oil; cf Ex 30, 23; Jer 6, 20.
43, 27: First father: Adam or Jacob, or collectively "early ancestors." Spokesmen: leaders, priests, prophets.
44, 2: The darling: see note on Dt 32, 15; cf also Dt 33, 5.26.
44, 5: Write on his hand: an allusion to the Babylonian custom of tatooing the owner's name on the hand of his slave; cf also Rv 13, 16.
44, 8: Rock: place of refuge; said of God in Dt 32, 4.18; 1 Sm 2, 2; etc.
44, 9-20: Satire on the makers and worshipers of idols

13 The carpenter stretches a line and marks with a stylus the outline of an idol.
He shapes it with a plane and measures
it off with a compass, making it like a man in appearance and dignity, to occupy a shrine. 14 He cuts down cedars, takes a holm or an oak, and lays hold of other trees of the forest, which the Lord had planted and the rain made grow 15 to serve man for fuel. With a part of their wood he warms himself, or makes a fire for baking bread; but with another part he makes a god which he adores, an idol which he worships.
16 Half of it he burns in the fire, and on its embers he roasts his meat; he eats what he has roasted until he is full, and then warms himself and says, "Ah! I am warm, I feel the fire." 17 Of what remains he makes a god, his idol, and prostrate before it in worship, he implores it,
"Rescue me, for you are my god."
18 The idols have neither knowledge nor reason; their eyes are coated so that they cannot see, and their hearts so that they cannot understand. 19 Yet he does not reflect, nor have the intelligence and sense to say, "Half of the wood I burned in the fire, and on its embers I baked bread and roasted meat which I ate.
Shall I then make an abomination out of the rest, or worship a block of wood?"
20† He is chasing ashes—a thing that cannot save itself when the flame consumes it; yet he does not say, "Is not this thing in my right hand a fraud?"

21 Remember this, O Jacob,
you, O Israel, who are my servant!
I formed you to be a servant to me;
O Israel, by me you shall never be forgotten:
22 I have brushed away your offenses
like a cloud,
your sins like a mist;
return to me, for I have redeemed
you.

23 Raise a glad cry, you heavens: the LORD has done this;
shout, you depths of the earth.
Break forth, you mountains, into song,
you forest, with all your trees.
For the LORD has redeemed Jacob, and shows his glory through Israel.

Cyrus, Anointed of the Lord, Liberator of Israel

24* Thus says the LORD, your redeemer,
who formed you from the womb:
I am the LORD, who made all things,
who alone stretched out the heav-
ens;
when I spread out the earth, who was with me?
25 It is I who bring to nought the omens
of liars,
who make fools of diviners;
I turn wise men back
and make their knowledge foolish.
26 It is I who confirm the words of my
servants,
I carry out the plan announced by
my messengers;
I say to Jerusalem: Be inhabited;
to the cities of Judah: Be rebuilt;
I will raise up their ruins.
27* It is I who said to the deep: Be dry;
I will dry up your wellsprings.
28*† I say of Cyrus: My shepherd,
who fulfills my every wish;
He shall say of Jerusalem, "Let her be rebuilt,"
and of the temple, "Let its foundations be laid."

CHAPTER 45

1† Thus says the LORD to his anointed, Cyrus,
whose right hand I grasp,
Subduing nations before him,
and making kings run in his service,
Opening doors before him
and leaving the gates unbarred:
2*† I will go before you
and level the mountains;
Bronze doors I will shatter,
and iron bars I will snap.
3 I will give you treasures out of the
darkness,
and riches that have been hidden
away,
That you may know that I am the
LORD,
the God of Israel, who calls you
by your name.

4* For the sake of Jacob, my servant,
of Israel my chosen one,
I have called you by your name, giving you a title, though you knew me not.
5 I am the LORD and there is no other,
there is no God besides me.
It is I who arm you, though you know me not,

28: Jer 3, 15; Ez 34, 23.
45, 2: Ps 107, 16.
4: 40, 26.

† 44, 20: Chasing ashes: exerting efforts in vain; cf Hos 12, 2; Eccl 1, 14; 2, 11.17.

44, 28: Cyrus: king of Persia (559-529 B.C.) and conqueror of Babylon (538 B.C.), who liberated the Jews, permitting them to return to their native land and to rebuild Jerusalem and the Temple.

45, 1: Anointed: in Hebrew, meshiah, from which the word "Messiah" is derived; from its Greek translation Christos, we have the name "Christ." Applied to kings, "anointed" originally referred only to those of Israel, but it is here given to Cyrus because he is the agent of the Lord.

45, 2: Bronze doors: of Babylon.

6† so that toward the rising and the setting of the sun men may know that there is none besides me.
I am the LORD, there is no other;
7† I form the light, and create the darkness,
I make well-being and create woe;
I, the LORD, do all these things.
8*† Let justice descend, O heavens, like dew from above,
like gentle rain let the skies drop it down.
Let the earth open and salvation bud forth;
let justice also spring up!
I, the LORD, have created this.
9*† Woe to him who contends with his Maker;
a potsherd among potsherds of the earth!
Dare the clay say to its modeler, "What are you doing?"
or, "What you are making has no hands"?
10 Woe to him who asks a father, "What are you begetting?"
or a woman, "What are you giving birth to?"

11 Thus says the LORD,
the Holy One of Israel, his maker:
You question me about my children,
or prescribe the work of my hands for me!
12 It was I who made the earth and created mankind upon it;
It was my hands that stretched out the heavens;
I gave the order to all their host.
13† It was I who stirred up one for the triumph of justice;
all his ways I make level.
He shall rebuild my city
and let my exiles go free Without price or ransom,
says the LORD of hosts.

14*† Thus says the LORD:
The earnings of Egypt, the gain of Ethiopia,
and the Sabeans, tall of stature,
Shall come over to you and belong to you;
they shall follow you, coming in chains.
Before you they shall fall prostrate, saying in prayer:
"With you only is God, and nowhere else;
the gods are nought.
15*† Truly with you God is hidden,
the God of Israel, the savior!
16 Those are put to shame and disgrace who vent their anger against him;
Those go in disgrace who carve images.
17 Israel, you are saved by the LORD, saved forever!
You shall never be put to shame or disgrace
in future ages."
18† For thus says the LORD,
The creator of the heavens, who is God,
The designer and maker of the earth who established it,
Not creating it to be a waste, but designing it to be lived in:
I am the LORD, and there is no other.
19 I have not spoken from hiding
nor from some dark place of the earth,
And I have not said to the descendants of Jacob,
"Look for me in an empty waste."
I, the LORD, promise justice,
I foretell what is right.
20† Come and assemble, gather together,
you fugitives from among the gentiles!
They are without knowledge who bear wooden idols
and pray to gods that cannot save.
21 Come here and declare
in counsel together:
Who announced this from the beginning and foretold it from of old?
Was it not I, the LORD,
besides whom there is no other God?
There is no just and saving God but me.
22 Turn to me and be safe,
all you ends of the earth,
for I am God; there is no other!

8: Pss 72, 6; 85, 11.
9: Jer 18, 6; Rom 9, 20.
14: 43, 3.
15: 55, 8; Prv 25, 2

†

45, 6: The Gentiles will come to know the true God; cf also vv 20-25.

45, 7: Create woe: God permits evil for the sake of a greater good.

45, 8: The Vulgate rendering gives a more precise messianic sense to this verse, using "just one" and "savior" in place of justice and salvation. The Advent liturgy uses the Vulgate form, Rorate coeli desuper . . ., to express the world's longing for the coming of Christ.

45, 9: No one may challenge God's freedom of action, exemplified here by the selection of Cyrus as his anointed.

45, 13: One: Cyrus, called by God for the deliverance and restoration of Israel.

45, 14: Egypt . . . Ethiopia . . . Sabeans: the Egyptians and their allies who, when conquered by Cyrus, are seen as acknowledging the God of Israel to be the one true God; cf 43, 3.

45, 15: God is hidden: he dwells invisibly in the holy of holies.

45, 18: Waste: an allusion to the beginning of creation, when the earth was waste and void (Gn 1, 2), the same Hebrew word, tohu, being used in both passages. The further reference here is to Palestine, which God wishes again to be inhabited by the returning exiles.

45, 20: Who bear wooden idols: in their religious processions. The gods of the pagans have feet but cannot walk; cf Ps 115, 7; Bar 6, 25.

23* By myself I swear, uttering my just decree
and my unalterable word:
To me every knee shall bend;
by me every tongue shall swear, 24 Saying, "Only in the LORD
are just deeds and power.
Before him in shame shall come all who vent their anger against
him.
25 In the LORD shall be the vindication and the glory
of all the descendants of Israel."

CHAPTER 46

The Gods of Babylon

1† Bel bows down, Nebo stoops, their idols are upon beasts and
cattle;
They must be borne up on shoulders,
carried as burdens by the weary.
2 They stoop and bow down together;
unable to save those who bear
them,
they too go into captivity.

3* Hear me, O house of Jacob, all who remain of the house of Israel,
My burden since your birth,
whom I have carried from your infancy.
4 Even to your old age I am the same,
even when your hair is gray I will bear you;
It is I who have done this, I who will continue,
and I who will carry you to safety.

5 Whom would you compare me with,
as an equal,
or match me against, as though
we were alike?
6 There are those who pour out gold from a purse
and weigh out silver on the scales;
Then they hire a goldsmith to make it into a god
before which they fall down in worship.
7 They lift it to their shoulders to carry;
when they set it in place again, it stays,
and does not move from the spot.
Although they cry out to it, it cannot answer;
it delivers no one from distress.

8 Remember this and be firm,
bear it well in mind, you rebels;
remember the former things,
those long ago:
9 I am God, there is no other;
I am God, there is none like me.
10 At the beginning I foretell the outcome;
in advance, things not yet done.
I say that my plan shall stand,
I accomplish my every purpose.

11† I call from the east a bird of prey,
from a distant land, one to carry out my plan.
Yes, I have spoken, I will accomplish
it;
I have planned it, and I will do it.
12 Listen to me, you fainthearted, you who seem far from the victory
of justice:
13 I am bringing on my justice, it is not far off,
my salvation shall not tarry;
I will put salvation within Zion,
and give to Israel my glory.

CHAPTER 47

The Fall of Babylon

1† Come down, sit in the dust,
O virgin daughter Babylon;
Sit on the ground, dethroned,
O daughter of the Chaldeans.
No longer shall you be called dainty and delicate.
2 Take the millstone and grind flour,
remove your veil;
Strip off your train, bare your legs,
pass through the streams.
3 Your nakedness shall be uncovered
and your shame be seen;
I will take vengeance,
I will yield to no entreaty,
says our redeemer,
4 Whose name is the LORD of hosts,
the Holy One of Israel.

5 Go into darkness and sit in silence,
O daughter of the Chaldeans,
No longer shall you be called sovereign mistress of kingdoms.
6 Angry at my people,
I profaned my inheritance,
And I gave them into your hand;
but you showed them no mercy,
And upon old men
you laid a very heavy yoke.
7* You said, "I shall remain always,
a sovereign mistress forever!"
But you did not lay these things to
heart,
you disregarded their outcome.

8* Now hear this, voluptuous one,
enthroned securely,

23: Rom 14, 11; Phil 2, 10.
46, 3: 44, 2.
47, 7: 14, 13f.
8: Zep 2, 15; Rv 18, 7.

† 46, 1: Bel. . . . Nebo: gods of Babylon; their complete helplessness is here contrasted with God's omnipotence.
46, 11: From the east a bird of prey: Cyrus; cf 41, 2-4.
47, 1-15: A taunt-song, mocking Babylon, once queen of the nations, now made a slave girl.

Saying to yourself,
"I, and no one else!
I shall never be a widow,
or suffer the loss of my children"— 9† Both these things shall come to you suddenly, in a single day:
Complete bereavement and widowhood shall come upon you For your many sorceries
and the great number of your spells;
10 Because you felt secure in your wickedness,
and said, "No one sees me."
Your wisdom and your knowledge
led you astray,
And you said to yourself,
"I, and no one else!"
11 But upon you shall come evil
you will not know how to predict; Disaster shall befall you
which you cannot allay.
Suddenly there shall come upon you ruin which you will not expect.
12 Keep up, now, your spells and your many sorceries.
Perhaps you can make them avail,
perhaps you can strike terror!

13 You wearied yourself with many consultations,
at which you toiled from your youth;
Let the astrologers stand forth to save you,
the stargazers who forecast at each new moon
what would happen to you.
14 Lo, they are like stubble,
fire consumes them;
They cannot save themselves
from the spreading flames.
This is no warming ember,
no fire to sit before.
15 Thus do your wizards serve you with whom you have toiled from your youth;
Each wanders his own way,
with none to save you.

CHAPTER 48

Exhortations to the Exiles

1 Hear this, O house of Jacob called by the name Israel,
sprung from the stock of Judah,
You who swear by the name of the LORD and invoke the God of Israel
without sincerity or justice, 2 Though you are named after the holy city
and rely on the God of Israel,
whose name is the LORD of hosts.
3 Things of the past I foretold long ago,
they went forth from my mouth,
I let you hear of them;
then suddenly I took action and they came to be.
4 Because I know that you are stubborn and that your neck is an iron sinew
and your forehead bronze, 5 I foretold them to you of old;
before they took place I let you hear of them,
That you might not say, "My idol did them,
my statue, my molten image commanded them."
6* Now that you have heard, look at all this;
must you not admit it?

From now on I announce new things to you,
hidden events of which you knew not.
7 Now, not long ago, they are brought into being,
and beforetime you did not hear of them,
so that you cannot claim to have known them;
8* You neither heard nor knew,
they did not reach your ears beforehand.
Yes, I know you are utterly treacherous,
a rebel you were called from birth.
9 For the sake of my name I restrain my anger,
for the sake of my renown I hold it back from you,
lest I should destroy you.
10* See, I have refined you like silver, tested you in the furnace of affliction.
11 For my sake, for my own sake, I do this;
why should I suffer profanation?
My glory I will not give to another.

12* Listen to me, Jacob,
Israel, whom I named!
I, it is I who am the first,
and also the last am I.
13* Yes, my hand laid the foundations of the earth;
my right hand spread out the heavens.

12: 41, 4; 44, 6; 48, 12; Rv 1, 8.17
13: 40, 22.26; 45 12.18.

† 47, 9-13.15: Babylon was known for its sorcery and astrology.

When I call them,
they stand forth at once.

14† All of you assemble and listen:
Who among you foretold these things?
The LORD's friend shall do his will against Babylon and the progeny of Chaldea.
15 I myself have spoken, I have called him,
I have brought him, and his way succeeds!
16† Come near to me and hear this!
Not from the beginning did I speak it in secret;
At the time it comes to pass, I am present:
"Now the Lord GOD has sent me, and his spirit."
17 Thus says the LORD, your redeemer,
the Holy One of Israel:
I, the LORD, your God,
teach you what is for your good,
and lead you on the way you should go.
18 If you would hearken to my commandments,
your prosperity would be like a river,
and your vindication like the waves of the sea;
19 Your descendants would be like the sand,
and those born of your stock like its grains,
Their name never cut off
or blotted out from my presence.

20 Go forth from Babylon, flee from Chaldea!
With shouts of joy proclaim this, make it known;
Publish it to the ends of the earth, and say,
"The LORD has redeemed his servant Jacob.
21* They did not thirst
when he led them through dry lands;
Water from the rock he set flowing for them;
he cleft the rock, and waters welled forth."
22 [There is no peace for the wicked, says the LORD.]

II: EXPIATION OF SIN, SPIRITUAL LIBERATION OF ISRAEL

CHAPTER 49

The Servant of the Lord

1*† Hear me, O coastlands, listen, O distant peoples.
The LORD called me from birth,
from my mother's womb he gave me my name.
2† He made of me a sharp-edged sword and concealed me in the shadow of his arm.
He made me a polished arrow,
in his quiver he hid me.
3† You are my servant, he said to me,
Israel, through whom I show my glory.

4* Though I thought I had toiled in vain,
and for nothing, uselessly, spent my strength,
Yet my reward is with the LORD,
my recompense is with my God.
5 For now the LORD has spoken
who formed me as his servant from the womb, That Jacob may be brought back to him
and Israel gathered to him;
And I am made glorious in the sight of the LORD,
and my God is now my strength!
6*† It is too little, he says, for you to be my servant,
to raise up the tribes of Jacob,
and restore the survivors of Israel;
I will make you a light to the nations,
that my salvation may reach to the ends of the earth.
7* Thus says the LORD,
the redeemer and the Holy One of Israel,
To the one despised, whom the nations abhor,
the slave of rulers:
When kings see you, they shall stand up,
and princes shall prostrate themselves
Because of the LORD who is faithful,

21: Ex 17, 6; Nm 20, 11.

7: 49, 23; 55, 5.

48, 14: The LORD's friend: Cyrus, who carries out God's plans.
48, 16: "Now the Lord . . . spirit": said by Cyrus; cf v 14.
49: 1-7: The second of the four "Servant-of-the-Lord" oracles.
49, 1: Gave me my name: designated me for a special office (cf Jer 1, 5), or perhaps, made me renowned (cf Ps 45, 18).
49, 2: The Servant was made ready and fit for the preaching of God's word.
49, 3: Israel: the Servant is identified with the people of Israel as their ideal representative; however, since vv 5f seem to distinguish the Servant from Israel, some regard the word Israel here as a gloss.
49, 6: The Servant's vocation will be not only the restoration of Israel but the conversion of the world; cf Lk 2, 32.

the Holy One of Israel who has chosen you.

The Liberation and Restoration of Zion

8* Thus says the LORD:
In a time of favor I answer you,
on the day of salvation I help
you,
To restore the land
and allot the desolate heritages, 9* Saying to the prisoners: Come out!
To those in darkness: Show yourselves!
Along the ways they shall find pasture,
on every bare height shall their pastures be.
10* They shall not hunger or thirst, nor shall the scorching wind or the sun strike them;
For he who pities them leads them and guides them beside springs of
water.
11* I will cut a road through all my mountains,
and make my highways level.
12† See, some shall come from afar, others from the north and the west,
and some from the land of Syene.

13 Sing out, O heavens, and rejoice, O
earth,
break forth into song, you mountains.
For the LORD comforts his people
and shows mercy to his afflicted.

14* But Zion said, "The LORD has forsaken me;
my Lord has forgotten me."
15* Can a mother forget her infant, be without tenderness for the child
of her womb?
Even should she forget,
I will never forget you.
16† See, upon the palms of my hands I have written your name;
your walls are ever before me.
17 Your rebuilders make haste,
as those who tore you down and laid you waste
go forth from you;
18 Look about and see,
they are all gathering and coming
to you.
As I live, says the LORD,
you shall be arrayed with them all
as with adornments,
like a bride you shall fasten them
on you.

19 Though you were waste and deso-
late,
a land of ruins,
Now you shall be too small for your
inhabitants,
while those who swallowed you up
will be far away.
20 The children whom you had lost shall yet say to you,
"This place is too small for me,
make room for me to live in."
21* You shall ask yourself:
"Who has borne me these?
I was bereft and barren [exiled and repudiated];
who has reared them?
I was left all alone;
where then do these come from?"

22* Thus says the Lord GOD:
See, I will lift up my hand to the nations,
and raise my signal to the peoples;
They shall bring your sons in their
arms,
and your daughters shall be carried on their shoulders.
23 Kings shall be your foster fathers,
their princesses your nurses;
Bowing to the ground, they shall worship you
and lick the dust at your feet.
Then you shall know that I am the
LORD,
and those who hope in me shall never be disappointed.

24 Thus says the LORD:
Can booty be taken from a warrior?
or captives be rescued from a tyrant?
25 Yes, captives can be taken from a warrior,
and booty be rescued from a ty-
rant;
Those who oppose you I will oppose
and your sons I will save.
26* I will make your oppressors eat their own flesh,
and they shall be drunk with their own blood
as with the juice of the grape.
All mankind shall know that I, the LORD, am your savior,
your redeemer, the Mighty One of
Jacob.

49, 16: Upon the palms . . . name: for continual remembrance; cf Ex 13, 9.16; Dt 6, 6-9.

CHAPTER 50

Salvation Only through the Lord's Servant

1*† Thus says the LORD:
Where is the bill of divorce
with which I dismissed your mother?
Or to which of my creditors
have I sold you?
It was for your sins that you were sold,
for your crimes that your mother was dismissed.

2*† Why was no one there when I came?
Why did no one answer when I called?
Is my hand too short to ransom?
Have I not the strength to deliver?
Lo, with my rebuke I dry up the sea,
I turn rivers into a desert;
Their fish rot for lack of water,
and die of thirst.
3 I clothe the heavens in mourning,
and make sackcloth their vesture.

4† The Lord GOD has given me
a well-trained tongue,
That I might know how to speak to the weary
a word that will rouse them.
Morning after morning
he opens my ear that I may hear;
5† And I have not rebelled,
have not turned back.
6*† I gave my back to those who beat me,
my cheeks to those who plucked my beard;
My face I did not shield
from buffets and spitting.

7* The Lord GOD is my help,
therefore I am not disgraced;
I have set my face like flint,
knowing that I shall not be put to shame.
8 He is near who upholds my right;
if anyone wishes to oppose me,
let us appear together.
Who disputes my right?
Let him confront me.
9* See, the Lord GOD is my help;
who will prove me wrong?
Lo, they will all wear out like cloth,
the moth will eat them up.
10*† Who among you fears the LORD,
heeds his servant's voice,
And walks in darkness
without any light,
Trusting in the name of the LORD
and relying on his God?
11 All of you kindle flames
and carry about you fiery darts;
Walk by the light of your own fire
and by the flares you have burnt!
This is your fate from my hand:
you shall lie down in a place of pain.

CHAPTER 51

Exhortation To Trust in the Lord

1*† Listen to me, you who pursue justice,
who seek the LORD;
Look to the rock from which you were hewn,
to the pit from which you were quarried;
2* Look to Abraham, your father,
and to Sarah, who gave you birth;
When he was but one I called him,
I blessed him and made him many.
3 Yes, the LORD shall comfort Zion
and have pity on all her ruins;
Her deserts he shall make like Eden,
her wasteland like the garden of the LORD;
Joy and gladness shall be found in her,
thanksgiving and the sound of song.

4*† Be attentive to me, my people;
my folk, give ear to me.
For law shall go forth from my presence,
and my judgment, as the light of the peoples.
5 I will make my justice come speedily;
my salvation shall go forth
[and my arm shall judge the nations];
In me shall the coastlands hope,
and my arm they shall await.

50, 1: Dt 24, 1-4; Mt 19, 3; Mk 10, 2ff; Is 54, 6ff.
2: Ex 7, 18; Ps 105, 29.
6: 2 Sm 10, 4ff; Mt 26, 67; 27, 30.
7: Ez 3, 9.
9: 51, 6-8; Ps 102, 27.
10: 43, 1f; 44, 1f.
51, 1: Rom 9, 30f.
2: Ez 33, 24; Gn 12, 2ff; 22, 17.
4: 2, 3.

50, 1: Responding to the people's complaint of utter abandonment by God, the prophet shows that their sins were responsible for their banishment. Since there was no bill of divorce, the bond between the Lord and his people still exists and he will ultimately save them.

50, 2: Israel's faith in God is weak; she does not answer his call, nor believe in his promises of deliverance.

50, 4-11: The third of the four "Servant-of-the-Lord" oracles; in vv 4-9 the Servant speaks; in vv 10f God reproves the people for not following the Servant.

50, 5: The Servant does not refuse the divine vocation.

50, 6: He willingly submits to insults and beatings. Plucked my beard: a grave insult.

50, 10f: Instead of trusting in the Lord and his Servant, the people rely on their own devices, to their own destruction.

51, 1: Rock . . . pit: your glorious ancestry.

51, 4f: The conversion of the Gentiles.

6† Raise your eyes to the heavens,
and look at the earth below;
Though the heavens grow thin like smoke,
the earth wears out like a garment
and its inhabitants die like flies,
My salvation shall remain forever
and my justice shall never be dismayed.
7 Hear me, you who know justice,
you people who have my teaching at heart:
Fear not the reproach of men,
be not dismayed at their revilings.
8* They shall be like a garment eaten by moths,
like wool consumed by grubs;
But my justice shall remain forever
and my salvation, for all generations.

9*† Awake, awake, put on strength,
O arm of the LORD!
Awake as in the days of old,
in ages long ago!
Was it not you who crushed Rahab,
you who pierced the dragon?
10† Was it not you who dried up the sea,
the waters of the great deep,
Who made the depths of the sea into a way
for the redeemed to pass over?
11 Those whom the LORD has ransomed will return
and enter Zion singing,
crowned with everlasting joy;
They will meet with joy and gladness,
sorrow and mourning will flee.

12 I, it is I who comfort you.
Can you then fear mortal man,
who is human only, to be looked upon as grass, 13 And forget the LORD, your maker,
who stretched out the heavens
and laid the foundations of the earth?
All the day you are in constant dread
of the fury of the oppressor;
But when he sets himself to destroy,
what is there of the oppressor's fury?

14 The oppressed shall soon be released;
they shall not die and go down into the pit,
nor shall they want for bread.
15* For I am the LORD, your God,
who stirs up the sea so that its waves roar;
the LORD of hosts by name.
16 I have put my words into your mouth
and shielded you in the shadow of my hand,
I, who stretched out the heavens,
who laid the foundations of the earth,
who say to Zion: You are my people.

The Cup of the Lord

17* Awake, awake!
Arise, O Jerusalem,
You who drank at the LORD's hand
the cup of his wrath;
Who drained to the dregs
the bowl of staggering!
18 She has no one to guide her
of all the sons she bore;
She has no one to grasp her by the hand,
of all the sons she reared!— 19 Your misfortunes are double;
who is there to condole with you?
Desolation and destruction, famine and sword!
Who is there to comfort you?
20 Your sons lie helpless
at every street corner
like antelopes in a net.
They are filled with the wrath of the LORD,
the rebuke of your God.

21* But now, hear this, O afflicted one,
drunk, but not with wine,
22 Thus says the LORD, your Master,
your God, who defends his people:
See, I am taking from your hand
the cup of staggering;
The bowl of my wrath
you shall no longer drink.
23 I will put it into the hands of your tormentors,
those who ordered you
to bow down, that they might walk over you,
While you offered your back like the ground,
like the street for them to walk on.

CHAPTER 52

Let Zion Rejoice

1 Awake, awake!
Put on your strength, O Zion;
Put on your glorious garments,
O Jerusalem, holy city.
No longer shall the uncircumcised or the unclean enter you.

51, 10: Great deep: another reference to the primeval chaos of Gn 1, 2.

2 Shake off the dust, ascend to the throne, Jerusalem;
Loose the bonds from your neck,
O captive daughter Zion!
3 For thus says the LORD:
You were sold for nothing,
and without money you shall be redeemed.

4 Thus says the Lord GOD:
To Egypt in the beginning my people went down,
to sojourn there;
Assyria, too, oppressed them for nought.
5 But now, what am I to do here? says the LORD.
My people have been taken away without redress;
their rulers make a boast of it, says the LORD;
all the day my name is constantly reviled.
6 Therefore on that day my people shall know my renown, that it is I who have foretold it. Here I am!
7*† How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him who brings glad tidings, Announcing peace, bearing good news,
announcing salvation, and saying to Zion,
"Your God is King!"

8* Hark! Your watchmen raise a cry, together they shout for joy,
For they see directly, before their eyes,
the LORD restoring Zion.
9 Break out together in song, O ruins of Jerusalem!
For the LORD comforts his people, he redeems Jerusalem.
10 The LORD has bared his holy arm in the sight of all the nations;
All the ends of the earth will behold the salvation of our God.

11† Depart, depart, come forth from there,
touch nothing unclean!
Out from there! Purify yourselves, you who carry the vessels of the LORD.
12* Yet not in fearful haste will you come out,
nor leave in headlong flight,
For the LORD comes before you, and your rear guard is the God of Israel.

Suffering and Triumph of the Servant of the Lord

13† See, my servant shall prosper, he shall be raised high and greatly exalted.
14* Even as many were amazed at him—
so marred was his look beyond that of man, and his appearance beyond that of mortals—
15* So shall he startle many nations, because of him kings shall stand speechless;
For those who have not been told shall see,
those who have not heard shall ponder it.

CHAPTER 53

1* Who would believe what we have heard?
To whom has the arm of the LORD been revealed?
2*† He grew up like a sapling before him,
like a shoot from the parched earth;
There was in him no stately bearing to make us look at him,
nor appearance that would attract us to him.
3*† He was spurned and avoided by men,
a man of suffering, accustomed to infirmity,
One of those from whom men hide their faces,
spurned, and we held him in no esteem.

4*† Yet it was our infirmities that he bore,
our sufferings that he endured,
While we thought of him as stricken, as one smitten by God and afflicted.
5* But he was pierced for our offenses, crushed for our sins,

52, 7-10: God leads his people back from Babylon to Zion, from whose ruined walls watchmen . . . shout for joy; cf Rom 10, 15.

52, 11: From there: from Babylon. Vessels of the LORD: taken to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, now carried back by the exiled priests returning in procession to Zion; cf Ezr 1, 7.

52, 13—53, 12: The last of the four "Servant-of-the-Lord" oracles. An extraordinary description of the sinless Servant, who by his voluntary suffering atones for the sins of his people, and saves them from just punishment at the hands of God. Only in Jesus Christ is the prophecy perfectly fulfilled.

53, 2: Only God appreciated his Servant's true greatness.

53, 3: Because he suffered, he was regarded as a sinner and therefore as one to be spurned.

53, 4ff: He did indeed suffer but it was for the sins of mankind, and through his sufferings men are healed.

Upon him was the chastisement that makes us whole,
by his stripes we were healed.
6* We had all gone astray like sheep,
each following his own way;
But the LORD laid upon him
the guilt of us all.

7* Though he was harshly treated, he submitted
and opened not his mouth;
Like a lamb led to the slaughter
or a sheep before the shearers, he was silent and opened not his
mouth.
8 Oppressed and condemned, he was taken away,
and who would have thought any more of his destiny?
When he was cut off from the land
of the living,
and smitten for the sin of his people, 9* A grave was assigned him among
the wicked
and a burial place with evildoers, Though he had done no wrong
nor spoken any falsehood.
10† [But the LORD was pleased to crush him in infirmity.]

If he gives his life as an offering for sin,
he shall see his descendants in a long life,
and the will of the LORD shall be accomplished through him.
11 Because of his affliction
he shall see the light in fullness
of days;
Through his suffering, my servant
shall justify many,
and their guilt he shall bear.
12* Therefore I will give him his portion among the great,
and he shall divide the spoils with
the mighty,
Because he surrendered himself to death
and was counted among the wicked;
And he shall take away the sins of
many,
and win pardon for their offenses.

CHAPTER 54

The New Zion

1*† Raise a glad cry, you barren one who did not bear,
break forth in jubilant song, you
who were not in labor,
For more numerous are the children of the deserted wife
than the children of her who has a husband,
says the LORD.

2* Enlarge the space for your tent, spread out your tent cloths unsparingly;
lengthen your ropes and make firm your stakes.
3 For you shall spread abroad to the right and to the left;
Your descendants shall dispossess
the nations
and shall people the desolate cities.

4 Fear not, you shall not be put to
shame;
you need not blush, for you shall not be disgraced.
The shame of your youth you shall forget,
the reproach of your widowhood
no longer remember.
5† For he who has become your husband is your Maker;
his name is the LORD of hosts;
Your redeemer is the Holy One of Israel,
called God of all the earth.

6* The LORD calls you back, like a wife forsaken and grieved
in spirit,
A wife married in youth and then cast off,
says your God.
7 For a brief moment I abandoned
you,
but with great tenderness I will take you back.
8 In an outburst of wrath, for a moment
I hid my face from you;
But with enduring love I take pity
on you,
says the LORD, your redeemer.

9* This is for me like the days of Noah,
when I swore that the waters of Noah
should never again deluge the
earth;
So I have sworn not to be angry with
you,
or to rebuke you.

53, 10ff: Because he fulfilled the divine will by suffering for the sins of others, the Servant will be rewarded by the Lord. See the light: enjoy happiness. This line may originally have read, "he shall drink and eat to the full"—at the thanksgiving sacrifice at which he shall divide the spoils (v 12).

54, 1: Jerusalem, pictured as a wife who had been barren and deserted, now suddenly finds herself with innumerable children (the returning exiles); cf Gal 4, 27 for the application of this text to the Church, the New Zion.

54, 5: Redeemer: cf note on 41, 14.

10* Though the mountains leave their place
and the hills be shaken,
My love shall never leave you
nor my covenant of peace be shaken, says the LORD, who has mercy on you.

11*† O afflicted one, storm-battered and unconsoled,
I lay your pavements in carnelians,
and your foundations in sapphires;
12 I will make your battlements of rubies,
your gates of carbuncles,
and all your walls of precious stones.
13 All your sons shall be taught by the LORD,
and great shall be the peace of your children.
14 In justice shall you be established,
far from the fear of oppression,
where destruction cannot come near you.
15 Should there be any attack, it shall not be of my making;
whoever attacks you shall fall before you.

16 Lo, I have created the craftsman who blows on the burning coals
and forges weapons as his work;
It is I also who have created the destroyer to work havoc.
17 No weapon fashioned against you shall prevail;
every tongue you shall prove false
that launches an accusation against you.
This is the lot of the servants of the LORD,
their vindication from me, says the LORD.

CHAPTER 55

An Invitation to Grace

1*† All you who are thirsty,
come to the water!
You who have no money,
come, receive grain and eat;
Come, without paying and without cost,
drink wine and milk!
2 Why spend your money for what is not bread;
your wages for what fails to satisfy?
Heed me, and you shall eat well,
you shall delight in rich fare.
3* Come to me heedfully,
listen, that you may have life.
I will renew with you the everlasting covenant,
the benefits assured to David.
4 As I made him a witness to the peoples,
a leader and commander of nations,
5* So shall you summon a nation you knew not,
and nations that knew you not shall run to you,
Because of the LORD, your God,
the Holy One of Israel, who has glorified you.

6 Seek the LORD while he may be found,
call him while he is near.
7 Let the scoundrel forsake his way,
and the wicked man his thoughts;
Let him turn to the LORD for mercy;
to our God, who is generous in forgiving.
8 For my thoughts are not your thoughts,
nor are your ways my ways, says the LORD.
9 As high as the heavens are above the earth,
so high are my ways above your ways
and my thoughts above your thoughts.

10 For just as from the heavens
the rain and snow come down
And do not return there till they have watered the earth, making it fertile and fruitful, Giving seed to him who sows
and bread to him who eats, 11 So shall my word be
that goes forth from my mouth;
It shall not return to me void,
but shall do my will,
achieving the end for which I sent it.

12 Yes, in joy you shall depart,
in peace you shall be brought back;
Mountains and hills shall break out in song before you,
and all the trees of the countryside shall clap their hands.

† 54, 11f: Cf Rv 21. Afflicted one: Jerusalem; carnelians: reddish quartz, hard and durable, carbuncles: another precious stone of red color.

55, 1ff: God's salvation is freely extended to his people and to all nations; through him will the benefits assured to David be renewed; cf 12, 3; Jn 7, 37.

13† In place of the thornbush, the cypress shall grow, instead of nettles, the myrtle.
This shall be to the LORD's renown,
an everlasting imperishable sign.

III: RETURN OF THE FIRST CAPTIVES

CHAPTER 56

The Lord's House Open to All

1† Thus says the LORD:
Observe what is right, do what is just;
for my salvation is about to come,
my justice, about to be revealed.
2 Happy is the man who does this,
the son of man who holds to it;
Who keeps the sabbath free from profanation,
and his hand from any evildoing.
3† Let not the foreigner say,
when he would join himself to the LORD,
"The LORD will surely exclude me from his people";
Nor let the eunuch say,
"See, I am a dry tree."
4* For thus says the LORD:
To the eunuchs who observe my sabbaths
and choose what pleases me
and hold fast to my covenant, 5† I will give, in my house and within my walls, a monument and a name Better than sons and daughters;
an eternal, imperishable name will I give them.

6 And the foreigners who join themselves to the LORD,
ministering to him,
Loving the name of the LORD,
and becoming his servants—
All who keep the sabbath free from profanation
and hold to my covenant,
7* Them I will bring to my holy mountain and make joyful in my house of prayer;
Their holocausts and sacrifices
will be acceptable on my altar,
For my house shall be called a house of prayer for all peoples.
8 Thus says the Lord GOD,
who gathers the dispersed of Israel:
Others will I gather to him
besides those already gathered.

Blind Leaders

9*† All you wild beasts of the field,
come and eat,
all you beasts in the forest!
10 My watchmen are blind,
all of them unaware;
They are all dumb dogs,
they cannot bark;
Dreaming as they lie there,
loving their sleep.
11 They are relentless dogs,
they know not when they have enough.
These are the shepherds
who know no discretion;
Each of them goes his own way,
every one of them to his own gain:
12* "Come, I will fetch some wine;
let us carouse with strong drink,
And tomorrow will be like today,
or even greater."

CHAPTER 57

1 The just man perishes,
but no one takes it to heart;
Devout men are swept away,
with no one giving it a thought.
Though he is taken away from the presence of evil,
the just man 2 enters into peace;
There is rest on his couch
for the sincere, straightforward man.

Faithless People

3 But you, draw near,
you sons of a sorceress,
adulterous, wanton race!
4 Of whom do you make sport,
at whom do you open wide your mouth,
and put out your tongue?
Are you not rebellious children,
a worthless race;
5* You who are in heat among the terebinths,
under every green tree;
You who immolate children in the wadies,
behind the crevices in the cliffs?

56, 4: Wis 3, 14f.
7: 1 Kgs 8, 29f; Mt 21, 13.
9: Ez 34, 5.
12: 28, 7ff; Wis 2, 7.
57, 5: Jer 7, 31; 19, 5; Ez 20, 28.31.

55, 13: Thornbush . . . nettles: suggestive of the desert and therefore symbolic of suffering and hardship; cypress, myrtle: suggestive of fertile land and therefore symbolic of joy and strength.

56, 1-8: Participation in the future messianic salvation is offered to all who believe in the Lord and keep his commandments, regardless of origin or social condition.

56, 3: Eunuchs had originally been excluded from the community of the Lord; cf Dt 23, 2; Wis 3, 14. Dry tree: unable to produce the fruit of offspring.

56, 5: A monument and a name: a memorial inscription to prevent oblivion for one who had no children; cf 2 Sm 18, 18; Neh 7, 15; 13, 14.

56, 9—57, 13: This section is apparently preexilic, written in the manner of the older prophets who condemned the pagan rites of Baal worship.

56, 9: Wild beasts: foreign nations, which are invited to come and ravage Israel.

6† Among the smooth stones of the wadi is your portion,
these are your lot;
To these you poured out libations,
and brought offerings.
Should I decide not to punish these things?
7* Upon a high and lofty mountain
you made your bed,
and there you went up to offer sacrifice.
8 Behind the door and the doorpost
you placed your indecent symbol.
Deserting me, you spread out your high, wide bed;
And of those whose embraces you love
you carved the symbol and gazed upon it 9† While you approached the king with scented oil,
and multiplied your perfumes;
While you sent your ambassadors far away,
down even to the nether world.
10 Though worn out by your many misdeeds,
you never said, "It is hopeless";
New strength you found,
and so you did not weaken.
11 Of whom were you afraid? Whom did you fear, that you became false
And did not remember me
or give me any thought?
Was I to remain silent and unseeing,
so that you would not have me to fear?
12† I will expose your justice
and your works;
13† They shall not help you when you cry out,
nor save you in your distress.

All these the wind shall carry off,
the breeze shall bear away;
But he who takes refuge in me shall inherit the land,
and possess my holy mountain.

Comfort for the Afflicted

14* Build up, build up, prepare the way,
remove the stumbling blocks from my people's path.
15* For thus says he who is high and exalted,
living eternally, whose name is the Holy One:
On high I dwell, and in holiness,
and with the crushed and dejected in spirit,
To revive the spirits of the dejected,
to revive the hearts of the crushed.
16 I will not accuse forever,
nor always be angry;
For their spirits would faint before me,
the souls that I have made.
17* Because of their wicked avarice I was angry,
and struck them, hiding myself in wrath,
as they went their own rebellious way.
18 I saw their ways,
but I will heal them and lead them;
I will give full comfort
to them and to those who mourn for them, 19 I, the Creator, who gave them life.

Peace, peace to the far and the near,
says the LORD; and I will heal them.
20 But the wicked are like the tossing sea
which cannot be calmed,
And its waters cast up mud and filth.
21* No peace for the wicked! says my God.

CHAPTER 58

True Fasting

1† Cry out full-throated and unsparingly,
lift up your voice like a trumpet blast;
Tell my people their wickedness,
and the house of Jacob their sins.
2† They seek me day after day,
and desire to know my ways,
Like a nation that has done what is just
and not abandoned the law of their God;
They ask me to declare what is due them,
pleased to gain access to God.
3 "Why do we fast, and you do not see it?
afflict ourselves, and you take no note of it?"

Lo, on your fast day you carry out your own pursuits,
and drive all your laborers.

7: Hos 4, 13; Jer 2, 20; Ez 6, 13. 14: 40, 3f. 15: 61, 2f. 17: 56, 11. 21: 48, 21.

57, 6: Smooth stones: the Hebrew word for this expression has the same consonants as the word for "portion"; instead of making the Lord their portion (cf Ps 16, 5), the people adored slabs of stone which they took from the streambeds in valleys and set up as idols; cf Jer 3, 9. Therefore, it is implied, they will be swept away as by a sudden torrent of waters carrying them down the rocky-bottomed gorge to destruction and death without burial.

57, 9: The king: the pagan god Moloch. Ambassadors: children sent to him through a sacrificial death.

57, 12: Justice: here used ironically.

57, 13: All these: the wicked mentioned in 57, 3-10.

58, 1: This command is directed to the prophet.

58, 2-14: Merely external worship does not avail with God; it must be joined to internal sincerity.

4 Yes, your fast ends in quarreling and fighting, striking with wicked claw.
Would that today you might fast
so as to make your voice heard on high!
5* Is this the manner of fasting I wish,
of keeping a day of penance:
That a man bow his head like a reed,
and lie in sackcloth and ashes?
Do you call this a fast,
a day acceptable to the LORD?
6 This, rather, is the fasting that I wish:
releasing those bound unjustly,
untying the thongs of the yoke;
Setting free the oppressed,
breaking every yoke;
7* Sharing your bread with the hungry,
sheltering the oppressed and the homeless;
Clothing the naked when you see them,
and not turning your back on your own.

8 Then your light shall break forth like the dawn,
and your wound shall quickly be healed;
Your vindication shall go before you,
and the glory of the LORD shall be your rear guard.
9 Then you shall call, and the LORD will answer,
you shall cry for help, and he will say: Here I am!
If you remove from your midst oppression,
false accusation and malicious speech;
10 If you bestow your bread on the hungry
and satisfy the afflicted;
Then light shall rise for you in the darkness,
and the gloom shall become for you like midday;
11* Then the LORD will guide you always and give you plenty even on the parched land.
He will renew your strength,
and you shall be like a watered garden,
like a spring whose water never fails.
12* The ancient ruins shall be rebuilt for your sake,
and the foundations from ages past you shall raise up;
"Repairer of the breach," they shall call you,
"Restorer of ruined homesteads."

13 If you hold back your foot on the sabbath
from following your own pursuits on my holy day;
If you call the sabbath a delight,
and the LORD's holy day honorable;
If you honor it by not following your ways,
seeking your own interests, or speaking with malice—14 Then you shall delight in the LORD, and I will make you ride on the heights of the earth;
I will nourish you with the heritage of Jacob, your father,
for the mouth of the LORD has spoken.

CHAPTER 59

Sin and Confession

1* Lo, the hand of the LORD is not too short to save,
nor his ear too dull to hear.
2 Rather, it is your crimes
that separate you from your God,
It is your sins that make him hide his face
so that he will not hear you.
3* For your hands are stained with blood,
your fingers with guilt;
Your lips speak falsehood,
and your tongue utters deceit.
4† No one brings suit justly,
no one pleads truthfully;
They trust in emptiness and tell lies;
they conceive mischief and bring forth malice.
5*† They hatch adders' eggs,
and weave spiders' webs:
Whoever eats their eggs will die,
if one of them is pressed, it will hatch as a viper;
6 Their webs cannot serve as clothing,
nor can they cover themselves with their works.
Their works are evil works,
and deeds of violence come from their hands.
7* Their feet run to evil,
and they are quick to shed innocent blood;
Their thoughts are destructive thoughts,
plunder and ruin are on their highways.
8 The way of peace they know not,
and there is nothing that is right in their paths;

58, 5: Zec 7, 5.
7: Ez 18, 7. 16; Mt 25, 35.
11: 51, 3; Ps 24.
12: 61, 4.
59, 1: 50, 2; Nm 11, 23.
3: 1, 15.
5: Jb 20, 12-16.
7: Rom 3, 15.

59, 4: Emptiness: things having no value.
59, 5f: A proverb signifying evil works—adders' eggs—and useless devices—spiders' webs; the former do positive harm to oneself and others, the latter serve no useful purpose.

Their ways they have made crooked,
whoever treads them knows no peace.

9† That is why right is far from us
and justice does not reach us.
We look for light, and lo, darkness;
for brightness, but we walk in gloom!
10 Like blind men we grope along the wall,
like people without eyes we feel our way.
We stumble at midday as at dusk,
in Stygian darkness, like the dead.
11* We all growl like bears,
like doves we moan without ceasing.
We look for right, but it is not there;
for salvation, and it is far from us.
12 For our offenses before you are many,
our sins bear witness against us.
Yes, our offenses are present to us,
and our crimes we know:
13 Transgressing, and denying the LORD,
turning back from following our God, Threatening outrage, and apostasy,
uttering words of falsehood the heart has conceived.
14 Right is repelled,
and justice stands far off;
For truth stumbles in the public square,
uprightness cannot enter.
15 Honesty is lacking,
and the man who turns from evil is despoiled.

The Redeemer in Zion

The LORD saw this, and was aggrieved that right did not exist.
16 He saw that there was no one,
and was appalled that there was none to intervene;
So his own arm brought about the victory,
and his justice lent him its support.
17* He put on justice as his breastplate,
salvation, as the helmet on his head;
He clothed himself with garments of vengeance,
wrapped himself in a mantle of zeal.
18 He repays his enemies their deserts,
and requites his foes with wrath.

19 Those in the west shall fear the name of the LORD,
and those in the east, his glory;
For it shall come like a pent-up river which the breath of the LORD drives on.
20* He shall come to Zion a redeemer to those of Jacob who turn from sin, says the LORD.
21 This is the covenant with them
which I myself have made, says the LORD:
My spirit which is upon you and my words that I have put into your mouth Shall never leave your mouth,
nor the mouths of your children
Nor the mouths of your children's children from now on and forever, says the LORD.

CHAPTER 60

Glory of the New Zion

1† Rise up in splendor! Your light has come,
the glory of the Lord shines upon you.
2 See, darkness covers the earth,
and thick clouds cover the peoples;
But upon you the LORD shines,
and over you appears his glory.
3* Nations shall walk by your light,
and kings by your shining radiance.
4* Raise your eyes and look about;
they all gather and come to you:
Your sons come from afar,
and your daughters in the arms of their nurses.

5 Then you shall be radiant at what you see,
your heart shall throb and overflow,
For the riches of the sea shall be emptied out before you,
the wealth of nations shall be brought to you.
6 Caravans of camels shall fill you,
dromedaries from Midian and Ephah;
All from Sheba shall come bearing gold and frankincense,
and proclaiming the praises of the LORD.
7 All the flocks of Kedar shall be gathered for you,

11: 38, 14.
17: Wis 5, 17ff; Eph 6, 14; 1 Thes 5, 8.
20: Rom 11, 26f.
60, 3: 42, 6; 45, 14; 49, 6.
4: 49, 18.

59, 9-15: Spoken by the people through the mouth of the prophet.
60, 1-6: The Church makes use of these verses for the first reading of the Mass on the feast of Epiphany, for she sees in them symbols of her universality.

the rams of Nebaioth shall be your sacrifices;
They will be acceptable offerings on
my altar,
and I will enhance the splendor of my house.

8† What are these that fly along like clouds,
like doves to their cotes?
9 All the vessels of the sea are assembled,
with the ships of Tarshish in the lead,
To bring your children from afar
with their silver and gold,
In the name of the LORD, your God,
the Holy One of Israel, who has glorified you.

10 Foreigners shall rebuild your walls, and their kings shall be your attendants;
Though I struck you in my wrath,
yet in my good will I have shown
you mercy.
11* Your gates shall stand open constantly;
day and night they shall not be closed
But shall admit to you the wealth of nations,
and their kings, in the vanguard.
12 For the people or kingdom shall perish
that does not serve you;
those nations shall be utterly destroyed.
13*† The glory of Lebanon shall come to
you:
the cypress, the plane and the pine,
To bring beauty to my sanctuary,
and glory to the place where I set
my feet.
14 The children of your oppressors
shall come,
bowing low before you;
All those who despised you shall fall prostrate at your feet.
They shall call you "City of the LORD,"
"Zion of the Holy One of Israel."

15* Once you were forsaken,
hated and unvisited,
Now I will make you the pride of the ages,
a joy to generation after generation.
16 You shall suck the milk of nations,
and be nursed at royal breasts;
You shall know that I, the LORD, am
your savior,
your redeemer, the Mighty One of
Jacob.
17 In place of bronze I will bring gold,
instead of iron, silver;
In place of wood, bronze,
instead of stones, iron;
I will appoint peace your governor,
and justice your ruler.

18 No longer shall violence be heard of
in your land,
or plunder and ruin within your boundaries.
You shall call your walls "Salvation"
and your gates "Praise."
19* No longer shall the sun
be your light by day,
Nor the brightness of the moon shine upon you at night;
The LORD shall be your light forever,
your God shall be your glory.
20 No longer shall your sun go down,
or your moon withdraw,
For the LORD will be your light for-
ever,
and the days of your mourning
shall be at an end.
21 Your people shall all be just,
they shall always possess the
land,
They, the bud of my planting,
my handiwork to show my glory.
22* The smallest shall become a thousand,
the youngest, a mighty nation;
I, the LORD, will swiftly accomplish these things
when their time comes.

CHAPTER 61

The Mission to the Afflicted

1*† The spirit of the Lord GOD is upon
me,
because the LORD has anointed
me;
He has sent me to bring glad tidings
to the lowly,
to heal the brokenhearted,
To proclaim liberty to the captives
and release to the prisoners, 2* To announce a year of favor from
the LORD
and a day of vindication by our God,
to comfort all who mourn;
3 To place on those who mourn in Zion
a diadem instead of ashes,

11: Rv 21, 25.
13: 35, 2.
15: Ez 16.
19: Rv 21, 23; 22, 5.
22: Gn 12, 2; 17, 6.

2: Mt 5, 5.

60, 8f: Like clouds, like doves: the white sails of the ships of Tarshish; cf note on Ps 48, 8.

60, 13: Glory of Lebanon: the cedars, together with the cypress, the plane and the pine, all precious, durable wood.

61, 1f: This was spoken by the prophet in regard to the restoration of Zion, but quoted by Christ as referring to his mission; cf Lk 4, 18f. Year of favor . . . day of vindication: the time of God's salvation.

To give them oil of gladness in place of mourning,
a glorious mantle instead of a listless spirit.
They will be called oaks of justice,
planted by the LORD to show his glory.

The Reward of Israel

4* They shall rebuild the ancient ruins,
the former wastes they shall raise up
And restore the ruined cities,
desolate now for generations.
5 Strangers shall stand ready to pasture your flocks, foreigners shall be your farmers and vinedressers.
6 You yourselves shall be named priests of the LORD, ministers of our God you shall be called.
You shall eat the wealth of the nations
and boast of riches from them.

7* Since their shame was double and disgrace and spittle were their portion,
They shall have a double inheritance in their land,
everlasting joy shall be theirs.
8* For I, the LORD, love what is right,
I hate robbery and injustice;
I will give them their recompense faithfully,
a lasting covenant I will make with them.
9 Their descendants shall be renowned among the nations,
and their offspring among the peoples;
All who see them shall acknowledge them
as a race the LORD has blessed.

10 I rejoice heartily in the LORD,
in my God is the joy of my soul;
For he has clothed me with a robe of salvation,
and wrapped me in a mantle of justice,
Like a bridegroom adorned with a diadem,
like a bride bedecked with her jewels.
11 As the earth brings forth its plants,
and a garden makes its growth spring up,
So will the Lord GOD make justice and praise
spring up before all the nations.

CHAPTER 62

Jerusalem the Lord's Bride

1 For Zion's sake I will not be silent,
for Jerusalem's sake I will not be quiet, Until her vindication shines forth like the dawn
and her victory like a burning torch.

2*† Nations shall behold your vindication,
and all kings your glory;
You shall be called by a new name pronounced by the mouth of the LORD.
3 You shall be a glorious crown in the hand of the LORD,
a royal diadem held by your God.
4* No more shall men call you "Forsaken,"
or your land "Desolate,"
But you shall be called "My Delight,"
and your land "Espoused."
For the LORD delights in you,
and makes your land his spouse.
5 As a young man marries a virgin,
your Builder shall marry you;
And as a bridegroom rejoices in his bride
so shall your God rejoice in you.

Restoration of Zion

6† Upon your walls, O Jerusalem,
I have stationed watchmen;
Never, by day or by night,
shall they be silent.
O you who are to remind the LORD,
take no rest
7 And give no rest to him,
until he re-establishes Jerusalem
And makes of it
the pride of the earth.

8* The LORD has sworn by his right hand
and by his mighty arm:
No more will I give your grain
as food to your enemies;
Nor shall foreigners drink your wine,
for which you toiled.
9* But you who harvest the grain shall eat it,
and you shall praise the LORD;
You who gather the grapes shall drink the wine
in the courts of my sanctuary.

4: 58, 12. 4: 49, 15f; 54, 1ff.
7: 40, 2. 8: 52, 10.
8: 55, 3; 59, 21. 9: Dt 12, 17f; 14, 23.
62, 2: Rv 2, 17; 3, 12.

62, 2: New name: figurative expression for a new state of happiness; cf Rv 2, 17; 3, 12.
62, 6f: Remind the LORD . . . give no rest to him: figuratively, as though to make certain that the Lord will remember his pledge to Jerusalem. Cf Lk 11, 7f.

10*† Pass through, pass through the gates,
prepare the way for the people;
Build up, build up the highway,
clear it of stones,
raise up a standard over the nations.
11* See, the LORD proclaims to the ends of the earth:
Say to daughter Zion,
your savior comes!
Here is his reward with him,
his recompense before him.
12* They shall be called the holy people,
the redeemed of the LORD,
And you shall be called "Frequented,"
a city that is not forsaken.

CHAPTER 63

Punishment of Edom

1† Who is this that comes from Edom,
in crimsoned garments, from Bozrah—
This one arrayed in majesty, marching in the greatness of his strength?
"It is I, I who announce vindication,
I who am mighty to save."
2* Why is your apparel red,
and your garments like those of the wine presser?

3 "The wine press I have trodden alone,
and of my people there was no one with me.
I trod them in my anger,
and trampled them down in my wrath;
Their blood spurted on my garments;
all my apparel I stained.
4* For the day of vengeance was in my heart,
my year for redeeming was at hand.
5* I looked about, but there was no one to help,
I was appalled that there was no one to lend support;
So my own arm brought about the victory
and my own wrath lent me its support.
6 I trampled down the peoples in my anger,
I crushed them in my wrath,
and I let their blood run out upon the ground."

Prayer for the Return of God's Favor

7*† The favors of the LORD I will recall,
the glorious deeds of the LORD,
Because of all he has done for us;
for he is good to the house of Israel,
He has favored us according to his mercy
and his great kindness.

8 He said: They are indeed my people,
children who are not disloyal;
So he became their savior
9* in their every affliction.
It was not a messenger or an angel,
but he himself who saved them.
Because of his love and pity
he redeemed them himself, Lifting them and carrying them
all the days of old.
10 But they rebelled, and grieved
his holy spirit;
So he turned on them like an enemy,
and fought against them.

11 Then they remembered the days of old
and Moses, his servant;
Where is he who brought up out of the sea
the shepherd of his flock?
Where is he who put his holy spirit in their midst;
12 Whose glorious arm
was the guide at Moses' right;
Who divided the waters before them,
winning for himself eternal renown;
13 Who led them without stumbling through the depths
like horses in the open country, 14 Like cattle going down into the plain,
the spirit of the LORD guiding them?
Thus you led your people,
bringing glory to your name.

15* Look down from heaven and regard us
from your holy and glorious palace!
Where is your zealous care and your might,
your surge of pity and your mercy?
O Lord, hold not back,
16 for you are our father.
Were Abraham not to know us,

12: 62, 4.

62, 10: The command is given to the workmen to begin the reconstruction of the city.

63, 1-6: In a dramatic dialogue between God and the prophet, the Lord is portrayed as the sole avenger of justice against his enemies.

63, 7—64, 11: A prayer probably composed toward the end of the exile, in which the prophet, after recalling God's blessings on Israel in its past history (63, 7-10), especially at the Exodus (11-14), begs the Lord to come once more to the aid of his people (63, 15—64, 3), who now humbly confess their sins (4-11).

nor Israel to acknowledge us,
You, LORD, are our father,
our redeemer you are named forever.
17 Why do you let us wander, O LORD, from your ways,
and harden our hearts so that we fear you not?
Return for the sake of your servants, the tribes of your heritage.
18 Why have the wicked invaded your holy place,
why have our enemies trampled your sanctuary?
19 Too long have we been like those you do not rule,
who do not bear your name.

Oh, that you would rend the heavens and come down,
with the mountains quaking before you,

CHAPTER 64

1 As when brushwood is set ablaze, or fire makes the water boil!
Thus your name would be made known to your enemies
and the nations would tremble before you,
2 While you wrought awesome deeds we could not hope for,
3* such as they had not heard of from of old.
No ear has ever heard, no eye ever seen,
any God but you
doing such deeds for those who wait for him.
4 Would that you might meet us doing right,
that we were mindful of you in our ways!
Behold, you are angry, and we are sinful;
5 all of us have become like unclean men,
all our good deeds are like polluted rags;
We have all withered like leaves,
and our guilt carries us away like the wind.
6 There is none who calls upon your name,
who rouses himself to cling to you;
For you have hidden your face from us
and have delivered us up to our guilt.
7 Yet, O LORD, you are our father;
we are the clay and you the potter:
we are all the work of your hands.
8 Be not so very angry, LORD,
keep not our guilt forever in mind;
look upon us, who are all your people.
9* Your holy cities have become a desert,
Zion is a desert, Jerusalem a waste.
10 Our holy and glorious temple
in which our fathers praised you
Has been burned with fire;
all that was dear to us is laid waste.
11 Can you hold back, O LORD, after all this?
Can you remain silent, and afflict us so severely?

CHAPTER 65

Necessity of Punishment

1* I was ready to respond to those who asked me not, to be found by those who sought me not.
I said: Here I am! Here I am!
To a nation that did not call upon my name.

2* I have stretched out my hands all the day
to a rebellious people, Who walk in evil paths
and follow their own thoughts, 3 People who provoke me
continually, to my face, Offering sacrifices in the groves
and burning incense on bricks, 4 Living among the graves
and spending the night in caverns, Eating swine's flesh,
with carrion broth in their dishes,
5† Crying out, "Hold back,
do not touch me; I am too sacred for you!"

These things enkindle my wrath,
a fire that burns all the day.
6 Lo, before me it stands written;
I will not be quiet until I have paid in full 7 Your crimes and the crimes of your fathers as well,
says the LORD.
Since they burned incense on the mountains,
and disgraced me on the hills,
I will at once pour out in full measure their recompense into their laps.

Fate of the Good and the Bad in Israel

8 Thus says the LORD:
When the juice is pressed from grapes,

64, 3: 1 Cor 2, 9.
9: Ps 79, 1.
65, 1: Rom 10, 20.
2: Rom 10, 21.

65, 5: I am too sacred for you: the uncleanness of pork, obvious to a Semite, is what these people claim has made them sacred! The prophet ridicules them. Some translate: "I will render you sacred," and understand this as referring to the concept of sacredness as something contagious.

men say, "Do not discard them,
for there is still good in them";
Thus will I do with my servants:
I will not discard them all;
9 From Jacob I will save offspring,
from Judah, those who are to inherit my mountains;
My chosen ones shall inherit the land,
my servants shall dwell there.
10 Sharon shall be a pasture for the flocks and the valley of Achor a resting place for the cattle of my people who have sought me.

11† But you who forsake the LORD,
forgetting my holy mountain,
You who spread a table for Fortune
and fill cups of blended wine for Destiny, 12* You I will destine for the sword;
you shall all go down in slaughter.
Since I called and you did not answer,
I spoke and you did not listen,
But did what was evil in my sight
and preferred things which displease me,
13 therefore thus says the Lord GOD:
Lo, my servants shall eat,
but you shall go hungry;
My servants shall drink,
but you shall be thirsty;
My servants shall rejoice,
but you shall be put to shame;
14 My servants shall shout
for joy of heart,
But you shall cry out for grief of heart
and howl for anguish of spirit.
15 The Lord GOD shall slay you,
and the name you leave
Shall be used by my chosen ones for cursing;
but my servants shall be called by another name 16 By which he will be blessed on whom a blessing is invoked in the land;
He who takes an oath in the land shall swear by the God of truth;
For the hardships of the past shall be forgotten,
and hidden from my eyes.

The World Renewed

17* Lo, I am about to create new heavens
and a new earth;
The things of the past shall not be remembered
or come to mind.
18 Instead, there shall always be rejoicing and happiness in what I create;
For I create Jerusalem to be a joy
and its people to be a delight;
19 I will rejoice in Jerusalem
and exult in my people.
No longer shall the sound of weeping be heard there,
or the sound of crying;
20 No longer shall there be in it an infant who lives but a few days,
or an old man who does not round out his full lifetime;
He dies a mere youth who reaches but a hundred years,
and he who fails of a hundred shall be thought accursed.

21 They shall live in the houses they build,
and eat the fruit of the vineyards they plant; 22 They shall not build houses for others to live in,
or plant for others to eat.
As the years of a tree, so the years of my people;
and my chosen ones shall long enjoy
the produce of their hands.
23 They shall not toil in vain,
nor beget children for sudden destruction;
For a race blessed by the LORD
are they and their offspring.
24 Before they call, I will answer;
while they are yet speaking, I will hearken to them.
25*† The wolf and the lamb shall graze alike,
and the lion shall eat hay like the ox
[but the serpent's food shall be dust].
None shall hurt or destroy
on all my holy mountain, says the LORD.

CHAPTER 66

True and False Worship

1* Thus says the LORD:
The heavens are my throne,
the earth is my footstool.
What kind of house can you build for me;
what is to be my resting place?
2 My hand made all these things
when all of them came to be, says the LORD.

12: 66, 4; Prv 1, 24; Jer 7, 13.
17: 66, 22; Rv 21, 1.
25: 11, 6-9.
66, 1: 2 Sm 7, 4ff; 1 Kgs 8, 27; Acts 7, 49; 17, 24.

† 65, 11f: Destiny: the Hebrew also has a play on the words: Destiny and destine; meni and manithi.
65, 25: See note on 11, 6-9.

This is the one whom I approve:
the lowly and afflicted man who trembles at my word.

3* Merely slaughtering an ox is like slaying a man;
sacrificing a lamb, like breaking
a dog's neck;
Bringing a cereal offering, like offering swine's blood;
burning incense, like paying homage to an idol.
Since these have chosen their own
ways
and taken pleasure in their own abominations,
4*† I in turn will choose ruthless treatment for them
and bring upon them what they fear.

Because, when I called, no one answered,
when I spoke, no one listened;
Because they did what was evil in my sight,
and chose what gave me displeasure,
5 Hear the word of the LORD,
you who tremble at his word:
Your brethren who, because of my
name,
hate and reject you, say,
"Let the LORD show his glory
that we may see your joy";
but they shall be put to shame.
6* A sound of roaring from the city,
a sound from the temple,
The sound of the LORD
repaying his enemies their deserts!

Mother Zion

7*† Before she comes to labor,
she gives birth;
Before the pains come upon her,
she safely delivers a male child.
8 Who ever heard of such a thing,
or saw the like?
Can a country be brought forth in one day,
or a nation be born in a single moment?
Yet Zion is scarcely in labor
when she gives birth to her children.
9 Shall I bring a mother to the point
of birth,
and yet not let her child be born?
says the LORD;
Or shall I who allow her to conceive,
yet close her womb? says your
God.

10 Rejoice with Jerusalem and be glad because of her,
all you who love her;
Exult, exult with her,
all you who were mourning over
her!

11 Oh, that you may suck fully
of the milk of her comfort,
That you may nurse with delight
at her abundant breasts!
12 For thus says the LORD:
Lo, I will spread prosperity over her
like a river,
and the wealth of the nations like
an overflowing torrent.
As nurslings, you shall be carried in her arms,
and fondled in her lap;
13 As a mother comforts her son,
so will I comfort you;
in Jerusalem you shall find your
comfort.

14 When you see this, your heart shall rejoice,
and your bodies flourish like the grass;
The LORD's power shall be known to his servants,
but to his enemies, his wrath.

15 Lo, the LORD shall come in fire,
his chariots like the whirlwind,
To wreak his wrath with burning heat
and his punishment with fiery flames.
16 For the LORD shall judge all mankind
by fire and sword.
and many shall be slain by the
LORD.

17* They who sanctify and purify themselves to go to the groves, as follow-ers of one who stands within, they who eat swine's flesh, loathsome things and mice, shall all perish with their deeds and their thoughts, says the LORD.

Gathering of the Nations. 18† I come to gather nations of every language; they shall come and see my glory. 19 I will set a sign among them; from them I will send fugitives to the nations: to Tarshish, Put and Lud, Mosoch, Tubal and Javan, to the distant coastlands that have never heard of my fame, or seen my glory; and they shall proclaim my glory among the nations. 20 They shall bring all your brethren from all the nations as an offering to the LORD, on horses and in chariots, in carts, upon mules and dromedaries, to Jerusalem, my holy mountain, says the LORD, just

Lasting Reward and Punishment

earth
which I will make Shall endure before me, says the
LORD,
so shall your race and your name
endure.

and from one sabbath to another,
All mankind shall come to worship
before me, says the LORD.

mankind.

The Book of

JEREMIAH

The Book of Jeremiah combines history, biography, and prophecy. It portrays a nation in crisis and introduces the reader to an extraordinary leader upon whom the Lord placed the heavy burden of the prophetic office. Jeremiah was born about 650 B.C. of a priestly family from the little village of Anathoth, near Jerusalem. While still very young he was called to his task in the thirteenth year of King Josiah (628), whose reform, begun with enthusiasm and hope, ended with his death on the battlefield of Megiddo (609) as he attempted to stop the northward march of the Egyptian Pharaoh Neco.

The prophet heartily supported the reform of the pious King Josiah, which began in 629 B.C. Nineveh, the capital of Assyria, fell in 612, preparing the way for the new colossus, Babylon, which was soon to put an end to Judean independence.

After the death of Josiah the old idolatry returned. Jeremiah opposed it with all his strength. Arrest, imprisonment, and public disgrace were his lot. Jeremiah saw in the nation's impenitence the sealing of its doom. Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem and carried King Jehoiachin into exile (22, 24).

During the years 598-587, Jeremiah attempted to counsel Zedekiah in the face of bitter opposition. The false prophet Hananiah proclaimed that the yoke of Babylon was broken and a strong pro-Egyptian party in Jerusalem induced Zedekiah to revolt. Nebuchadnezzar took swift and terrible vengeance; Jerusalem was destroyed in 587 and its leading citizens sent into exile. About this time Jeremiah uttered the great oracle of the "New Covenant" (31, 31-34) sometimes called "The Gospel before the Gospel." This passage contains his most sublime teaching and is a landmark in Old Testament theology.

The prophet remained amidst the ruins of Jerusalem, but was later forced into Egyptian exile by a band of conspirators. There, according to an old tradition, he was murdered by his own countrymen. The influence of Jeremiah was greater after his death than before. The exiled community read and meditated on the lessons of the prophet, and his influence can be seen in Ezekiel, certain of the psalms, and the second part of Isaiah. Shortly after the exile, the Book of Jeremiah as we have it today was published in a final edition. It is divided as follows:

I: Oracles in the Days of Josiah (1, 1—6, 30)
II: Oracles Mostly in the Days of Jehoiakim (7, 1—20, 18)
III: Oracles in the Last Years of Jerusalem (21, 1—33, 26)
IV: Fall of Jerusalem (34, 1—45, 5)
V: Oracles against the Nations (46, 1—51, 64)
VI: Historical Appendix (52, 1-34)

I: ORACLES IN THE DAYS OF JOSIAH

CHAPTER 1

Call of Jeremiah

1† The words of Jeremiah, son of Hilkiah, of a priestly family in Anathoth, in the land of Benjamin. 2* The word of the LORD first came to him in the days of Josiah, son of Amon, king of Judah, in the thirteenth year of his reign, 3*† and continued through the reign of Jehoiakim, son of Josiah, king of Judah, and until the downfall and exile of Jerusalem in the fifth month of the eleventh year of Zedekiah, son of Josiah, king of Judah.

4 The word of the LORD came to me thus:

* 1, 2: 25, 3. 3: 25, 1.

† 1, 1: Anathoth: a village about three miles northeast of Jerusalem, where Solomon exiled Abiathar (1 Kgs 2, 26f); it is probable that Jeremiah belonged to the priestly family of Abiathar.

1, 3: Until the downfall: these words were originally prefixed as a title to a collection of Jeremiah's prophecies which lacked chapters 40-44. The new title in 40, 1 and the oracles that follow clearly show that Jeremiah continued to prophesy after the destruction of Jerusalem in 587 B.C.

5*† Before I formed you in the womb I knew you,
before you were born I dedicated you,
a prophet to the nations I appointed you.
6† "Ah, Lord GOD!" I said,
"I know not how to speak; I am too young."

7 But the LORD answered me,

Say not, "I am too young."
To whomever I send you, you shall go;
whatever I command you, you shall speak.
8 Have no fear before them,
because I am with you to deliver you, says the LORD.

9* Then the LORD extended his hand and touched my mouth, saying,

See, I place my words in your mouth!
10 This day I set you over nations and over kingdoms,
To root up and to tear down,
to destroy and to demolish,
to build and to plant.

11† The word of the LORD came to me with the question: What do you see, Jeremiah? "I see a branch of the watching-tree," I replied. 12 Then the LORD said to me: Well have you seen, for I am watching to fulfill my word. 13*† A second time the word of the LORD came to me with the question: What do you see? "I see a boiling cauldron," I replied, "that appears from the north."
14* And from the north, said the LORD to me, evil will boil over upon all who dwell in the land.

15* Lo, I am summoning
all the kingdoms of the north, says the LORD;
Each king shall come and set up his throne
at the gateways of Jerusalem, Opposite her walls all around and opposite all the cities of Judah.
16* I will pronounce my sentence against them
for all their wickedness in forsaking me,
And in burning incense to strange gods
and adoring their own handiwork.

17 But do you gird your loins;
stand up and tell them
all that I command you.
Be not crushed on their account,
as though I would leave you crushed before them;
18* For it is I this day
who have made you a fortified city,
A pillar of iron, a wall of brass,
against the whole land:
Against Judah's kings and princes,
against its priests and people.
19 They will fight against you, but not prevail over you, for I am with you to deliver you, says the LORD.

CHAPTER 2

Infidelity of Israel

1† This word of the LORD came to me:
2*† Go, cry out this message for Jerusalem to hear!

I remember the devotion of your youth,
how you loved me as a bride,
Following me in the desert,
in a land unsown.
3*† Sacred to the LORD was Israel,
the first fruits of his harvest;
Should anyone presume to partake of them,
evil would befall him, says the LORD.

4 Listen to the word of the LORD, O house of Jacob!
All you clans of the house of Israel,
5* thus says the LORD:
What fault did your fathers find in me

1, 5: Jeremiah was destined to the office of prophet before his birth; cf Is 49, 1.5; Lk 1, 15; Gal 1, 15f. I knew you: I loved you and chose you. I dedicated you: I set you apart to be a prophet. Some Fathers and later theologians understand this to mean that Jeremiah was freed from original sin before his birth. The context does not justify this conclusion. The nations: the pagan neighbors of Judah, besides the great world powers—Assyria, Babylonia, Egypt—intimately associated with Judah's destiny.

1, 6: I am too young: Jeremiah's youth (he was less than thirty years old) must not be an obstacle to the responsibilities of the prophetic office; God will supply for his human defects (cf vv 7f).

1, 11: The watching-tree: the almond tree, which is the first to blossom in the springtime as though it had not slept. The Hebrew name contains a play on words with "I am watching."

1, 13: Boiling cauldron . . . the north: symbol of an invasion from the north; cf vv 14f.

2, 1—3, 5: These verses probably contain the earliest of Jeremiah's preachings. The covenant relationship, symbolized by the figure of a marriage, was frequently broken by Israel, seen here as an unfaithful wife unworthy of reconciliation with God (3, 1-5).

2, 2: Devotion: Israel's gratitude, fidelity, and love for God.

2, 3: First fruits: an offering to God which became his exclusive property, and could therefore not be put to profane use; cf Lv 22, 1.

that they withdrew from me,
Went after empty idols,
and became empty themselves?
6* They did not ask, "Where is the LORD
who brought us up from the land of Egypt,
Who led us through the desert,
through a land of wastes and gullies,
Through a land of drought and darkness,
through a land which no one crosses,
where no man dwells?"

7* When I brought you into the garden land
to eat its goodly fruits,
You entered and defiled my land,
you made my heritage loathsome.
8*† The priests asked not,
"Where is the LORD?"
Those who dealt with the law knew me not:
the shepherds rebelled against me.
The prophets prophesied by Baal,
and went after useless idols.
9* Therefore will I yet accuse you, says the LORD,
and even your children's children I will accuse.
10† Pass over to the coast of the Kittim and see,
send to Kedar and carefully inquire:
Where has the like of this been done?
11* Does any other nation change its gods?—
yet they are not gods at all!
But my people have changed their glory
for useless things.
12 Be amazed at this, O heavens,
and shudder with sheer horror, says the LORD.
13* Two evils have my people done:
they have forsaken me, the source of living waters;
They have dug themselves cisterns,
broken cisterns, that hold no water.

14† Is Israel a slave, a bondman by birth?
Why then has he become booty?
15* Against him lions roar
full-throated cries.
They have made his land a waste;
his cities are charred ruins, without inhabitant.
16† Yes, the people of Memphis and Tahpanhes shave the crown of your head.
17* Has not the forsaking of the LORD, your God, done this to you?

18† And now, why go to Egypt,
to drink the waters of the Nile?
Why go to Assyria,
to drink the waters of the Euphrates?
19* Your own wickedness chastises you,
your own infidelities punish you.
Know then, and see, how evil and bitter is your forsaking the LORD, your God,
And showing no fear of me,
says the Lord, the GOD of hosts.

20*† Long ago you broke your yoke,
you tore off your bonds.
"I will not serve," you said.
On every high hill, under every green tree,
you gave yourself to harlotry.
21* I had planted you, a choice vine
of fully tested stock;
How could you turn out obnoxious to me,
a spurious vine?
22* Though you scour it with soap,
and use much lye,
The stain of your guilt is still before me,
says the Lord GOD.
23† How can you say, "I am not defiled,
I have not gone after the Baals"?
Consider your conduct in the Valley,
recall what you have done:
A frenzied she-camel, coursing near and far,
24 breaking away toward the desert,
Snuffing the wind in her ardor—
who can restrain her lust?

†

2, 8: Those who dealt with the law: the priests. The shepherds: the kings and nobles.

2, 10: Kittim: a Phoenician colony in Cyprus. Kedar: a nomad tribe of the Syrian desert. These two names represent West and East.

2, 14: Bondman by birth: a perpetual slave, different from the debt-slave, who was to be freed after six years; cf Ex 21, 2.

2, 16: Memphis: the capital of Lower Egypt. Tahpanhes: A frontier city of Egypt, east of the Delta. Shave the crown of your head: the spoilation of Judah at the hands of the Egyptians.

2, 18: Egypt and Assyria were the protecting foreign powers favored by rival parties within Judah. The desire for such foreign alliances is a further desertion of the Lord, the source of living waters (v 13), in favor of the above-named powers, symbolized by the Nile and the Euphrates rivers.

2, 20: Harlotry: idolatry (because Israel is the bride of God).

2, 23: The Valley: of Ben-hinnom, south of Jerusalem, site of the infamous sanctuary of Topheth where children were sacrificed to Molech; cf 7, 31.

No beasts need tire themselves
seeking her;
in her month they will meet her.

25* Stop wearing out your shoes
and parching your throat!
But you say, "No use! no!
I love these strangers,
and after them I must go."
26* As the thief is shamed when caught,
so shall the house of Israel be shamed:
They, their kings and their princes,
their priests and their prophets;
27 They who say to a piece of wood,
"You are my father,"
and to a stone, "You gave me
birth."
They turn to me their backs, not their faces;
yet, in their time of trouble they cry out,
"Rise up and save us!"
28* Where are the gods you made for yourselves?
Let them rise up!
Will they save you in your time
of trouble?
For as numerous as your cities
are your gods, O Judah!
And as many as the streets of Jerusalem
are the altars you have set up for Baal.

29 How dare you still plead with me?
You have all rebelled against me,
says the LORD.
30* In vain I struck your children;
the correction they did not take.
Your sword devoured your prophets like a ravening lion.
31 You, of this generation,
take note of the word of the Lord:
Have I been a desert to Israel, a land of darkness?
Why do my people say, "We have moved on,
we will come to you no more"?
32* Does a virgin forget her jewelry,
a bride her sash?
Yet my people have forgotten me
days without number.

33 How well you pick your way
when seeking love!
You who, in your wickedness,
have gone by ways unclean!
34 You, on whose clothing there is the life-blood of the innocent, whom you found committing no
burglary;
35 Yet withal you say, "I am innocent;
at least, his anger is turned away
from me."
Behold, I will judge you on that word of yours, "I have not sinned."
36* How very base you have become in changing your course!
By Egypt will you be shamed,
as you were shamed by Assyria.
37* From there also shall you go away
with hands upon your head;
For the LORD has rejected those in whom you trust,
with them you will have no success.

CHAPTER 3

1*† If a man sends away his wife
and, after leaving him,
she marries another man,
Does the first husband come back to her?
Would not the land be wholly defiled?
But you have sinned with many lov-
ers,
and yet you would return to me!
says the LORD.

2*† Lift your eyes to the heights, and
see,
where have men not lain with
you?
By the waysides you waited for them
like an Arab in the desert.
You defiled the land
by your wicked harlotry.
3* Therefore the showers were withheld,
the spring rain failed.
But because you have a harlot's
brow,
you refused to blush.

4 Even now do you not call me, "My father,
you who are the bridegroom of my
youth"?
5 "Will he keep his wrath forever, will he hold his grudge to the end?"
This is what you say; yet you do all the evil you can.

Judah and Israel. 6* The LORD said to me in the days of King Josiah: See now what rebellious Israel has done! She has gone up every high mountain, and under

† 3, 1: Such remarriage of divorced spouses was forbidden by Dt 24, 1-4. Under this figure the prophet sees the presumption of Judah, the unfaithful spouse, who thinks she can return to the Lord after uniting herself to other gods.
3, 2: An Arab: a marauding nomad who lay in wait for caravans.

every green tree she has played the harlot. 7 And I thought, after she has done all this she will return to me. But she did not return. Then, even though her traitor sister Judah saw 8* that for all the adulteries rebellious Israel had committed, I put her away and gave her a bill of divorce, nevertheless her traitor sister Judah was not frightened; she too went off and played the harlot. 9* Eager to sin, she polluted the land, committing adultery with stone and wood. 10 With all this, the traitor sister Judah did not return to me wholeheartedly, but insincerely, says the LORD.

Restoration of Israel

11* Then the LORD said to me: Rebel Israel is inwardly more just than traitorous Judah. 12* Go, proclaim these words toward the north, and say:

Return, rebel Israel, says the LORD,
I will not remain angry with you;
For I am merciful, says the LORD,
I will not continue my wrath forever.
13* Only know your guilt:
how you rebelled against the LORD, your God,
How you ran hither and yon to strangers
[under every green tree]
and would not listen to my voice, says the LORD.
14*† Return, rebellious children, says the LORD,
for I am your Master;
I will take you, one from a city, two from a clan,
and bring you to Zion.
15* I will appoint over you shepherds after my own heart,
who will shepherd you wisely and prudently.
16 When you multiply and become fruitful in the land,
says the LORD,
They will in those days no longer say,
"The ark of the covenant of the LORD!"
They will no longer think of it, or remember it,
or miss it, or make another.

17* At that time they will call Jerusalem the LORD's throne; there all nations will be gathered together to honor the name of the LORD at Jerusalem, and they will walk no longer in their hardhearted wickedness. 18* In those days the house of Judah will join the house of Israel; together they will come from the land of the north to the land which I gave to your fathers as a heritage.

Conditions for Forgiveness

19* I had thought:
How I should like to treat you as sons,
And give you a pleasant land,
a heritage most beautiful among the nations!
You would call me, "My Father," I thought,
and never cease following me.
20* But like a woman faithless to her lover,
even so have you been faithless to me,
O house of Israel, says the LORD.
21 A cry is heard on the heights!
the plaintive weeping of Israel's children,
Because they have perverted their ways
and forgotten the LORD, their God.
22* Return, rebellious children,
and I will cure you of your rebelling.
"Here we are, we now come to you because you are the LORD, our God.
23* Deceptive indeed are the hills,
the thronging mountains;
In the LORD, our God, alone is the salvation of Israel.
24† The shame-god has devoured
our fathers' toil from our youth,
Their sheep and their cattle,
their sons and their daughters.
25* Let us lie down in our shame,
let our disgrace cover us,
for we have sinned against the LORD, our God,
From our youth to this day, we and our fathers also;
we listened not to the voice of the LORD, our God."

CHAPTER 4

1* If you wish to return, O Israel, says the LORD, return to me.

3, 14-18: A remnant of Israel (14) will reunite with Judah (18). The elementary cult of the Lord represented by the ark of the covenant will now be replaced by a more deeply spiritual and universal alliance, symbolized by his throne in the ideal Jerusalem around which all nations will be gathered together (17).

3, 24: Shame-god: literally, shame, a term commonly substituted for Baal, the Canaanite god with many local shrines.

If you put your detestable things out of my sight,
and do not stray,
2*† Then you can swear, "As the LORD lives,"
in truth, in judgment, and in justice;
Then shall the nations use his name in blessing,
and glory in him.

3* For to the men of Judah and to Jerusalem, thus says the LORD:

Till your untilled ground,
sow not among thorns.
4*† For the sake of the LORD, be circumcised,
remove the foreskins of your hearts,
O men of Judah and citizens of Jerusalem;
Lest my anger break out like fire,
and burn till none can quench it,
because of your evil deeds.

The Invasion from the North

5 Proclaim it in Judah,
make it heard in Jerusalem;
Blow the trumpet through the land,
summon the recruits!
Say, "Fall in, let us march
to the fortified cities."
6 Bear the standard to Zion, seek refuge without delay!
Evil I bring from the north,
and great destruction.
7* Up comes the lion from his lair,
the destroyer of nations has set out,
has left his place,
To turn your land into desolation,
till your cities lie waste and empty.
8* So gird yourselves with sackcloth,
mourn and wail:
"The blazing wrath of the LORD
is not turned away from us."

9 In that day, says the LORD,
The king will lose heart, and the princes;
the priests will be amazed,
and the prophets stunned.
10*† "Alas! Lord GOD," they will say,
"You only deceived us
When you said: Peace shall be yours;
for the sword touches our very soul."
11 At that time it will be said of this people and of Jerusalem,
"From the glaring heights through the desert
a wind comes toward the daughter of my people."
Not to winnow, not to cleanse,
12* does this wind from the heights come at my bidding;
And I myself now pronounce sentence upon them.

13 See! like storm clouds he advances,
like a hurricane his chariots;
Swifter than eagles are his steeds:
"Woe to us! we are ruined."
14 Cleanse your heart of evil, O Jerusalem, that you may be saved.
How long must your pernicious thoughts lodge within you?
15 Listen! They proclaim it from Dan,
from Mount Ephraim they announce destruction:
16* "Make this known to the nations,
announce it to Jerusalem:
The besiegers are coming from the distant land,
shouting their war cry against the cities of Judah."
17* Like watchmen of the fields they surround her,
for she has rebelled against me,
says the LORD.
18* Your conduct, your misdeeds, have done this to you;
how bitter is this disaster of yours,
how it reaches to your very heart!

19† My breast! my breast! how I suffer!
The walls of my heart!
My heart beats wildly,
I cannot be still;
For I have heard the sound of the trumpet,
the alarm of war.
20* Ruin after ruin is reported;
the whole earth is laid waste.
In an instant my tents are ravaged;
in a flash, my shelters.
21 How long must I see that signal, hear that trumpet sound!

22* Fools my people are,
they know me not;
Senseless children they are,
having no understanding;

4, 2: As the LORD lives: this oath, made sincerely, implies Israel's return to God and loyal adherence to him. Thus the ancient promises are fulfilled; cf Gn 12, 3; 18, 18; 22, 18; 26, 4; Ps 72, 17.

4, 4: The mere external rite of circumcision avails nothing unless accompanied by the removal of blindness and obstinacy of heart; cf Rom 2, 25.29; 1 Cor 7, 19; Gal 5, 6; 6, 13.15.

4, 10: You only deceived us: the false prophets blame their deception on God; cf 14, 13-16.

4, 19ff: Probably the prophet's own anguish at the coming destruction of Judah.

They are wise in evil,
but know not how to do good.
23* I looked at the earth, and it was waste and void;
at the heavens, and their light had gone out!
24 I looked at the mountains, and they were trembling,
and all the hills were crumbling!
25 I looked and behold, there was no
man;
even the birds of the air had flown
away!
26* I looked and behold, the garden land
was a desert,
with all its cities destroyed
before the LORD, before his blazing wrath.

27* For thus says the LORD:
Waste shall the whole land be;
I will [not] wholly destroy it.
28* Because of this the earth shall mourn,
the heavens above shall darken;
I have spoken, I will not repent,
I have resolved, I will not turn
back.
29 At the shout of horseman and bow-
man
each city takes to flight;
They shrink into the thickets,
they scale the rocks:
All the cities are abandoned,
and no one dwells in them.
30 You now who are doomed, what do you mean
by putting on purple,
bedecking yourself with gold,
Shading your eyes with cosmetics,
beautifying yourself in vain?
Your lovers spurn you,
they seek your life.
31* Yes, I hear the moaning, as of a woman in travail,
like the anguish of a mother with her first child—
The cry of daughter Zion gasping,
as she stretches forth her hands:
"Ah, woe is me! I sink exhausted before the slayers!"

CHAPTER 5

Universal Corruption

1 Roam the streets of Jerusalem,
look about and observe,
Search through her public places,
to find even one Who lives uprightly
and seeks to be faithful,
and I will pardon her!
2 Though they say, "As the LORD lives,"
they swear falsely.
3* O LORD, do your eyes not look for honesty?
You struck them, but they did not cringe;
you laid them low, but they refused correction;
They set their faces harder than stone,
and refused to return to you.
4* It is only the lowly, I thought,
who are foolish;
For they know not the way of the
LORD,
their duty to their God.
5* I will go to the great ones
and speak with them;
For they know the way of the LORD,
their duty to their God.
But, one and all, they had broken
the yoke,
torn off the harness.
6 Therefore lions from the forest slay
them,
wolves of the desert ravage them,
Leopards keep watch round their cities:
all who come out are torn to pieces
For their many crimes
and their numerous rebellions.

7 Why should I pardon you these things?
Your sons have forsaken me,
they swear by gods that are not.
I fed them, but they committed adultery;
to the harlot's house they throng.
8* Lustful stallions they are,
each neighs after another's wife.
9 Shall I not punish them for these things?
says the LORD;
On a nation such as this shall I not take vengeance?
10* Climb to her terraces, and ravage
them,
destroy them [not] wholly.
Tear away her tendrils,
they do not belong to the LORD.
11* For they have openly rebelled
against me,
both the house of Israel and the house of Judah,
says the LORD.
12*† They denied the LORD, saying, "Not he—
No evil shall befall us, neither sword nor famine shall we
see.
13 The prophets have become wind,
and the word is not in them.

23: Is 24, 1.3.
26: Lv 26, 31.
27: 5, 18.
28: Is 24, 4.
31: 6, 24.
5, 3: 2, 30.
4: 8, 7.
5: 6, 13.
8: 13, 27.
10: 2, 21.
11: 3, 20.
12: 14, 13; Is 28, 15.

† 5, 12: They denied the LORD: the people act as though God does not exist and will not interfere.

May their threats be carried out against themselves!"

14 Now, for this that you have said,
says the LORD, the God of hosts—
Behold, I make my words
in your mouth, a fire,
And this people is the wood
that it shall devour!—
15* Beware, I will bring against you
a nation from afar,
O house of Israel, says the LORD;
A long-lived nation, an ancient nation,
a people whose language you know not,
whose speech you cannot understand.
16 Their quivers are like open graves;
all of them are warriors.
17* They will devour your harvest and your bread,
devour your sons and your daughters,
Devour your sheep and cattle,
devour your vines and fig trees;
They will beat flat with the sword
the fortified city in which you trust.

18* Yet even in those days, says the LORD, I will not wholly destroy you.
19 And when they ask, "Why has the LORD done all these things to us?" say to them, "As you have forsaken me to serve strange gods in your own land, so shall you serve strangers in a land not your own."

20 Announce this to the house of Jacob,
proclaim it in Judah:
21* Pay attention to this,
foolish and senseless people Who have eyes and see not,
who have ears and hear not.
22* Should you not fear me, says the LORD,
should you not tremble before me?
I made the sandy shore the sea's limit,
which by eternal decree it may not overstep.
Toss though it may, it is to no avail;
though its billows roar, they cannot pass.
23 But this people's heart is stubborn and rebellious;
they turn and go away,
24*† And say not in their hearts,
"Let us fear the LORD, our God,
Who gives us rain
early and late, in its time;
Who watches for us
over the appointed weeks of harvest."
25* Your crimes have prevented these things,
your sins have turned back these blessings from you.
26* For there are among my people criminals;
like fowlers they set traps,
but it is men they catch.
27 Their houses are as full of treachery
as a bird-cage is of birds;
Therefore they grow powerful and rich,
28* fat and sleek.
They go their wicked way;
justice they do not defend
By advancing the claim of the fatherless or judging the cause of the poor.
29 Shall I not punish these things? says the LORD;
on a nation such as this shall I not take vengeance?
30 A shocking, horrible thing
has happened in the land:
31* The prophets prophesy falsely,
and the priests teach as they wish;
Yet my people will have it so;
what will you do when the end comes?

CHAPTER 6

The Enemy at the Gates

1* Flee, sons of Benjamin,
out of Jerusalem!
Blow the trumpet in Tekoa,
raise a signal over Beth-haccherem;
For evil threatens from the north,
and mighty destruction.
2 O lovely and delicate daughter Zion, you are ruined!
3*† Against her, shepherds come with their flocks;
all around, they pitch their tents,
each one grazes his portion.
4 "Prepare for war against her,
Up! let us rush upon her at midday!
Alas! the day is waning,
evening shadows lengthen;
5* Up! let us rush upon her by night,
destroy her palaces!"

throw up a siege mound against Jerusalem.
Woe to the city marked for punish-
ment;
nought but oppression within her!
7* As the well gushes out its waters,
so she gushes out her wickedness.
Violence and destruction resound in
her;
ever before me are wounds and blows.
8 Be warned, O Jerusalem,
lest I be estranged from you;
Lest I turn you into a desert,
a land where no man dwells.

9 Thus says the LORD of hosts:
Glean, glean like a vine
the remnant of Israel;
Pass your hand, like a vintager,
repeatedly over the tendrils.
10* To whom shall I speak?
whom shall I warn, and be heard?
See! their ears are uncircumcised,
they cannot give heed;
See, the word of the LORD has become for them
an object of scorn, which they will not have.
11* Therefore my wrath brims up within
me,
I am weary of holding it in;
I will pour it out upon the child in the street,
upon the young men gathered together.
Yes, all will be taken, husband and
wife,
graybeard with ancient.
12* Their houses will fall to strangers,
their fields and their wives as well;
For I will stretch forth my hand against those who dwell in this land, says the LORD.
13* Small and great alike, all are greedy
for gain;
prophet and priest, all practice
fraud.
14*† They would repair, as though it were nought,
the injury to my people:
"Peace, peace!" they say,
though there is no peace.
15* They are odious; they have done
abominable things,
yet they are not at all ashamed,
they know not how to blush.
Hence they shall be among those who fall;
in their time of punishment they shall go down,
says the LORD.

16*† Thus says the LORD:
Stand beside the earliest roads,
ask the pathways of old
Which is the way to good, and walk
it;
thus you will find rest for your souls.
But they said, "We will not walk
it."
17† When I raised up watchmen for
them:
"Hearken to the sound of the trumpet!"
they said, "We will not hearken."
18 Therefore hear, O nations, and know, O earth,
what I will do with them:
19* See, I bring evil upon this people,
the fruit of their own schemes,
Because they heeded not my words,
because they despised my law.
20* Of what use to me incense that comes from Sheba,
or sweet cane from far-off lands?
Your holocausts find no favor with
me,
your sacrifices please me not.
21* Therefore, thus says the LORD:
See, I will place before this people obstacles to bring them down;
Fathers and sons alike,
neighbors and friends shall perish.

22* Thus says the LORD:
See, a people comes from the land of the north,
a great nation, roused from the
ends of the earth.
23 Bow and javelin they wield;
cruel and pitiless are they.
They sound like the roaring sea
as they ride forth on steeds,
Each in his place, for battle against you, daughter Zion.
24* We hear the report of them;
helpless fall our hands,
Anguish takes hold of us,
throes like a mother's in child-
birth.
25 Go not forth into the field,
step not into the street,
Beware of the enemy's sword;
terror on every side!
26* O daughter of my people, gird on sackcloth,
roll in the ashes.

with bitter wailing,
For sudden upon us
comes the destroyer.

27* A tester among my people I have appointed you,
to search and test their way.
28 Arch-rebels are they all,
dealers in slander,
all of them corrupt.
29 The bellows roars,
the lead is consumed by the fire;
In vain has the smelter refined,
the wicked are not drawn off.
30 "Silver rejected" they shall be called,
for the LORD has rejected them.

II: ORACLES MOSTLY IN THE DAYS OF JEHOIAKIM

CHAPTER 7

The Temple Sermon. 1† The following message came to Jeremiah from the LORD: 2 Stand at the gate of the house of the LORD, and there proclaim this message: Hear the word of the LORD, all you of Judah who enter these gates to worship the LORD! 3* Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Reform your ways and your deeds, so that I may remain with you in this place. 4* Put not your trust in the deceitful words: "This is the temple of the LORD! The temple of the LORD! The temple of the LORD!" 5 Only if you thoroughly reform your ways and your deeds; if each of you deals justly with his neighbor; 6*† if you no longer oppress the resident alien, the orphan, and the widow; if you no longer shed innocent blood in this place, or follow strange gods to your own harm, 7* will I remain with you in this place, in the land which I gave your fathers long ago and forever.

8 But here you are, putting your trust in deceitful words to your own loss! 9* Are you to steal and murder, commit adultery and perjury, burn incense to Baal, go after strange gods that you know not, 10* and yet come to stand before me in this house which bears my name, and say: "We are safe; we can commit all these abominations again"? 11* Has this house which bears my name become in your eyes a den of thieves? I too see what is being done, says the LORD. 12*† You may go to Shiloh, which I made the dwelling place of my name in the beginning. See what I did to it because of the wickedness of my people Israel. 13 And now, because you have committed all these misdeeds, says the LORD, because you did not listen, though I spoke to you untiringly; because you did not answer, though I called you, 14* I will do to this house named after me, in which you trust, and to this place which I gave to you and your fathers, just as I did to Shiloh. 15* I will cast you away from me, as I cast away all your brethren, all the offspring of Ephraim.

Abuses in Worship 16* You, now, do not intercede for this people; raise not in their behalf a pleading prayer! Do not urge me, for I will not listen to you. 17 Do you not see what they are doing in the cities of Judah, in the streets of Jerusalem? 18*† The children gather wood, their fathers light the fire, and the women knead dough to make cakes for the queen of heaven, while libations are poured out to strange gods in order to hurt me. 19* Is it I whom they hurt, says the LORD; is it not rather themselves, to their own confusion? 20* See now, says the Lord GOD, my anger and my wrath will pour out upon this place, upon man and beast, upon the trees of the field and the fruits of the earth; it will burn without being quenched.

21 Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Heap your holocausts upon your sacrifices; eat up the flesh! 22† In speaking to your fathers on the day I brought them out of the land of Egypt, I gave them no command concerning holocaust or sacrifice. 23* This rather is what I commanded them: Listen to my voice; then I will be your God and you shall be my people. Walk in all the ways that I command you, so that you may prosper.

24* But they obeyed not, nor did they pay heed. They walked in the hardness of their evil hearts and turned their backs, not their faces, to me. 25* From the day that your fathers left the land

7, 12: Shiloh: original place of worship from the time of Joshua to that of Samuel. The sanctuary was later rejected by God and destroyed by the Philistines; cf 1 Sm 1, 9, 4, 3f; Ps 78, 60.68f.

7, 18: Queen of heaven: the Assyro-Babylonian Ishtar, goddess of fertility, whose worship was introduced under King Manasseh and was revived after Josiah's death. Cakes shaped like stars (Ishtar was identified with the planet Venus) were offered in her honor.

7, 22: I gave them no command: right conduct rather than mere external cult was God's will concerning his people (v 23).

of Egypt even to this day, I have sent you untiringly all my servants the prophets. 26* Yet they have not obeyed me nor paid heed; they have stiffened their necks and done worse than their fathers. 27 When you speak all these words to them, they will not listen to you either; when you call to them, they will not answer you. 28 Say to them: This is the nation which does not listen to the voice of the LORD, its God, or take correction. Faithfulness has disappeared;
the word itself is banished from their
speech.

29*† Cut off your dedicated hair and throw it away!
on the heights intone an elegy;
For the LORD has rejected and cast
off
the generation that draws down
his wrath.

30* The people of Judah have done
what is evil in my eyes, says the LORD.
They have defiled the house which bears
my name by setting up in it their abominable idols. 31 In the Valley of Ben-hin-nom they have built the high place of Topheth to immolate in fire their sons and their daughters, such a thing as I never commanded or had in mind.
32* Therefore, beware! days will come, says the LORD, when Topheth and the Valley of Ben-hinnom will no longer be called such, but rather the Valley of Slaughter. For lack of space, Topheth will be a burial place. 33* The corpses of this people will be food for the birds of the sky and for the beasts of the field, which no one will drive away. 34* In the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem I will silence the cry of joy, the cry of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride; for the land will be turned to rubble.

CHAPTER 8

1* At that time, says the LORD, the bones of the kings and princes of Judah,
the bones of the priests and the prophets,
and the bones of the citizens of Jerusalem will be emptied out of their graves 2*† and spread out before the sun and the moon and the whole army of heaven, which they loved and served, which they followed, consulted, and worshiped.
They will not be gathered up for burial,
but will lie like dung upon the ground.
3 Death will be preferred to life by all the survivors of this wicked race who remain in any of the places to which I banish them, says the LORD of hosts.

Israel's Conduct Incomprehensible

4 Tell them: Thus says the LORD:
When someone falls, does he not rise again?
if he goes astray, does he not turn
back?
5* Why do these people rebel with obstinate resistance?
Why do they cling to deceptive idols,
refuse to turn back?
6* I listen closely:
they speak what is not true;
No one repents of his wickedness,
saying, "What have I done!"
Everyone keeps on running his course,
like a steed dashing into battle.
7* Even the stork in the air
knows it seasons;
Turtledove, swallow and thrush
observe their time of return,
But my people do not know
the ordinance of the LORD.

8*† How can you say, "We are wise,
we have the law of the LORD"?
Why, that has been changed into falsehood
by the lying pen of the scribes!
9* The wise are confounded,
dismayed and ensnared;
Since they have rejected the word
of the LORD,
of what avail is their wisdom?

Shameless in Their Crimes

10* Therefore, I will give their wives to strangers,
their fields to spoilers.
Small and great alike, all are greedy
for gain,
prophet and priest, all practice
fraud.
11*† They would repair, as though it were
nought,
the injury to the daughter of my
people:
"Peace, peace!" they say,
though there is no peace.
12* They are odious; they have done

8, 2: Army of heaven: the stars, worshiped by the pagan nations and even by the inhabitants of Jerusalem during the reigns of Manasseh and Amon.

8, 8f: Lying pen of the scribes: because the interpretations and ordinances of the scribes ran counter to the word of the Lord.

8, 11: Daughter of my people: the people itself personified as a woman.

yet they are not at all ashamed,
they know not how to blush.
Hence they shall be among those who fall;
in their time of punishment they shall go down,
says the LORD.

Threats of Punishment

13 I will gather them all in, says the LORD:
no grapes on the vine,
No figs on the fig trees,
foliage withered!
14* Why do we remain here?
Let us form ranks and enter the walled cities,
to perish there;
For the LORD has wrought our destruction,
he has given us poison to drink,
because we have sinned against the LORD.
15* We wait for peace to no avail;
for a time of healing, but terror comes instead.
16 From Dan is heard
the snorting of his steeds;
The neighing of his stallions
shakes the whole land.
They come devouring the land and all it contains,
the city and those who dwell in it.
17* Yes, I will send against you poisonous snakes,
Against which no charm will work
when they bite you, says the LORD.

The Prophet's Grief over the People's Suffering

18 My grief is incurable, my heart within me is faint.
19* Listen! the cry of the daughter of my people,
far and wide in the land!
Is the LORD no longer in Zion,
is her King no longer in her midst?
[Why do they provoke me with their idols,
with their foreign nonentities?]
20 "The harvest has passed, the summer is at an end, and yet we are not safe!"
21* I am broken by the ruin of the daughter of my people.
I am disconsolate; horror has seized me.
22*† Is there no balm in Gilead,
no physician there?
Why grows not new flesh
over the wound of the daughter of my people?
23 Oh, that my head were a spring of water,
my eyes a fountain of tears,
That I might weep day and night
over the slain of the daughter of my people!

CHAPTER 9

The Corruption of the People

1 Would that I had in the desert
a travelers' lodge!
That I might leave my people
and depart from them.
They are all adulterers,
a faithless band.
2 They ready their tongues like a drawn bow;
with lying, and not with truth,
they hold forth in the land.
They go from evil to evil,
but me they know not, says the LORD.
3† Be on your guard, everyone against his neighbor;
put no trust in any brother.
Every brother apes Jacob, the supplanter,
every friend is guilty of slander.
4* Each one deceives the other,
no one speaks the truth.
They have accustomed their tongues to lying,
and are perverse, and cannot repent.
5 Violence upon violence,
deceit upon deceit:
They refuse to recognize me,
says the LORD.
6 Therefore, thus says the LORD of hosts:
I will smelt them and test them;
how else should I deal with their wickedness?
7* A murderous arrow is his tongue,
his mouth utters deceit;
He speaks cordially with his friends,
but in his heart he lays an ambush!
8* For these things, says the LORD,
shall I not punish them?
On a nation such as this shall I not take vengeance?

Dirge over the Ravaged Land

9* Over the mountains, break out in cries of lamentation, over the pasture lands, intone a dirge:

14: 9, 14; 23, 15.
15: 14, 19.
17: Dt 32, 24.
19: Dt 32, 21; Mi 4, 9.
21: 14, 17.
22: 46, 11.
9, 4: 12, 6.
7: Pss 28, 3; 62, 4.
8: 5, 9.29.
9: 4, 25; 12, 4.

† 8, 22: Gilead: noted for its healing balm but unable to heal the moral wound of the people.

9, 3: Jacob, the supplanter: in Hebrew, a play on words. Jacob, as his name indicates ("he supplants"), deprived his brother Esau of his birthright; cf Gn 25, 26.33.

They are scorched, and no man crosses them,
unheard is the bleat of the flock;
Birds of the air as well as beasts,
all have fled, and are gone.
10* I will turn Jerusalem into a heap of ruins,
a haunt of jackals;
The cities of Judah I will make into
a waste,
where no one dwells.

11* Who is so wise that he can understand this? Let him to whom the mouth of the LORD has spoken make it known:

Why is the land ravaged,
scorched like a wasteland untraversed?

12 The LORD answered: Because they have abandoned my law, which I set before them, and have not followed it or listened to my voice, 13* but followed rather the hardness of their hearts and the Baals, as their fathers had taught them; 14* therefore, thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: See now, I will give them wormwood to eat and poison to drink. 15* I will scatter them among nations whom neither they nor their fathers have known; I will send the sword to pursue them until I have completely destroyed them.

16 Thus says the LORD of hosts:
Attention! tell the wailing women to
come,
summon the best of them;
17* Let them come quickly
and intone a dirge for us,
That our eyes may be wet with weeping,
our cheeks run with tears.
18 The dirge is heard from Zion:
Ruined we are, and greatly ashamed;
We must leave the land,
give up our homes!
19 Hear, you women, the word of the
LORD,
let your ears receive his message.
Teach your daughters this dirge,
and each other this lament.
20* Death has come up through our windows,
has entered our palaces;
It cuts down the children in the
street,
young people in the squares.
21 The corpses of the slain
lie like dung on a field,
Like sheaves behind the harvester,
with no one to gather them.

True Glory

22* Thus says the LORD:
Let not the wise man glory in his
wisdom,
nor the strong man glory in his
strength,
nor the rich man glory in his riches;
23 But rather, let him who glories, glory
in this,
that in his prudence he knows me, Knows that I, the LORD, bring about
kindness,
justice and uprightness on the
earth;
For with such am I pleased, says the
LORD.

Circumcision Worthless. 24* See, days are coming, says the LORD, when I will demand an account of all those circumcised in their flesh: 25† Egypt and Judah, Edom and the Ammonites, Moab and the desert dwellers who shave their temples. For all these nations, like the whole house of Israel, are uncircumcised in heart.

CHAPTER 10

The Folly of Idolatry

1 Hear the word which the LORD speaks to you, O house of Israel.
2*† Thus says the LORD:

Learn not the customs of the nations,
and have no fear of the signs of
the heavens,
though the nations fear them.
3* For the cult idols of the nations are nothing,
wood cut from the forest, Wrought by craftsmen with the
adze,
4* adorned with silver and gold.
With nails and hammers they are fastened,
that they may not totter.
5* Like a scarecrow in a cucumber field are they,
they cannot speak;
They must be carried about,
for they cannot walk.
Fear them not, they can do no harm,
neither is it in their power to do
good.

9, 25: Desert dwellers . . . temples: Arab tribesmen who cut off their hair and shaved their temples in honor of the pagan god Dushara. This was forbidden the Israelites (Lv 19, 27).

10, 2: Signs of the heavens: phenomena in the sky superstitiously regarded by the pagans as dire omens.

6* No one is like you, O LORD,
great are you,
great and mighty is your name.
7* Who would not fear you,
King of the nations,
for it is your due!
Among all the wisest of the nations,
and in all their domain,
there is none like you.

8 One and all they are dumb and senseless,
these idols they teach about are wooden:
9 Silver strips brought from Tarshish,
and gold from Ophir,
The work of the craftsman
and the handiwork of the smelter, Clothed with violet and purple—
all of them the work of artisans.

11* Thus shall you say of them: Let the gods that did not make heaven and earth perish from the earth, and from beneath these heavens!

10* The LORD is true God,
he is the living God, the eternal King,
Before whose anger the earth quakes,
whose wrath the nations cannot endure:
12* He who made the earth by his power,
established the world by his wisdom,
and stretched out the heavens by his skill.
13 When he thunders, the waters in the heavens roar,
and he brings up clouds from the end of the earth;
He makes the lightning flash in the rain,
and releases stormwinds from their chambers.
14* Every man is stupid, ignorant;
every artisan is put to shame by his idol:
He has molded a fraud,
without breath of life.
15 Nothingness are they, a ridiculous work;
they will perish in their time of punishment.
16* Not like these is the portion of Jacob:
he is the creator of all things;
Israel is his very own tribe,
LORD of hosts is his name.

Abandonment of Judah

17 Lift your bundle and leave the land,
O city living in a state of siege!
18 For thus says the LORD:
Behold, this time
I will sling away the inhabitants of the land;
I will hem them in,
that they may be taken.
19 Woe is me! I am undone,
my wound is incurable;
Yet I had thought:
if I make light of my wound, I can bear it.
20* My tent is ruined,
all its cords are severed.
My sons have left me, they are no more:
no one to pitch my tent,
no one to raise its curtains.
21* Yes, the shepherds were stupid as cattle,
the LORD they sought not;
Therefore they had no success,
and all their flocks were scattered.
22 Listen! a noise! it comes closer,
a great uproar from the northern land:
To turn the cities of Judah
into a desert haunt of jackals.

Prayer of Jeremiah

23 You know, O LORD,
that man is not master of his way;
Man's course is not within his choice,
nor is it for him to direct his step.
24 Punish us, O LORD, but with equity,
not in anger, lest you have us dwindle away.
25* Pour out your wrath on the nations that know you not,
on the tribes that call not upon your name;
For they have devoured Jacob utterly,
and laid waste his dwelling.

CHAPTER 11

Plea for Fidelity to the Covenant.
1 The following message came to Jeremiah from the LORD: 2 Speak to the men of Judah and to the citizens of Jerusalem, 3* saying to them: Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Cursed be the man who does not observe the terms of this covenant, 4* which I enjoined upon your fathers the day I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, that iron foundry, saying: Listen to my voice and do all that I command you. Then you shall be my people, and I will be your God. 5 Thus I will fulfill the oath which I swore to your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey: the one you have today. "Amen, LORD," I answered.

6 Then the LORD said to me: Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem: Hear the words of this covenant and obey them.
7 Urgently and constantly I warned your fathers to obey my voice, from the day
I brought them up out of the land of Egypt even to this day. 8* But they did not listen or give ear. Each one followed the hardness of his evil heart, till I brought upon them all the threats of this covenant which they had failed to observe as I commanded them.

9 A conspiracy has been found, the LORD said to me, among the men of Judah and the citizens of Jerusalem.
10* They have returned to the crimes of their forefathers who refused to obey my words. They also have followed and served strange gods; the covenant which I had made with their fathers, the house of Israel and the house of Judah have broken. 11* Therefore, thus says the LORD: See, I bring upon them misfortune which they cannot escape. Though they cry out to me, I will not listen to them.
12* Then the cities of Judah and the citizens of Jerusalem will go and cry out to the gods to which they have been offering incense. But these gods will give them no help whatever when misfortune strikes.

13* For as numerous as your cities
are your gods, O Judah!
And as many as the streets of Jerusalem
are the altars for offering sacrifice
to Baal.

14* Do not intercede on behalf of this people, nor utter a plea for them. I will not listen when they call to me at the time of their misfortune.

Sacrifices of No Avail

15 What right has my beloved in my house,
while she prepares her plots?
Can vows and sacred meat turn
away
your misfortune from you?
Will you still be jubilant
16 when you hear the great invasion?
A spreading olive tree, goodly to behold,
the LORD has named you;
Now he sets fire to it,
its branches burn.

17* The LORD of hosts who planted you has decreed misfortune for you because of the evil done by the house of Israel and by the house of Judah, who provoked me by sacrificing to Baal.

The Plot against Jeremiah

18 I knew it because the LORD informed me; at that time you, O LORD, showed me their doings.

CHAPTER 12

1* You would be in the right, O LORD,
if I should dispute with you;
even so, I must discuss the case
with you.
Why does the way of the godless
prosper,
why live all the treacherous in contentment?
2* You planted them; they have taken
root,
they keep on growing and bearing
fruit.
You are upon their lips,
but far from their inmost
thoughts.
3*† You, O Lord, know me, you see me,
you have found that at heart I am
with you.
Pick them out like sheep for the slaughter,
set them apart for the day of carnage.
4 How long must the earth mourn,
the green of the whole countryside
wither?
For the wickedness of those who
dwell in it
beasts and birds disappear, because they say, "God does not see our ways."

5 If running against men has wearied
you,
how will you race against horses?
And if in a land of peace you fall headlong,
what will you do in the thickets of the Jordan?

6* For even your own brothers, the members of your father's house, betray you; they have recruited a force against you. Do not believe them, even if they are friendly to you in their words.
11:19*† Yet I, like a trusting lamb led

12, 3: Jeremiah does not seek private vengeance but the punishment of the wicked by the Lord; cf 20, 12. Nevertheless, the prophet's reaction to persecution shows the difference between the spirit of the Old Testament and the New.

to slaughter, had not realized that they were hatching plots against me: "Let us destroy the tree in its vigor; let us cut him off from the land of the living, so that his name will be spoken no more."

20* But, you, O LORD of hosts, O just Judge, searcher of mind and heart,
Let me witness the vengeance you take on them,
for to you I have entrusted my cause!

21* Therefore, thus says the LORD concerning the men of Anathoth who seek your life, saying, "Do not prophesy in the name of the LORD; else you shall die by our hand." 22* Therefore, thus says the LORD of hosts: I am going to punish them. The young men shall die by the sword; their sons and daughters shall die by famine. 23* None shall be spared among them, for I will bring misfortune upon the men of Anathoth, the year of their punishment.

The Lord's Complaint

12:7* I abandon my house,
cast off my heritage;
The beloved of my soul I deliver into the hand of her foes.
8* My heritage has turned on me like a lion in the jungle;
Because she has roared against me, I treat her as an enemy.
9* My heritage is a prey for hyenas, is surrounded by vultures;
Come, gather together, all you beasts of the field,
come and eat!
10* Many shepherds have ravaged my vineyard,
have trodden my heritage underfoot;
The portion that delighted me they have turned into a desert waste.
11 They have made it a mournful waste,
desolate it lies before me,
Desolate, all the land,
because no one takes it to heart.
12* Upon every desert height brigands have come up.
The LORD has a sword which consumes
the land, from end to end:
no peace for all mankind.
13 They have sown wheat and reaped thorns,
they have tired themselves out to no purpose;
They recoil before their harvest,
the flaming anger of the LORD.

Judah's Neighbors. 14*† Thus says the LORD against all my evil neighbors who plunder the heritage which I gave my people Israel as their own: See, I will pluck them up from their land; the house of Judah I will pluck up in their midst. 15* But after plucking them up, I will pity them again and bring them back, each to his heritage, each to his land. 16* And if they carefully learn my people's custom of swearing by my name, "As the LORD lives," they who formerly taught my people to swear by Baal shall be built up in the midst of my people. 17* But if they do not obey, I will uproot and destroy that nation entirely, says the LORD.

CHAPTER 13

Judah's Corruption. 1† The LORD said to me: Go buy yourself a linen loincloth; wear it on your loins, but do not put it in water. 2 I bought the loincloth, as the LORD commanded, and put it on. 3 A second time the word of the LORD came to me thus: 4 Take the loincloth which you bought and are wearing, and go now to the Parath; there hide it in a cleft of the rock. 5 Obedient to the LORD's command, I went to the Parath and buried the loincloth. 6 After a long interval, he said to me: Go now to the Parath and fetch the loincloth which I told you to hide there. 7 Again I went to the Parath, sought out and took the loincloth from the place where I had hid it. But it was rotted, good for nothing! 8 Then the message came to me from the LORD: 9* Thus says the LORD: So also I will allow the pride of Judah to rot, the great pride of Jerusalem. 10* This wicked people who refuse to obey my words, who walk in the stubbornness of their hearts, and follow strange gods to serve and adore them, shall be like this loincloth which is good for nothing. 11* For, as close as the loincloth clings to a man's loins, so had I made the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah cling to me, says the LORD; to be my people, my renown, my praise, my beauty. But they did not listen.

13, 1-11: This is probably a vision of the prophet symbolizing the religious corruption of Judah at the hands of the Babylonians, represented here by the river Parath, the Euphrates, though a spring of the same name, northeast of Anathoth, may be directly meant.

The Broken Wineflask

12 Now speak to them this word: Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Every wineflask is meant to be filled with wine.
If they reply, "Do we not know that every wineflask is meant to be filled with wine?" 13* say to them: Thus says the LORD: Beware! I am filling with drunkenness all the inhabitants of this land,
the kings who succeed to David's throne,
the priests and prophets, and all the citizens of Jerusalem. 14* I will dash them against each other, fathers and sons together, says the LORD; I will show no compassion, I will not spare or pity, but will destroy them.

A Last Warning

15 Give ear, listen humbly,
for the LORD speaks.
16* Give glory to the LORD, your God,
before it grows dark;
Before your feet stumble
on darkening mountains;
Before the light you look for turns to darkness,
changes into black clouds.
17* If you do not listen to this in your pride,
I will weep in secret many tears;
My eyes will run with tears
for the LORD's flock, led away to exile.

Exile

18* Say to the king and to the queen
mother:
come down from your throne;
From your heads fall
your magnificent crowns.
19 The cities of the Negeb are besieged,
with no one to relieve them;
All Judah is banished
in universal exile.

Jerusalem's Disgrace

20* Lift up your eyes and see men coming from the north.
Where is the flock entrusted to you,
the sheep that were your glory?
21* What will you say when they place
as rulers over you those whom you taught to be your lovers?
Will not pangs seize you like those of a woman giving
birth?
22* If you ask in your heart
why these things befall you:
For your great guilt your skirts are stripped away
and you are violated.
23* Can the Ethiopian change his skin?
the leopard his spots?
As easily would you be able to do
good,
accustomed to evil as you are.
24* I will scatter them like chaff that flies
when the desert wind blows.
25* This is your lot, the portion measured out to you
from me, says the LORD.
Because you have forgotten me,
and trusted in the lying idol, 26* I now will strip off your skirts from
you,
so that your shame will appear.
27* Your adulteries, your neighings,
your shameless prostitutions:
On the hills in the highlands
I see these horrible crimes of
yours.
Woe to you, Jerusalem, how long will it yet be before you become clean!

CHAPTER 14

The Great Drought

1* The word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah concerning the drought:
2* Judah mourns,
her gates are lifeless;
Her people sink down in mourning:
from Jerusalem ascends a cry of anguish.
3* The nobles send their servants for
water,
but when they come to the cisterns
They find no water
and return with empty jars.
Ashamed, despairing, they cover
their heads
4* because of the stricken soil;
Because there is no rain in the land
the farmers are ashamed, they cover their heads.
5 Even the hind in the field deserts her offspring
because there is no grass.
6 The wild asses stand on the bare heights,
gasping for breath like jackals;
Their eyes grow dim,
because there is no vegetation to be seen.
7* Even though our crimes bear witness against us,
take action, O LORD, for the honor
of your name—

Even though our rebellions are many,
though we have sinned against you.
8 O Hope of Israel, O LORD,
our savior in time of need!
Why should you be a stranger in this land,
like a traveler who has stopped but for a night?
9* Why are you like a man dumbfounded,
a champion who cannot save?
You are in our midst, O LORD,
your name we bear:
do not forsake us!

10* Thus says the LORD of this people:
They so love to wander
that they do not spare their feet.
The LORD has no pleasure in them;
now he remembers their guilt,
and will punish their sins.

11* Then the LORD said to me: Do not intercede for this people. 12* If they fast, I will not listen to their supplication. If they offer holocausts or cereal offerings, I will not accept them. Rather, I will destroy them with the sword, famine, and pestilence.
13* Ah! Lord GOD, I replied, it is the prophets who say to them, "You shall not see the sword; famine shall not befall you. Indeed, I will give you lasting peace in this place."
14* Lies these prophets utter in my name, the LORD said to me. I did not send them; I gave them no command nor did I speak to them. Lying visions, foolish divination, dreams of their own imagination, they prophesy to you.
15* Therefore, thus says the LORD: Concerning the prophets who prophesy in my name, though I did not send them; who say, "Sword and famine shall not befall this land": by the sword and famine shall these prophets meet their end.
16* The people to whom they prophesy shall be cast out into the streets of Jerusalem by famine and the sword. No one shall bury them, their wives, their sons, or their daughters, for I will pour out upon them their own wickedness.
17* Speak to them this word:

Let my eyes stream with tears
day and night, without rest,
Over the great destruction which overwhelms
the virgin daughter of my people,
over her incurable wound.
18 If I walk out into the field,
look! those slain by the sword;
If I enter the city,
look! those consumed by hunger.
Even the prophet and the priest forage in a land they know not.

19* Have you cast Judah off completely?
Is Zion loathsome to you?
Why have you struck us a blow
that cannot be healed?
We wait for peace, to no avail;
for a time of healing, but terror comes instead.
20* We recognize, O LORD, our wickedness,
the guilt of our fathers;
that we have sinned against you.
21* For your name's sake spurn us not,
disgrace not the throne of your glory;
remember your covenant with us, and break it not.
22* Among the nations' idols is there any that gives rain?
Or can the mere heavens send showers?
Is it not you alone, O LORD,
our God, to whom we look?
You alone have done all these things.

CHAPTER 15

1* The LORD said to me: Even if Moses and Samuel stood before me, my heart would not turn toward this people. Send them away from me. 2* If they ask you where they should go, tell them, Thus says the LORD: Whoever is marked for death, to death; whoever is marked for the sword, to the sword; whoever is marked for famine, to famine; whoever is marked for captivity, to captivity.
3* Four kinds of scourge I have decreed against them, says the LORD: the sword to slay them; dogs to drag them about; the birds of the sky and the beasts of the earth to devour and destroy them.
4* And I will make them an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth because of what Manasseh, son of Hezekiah, king of Judah, did in Jerusalem.

who will console you?
Who will stop to ask

6* You have disowned me, says the LORD,
turned your back upon me;
And so I stretched out my hand to destroy you,
I was weary of sparing you.
7* I winnowed them with the fan in every city gate.
I destroyed my people through bereavement;
they returned not from their evil ways.
8 Their widows were more numerous before me
than the sands of the sea.
I brought against the mother of youths
the spoiler at midday;
Suddenly I struck her with anguish and terror.
9* The mother of seven swoons away, gasping out her life;
Her sun sets in full day, she is disgraced, despairing.
Their survivors I will give to the sword
before their enemies, says the LORD.

Jeremiah's Complaint

10* Woe to me, mother, that you gave me birth!
a man of strife and contention to all the land!
I neither borrow nor lend, yet all curse me.
11* Tell me, LORD, have I not served you for their good?
Have I not interceded with you in the time of misfortune and anguish?
15* You know I have.
Remember me, LORD, visit me, and avenge me on my persecutors.
Because of your long-suffering banish me not;
know that for you I have borne insult.
16 When I found your words, I devoured them;
they became my joy and the happiness of my heart,
Because I bore your name, O LORD, God of hosts.
17* I did not sit celebrating in the circle of merrymakers;
Under the weight of your hand I sat alone
because you filled me with indignation.
18*† Why is my pain continuous, my wound incurable, refusing to be healed?
You have indeed become for me a treacherous brook, whose waters do not abide!
19 Thus the LORD answered me:
If you repent, so that I restore you, in my presence you shall stand;
If you bring forth the precious without the vile, you shall be my mouthpiece.
Then it shall be they who turn to you, and you shall not turn to them;
20* And I will make you toward this people a solid wall of brass.
Though they fight against you, they shall not prevail,
For I am with you, to deliver and rescue you, says the LORD.
21 I will free you from the hand of the wicked,
and rescue you from the grasp of the violent.

CHAPTER 16

Jeremiah's Life a Warning. 1 This message came to me from the LORD: 2 Do not marry any woman; you shall not have sons or daughters in this place, 3 for thus says the LORD concerning the sons and daughters who will be born in this place, the mothers who will give them birth, the fathers who will beget them in this land: 4* Of deadly disease they shall die. Unlamented and unburied they will lie like dung on the ground. Sword and famine will make an end of them, and their corpses will become food for the birds of the sky and the beasts of the field.

5* Go not into a house of mourning, the LORD continued: go not there to lament or offer sympathy. For I have withdrawn my friendship from this people, says the LORD, my kindness and my pity. 6*† They shall die, the great and the lowly, in this land, and shall go unburied and unlamented. No one will gash himself or shave his head for them. 7* They will not break bread with the bereaved to console them in their bereavement; they will not give them the cup of consolation to drink over the death of father or mother.
